d. Persons who have been active in the counter-revolutionary movement, or are at present opposed to the Soviet government, cannot become members of the S. T. A.-S. R. of U. S. and Canada.

As soon as the organization was perfected a school was organized where the Russian language, mechanical drawing, auto and tractor classes, general school subjects in the Russian language were taught. Another school which was started shortly before by the local "intelligentsia" with the backing of the representative of the non-existing Kerensky government was forced to close up for lack of students, altho they had a fund of over $11,000 according to their printed report. The students in a body decided to join the Soviet School, as the school of the society is known.

By that time, in the end of December, 1920, the United States government decided to bestow upon the society the blessing of its democracy. A dozen patrol wagons backed up in front of the school which was at that time located on Robey street, and about 150 students and teachers were taken away to jail where they were treated rough, according to the general rule of that time.

In New York after the school of the society was raided there, even the ceiling was covered with blood . . . In Chicago only one member (Efim Shved) had his nose broken, but that did not happen in the building of the school but while he was in safe keeping in Cook county jail. Many others were beaten up, but not so seriously. For the first few days most of the members were held at the Chicago avenue police station. In a cell where two could sleep or six could sit on the two benches there were twenty-four. The other cells were similarly crowded or even worse.

Up till that time no politics or even political economy were taught in the school for the simple reason that there were too many political factions among the members and the society wanted to avoid friction. But this lesson in bourgeois democracy that was given to the members, mostly half-illiterate peasants and workers, by the United States government did more than any Communist Party could ever expect to do in such a short period. Not only were they not scared away from the school, but they rallied to it and a great many of them joined the Communist Party at the first opportunity. All of the parties were driven underground after that. The members of the society raised among themselves about $17,000 for bail and defense but that was not sufficient as the smallest amount demanded for bail was $1,000 and some were put up as high a sum as $10,000, as the writer of this, for instance. Besides that the government refused to accept its own currency and forced us to buy Liberty bonds instead.

After the raids the membership grew to such an extent, that soon there was no more room in the building and the society took over (rented) the building of the "Kolchak" school (as the other school which was forced to go out of business was known). There were two floors and a basement and a two-story garage in the new building. The ground floor of the garage was used for practical work and the second floor for theoretical work and for electricity. A school for children was also organized in the building. Up till that time the only school for Russian children was in the church. Besides the regular classes there were organized popular free lectures on Sundays on different subjects including political.

In 1921, the society sent over to the economic front of Russia the first group of automobile and tractor mechanics who are at present working in the Russian-American Auto factory ("Amo") near Moscow. In 1922, a tailors' group and some more mechanics were sent. In 1923, went the first groups of the agricultural commune, Red Ray, which has its commune in the Odessa district. More groups followed in 1924. Another group of the commune will leave in about a month.

Since the activities of the organization started the Russian colony has been thoroly awakened to self consciousness. There are now in Chicago and vicinity nine Russian children's schools including the one of the society, which are united into one independent federation. This federation has started classes also for adults, where besides the Russian language English is taught. The classes of the Soviet School were merged with the classes of this federation, which is under the building of the society free of charge. There are also two co-operative restaurants, organized by the members of the society. The mechanical classes were discontinued as the most active ones left for Russia, and the others have learned the English language and ceased to attend the regular schools in the city.

The popular lectures are still continued with free admission. There was added also popular plays. The members of the society built a decent little stage in the assembly hall where popular plays in Russian are presented. Once are the stars of the Soviet School appeared some of the best players in the world, but the society was unable to advertise them, and is still unable to mention their names, because the prejudice against it is still great, and that may hurt the artists. Attempts are being made to arrange also popular concerts with good artists but they are too expensive.

The society will soon celebrate the fifth anniversary of its existence.

THERE is a good deal of "dope" coming from the opium conference at Geneva, where representatives of the great powers and of the opium growing countries are pretending to thrash out the problem of regulating the drug traffic. All agree that opium, when not used for medicinal purposes is bad for the health, but while there is profit in its production, all attempts to regulate its production and distribution will fail.

CHINA has demanded the unconditional departure of all foreign missionaries in that country. The Chinese have learned that preachers of religion have invariably proved to be disturbers and agents of capitalist powers. The bible and the sword are very close friends. The bible usually precedes the sword. In China, John D. Rockefeller's missionaries and his oil cans went hand in hand. The new awakening in China is a significant warning for the imperialist powers of the world. That awakening is in no small degree due to the beneficial influence of Soviet Russia.

COUNTS and no accounts in Germany consoled themselves for the loss of their former power and affluence under the kaiser's regime, by indulging in the most depraved orgies. The scene of these debaucheries was the great castle of Fuerstenstein, the seat of the royal house of Pless. Several counts have been sentenced to terms of imprisonment. The government made strong efforts to keep the news out of the papers, for the so-called republican government of Germany is always willing to shield the monarchists but never allows pity to stand in the way of the most severe punishment of the Communists.

THE United States government does not intend that its agents shall be altogether charitable factors in the operation of the Dawes' plan. From the flood of gold, which is expected to pour out of Germany, into the coffers of the reparations committee the United States capitalists expect to get their share. The American figure may reach the total of $500,000,000. Such a sum is considered exorbitant by England. But the United States holds the whip hand.

THE French government may consider paying its four billion dollar war debt to the United States provided the latter reduces its bill sixty per cent. It is now learned that Andrew Mellon, secretary of the treasury made heroic attempts to get some sort of a promise out of France and Italy, to come across with some cash. Both nations pleaded guilty to a slender purse and showed a most aggravating unconcern over their liabilities. The Italian and French governments claim that while America was shipping over dollars to win the war, they were sending men to the front. France owes four billion dollars to the United States government. Quite a tidy sum. Russia only owes $260,000, yet this trifling sum is one of Hughes' arguments against Soviet recognition.

SAMUEL GOMPERS AT THE GRAVE OF SAMUEL GOMPERS: "Surely I was a great man. Friend of kings and presidents. Friend of steel trust magnates and international financiers. Friend of all those discriminating mighty ones who scorn the common laborer but who discerned something precious in me—I was appreciated. I sat myself beside Elbert H. Gary in the Civic (strikebreaking) Federation and had my legs under the same table with Morgan himself; I had my picture taken with John D. Rockefeller, Jr. In war I helped to send two million workers to France, where a hundred thousand of them lie buried . . . They died younger than me. I helped Wilson to make war on Russia, where workers were in rebellion. After the war I helped to break the wave of strikes and to deflate labor, cut down wages and lengthen hours and smash unions that went "red." I have broken more strikes than Bill Burns himself. I have done my best to prepare the workers to submit to the next world war, and conscription for the battlefield, and conscription of labor for the workshop. I am a patriot. I don't know how much longer I'll play hookey from this tomb, but when I die, a grest man shall pass away. . . . Truly, a great man.

COMMUNISTS OF FRANCE IN BIG JAURES MARCH

German Workers Honor French Rebel

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, Nov. 27.—The great Communist demonstration in Paris last Sunday on the occasion of the ceremonies for Jean Jaures resulted in a severe attack on Premier Herriot by reactionary deputies for allowing the Communists to stage what the deputies described as a "red saturnalia."

Deputy Tattinger, who raised the protest, declared that General Nollet, minister of war, was obliged to flee in order to escape the Communists.

The chamber by a vote of 318 to 196 upheld Herriot, who warned the deputies that an adverse vote would be taken as an indication of no confidence in the government.

The Jaures ceremonies brot out a tremendous outpouring of workers The bourgeoisie used the occasion to ingratiate themselves with the masses by posing as admirers of the great French rebel. Herriot delivered a long eulogy of Jaures in which he stressed the dead leader's patriotism and his love of France. While Herriot was speaking the Communists kept on singing the "International."

Jaures, long a leader of the socialist party of France, was killed by an assassin on the eve of the great war His murderer was never punished. Today the French bourgeoisie have placed the remains of the socialist leader in the Pantheon. The living socialists have made peace with the enemy, so it is no harm to pay an empty honor to one of their dead, who with all his weak points was a rebel by nature.

About 50,000 Communists and approximately 15,000 socialists marched in the procession of demonstration. The Communists carried banners with inscriptions urging a vigorous prosecution of the class war against capitalism. The socialists had feeble slogans praising peace.

German Communist Delegates.

One of the most striking features of the great demonstration was the German Communist delegation headed by two little girls carrying branches of holly, to which were attached ribbons inscrifed: "To Jaures in memory of Liebknecht;" and "To Jaures in memory of Rosa Luxemburg."

A Communist column with a forest of bright red flags, all topped with the bronze Soviet emblem — the crossed hammer and scythe—came on The Communist column took one hour and a half to pass a given point and was continually cheered by the spectators. Its band played the "International" and the marchers raised the slogans of "Down with war" and "Long Live the Soviets." One inscription on the banner read "Rather the revolution than war."

A memorial tablet was dedicated in the restaurant where Juares was assassinate by Raoul Villain, in July 1914.

PROLETARIAN CHALLENGE TO IMPERIALISM

Scores Executioners of Egypt, India, Ireland

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, Nov. 27.—Soviet Russia today again delayed its reply to the British note, in which Downing street served notice of abrogation of the commercial treaties negotiated with the soviet government by Ramsay MacDonald, formerly Britain's prime minister.

The British note, whose contents were published today, provoked this editorial in "Pravda," the Communist organ:

"Does the Communist International conduct propaganda? Yes, it does. Such right is inscribed in letters of gold in our constitution.

"The executioners of Egypt, Ireland and India, cannot abridge proletarian law. The British government must not imagine it can destroy the asylum rights of Soviet Russia as it destroyed the right of political demonstrations in Egypt. Austin Chamberlain's strong tone is proper for any one but us."

Establishes Precedent.

The action of the tory government in cancelling treaties signed by a previous government without submitting the documents to parliament establishes a new diplomatic precedent.

That the Soviet government is not a willing target for British capitalist abuse can be gathered from the editorial comment in the Russian press which mirrors the feelings of the Russian working class and the Communist Party, which is the leader of the Soviet government.

The perfidy of Ramsay MacDonald is becoming more glaring every day. It is now a matter of public knowledge that while the former premier was in office he refused to receive a diplomatic note from the Soviet government written on October 27, relative to the tory forgery.

Note Officially Ignored.

J. D. Gregory, of the permanent staff in the foreign office, curtly informed Rakovsky that Chamberlain would not acknowledge the note of October 27, thus endorsing MacDonald's action.

Austen Chamberlain in reply to the Rakovsky note branding the "Zinoviev" note as a forgery, declared that the government was convinced the letter was genuine. He brushed aside discussion of this incident however, as trivial and attacked the Communist International and their influence in India, Egypt and other oppressed colonies of Britain is one of the main causes of British hostility to the Soviet government.

Uses MacDonald's Words.

The foreign minister quotes MacDonald extensively in attacking the Communist International, proving that the former premier was merely a stop gap to tide the British ruling class over a troublesome period.

The British capitalist press endorse the tenor of the tory diplomatic duel with Russia, but hastens to warn against any rupture of relations. It suggests that the tory government will take steps to reach agreements which will be more satisfactory to British interests than those signed by MacDonald. No cancellation of de jure recognition is expected.

French Admiral Recalled.

PARIS, Nov. 27—Admiral Exelmans post admiral of Bizerta, and commander-in-chief of the French naval forces in North African waters, was recalled after having declined to receive representatives of the Soviet government, delegated to take over the Baron Wrangel fleet, which was held under French protection pending de jure recognition of the Soviet government.

BRITISH ARMED FORCES GATHER TO CRUSH EGYPT

French Hesitate to Take Action

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CAIRO, Nov. 27.—The Anglo-Egyptian crisis is not over. There is a very suspicious calm, the prelude to another storm. King Fuad adjourned the Egyptian parliament until Dec. 25.

In the meantime, this country's agents will be busy in France and elsewhere.

England is not trusting to diplomacy. She is holding on to the Alexandria customs and is tightening her grip on the Sudan. Strong detachments of British troops are marching thru the streets of Alexandria and Cairo to impress the population.

Converging on Egypt.

British warships are steaming towards Egypt from all directions Liners sailing from India to England have received orders to debark their passengers at the nearest available port and proceed to the trouble zone. The King's Own Scottish Borderers, the infamous regiment that fired on the women and children in Dublin in 1914, are on their way to Port Sudan.

French Are Cautious.

PARIS, Nov. 27.—While the French government has apparently decided not to interfere openly at this time with Great Britain's attack on the sovereignty of Egypt, the press continues to denounce the British government's action as most unwarranted.

It was at first thot likely that Herriot would bring the matter before the league of nations, but that organization is now in such a battered condition that it is doubtful whether it will ever again recover from the blow dealt it by the tory government.

An Old Agreement.

In the year 1904, the French and British governments reached an accord on their so-called rights in Africa. It is not expected however that French reluctance to block British expansion in Egypt is dictated by respect for a twenty-four year old pact as much as to the fact that the coun-

GOMPERS SEEKS TO RULE OVER EUROPE'S LABOR

Amsterdam Affiliation in His Hands

By J. W. JOHNSTONE.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

EL PASO, Texas.—The farewell addresses of the fraternal delegates from Britain and Germany to the 44th annual convention of the American Federation of Labor, and the replies, as well as all debate upon the proposal for affiliation to the Amsterdam International, indicate that the A. F. of L. will enter Amstredam upon action of the executive council to which the work of carrying on "closer relations" was referred.

In essence, this means the Amsterdam International will come under the extreme counter-revolutionary dictatorship of the American labor bureaucracy, now the labor wing of American imperialist domination of Europe as effected thru the Dawes plan. Unquestionably such affiliation will be followed with a new attack upon Soviet Russia with possible military action accompanying it.

Woll Expresses Bid for Power.

These developments were foreshadowed when Matthew Woll of the executive council, expressing the bid for American leadership upon terms of its own making, raised the question o autonomy of the American Federation within the Amsterdam Internationa by saying that he objected to affiliation because of the "abolition of autonomy."

In his farewell speech, Peter Grass man of the German unions and member of the Amsterdam executive, invited the A. F. of L. to send a dele

LABOR AGENTS OF WALL STREET UPHOLD WAR ON WEAK NATIONS OVER "MERITORIOUS" LOANS

By J. W. JOHNSTONE.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

EL PASO. Texas.—The convention of the American Federation of Labor was nearing its end when it took up Resolution 22, proposed by the Seamen's Union thru Andy Furuseth, protesting against the use of the army or navy to collect either the principal or interest of capital invested abroad.

Woll and "Meritorious Loans."

Woll said that the resolution committee subscribed to the "lofty ideals" expressed, but opposed the method of the resolution. Woll, an expert on such affairs, said he believed "international honor and human intelligence" would work out the problem in the same manner as in national life the old cruel methods, such as the debtors' prison, had been abolished. But, he avered, according to the resolution, "we could not enforce payment no matter how meritorious the loans may be."

Furuseth disagreed with this idea of "meritorious loans." He said all loans were made by international bankers in the name of the people, but without their consent. He failed to specify that the "liberty loans" were forced upon the workers. But he did say that loans were forerunners of war, that all the workers had to do with the whole matter was to bleed and pay.

War he discovered to be "immoral and dishonorable" and the convention should condemn it. Only small

ENGINEMEN MAY STRIKE ON ALL WESTERN ROADS

A general strike on western railway lines of the members of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen is a possibility as a result of the strike vote of the two organizations in progress on the western lines of the Southern Pacific.

That the membership of these two unions is extremely dissatisfied with the prolonged wage negotiations and the arbitrary attitude of the railway labor board, which has so far prevented the 8 per cent increase demanded is evidenced by the fact that this is the first strike vote taken by these unions since 1916 when they forced the passage of the Adamson law by similar pressure. . .

A general strike would affect approximately 60,000 engineers, firemen and hostlers and cripple traffic on ninety western railroads.

The unions involved are among the most conservative in the American labor movement and their action means that among all classes of rail way workers there is a deep-seated resentment aroused by the labor-crushing tactics of the railways with the railway labor board as the immediate instrument.

EXECUTIVE COUNCIL OF A. F. OF L. TO STUDY AID TO NEXT CAPITALIST WAR

By J. W. JOHNSTONE.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

EL PASO, Texas.—In the closing hours of the 44th annual convention of the American Federation of Labor, Resolution 75, was referred to the executive council for action.

This is the resolution, offered by twenty affiliated bodies of the A. F. of L. proposing that the executive council appoint three aides to the secretary of war and one side in each of the 48 states to co-operate in recruiting for the citizens' military training camps.

This reference of the matter to the executive council probably means fulfillment of its provisions, as Gompers and his aides are most anxious to be of assistance to the war machine of imperialism.

FOSTER MEETING IN PITTSBURGH SUNDAY, NOV. 30

Talks at Lyceum on the Problems of Labor

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 27.—Pittsburgh trade unionists will have an opportunity to hear William Z. Foster, secretary of the Trade Union Educational League, speak on the problems of the labor movement at a meeting which is being arranged by the local branch of the league.

The meeting will be held at the International Lyceum, 805 James St. N. S., Sunday, Nov. 30, at 2 p. m.

Big Subjects for Discussion.

Right on the heels of the political election of the United States comes the American Federation of Labor convention, elections in the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, carpenters, and miners.

Each of these affect all of the workers indirectly and the trade unionists directly, it is the time when the labor union either makes for progress or goes backward to reaction, which all depends upon how well the militant progressives are organized in the unions.

Pittsburgh labor movement has suffered, paying dearly in many respects due to the lack of left wing organization and a constructive program of action. It was not only being tortured by a cancer of stool pigeons, spies, fakirs, and reactionaries, but also slowly dying from inactivity which the employers were taking advantage of. The entire history from the "Tea Pot Dome" of the labor temple to the exposure of Beattie proves this beyond a doubt.

Unions Must Fight Employers.

Trade unionists put a stop to this state of affairs and make the unions what they should be—a weapon to fight the employer with.

Every honest progressive unionist should join the Trade Union Educational League, the group of his or her industry and become active in the affairs of the union.

Do You Like a Good Time?

Big Program Thursday Afternoon and Evening and Friday Night.

A great attendance is expected Thursday because it is Thanksgiving Holiday, because the display booths will be practically intact except for the raids Wednesday night, and because an excellent program is arranged for both afternoon and evening. The Letts, with orchestra, chefs for the banquet, etc., intend to be "on deck" in full strength.

As for Friday, take a look at the "specials" for that night.

"Turkey" to Be Thankful For.

OUR request for donations to pay for subscriptions of all our publications to political prisoners brought a hearty response.

Comrade H. P. Brucken of Toledo sends $4.00 to pay for two three-month subscriptions thru our Toledo City DAILY WORKER agent, A. W. Harvitt, who writes:

"Comrade Brucken thought this would be appreciated by the prisoners more than a turkey dinner and give them a least one thing to be thankful for, not to an imaginary God, of course, but to a class conscious rebel and Communist who remembers they are in for him and us."

We are really thankful in behalf of our comrades in jail and to Comrade Brucken goes this grateful acknowledgement.

ECONOMY PLANS CRITICIZED AT TEACHERS' MEET

Reports Indicate That Salaries Will Be Cut

A new system of marking elementary school teachers will soon be put into effect if Superintendent of Schools McAndrew has his way, Margaret Haley told over 1,000 teachers in a mass meeting in the Studebaker theater Wednesday evening.

Marks of teachers are all to be lower, Miss Haley declared, and McAndrew and the board of education will then decide to regulate teachers' salaries according to marks, thus generally lowering the salaries of Chicago's teachers. The meeting was called for the purpose of giving the teachers the Strickler report.

Save Money by Ousting Teachers.

Mis Haley read the report of Robert E. Strickler, which advises that teachers of 59 years of age or less be discharged. Strickler is a student at the University of Chicago, Miss Haley revealed, who was granted access, by McAndrew, to the reports of the principals giving McAndrew the marks of their teachers. Strickler's report was based on how much money can be saved by discharging teachers, it was revealed.

Strickler's report, which was a P D. thesis prepared and delivered to Professor Judd for academic credit poses the question, "Will it cost more to pay the teachers discharged their $600.00 pension after firing them, or will it cost more to keep them under employment?" The report then adds "A statistical study of the average age of teachers at their death can be obtained from the life insurance companies. We can then determine how long we would be expected to pay the $600.00 pension."

It was also pointed out by Strickler that green teachers are paid less than veteran teachers, thus effecting another saving in discharging those of 59 years of age. Strickler complains in his report that the teachers have been marked too high.

Will Not Come Before Board.

Miss Haley said that the general decrease in salaries, the discharging of 700 teachers, and the greater overcrowding of class rooms is going to be effected without discussion before the board of education unless protest is made. She told the teachers that the plan is for the finance committee to bring in a budget based on Strickler's and on Nelson B. Henry's reports. This budget will set the pay roll for each school separately, thus limiting the number of teachers and necessitating the elimination of many class rooms and the overcrowding of those remaining. This program is now being carried out, Miss Haley charged and teachers already are being discharged.

Miss Haley attacked Henry's report which advises larger class rooms and less teachers, intimating that the only foundation for the report is the framed up "investigations" of students such as Strickler who are anxious for a degree.

Report Says "Teachers Die Easily."

Strickler's report declared that the close confinement of teachers in the class room made them die earlier, and spoke of "determining the lowest age safe to establish as an automatic retiring age." "We must recognize the effect of various types of jobs" the report continued.

Strickler said that the teachers should be pensioned as is done in the army and in the industries. This report, altho it was prepared for academic credit, was presented to Superintendent of Schools McAndrew with a postscript stating, "To comply with academic requirements Dr. Judd has been given a copy of this report."

The meeting again went on record against an increase in the tax rate. The teachers declared in favor of forcing large estates and corporations to pay their full share of the taxes.

Miss Haley charged that the Chicago Tribune is netting $300,000 on one downtown plot leased from the board of education.

Denounce Women's City Club.

The teachers protested against the action of the women's city club which had criticized the teachers' organizations for declaring their opinion as to educational control. She read a speech by McAndrew made before the Teachers' Federation 22 years ago which proved that the teachers are the most capable of deciding on educational policies. McAndrew, who was then a school principal, said the chief function of a mayor is to throw cold water and that "school superintendents are a necessary evil."

Class Unity of Labor Only Power That Will Overthrow Capitalism

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, and day by day, the real meaning of labor banking becomes clearer. It provides one of the most degrading means for class collaboration between the workers and their bosses; or, to be more exact, between one section of the workers, the labor aristocracy, and the great exploiters.

An exchange of friendly greetings has just taken place between the financial wing of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and one of the worst anti-labor railroad corporations, "The Pennsylvania System."

"The Pennsylvania" is proud of the alliance. It gloats about it in publishing on the back page of its house organ, "The Pennsylvania News," a fac-simile letter from C. N. DeGuire, of the New York office of the Brotherhood Investment Co., owned by the Locomotive Engineers.

This letter is a revelation in itself. Addressed to Elisha Lee, vice-president of "The Pennsylvania System," it is intended for the eyes of one of "the highest" among this labor crushing clique of railroad magnates. This letter will fill a black page in the history of American labor's betrayal from within. It is as follows:

"Knowing of your interest in the work we are doing, I want you to know that we purchased last week thru Kuhn, Loeb & Co., Pennsylvania securities to the extent of approximately a half million dollars which are being offered for resale to railroad employes and others thru our various banks.

"As in the case of our recent purchase of Pennsylvania securities, we continue to add to our list and hope in time to be able to offer employes on practically every railroad bonds of the property from which they derive their livelihood.

"It seems to me that this plan will go a long way toward promoting greater co-operation between the managements and employes of the various lines and if it has this effect I will be greatly pleased."

The headline placed by the corporation publicity agent over this letter reads: "This Letter Speaks for Itself."

It sure does! It is one of the most open pieces of betrayal of labor that has ever found its way upon a printed page.

Wall Street has a class of investors known as "lambs." They are the ignorant innocents who can be sheared at will by the big financiers. It is estimated that John D. Rockefeller, Jr., in the recent Wall Street flurry, took in winnings totalling $110,000,000 thru this stock gambling carried on with "inside information." This kind of gambling is not forbidden by John D. Jr.'s Baptist Sunday School.

But even the membership of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers will have no "inside dope" as to when to buy or sell. They will be sheared when the big financiers feel the fleecing time has arrived.

Arthur Holder, former legislative agent of the American Federation of Labor, and attached to the International Association of Machinists, remarks that the engineers' venture does not "indicate any early purchase of a control in the Pennsylvania by its own employes." He scents the bait held out to the brotherhood men that they may be able to buy their jobs, a freak phantasie.

In referring to the workers on "The Pennsylvania System," even Holder, closely connected with the labor bureaucracy, admits that:

"Those employes remain in a state of peonage to which they have been subjected for half a century. The train service brotherhoods have never been strong enough on that system to make a fight, and the shopmen have been crushed."

The only conclusion that can be drawn from the attempted collaboration, thru their banks, of the brotherhood officials with the Pennsylvania railroad magnates, is that the train service chiefs are up to their old scheme of winnnig favors for their own membership at the expense of the "crushed shopmen."

It is pointed out that one of the labor-enslaving features of the Pennsylvania program is the distribution of members of any one family thru different branches of the service, so that a strike by one of the family will injure the situation of parent, son or brother. This is called "one of the most devilish contrivances ever worked out by an anti-labor intelligence for purposes of exploiting human toil and fidelity."

Here then is the picture! On one branch of the Pennsylvania System, worker in the train service, well-paid member of the Engineers, the Trainmen, or the Conductors, with a share or two, or perhaps more of the company's stock in his pocket. A regular labor aristocrat.

Elsewhere on the same road an underpaid shopman, his brother, or son, or father. His union wrecked. Not enough to pay rent, or provide even the bare necessities for his family, let alone invest anything in the company's securities.

But anything that the latter will do reacts against his well-paid brother. He must wear his chains in silence. He must suffer under the heel of his great corporation.

But even these enslaving schemes of class collaboration will fail. Workers in the railroad train as well as shop service, under the growing brutal exploitation of the transportation trusts, will be forced to develpp their own solidarity.

Buying shares of railroad stock will not win relief. Uniting every ounce of labor's strength in the transportation industry, thru amalgamation of all labor's forces, will make possible triumph for all.

As against the alliance of the labor bureaucrats with the rule of Wall street, the Communist appeal, for the solidarity of all workers, for the common victory, sounds clearer than ever.

STRIKING COAL DIGGERS AROUSE JOHN L. LEWIS

Faker Calls District Officials to El Paso

By THOMAS MYERSCOUGH.
(Special to the Daily Worker)

WILKES BARRE, Pa., Nov. 27.—A desperate effort by John L. Lewis, international president of the United Mine Workers of America, to punish those responsible for the many strikes in the anthracite region, is seen in his latest move, that of calling District Presidents Cappellini, Kennedy and Golden to El Paso, Texas, on receipt of word by him that the 22,000 miners employed by the Hudson Coal Co. had been ordered to strike by their general grievance committee.

A truce has now been made which sends the miners back to work, with the understanding that Cappellini lives up to his promise to have the grievances complained of, disposed of in ten days.

Strike Long Threatened.

This is considered impossible now, because of the call to El Paso, but the miners will take this into consideration if things are not adjusted in the specified ten days. It does not, however, mean that they will allow an indeterminate period of time to lapse, before their grievances are aired, for it is remembered that the strike which has now been called off, was threatened before and was delayed by similar promises on the part of the officials at the time that the Glen Alden men went on strike last month.

Lewis' attitude thru all of the recent strikes hereabouts, so noticeable as being solicitious for the continued and uninterrupted flow of profits for the operators, is being discussed by miners hereabout and is described by many, as the voice of the operators themselves.

Bosses Advertising.

Full page newspaper advertisements at the rate of $1.50 per column inch are appearing in the local papers urging the men employed by the Hudson Coal Co. to return to work and to respect the agreement, these being inserted and paid for by the company.

Editorials are also being written in the same tone, all refer to the section of the agreement that relates to the disposition of grievances by the conciliation board, but nothing is said of the time period contained in the agreement, within which all grievances must be settled, nor of the provocative tactics of the operators and their agents.

Got No-Strike Promise.

Lewis, it will be recalled, sent a committee of international board members into this field a few months ago, and this committee exacted a promise from each of the general bodies that no strike would be called by them in violation of the agreement or without having first tried to settle their grievances thru the medium of the district office. That these promises have been lived up to nobody will deny neither will anyone seriously dispute the fact, that those promises are the basic reason for this and all other strikes that have been called since the visit of Lewis' committee.

Grievances that formerly were settled without trouble are now causing unnecessary trouble and all because the men promised not to strike any more. The bosses at the various mines are reported as laughing at the grievance committees when they ask for adjustment of wrongs committed, brazenly informing them that they can do as they please, for the reason that the men dare not strike.

Used Only Method.

Instead of letting the companies get away with that stuff, the records will show that they have acted "a la Kansas" and struck anyway, this being the only method by which they can get consideration. There are other strikes in the making now, if the talk that is going the rounds means anything, unless the officials do something to relieve the situation by acting upon and settling satisfactorily the many grievances that have been referred to them for that purpose. It is claimed that the secretary of the conciliation board is already in El Paso, and some interesting threats are looked for when the officials return from their meeting with "King" John Lewis.

WILLIAM F. DUNNE TO DISCUSS EL PASO CONVENTION AT NEXT MASS MEETING OF THE T. U. E. L.

The next public meeting of the Chicago section of the Trade Union Educational League will take place on Tuesday evening, Dec. 2, 8 p. m., in North West Hall, corner North and Western avenues. These meetings are one of the activities of the left wing movement in the local trade unions and are held for the purpose of unifying the struggle against the labor fakers.

The forthcoming meeting of the Trade Union Educational League promises to be of unusual interest as it will be addressed by William F. Dunne, editor of the DAILY WORKER, who was expelled from the Portland convention of the A. F. of L. because of his militant stand against the betrayal of the workers by Gompers. He will speak on the result of the A. F. of L. convention at El Paso. Workers Party members and left wing trade unionists are urged to attend and bring as many as possible to the meeting.

THE fact that Percy Stickney Grant was not a fundamentalist may be given by dyed-in-the-wool clerical reactionaries as the cause of his mental and physical breakdown. Most of the fundamentalist clergymen who break into the headlines nowadays, do so on their way to jail—for murder. We venture to say that the Dr. Grant has less theology in his head than his superior officer, Bishop Manning would like, he has considerably more brains, even in his present condition, than most of his foes.

London Thinks It Over.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—There is a growing feeling in London bourgeois circles that the hasty action of the tory government in spurning reference of the Egyptian conflict to the league of nations, was ill-advised and calculated to excite sympathy for the Egyptians.

Gilbert Murray, a league supporter in a letter to the Times, suggests that Britain could lose nothing by such a move but would give its action against Egypt the appearance of legality.

A telegram of protest against the British action in Egypt was received today by the secretariat of the league at Geneva, from the Egyptian parliament. A similar communication war forwarded to other parliaments.

Recall Corfu Incident.

ROME, Nov. 27.—The Italian press calls attention to the similarity of the action of the British in Egypt and the Italian bombardment of the island of Corfu. At that time Britain flayed Italy for refusing to submit the matter to the league of nations. Britain now does what Italy formerly did and is surprised that there are protests.

nations were forced to pay loans by use of the army and navy in seizing customs and collecting debts that way. The convention was convinced, however, that weak nations have "meritious" loans and that large nations have "meritious" warships, and so defeated Furuseth's resolution.

Snake's Tail Compliments Its Head.

Sigman, of the International Ladies' Garment Workers, presented Gompers with a bust of Gompers and gave Gompers credit for organizing the garment workers. Sigman asserted that the last agreement was a great victory. They had won unemployment, maybe, but they had insurance to cover it according to Sigman, and the sanitary label to lead from the sweatshop to happiness. "Gompers did it all."

Gompers, almost overcome at the unearned laudation, nevertheless was congenial to the idea of his own importance and in a speech of acceptance agreed that he was a great man.

He said that "a hungry stomach may create a riot, but never a successful revolution." From the silhouette of Gompers' stomach as it rests on the press tables, Sam ought to be a great revolutionist. "Peoples get used to hunger and misery," said Gompers, perhaps explaining in this way the reason for the lack of rebellion in the rank and file of organized labor against the Gompers' machine.

Insulting Condemned Workers.

A substitute written by the committee on resolutions was passed instead of the one demanding the release of Sacco and Vanzetti, condemned to die by Massachusetts courts as the result of a frame-up against them as radical workers. This substitute states that because "there is an alleged doubt" as to their guilt, a new trial is urged.

Cramp Envies Gompers' Machine.

C. T. Cramp of Great Britain has learned much from watching the Gompers' machine in action. He is filled with envy for the way in which Gompers crushes opposition. He seems to have been taken up on a high mountain and shown the glories of real labor fakerdom. Cramp is the type which will be the road thru which Amsterdam will in reality affiliate with the A. F. of L., while formally accepting the A. F. of L. as a subordinate body.

Swales Will Line Up.

A. B. Swales, chairman of the British Trade Union Congress, however, still insists that there is a class struggle, that the workers produce all wealth and should enjoy it. He did not back up, altho pressure was undoubtedly bret to bear upon him. But his social democratic mind will ultimately lead him to accept Amsterdam's surrender to Gompers in the name of solidarity.

It is significant that the reply of Gompers to the speeches of the Amsterdamers was cordial. This strengthens the conclusion that Gompers is waging a successful conquest of Amsterdam labor unions, just as Dawes has conquered the leading position in European politics in behalf of American imperialism.

Discussion on Immediate Tasks of Our Party

The Economic and Political Situation and the Immediate Tasks of Our Party

Submitted by Ruthenberg, Lovestone, Bedacht, Engdahl and Gitlow.

1. The World Economic and Political Situation.

1. The world war, precipitated by the capitalists in an endeavor to solve the problems of imperialism, has itself developed into the insoluble problem of the capitalist order. Four years of production for destruction have thrown the economic machinery of capitalism out of gear. The present and coming generations have been loaded down with a mountain of debt that cannot be liquidated without raid either on the surplus pocketed by the capitalists as profits or on the standards of living of the workers. This economic problem has created a revolutionary period—the period of the proletarian revolution. On the one hand, the capitalist class is desperately hanging on to political power to save its system of exploitation. On the other hand, the working class is compelled to struggle against attempts to reduce its standard of living and against an increase of unbearable burden of exploitation. The antagonism between the classes is sharpened. The struggle grows more and more intense. There remains only one solution—the solution of the proletarian revolution.

The Communist International declares "The bourgeois order has preserved its existence for a period in spite of the fact that the world imperialist war toward its end called forth a tremendous outburst of elemental discontent among the masses. The forces of the international proletariat proved to be insufficiently organized; the parties of the international proletarian revolution proved to be not strong enough; and as a result, the victory of the proletarian revolution at the end of the imperialist war proved impossible.

"The imperialist peace treaties and the occupation of the Ruhr were only a continuation of the war with other weapons; they were not a means of healing the wounds caused by the war. The consequences of the war have not been overcome nor can they ever be overcome by capitalist methods."

2. In Russia the situation created by the imperialist war led to the struggle for power by the workers and peasants and the establishment of the Dictatorship of the Proletariat through a Soviet Government. In spite of all the efforts of capitalist imperialism to destroy the Workers and Peasants Government of Soviet Russia, it stands as an inspiration to the workers of the world, pointing to the only solution of the problem created by the imperialist world war.

3. While the struggle of the workers against the intolerable conditions of the period of decline of capitalism have their ebb and flow, the economic conditions of capitalism will develop sharper and sharper struggles and ultimately the proletarian revolution.

2. Economic and Political Conditions of the United States.

1. The United States has not escaped from the effect of the imperialist war upon capitalism. While in this country there was no destruction of the ability to produce wealth, but on the contrary a great increase in the productive power of capitalism, still the threads that bind capitalism together as a world order are so many and so vitally effect it, that it is impossible for American capitalism to free itself from the forces which are bringing the general decline of capitalism. Hence in spite of the government pretends to follow a policy of non-interference in European affairs, the American capitalists are making a strenuous effort through the Dawes plan to save European capitalism and with it American capitalism.

2. Following the year and a half of prosperity, which the capitalists of the United States enjoyed after the signing of the armistice, capitalism in this country felt the first impact of the destructive forces let loose by the world war. The economic crisis of 1920-21 threw six million American workers out of jobs and brought a more deep-going crisis than American capitalism had previously experienced. After a slowly developing period of improvement which lasted for only eighteen months, the year 1924 again brought a period of depression with several million workers out of employment. These periods of depression with only short periods of improvement in economic conditions intervening, indicate the instability of capitalism, that in spite of the efforts of American capitalists to isolate themselves from the forces which are brining the decline of capitalism as a world order, these forces are having their effect on the powerful American capitalism.

3. The result of the instability of capitalism in the United States and the inability of the capitalists to make use of the tremendous productive power developed during the w[illegible] been a sharpening of the struggle between the capitalists and the workers. During the great crisis of 1920-21 the capitalist sought to shift the great burden of the losses resulting from the war and the reduction of the world market, on to the workers thru forcing down their standard of living. While not on such a large scale, the depression of 1924 has brought wage cuts to hundreds of thousands of workers in an effort to make them shoulder the losses to capitalism. The crisis of 1920-21 was accompanied by the open shop drive which reached its climax in the strike of nearly two million workers in 1922 indicating the resistance of the workers to the attempt to lower their standard of life. In 1924 miners, steel workers, textile workers, railway shopmen and automobile and other workers aggregating several million workers, without work for long periods of time with all the consequent misery and suffering which unemployment brings.

4. The decline of world capitalism thrust bring with it sharp crises for American capitalism, "The whole basis of capitalist economy is fundamentally disturbed. A large number of countries are permanently consuming more than they produce, hence gold can no longer perform the function of world currency. Gold flows in unbroken streams into the United States. The gold reserves of North American states have diminished to such an extent that to re-establish the gold currency would be impossible on merely technical grounds. In the place of gold, paper money has been introduced and its value fluctuates to an unlimited extent. There is no longer a free flow of loan capital in and out of capitalist countries. In place of comparatively secure and well-defined relations of normal capitalism, we find universal insecurity. Instead of production and calculation, there is gambling and speculation. Every attempt to solve these problems creates a new one. Any plan to make Germany pay reparations must provide for a free access to world markets of German goods, but to prevent precisely this was one of the objects of the world war. Any attempt of the United States to collect Inter allied debts, a problem in itself, creates a new problem. "English payments to the United States increase quite uselessly the gold funds of the United States and decrease England's ability to purchase American goods and hinder the stabilizations of its currency."

Under such conditions, the economic crisis of the United States is not only a passing shadow, but the reflex of the fundamental crisis of world capitalism. It is not a crisis, but part of the crisis of the existing system. No period of prosperity that may temporarily arrest the downward tendency of American capitalism can save it from its doom.

5. While as a result of the election of Coolidge and Dawes some capitalist circles look to plotting a bright future for the United States, it is not the government which determines the conditions of capitalism, but fundamental economic forces which even the most powerful capitalist governments are unable to control. Even the capitalists recognize that economic forces are more powerful than election results in shaping the future economic conditions in this country. The Annalist, an organ of Big Business, after the election declared: "The welcome increase in business confidence which resulted from the elections, and which was spectacularly shown in last week's stock market, has not obliterated the economic forces which actually shape the course of business. Cool examination of these forces, as they are traceable in current records, discloses no likelihood of a business boom." And a week later it declares:

"When one seeks, however, for the material basis of the higher price levels in the stock market, he meets the fact that there have been practically no changes for the better—certainly no decisive change in the prospects either of industrial or railroad shares, except insofar as confidence alone stands for a better outlook. While the general public was greatest in Wall Street, there was no upward surge in the demand for steel, no warrant for any great increase in the production of pig iron, only a very slight advance in the cotton textile industry, no advance in the automobile market to disturb cautious activity, no change on the part of the wheat farmers, no increase in general merchandise trade beyond the increase almost inseparable from the advance of the season toward Winter."

6. The expected increase in the buying power to the farmers has not materialized. There are no facts to warrant the belief that the depression which existed during 1924 will be immediately overcome.

The severe economic crisis confronting international capitalism seriously disturbed American agriculture as well as industry.

On May 12, 1924, the Advisory Council of the Federal Reserve Board in discussing the dangers to America in its having more than half the world's monetary gold and in making a strong endorsement of the Dawes plan, pointed out the seriousness of the general situation by citing: "The economic mal-adjustment already existing within our own boundaries, a maladjustment which not only disturbs and endangers our trade with other countries, but which makes our agricultural situation particularly difficult and distressing."

The last five years have witnessed a breakdown in our agricultural economy which has brought a sharply reduced standard of living, social degradation, and bankruptcy to great sections of the rural population. From 1919 to 1923 the annual wages paid to the hired farm laborers fell by more than a quarter of a billion dollars. Within this period the net income of the farmers fell more than 60 per cent, the current value of all farm property fell by at least 25 per cent and the farmers' mortgages and other indebtedness rose rapidly. In the year 1922 alone, nearly two million left the farms for the cities and the net shift of population from farms to towns was 1,200,000. Within the last year the number of habitable farmhouses deserted doubled. At the same time nearly one of every four farmers in the fifteen wheat and corn producing states have been driven into actual or virtual bankruptcy.

Such a grave crisis primarily growing out of the deepgoing derangement in the relations between agricultural and industrial economy precipitated by the imperialist world war cannot be relieved by a temporary rise in the price of wheat or other staples occasioned by a passing shortage in the world market. Even the slight gains that may have accrued to some farmers as a result of this temporary price spurt have been largely gobbled up by the bankers in back interest payments, in paying overdue taxes and mortgages, and by the speculators. The much-hoped for increase in the purchasing power of the farming masses has not materialized and has proved disappointing to the capitalist optimists.

7. The future in the United States holds a period of deep-going depressions, alternating with temporary periods of improvement. Hence we must look forward to the sharpening of the class conflicts growing out of these economic conditions, a period in which the economic life of the country will force the workers to fight in order to prevent the continuance of the reduction of their standard of life. Capitalism, in the crisis of its life, will not grant the American working class a long period of "peaceful" development for its movement. The school which will transform the politically inactive proletariat into a revolutionary active one will be one of intense clashes which will bring great struggles on the economic field and develop the political consciousness of the workers.

3. The Political Situation in the United States.

1. With these conditions as a background the political groupings in the United States undergo a rapid change. Although not yet politically conscious the exploited masses begin to stir uneasily. The war brought a greater centralization of power in the hands of the national government. The great post-war economic and financial problems compelled the government to more openly use its power as the agent of the capitalists. This took the form of attempts to reduce the standard of living of the workers and farmers and to shift the enormous burdens of taxation necessary in order to meet the costs of the war onto the backs of the workers and the petty bourgeoisie. As a consequence of this there arose the movements of the petty bourgeoisie, the workers and the farmers seeking to gain political power for themselves. The workers and farmers were forced to fight to prevent the lowering of their standard of life and the petty bourgeoisie desired to halt the encroachments of big capital on their group interests. Thus the strike of the coal miners, the crisis of capitalism on the United States manifested itself on the one hand in a movement for independent political action of the workers and exploited farmers, through a farmer-labor party, and on the other in the efforts of the petty bourgeoisie for a "third" liberal party.

2. In relation to the world situation the American capitalists were divided. Those great international banking houses whose investments were largely in European loans desired the entry of the League of Nations, because they looked upon the League of Nations as a means of guaranteeing the gigantic loans and investments which they had made in Europe. Those finance capitalists who were awaiting more favorable terms, and the capitalist group representing largely industrial investments, which was not so deeply involved in the European situation, wished to take full advantage of what it considered its strong economic situation in exploiting the wrold market and therefore refused to assume any international obligations through the League of Nations. With this and the exception of tariff policy, there has been little to distinguish the republican and democratic parties from one another during the past twenty years. The democratic party up to 1912 was the open opponent of the trusts but nothing was done during the eight years of the Wilson administration in the atempt to carry out the program of destroying the trusts. Under the administration of the democratic and republican presidents alike, the government has been equally subservient as the tool of the dominant capitalist interests. As a consequence there has appeared in both of the old parties a tendency toward a new alignment thru the growth of a petty-bourgeois-liberal insurgent group opposed to the dominant policy of both parties. This movement gained new life and strength as a result of the world war and the sharpening of class conflict growing out of the crisis which the war precipitated and developed into the LaFollette-progressive movement.

The LaFollette-progressive movement is an expression of the revolt of the small capitalists, the well-to-do farmers and the professional groups and the aristocracy of labor against the domination of the government by big capital. The petty bourgeoisie group is in a revolt against the burdens of taxatition which big capital seeks to shift to it. It sees to gain for itself in the maintenance of a great army and navy for use in the imperialist adventures of big capital. In growth of the great trusts it sees a danger to its economic position. In the recent election campaign the trade union bureaucracy allied itself with this group and sought to carry the workers and poorer farmers with them in support of this movement. This alliance of the trade union bureaucracy and trade unionism with the LaFollette-progressive movement was dictated by its policy of class peace and maintenance of the illusion of "government of the people" and the fear of the labor bureaucracy that a farmer-labor party organized upon the basis of the class interests of these two economic classes would fail under the influence and prove an ally to the Communists.

3. The great class conflicts of 1919, and the open shop drive of 1921-22, in which the government was openly and brutally used by the capitalists against the workers forced the workers to fight against a reduction in their standard of life. The farmer found that the government was serving the bankers, railroads, and marketing organizations during the agricultural crisis and using its power against them. This movement for a farmer-labor party sprang up out of these conditions and is not comparable to the development of the British labor party. The conclusion that it will produce a similar party to that which exists in England ignores the fact that it is developing in a different historical period—the period of the decline of capitalism and of the proletarian revolution.

The extent of the movement was shown in the first convention of the Conference for Progressive Political Action, which, although diverted and distorted by the trade union bureaucrats was fundamentally an expression of the desire of the workers and farmers for independent action. The rank and file conference in which the Federated Farmer Labor Party was formed was able to bring together representatives of 600,000 workers and farmers and local farmer-labor parties sprang up on all sides, showing how wide spread is the demand of the workers and farmers for a means of expression of their political strength and to enter the political struggle in their class interests.

The development of the movement side by side with the petty-bourgeois progressive movement led inevitably to a struggle on the part of the petty bourgeoisie to impose its leadership on it and to absorb it. In this, the petty bourgeoisie was aided by the betrayal of the labor bureaucracy, which feared a radical farmer-labor party based upon the rank and file organizations of the workers and poorer farmers. One of the most important factors which made this possible was the error of our Party after the convention of July 3rd, 1923, in which the Federated Farmer Labor Party was organized, in not carrying on an energetic organization campaign and actually creating an organizational basis for the farmer-labor movement. Had we crystallized and organized the forces at that time, before the LaFollette movement had developed in indefinite form, we would have undoubtedly been successful in preventing the LaFollette movement from establishing its leadership over the farmer-labor forces and from using it as a class party to such an extent as to leave us isolated during the election campaign. Opposition to the organization of the Federated Farmer Labor Party based upon a misconception of the United Front tactic on the part of the Foster-Cannon group in the C. E. C. of our party was responsible for this failure.

4. The results of the elections have been to consolidate the political power of big capital thru the rule of the republican party. While the republican party lost some of its petty-bourgeois support in the western states, thru the cry that the constitution, which protected the property rights of the owning class, big and little, was in danger, it was able to mobilize the strength of most of the property owning classes in the United States. While maintaining its position as the expression of the ruling class of the South, the democratic party suffered great losses thru petty-bourgeois desertion in the east and west and desertion of labor elements in the northern industrial states. Also the LaFollette progressive movement polled more than four million votes, its petty-bourgeois leadership is showing the usual hesitancy and vacillation of the petty bourgeoisie, and it is still an open question whether this movement will crystallize in a petty-bourgeois third party. It is a fact of great importance, however, that in the election between four and five million voters cast their votes against the two old parties. Among the voters there were several million workers and poorer farmers who have become sufficiently conscious of their interests to refuse any longer to support the old capitalist parties. These workers and farmers are the material for the development of a class party fighting the battles of these two economic groups. The fundamental conflicts between the interests of the labor elements as against the small capitalists, well-to-do farmers and professional groups, expressing the capitalist interests, make a permanent alliance of these groups impossible and furnishes the basis for our campaign to split this alliance.

Gompers has already deserted the LaFollette movement. He contends that the endorsement of LaFollette was an expression of the non-partisan policy of rewarding the friends and punishing the enemies of labor and proposes to continue this bankrupt policy. The disappointment of the pre-election high hopes of the LaFollette movement has dampened the ardor of some elements, and there is also a tendency in some quarters to look to the new struggle for petty-bourgeois control of the democratic party as a medium of expressing the political interests of this group.

The Workers Party participating for the first time in an election campaign gained political experience, but did not take full advantage of the opportunities offered by the campaign. It was one of the errors of our election campaign that we did not apply the United Front tactic in conducting our campaign in support of our immediate issue of our party platform. While we carried on propaganda on such issues as unemployment, recognition of Soviet Russia, etc. we made no effort to draw the workers into a United Front movement in support of these issues thus limiting our campaign out of the realms of mere propaganda into the actual life struggles of the workers.

4. Summary of Economic and Political Conditions which Must Guide Our Policy.

1. To safeguard and increase their profits in this period of the decline of capitalism, the capitalists concentrate their efforts on an intensification of exploitation. Even when there is no decrease in the output of production, the industrial reserve army tends to increase. This army is marshalled the army of the employed and a general campaign of wage reduction and deterioration of conditions of labor results therefrom.

Th immediate economic crisis aggravates this tendency. The worker will be forced to meet the general offensive of capital with defensive actions—spontaneous strikes and walkouts.

The trade unions as possible leaders and organizers of such defensive actions will be another target of the attack of the employers. The established bureaucracy of the labor unions will, in this crisis, follow the way of least resistance—it will try to use the unions as instruments to pacify the workers rather than to organize their resistance. The American Imperialist interests are more and more meeting with success in hitching to their chariot the upper crust of the working class, the highly skilled workers. This consciously fostered aristocracy of labor is seeking to transform the trade unions from organizations of class struggle for the workers into capitalist agencies for more intense exploitation of the great masses of unskilled and colonial workers. Witness the Baltimore and Ohio plan, the extension of labor banking, the ownership of non-union coal mines by members of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers. The sacrifice of the welfare of the great mass of workers, a price for peace with the employers, will be the tactics of the trade union leaders, the more so the more the resistance of the victimized workers against the offensive of the employers turns into a partial revolt against the very system of capitalism itself. Under these conditions, all policies, based exclusively on the so-called bona fide trade union movement, for revolutionizing broad masses of workers are doomed to fail.

2. The struggle of the workers in the near future will increasingly take the form of revolts of the unorganized and unauthorized, "outlaw" strikes. These strikes will be revolts of the working masses, not only against their capitalist employers, but also against their own leaders.

3. The task of the Workers (Communist) Party, is clear: to give leadership and direction to these struggle. All the slogans of our party for the revolutionization of the labor movement must be developed from propaganda slogans against the role of trade-union bureaucracy into objects to be realized in actual campaigns. Amalgamation of craft unions and the building up of industrial unions must become an immediate object of united front campaigns in such "outlawed" struggles, and other mass struggles, to be realized by rank and file action wherever possible.

The organization of the unorganized must become an immediate object of campaign for the mobilization of the full strength of the working masses for their defensive struggles.

Reorganization of the party on the basis of shop nuclei will adapt our organization to these tasks. It will facilitate the formation of shop committees, these to be made the instrument for the defensive struggles of the workers, for the task of carrying on actual amalgamation campaigns, and for the organization of the unorganized.

All successful attempts to widen strikes will strengthen the workers in their defense and will facilitate the achievement of tangible results in campaigns for amalgamation and the organization of the unorganized.

For carrying out of these tasks, the party must mobilize its industrial department in full strength.

4. The mobilization of the party for industrial work and its active participation in industrial struggles must have as its primary object the development of political activity of the working class. The realization of this object depends upon our ability to inject political issues into the everyday struggles and to mobilize the workers for mass political action. Political problems arising out of strikes (use of state power in all forms against striking workers) will supply ample basis for political united front movement. The slogan of a "Farmer-Labor Party" supplies the propaganda basis for the development of political consciousness of the masses.

In intensive struggles of the immediate future, the slogan of the farmer-labor party also becomes the basis for real campaigns. Today the farmer-labor party slogan supplies the form which political united front movement of the Communists with non-Communist working masses will take.

The political alliance of the trades union bureaucracy with the petty-bourgeoisie will make the slogan of a farmer-labor party an entering wedge between the working masses and these treacherous leaders. The conflicts arising between the workers and these leaders on the basis of the latter's abandonment of the cause of the former in their immediate economic struggles will facilitate the task of prying lose those masses from the political leadership of these charlatans.

Thus the slogan of farmer-labor party and campaigns for the building up of farmer-labor parties will tend to strengthen the Workers Party organizationally, will extend its influence far beyond its organizational strength, will help to make a real mass party out of it, at the same time revolutionizing the activities of broad masses of workers who must be made objects of Communist leadership, although they may not and cannot be at the

SUMMARY OF THESIS SUBMITTED BY RUTHENBERG, LOVESTONE, BEDACHT, ENGDAHL AND GITLOW

1. The economic problem created by the world war has developed the revolutionary crisis of the capitalist order.

2. In this period every successive step of capitalism to save itself agravates exploitation of the workers and accelerates the climax of the crisis—the proletarian revolution.

3. In this period the greatest task of a revolutionary party, of a Communist Party, is to win the leadership of ever greater masses of workers.

4. This task can be performed only by a strong and bolshevized party.

5. The building up and the strengthening of our Communist Party is a task which cannot be separated from the problems of setting into motion the proletarian and poor farming masses against the capitalists. To divorce these tasks by setting up "the building of the party" as a separate problem is sectarianism and not revolutionary.

6. The slogans of the Workers (Communist) Party must therefore be those which will enable the party to crystallize and unify politically the struggling masses in the factories and on the land under Communist leadership.

7. The slogan of a class farmer-labor party is such a slogan. It tends to develope political consciousness amongst the masses and helps the Communists separate those masses from the petty bourgeois and reactionary labor leadership.

8. The intensified struggles of the workers in this period of the decline of capitalism makes it the first duty of the party to combine its slogans with campaigns of action which will realize them. Such slogans are: FOR A FARMER-LABOR PARTY! AMALGAMATION OF THE CRAFT UNIONS INTO POWERFUL INDUSTRIAL UNIONS! ORGANIZE THE UNORGANIZED! RELIEF FOR THE UNEMPLOYED!

9. The task of building up and extanding the influence of our party is synonomous with the task divorcing the working class from its treacherous trade union bureaucracy and petty bourgeois leadership. This task cannot be performed merely by a mechanical addition of new members. Only to the extent that we succeed in revolutionizing the labor movement will we succeed in building a mass Communist Party.

10. In order to face this task and meet with success our party must be a unified party, every section of which participates actively in all campaigns and does not content itself merely with formal membership.

particular moment subjects for membership in the Communist Party.

5. The Tasks of the Workers Party.

1. Based upon the foregoing analysis of the economic and political situation the tasks of our party are:

A. The United Front Tactics.

1. The Fifth Congress of the Communist International reiterated its endorsement of the tactic of the United Front as "a method for agitation and revolutionary mobilization of the proletariat." Our party must continue to apply the United Front tactic for these purposes.

2. The economic situation of capitalism will produce recurring crises. During these crises the capitalists continually seek to force down the wages of the workers, lengthen hours and in other ways improve their position in relation to the workers. Unemployment on a large scale is one of the features of these crises. The movements of resistance against these conditions on the part of the workers create the favorable conditions for the application of the United Front. Our party must be in the forefront of these struggles. It must take the leadership in raising the issue of the class struggle and developing slogans with which to rally the workers for a common struggle against the capitalists. It must call upon all working class organizations to form a united front in fighting these struggles. It is only by thus openly standing in the forefront of the fight for the workers against the capitalists on questions of immediate interest of the workers that we can win leadership over the working masses and of the poorer farmers and draw the most conscious and militant workers into our party.

2. The Communist International has well pointed out that the United Front must never be an agreement between leaders. The United Front must be built from below, by a direct appeal of our party to working masses to join in a common fight against the capitalists. The party must never hide its identity in these United Front manoeuvers. It must stand out openly and boldly as the leader in initiating and conducting the united front struggle.

4. Our farmer-labor party campaign was an application of the United Front tactic. For our party the application of this tactic was a success. The test of our manoeuvers was not as some elements of our party erroneously believe, whether we actually succeeded in forming a farmer-labor party, but whether through the United Front slogan "for a Class Farmer-Labor Party" we were able to increase the influence and prestige of the Workers Party among the masses of workers and poorer farmers of this country and, thus hasten the development of a mass Communist Party. The united front farmer-labor party tactic developed our party into an acknowledged political force in the lives of the workers of this country. It was through this United Front tactic that our party emerged from the status of a propaganda sect to that of a Communist Party. The Communist International recognized this in declaring in its statement on the Third Party issue "The Workers Party, which immediately after it had been established, was capable of emerging from the stage of agitation and propaganda and of taking up with great energy the political struggle . . . . ."

6. In our farmer-labor party campaign, in and prior to the June 17 convention, we hesitated to openly establish our Communist leadership. This was an error in the application of the United Front tactic. The United Front tactic does not mean that the party shall not carry on campaigns in its own name and under its own leadership. It means precisely the reverse, that our party shall seize upon and develop issues of the class struggle and through such issues mobilize the workers in common struggles with itself. The masking of our leadership in the farmer-labor movement led us into many difficulties and opportunist errors. In applying the united front farmer-labor tactic in the future and in other united front manoeuvers we must openly establish our leadership and consistently seek to develop Communist understanding in the groups with which we surround ourselves in these actions.

B The Farmer-Labor United Front Slogan.

1. In its statement to our party on the Third Party issue the Communist International declares:

"The first task of the Workers Party is to become a mass Communist Party of workers. It can fulfil this task only by most actively participating in the establishment of a Labor Party which will embrace all elements of the working class willing to conduct a policy independent of the capitalist class and by establishing a bond with the farmers who are at present in a state of strong fermentation. These two independent tasks—the task of building around the Communist Party a broad, class labor party, and—of establishing a bond between a labor party and the poorest elements of the farmers, have developed in the United States thanks to the peculiarities of historical evolution, as one problem, namely the building of a common party of workers and exploited farmers. In many states farmer-labor parties are already springing up. This peculiarity of the situation which does not permit a separation of the task of creating a labor party from the task of coming into closer contact with the farmers, requires of the Workers Party special methods. The American Communists must establish within the farmer-labor party a strong, consolidated labor wing including the agricultural wage workers. This wing shall lead the exploited farming masses instead of falling under the influence of the petty-bourgeois character of the latter."

We endorse this statement as a correct summary of the task before our party.

2. The slogan "for a Class Farmer-Labor Party" remains our most effective means of agitation for political action on a class basis by the workers and poorer farmers. Our use of this slogan for mobilization of the left class-party bloc against the La-Follette progressive movement has made a deep impression upon those workers and poorer farmers who stand for a fight against capitalism. The slogan offers the most effective weapon against the LaFollette progressive movement whether the latter organizes a third party or not. Through this slogan we can again establish connection with the trade unions and with the organizations of poor farmers.

3. If we abandon the United Front policy politically by abandoning the slogan "For a Class Farmer Labor Party" we will surrender the most effective agitational weapon we have for drawing the workers close to our party and building the Workers Party. The experiences of the workers and poorer farmers in the struggle against capitalism will produce even a stronger movement for independent political action than has existed in the past. To deny this is to deny the fundamentals of our Communist principles, and the correctness of the analysis of the present world situation of capitalism. Should we surrender the position of leadership in this campaign we will give to the yellow socialist and reformist leaders a free field to break the workers and farmers who become politically conscious under their influence and leadership. Our failure to raise this issue in the A. F. of L. Convention has already lost us an opportunity for leadership in the A. F. of L. Convention and ready lost us an opportunity for leadership and consistently seek to develop Communist understanding in the groups with which we surround ourselves in these actions.

4. The farmer-labor groups which were temporarily brought under the leadership of the LaFollette movement can by carefully directed agitation be split away from the LaFollette progressive movement. In a number of states such as Washington, Montana, Colorado, South Dakota, and Minnesota the farmer-labor parties can seperate farmer-labor tickets although accepting LaFollette's candidacy indicating the fundamental conflict between the farmer-labor movement and the LaFollette movement. A tendency is already in evidence for these farmer-labor parties to reassert their independence as for instance in Minnesota where is already developing bitter criticism of the LaFollette progressive movement for its attitude toward the farmer-labor party during the campaign. Other groups such as the North Dakota Farmer Labor Party, the Washington County Pa. Farmer Labor Party, etc., never entered the LaFollette movement but maintained their independence. Part of the LaFollette votes—that cast by workers and farmers—is an indication of the extent of the farmer-labor party sentiment among the workers and farmers.

5. The goal of our policy must be to crystallize around the Workers Party those elements who are ready for the formation of a class party. We must crystallize the elements of workers and poorer farmers now in the LaFollette movement into a left-class-party-bloc with the view of eventually splitting them away from that movement. At the same time we must direct our efforts toward organizing this group and those elements which are for a class party which have not joined the LaFollette movement around themselves and of establishing our open, revolutionary leadership over this group.

All part of this agitation under the slogan "For a Class Farmer-Labor Party" we must raise immediate issues rising out of the class struggle against the LaFollette movement and by the fact that this group will not fight for the workers and poor farmers prove to the workers that this movement will not fight their battles against the capitalists.

6. Our immediate campaign must be one of agitation. Whether the left-class-party elements will be eventually actually organized into a farmer-labor party fighting the class battles of workers and farmers is not the essential question at present. The inevitability of the formation of a farmer-labor party is the basis of our campaign. We use this slogan as a means of agitation and to establish contact with workers who are moving toward independent political action, to win them for the Workers Party and to build our party. It is quite possible that the actual organization of a class farmer-labor party which will establish itself firmly and function over a period of time will not be the line of development, but that the best of those elements which we bring under our influence and leadership thru the campaign under the slogan "for a Class Farmer Labor Party" can be absorbed into the Workers' Party without passing thru the stage of actual organization into a separate party.

7. The campaign "for a Class Farmer-Labor Party" if conducted upon a correct conception of the United Front tactic will not obscure and hide the Workers Party or substitute some other organization for it. On the contrary it will bring the Workers Party to the fore as never before. It will make our party stand out as the leader in the struggle in the interest of the workers and poorer farmers.

The United Front farmer-labor party campaign is a united front manoeuver to build the Workers Party. It was the error of the Foster-Cannon group on the C. E. C. of the party that they considered the formation of a farmer labor party as a goal in itself and were ready to sacrifice the bringing under the leadership and influence of the Workers Party of a left wing farmer-labor group which was ready to form with us a radical farmer-labor party for the illusion of the organization of a broad all-inclusive farmer-labor party, by the official-ism of the socalled bona-fide trade union movement. This point of view accounts for their present policy of abandoning the farmer-labor campaign. For them the LaFollette progressive movement is the all-embracing labor party. They took the position that to try to build the Workers Party through the farmer-labor united front was "a split theory" which was contrary to the United Front tactic. This error must not be repeated. Our aim in carrying on the campaign "for a Class Farmer-Labor Party" must be to bring the left wing bloc in the labor movement and among the poorer farmers under our influence and leadership, impregnate this group with Communist understanding and to absorb the best elements into the Workers Party with the goal of making it a mass Communist Party.

8. The concrete steps which we must take in carrying out this policy are the following:

(a) Our members in the trade unions shall conduct a strong campaign of criticism against the LaFollette progressive movement pointing out that it is a liberal capitalist third party, and not a farmer-labor party and raising the slogan of a class Farmer Labor Party and splitting these trade unions away from the LaFollette progressive movement.

(b) Where our unions are affiliated with units of the LaFollette progressive organization, our members shall seek to become delegates and to make in these organizations the same criticism and raise the slogan of the "Class Farmer Labor Party" and to split them away from the LaFollette progressive movement.

(c) We shall oppose the affiliation with the LaFollette progressive organization of any unions not already affiliated.

(d) In relation to the coming national convention tentatively set for January by the LaFollette progressive organization, our policy shall be, that wherever we have party members in organizations affiliated and entitled to send delegates, to have our party members elected with instructions to make the same criticism against the LaFollette progressive organization in its national convention and raise the slogan of a "Class Farmer-Labor Party" in order to build a left-bloc and split it away.

(e) We shall mobilize all the class farmer-labor elements with which we have contact and which are now affiliated with the LaFollette progressive organization for the same campaign against this as a liberal, third capitalist party and not a labor party and to have them raise the slogan of a "Class Farmer Labor Party" and to split with the LaFollette-progressive movement.

C. And Industrial Work.

1. We endorse the new program for industrial work prepared in collaboration with the Red International of Labor Unions. We particularly emphasize the necessity of the industrial department of the party carrying out, into actual struggles of the workers the following points of this program:

(a) Greater participation and the establishment of our leadership in strikes.

(b) Actual organized effort to organize the unorganized. The shop nuclei as the basic units of the party are an important step in this direction. The shop nuclei should be the instruments for the creation of shop committees which should be the basis of the organizations formed.

(c) Energetic taking up of the problem of unemployment and actual work of the trade unions in support of our unemployment program.

(d) The raising of political slogans in connection with all industrial struggles thus directing these struggles toward political objectives and developing political action by the workers.

2. The actual organization of the industrial department of our party has not yet been achieved. In only a very few places is there an actual, functioning organization of the industrial department. We must remedy this defect and create units of the industrial department wherever we have members in the trade unions and see that these organizations carry on regular systematic work in support of our political and industrial program.

In the thesis of the Communist International our party is criticized for its "supercilious attitude toward the revolutionary unions formed parallel to the reformist unions." We must give more attention to the independent unions and establish friendly relations and co-operation with them.

4. The industrial department of the party must be mobilized in all the party campaigns to give active support to the party in all its work.

D. The Negro Workers.

The Negro workers of the United States offer a special problem for our party. The Negroes are among the most exploited groups of the workers and the poorer farmers. We must seek to develop special slogans which will appeal to these workers and seek to draw them into the general struggles of the workers and poorer farmers. The party in the future must study this problem more thoroly and carry on active work toward bringing the Negro workers into the struggle under its leadership.

E. The Young Workers League.

1. The Young Workers' League should be a powerful ally of the party in all its campaigns and the party must give it its support in order to strengthen it and develop it as the means of supporting the party campaigns thru its special appeals to the young workers to take up the struggle The special task of the Young Workers' League is to reach the young workers in industry, it must develop its work so that its major attention is given to this field. With this work must go intensified anti-military propaganda among the youth of the nation. The full support of the party must be given to the Young Workers League in strengthening itself for this work.

6. Bolshevization of the Workers' Party.

1. The Communist International in the thesis on tactics adopted by the Fifth Congress laid down the following qualifications as essential to make the party a truly Bolshevik party:

"(a) The party must be a real mass party, i. e., while being an open party, or obliged to go underground, it must maintain the closest and unseverable ties with the masses of the workers and serve as an expression of their needs and aspirations.

"(b) It must have the ability to maneuver, i. e., its tactics must not be dogmatic or sectarian. It must be able to resort to every strategical maneuver against the enemy which will enable it to remain true to itself. It is one of the chief errors of our parties that they frequently fail to understand this.

"(c) It must essentially be a revolutionary and Marxian party, non-deviating and in spite of all circumstances proceed toward the goal and make every effort to bring near the hour of the victory of the proletariat over the bourgeoisie.

"(d) It must be a centralized party, prohibiting factional tendencies and groupings. It must be a monolithic party hewed of one piece.

"(e) It must carry on a regular, definite propaganda in the bourgeois army."

2. Our immediate policy to realize these qualifications for the Workers' Party must be:

(a) Crystallization around us thru the slogan of a "Class Farmer Labor Party" of the genuine working masses and the ultimate absorption of these masses in the Workers' Party.

(b) The consistent application of the united front tactic and its strategical maneuvering against our enemies.

(c) Intensive Marxist Leninist educational work within our party.

(d) The most rapid steps consistent with the safe-guarding of the party structure to reorganize the party on the basis of shop nuclei.

(e) The enforcement of strict discipline in all party units and all party work.

3. The Communist International has pointed out that the tendency of the Lore group in our party in a Two and a Half International tendency—that is a left social-democratic tendency. The Central Executive Committee of the party during the last year has not carried on an aggressive ideological struggle against this tendency. Contrary to the decision of the C. I., the Foster-Cannon group, in place of carrying on a struggle against the tendency has maintained an organizational alliance with it The incoming Central Executive Committee must carry on a systematic campaign against this tendency and root out every vestige of this non Communist viewpoint.

4. Certain of our sections require special attention in carrying on the work of Bolshevization of the party. There are large numbers of members in some language sections who have no understanding of what it means to be a Communist and a member of a Communist Party. We must, in cooperation with the bureau of such sections begin systematic work to draw these members into the actual activities of the party and carry on an educational campaign to give them Communist understanding. Our party cannot be merely the means of maintaining social activities for any section of its membership. Such a membership is a source of weakness and not of strength.

7. Organizational Steps.

1. Our party has not given sufficient attention to the organizational work of the party, either in bringing into the party new members or the strengthening of the party structure. We must increase this phase of work in the future thru the following steps:

(a) Continued organized efforts to bring the workers whom we win thru our agitation and propaganda and thru our united front manoeuvers into the party. The organization of shop nuclei will give us a powerful weapon to draw into the party those workers from the shops, the very elements which are most needed to strengthen the party.

(b) Close attention to the organizational functioning of the party with the view of strengthening the party structure, and teaching the party unite constructive methods of conducting their work.

(c) There are dangers of new attacks on our organization as we more actively participate in the class struggle and we must take immediate steps to organize the necessary apparatus which will take charge of the party in case of new persecutions against it.

REPORT OF MEETING OF CITY CENTRAL COMMITTEE OF Y. W. L.

Trade union economic work was the main subject under discussion at the last city central committee meeting of the Young Workers League.

This discussion is the beginning of an intensified activity in the trade union economic work by the Chicago league. This has been somewhat pushed in the background heretofore due to the reorganization of the league, factory campaigns, etc. Comrade Shachtman reported very ably on this subject. He pointed out that the American league has now reached the third period in the development of economic trade union work, namely the period of propaganda for a number of special demands and the struggle for these demands; having passed the period of theoretical discussion and that of the journalistic propaganda, our struggle for the immediate demands can begin in the trade unions where we have members as well as in the campaigns in the factories.

Registration Must Be Complete.

Every league branch in the city of Chicago has been instructed to complete its registration of members as to place of work and trade union affiliation. The industrial organizer of the city has been instructed to furnish the branches with data on initiation fees, applications, etc. In the unions of the trades our members work in. A drive will be made to get every member of the league into a union. Our union members will have to work in much closer co-operation with our party than heretofore and wherever possible form youth fractions. Meetings of all comrades working in one industry will be called and immediate work outlined.

The report of the city executive brot in a number of definite recommendations on the factory campaigns, organization of shop nuclei, education work, a membership drive, literature sale and collection of campaign funds

Shop Nuclei Is Discussed.

Branches reported on their activities in the organization of shop nuclei. The difficulties and the successes of this work, were the main topics for discussion on their reports

The discussion brot out that while it is comparatively easy to organize a nucleus and elect its officers, required persistent and intelligent efforts of the branch executive and branch members to make it flourish, which is the most important thing after all, and realizing this there should be no neglect on the part of the branches to "nurse" the newly formed nuclei.

The matter of printing a local bulletin was endorsed and publication held up pending arrival of policy in structions from the national office.

The work of Chicago League is growing and expanding. However more comrades must take part in the work. More young comrades must be drawn into responsible work so that greater results can be achieved and the future work of the league assured.

Their first conversation betrayed the fact that she was not fastidious

AT a distance she had appeared unusually neat, immaculate. But upon their first face-to-face meeting he discovered that her teeth were not clean. And he soon lost interest.

So many people overlook this one matter of fastidiousness. And do so in spite of the fact that in conversation the teeth are the one most noticeable thing about you.

Notice today how you, yourself, watch another person's teeth when he or she is talking. If the teeth are not well kept they at once become a liability.

Listerine Tooth Paste cleans teeth in new ways. At last our chemists have discovered a polishing ingredient that really cleans without scratching the enamel - a different problem entirely solved.

You will notice the improvement even in the first few days. And you know it is cleaning safely.

So the makers of Listerine, the safe antiseptic, have found for you also the safe tooth paste.

What are your teeth saying about you today?—LAMBERT PHARMACAL CO., Saint Louis, U. S. A.

WE WILL ORGANIZE—

Into a DAILY WORKER Standing Army—IN OVERALLS. Whenever the DAILY WORKER has taken hold, we have—or will have—a CITY AGENT. And where we have a local of the Workers Party, the branches have or MUST have —a DAILY WORKER BRANCH AGENT.

WE WILL ORGANIZE THE "BUILDERS"—

Every member of the Party and many workingmen out of it—every worker who believes that to "Build the DAILY WORKER" is a sure way to Build the Labor Movement—will become a BUILDER.

EVERY PARTY MEMBER will support the BRANCH AGENT. THE BRANCH AGENT will support the CITY AGENT—(and be on his board of strategy!).

And EVERY WORKER who supports the DAILY WORKER will be in the DAILY WORKER Standing Army IN OVERALLS continually building HIS OWN paper—

HERE'S HOW IT HAPPENED!

The Bricklayers (The D. W. B. U.) were a tremendous success. In a short six weeks their efforts resulted in an increase of 5,000 in the average daily circulation of THEIR paper. We still hold that increase. But we had too many jurisdictional disputes! The carpenters, the plumbers, the plasterers, and others were also doing their share of the building. So our executive board, believing in amalgamation, made an industrial union of those on the job! Today we are happily united in the BUILDERS.

And The C. E. C. Approves!

Their approval says:

"To 'INSURE THE DAILY WORKER FOR 1925' means to insure a steady march forward, a continued victory four our party.

"The Workers Party therefore undertakes as one of its principal tasks to support the DAILY WORKER campaign. It calls upon all Workers Party members and all enlightened workers everywhere to enter into this campaign with all energy and to support THE DAILY WORKER NOW with funds—NOW, AND ALWAYS WITH SUBSCRIPTIONS."

Insure The Daily Worker for 1925

This is YOUR FIRST JOB! This is your assurance to have something to "Build On It!" Put the DAILY WORKER on its own feet. Make it stand squarely, strongly, in a position to better fight the workingman's battle.

Today the DAILY WORKER is hindered by debts, struggling to exist while fighting YOUR FIGHT. Clear the deficit—send in your funds and get others to give their share—and you will put the DAILY WORKER in fighting trim to wage stronger battle and to become an even greater leader in the fight for the Labor movement. THAT IS THE FIRST JOB OF A BUILDER!

War?

With kaleidoscopic rapidity the center of gravity of the imperialist conflict that rends world capitalism has shifted from China to Africa. The tory government of England junks the league of nations and prepares for major conquests in northern Africa that drive the French imperialists to frenzy.

The death of a British general at the hands of workers whose comrades he had murdered throws all Europe into turmoil and brings joy to the hearts of the munition makers just as did the assassination of a Serbian princeling in 1914.

The rapidity of the change of scene is in itself indicative of the instability of world capitalism. That the new casus belli revolves around a semi-colonial domain similar in many respects to China, is proof of the Communist contention that every one of these areas of capitalist exploitation is a potential bombshell that a slight jar may explode.

Great Britain has not a single friend or ally in Europe. The rest of the imperialist powers, France particularly, look at the mobilization of troops and warships for the Egyptian campaign with jealous fear.

There is a panic in the robbers' roost and like the lowlier gunmen of Chicago, they do not intend to let one of their number get more than his share of the loot.

The threat of war growing out of the Egyptian imbroglio is no journalistic phrase. All of the ingredients for another wholesale slaughter of the masses are present—Europe is armed to the teeth and vicious nationalism is at high tide.

There is a new factor present in the European situation, however, one that was not there in 1914. Soviet Russia and the Communist International—the personification in the minds of the militarist madmen of the revolution, the force that allows them no peaceful moment, are in Europe and have the backing of millions of the same workers that imperialism must depend upon for its life.

The last war almost ended capitalism. Whether it comes today or tomorrow, and come it will, the next war will end it everywhere and forever. The fear of this is one of the major factors in temporarily halting another world war.

"Capitalism," said Marx, "came into the world dripping blood and dirt from every pore." No one who looks at the present European situation and hears the baying of the dogs of war can help believing that it will go out the same way.

The New Morgan Loan

The House of Morgan is heading a huge syndicate of American financiers to float a hundred million dollar loan to the Herriot government of France.

American imperialist domination has been making such rapid progress in recent months that a hundred million dollar loan in itself is no longer of momentous importance. This loan, however, bears significance in many directions.

For months negotiations have been going on between the firm of J. P. Morgan and company, rulers of the United States, and the Herriot administration of France. The Herriot cabinet, it will be recalled, reached its present political pinnacle thru attacking its predecessor, the Poincare clique, along many lines. One of the most forceful lines of criticism leveled against the Poincare administration by the French liberals was its altogether too-ready acceptance of harsh terms at the hands of J. P. Morgan and company in the financial transactions. Now these liberals are in power. Now the critic Herriot is at the helm. Mr. Herriot and his "radicals" who did all the howling against Morgan in order to ride into power on the tide of mass popular discontent with the Morgan maneuvers in France, are now the very ones to accept the same disgraceful terms at the hands of the American financial dictator.

Again we must ask: Where is the blessing that the Dawes plan was to shower on France? It simply is not there. Some may say that the Dawes plan has not been in operation long enough. Yet, the fact remains that Dawes plan or no Dawes plan, French imperialist finance is in such wretched shape that it cannot administer its governmental machinery without aid from foreign capitalist sources.

This big Morgan loan is another root sunk into the European soil by the American imperialists. It is another step in the direction of untrammeled American hegemony. It is another move that is bound to hasten the coming world conflagration.

If Koretz, the Chicago society swindler, had real brains he would have gone into the bootlegging business in his home town and been entirely safe from arrest.

Attack on Brotherhoods Begins

Eight thousand engineers, firemen and hostlers employed by the Southern Pacific railway are taking a strike vote. The railway company has refused to negotiate directly with the union and insists on having all questions of wages and working conditions handled by the strikebreaking agency of the government—the railway labor board. Federal Judge Wilkerson, who granted the injunction that was a major factor in breaking the strike of the railway shopmen in 1922, has upheld the jurisdiction of the railway board over these questions and has ruled that union members or officials who refuse to answer the summons of the board may be imprisoned for contempt of court.

The workers involved in the dispute are asking an 8 per cent increase in wages and the negotiations have been hanging fire for almost a year. The Southern Pacific railway has postponed decisions time after time with the evident intention of waiting until after the election returned Coolidge, the enemy of the labor movement, to office.

This single instance affecting the most conservative section of the organized workers, one that has never been the target for the open shop movement, is proof that the labor unions are going to be forced to fight for their very lives in the very near future and is probably only the beginning of an attack that will involve even large sections of the labor aristocracy that has hitherto stood aloof from the struggles of the rest of the organized workers as the railway brotherhoods did in 1922.

There appears to be some militancy left in the firemen and enginemen in spite of the efforts of their officials to make them believe they are bankers and not workers, but the officialdom, which hailed the establishment of the railway labor board during the war period as a victory for labor, will not fight.

We propose the immediate organization of shop committees as a weapon for these workers and the recommendation will call forth a sarcastic smile from them. A year from now, however, we venture to say that they will not dismiss the suggestion so lightly. By that time the anti-labor offensive will be in full swing and they will be froced to fight or surrender. They will not surrender altho their banker-leaders will—in fact they already have.

Hail—Our Navy!

We do not refer to the armada of battleships which is preparing to sail for far Pacific waters under the stars and stripes as a threat against Japan in the guise of "naval maneuvers." That is but the first major step in the mobilization for the coming war for the conquest of China and the Pacific. It is a definite outward manifestation of the transfer of the struggle of imperialism from the Atlantic to the Pacific which Karl Marx was able to forecast even when first the gold discoveries in California in 1849 turned the gaze of American imperialism across the westward shore. The navy that will soon sail to make the first skirmish, at least a tactical skirmish, in the coming real world war, is not the navy we hail.

Hail our navy!—But we refer to a navy which really belongs to the revolution of the workers of the world. We refer to the Red Navy which flies the flag of the first workers' republic.

The Red Navy of Russia has secured the return of its Black Sea fleet. The French government, in recognizing the Soviet government, was compelled to return these ships which had been in the possession of the counter-revolutionary Baron Wrangel. The regaining of possession of these ships is, however, not to be credited to a mere diplomatic victory. In the truest sense of the word these ships were re-won thru force of arms in warfare. Soviet bayonets punctured the French-fed bellies of Wrangel's mercenaries. Soviet cannon battered Wrangel off the coast of Crimea. The valor of the Russian workers and peasants conquered imperialist France in the form of its mercenaries in the south of Russia, and in the west, and in the valley of the Volga, and in the north. The revolutionary Red Army placed Russia in a position where she could not be treated as a subject nation to be looted; Soviet arms forced the situation where capitalist France felt compelled to recognize proletarian revolutionary Russia.

But Soviet Russia in the best sense belongs to the workers of the world. Its Red Navy will fire its guns in no other cause than the cause of the workers of the world, and in such a cause it will fire. The recovery of the Black Sea fleet, which soon will hoist the flag of Communism and sail to a home port, will greatly strengthen our international cause.

Hail our navy!

Wage Cutting in Maine

The Maine textile workers have been handed a 10 per cent wage cut—a further testimonial of the esteem in which the textile capitalists hold them following a 12½ per cent reduction last year.

The Paterson silk workers have shown the way to take care of such forays on the already low wages and living standards of the textile workers and the best thing the Maine workers can do is to follow their example—organize, strike and fight thru to victory or honorable defeat. The lack of such action, doubly difficult because of the absence of any union, when the cut was made last year, is doubtless responsible for the new attack.

Maine is also a Coolidge stronghold.

American Imperialism's Labor Outpost

By WILLIAM F. DUNNE.

The sweep of American imperialism in all avenues in which it finds expression is one of the most remarkable events of the present epoch.

As Communists we are especially interested in its activities in the ranks of working class organizations and the effect it has on the working class organized and unorganized.

It is a commonplace to state that the Gompers' officialdom of the American Federation of Labor is an appendage of American imperialistic enterprise, but even commonplaces become of unusual interest when new events of major importance to the working class appear.

Of such a character is the policy adopted previously by the A. F. of L. officialdom but openly announced to the world at the El Paso convention in the presence of Mexican, British and German delegates.

"Monroe Doctrine of Labor."

Matthew Woll, the heir apparent to the Gompers' throne, characterized this policy as the 'Monroe Doctrine of the American labor movement." Nowhere in the world are the catch words of the capitalist class used to such an extent that they are by labor officialdom in America, but this is something more than a mere parroting of capitalist slogans.

Following the reading of a resolution aimed at the Communists and the left wing critics of Gompers which was adopted as a pledge of good faith by the Mexican labor bureaucracy and which contained the following clause, "Resolved, that the Mexican Federation of Labor will oppose all attacks which the enemies of the American Federation of Labor will attempt to undertake against it in any part whatsoever of the Mexican republic," Woll delivered himself as follows:

"Mr. chairman, I move that the president of this federation convey to the Mexican Federation of Labor our appreciation for this declaration of loyalty to the ideals of democracy and pledge of support and co-operation with the American Federation of Labor in the promoting of the ideals of trade unionism, which, after all, is the beginning of the Monroe doctrine of American labor to apply to the western hemisphere."

New Coalition Starts Work

No sooner was this cementing of the bond of Latin-American and Yankee labor imperialists concluded than the new coalition of betrayal showed its hand.

Trevino, secretary of the Mexican federation, who recently went to Japan, and, and offered to MacDonald affiliation of the Mexican labor movement to the Amsterdam International in return for recognition of the Mexican government by Great Britain, took the floor and accused the British labor government of following British capitalists to ship arms to de la Huerta. He further stated that consignments of arms and munitions were on the way from England for General Flores, who is heading another armed insurrection against the present Mexican government, and appealed to the British fraternal delegates present to "show real solidarity and prevent the shipment of these arms."

No Communist will criticise Trevino for his expressed desire to prevent British capitalist aid to reactionaries, but arranged for by the Gompers' machine, it served two purposes that are of evil import to the working class. First, it served to throw suspicion upon and compare unfavorably the British labor movement with the American Federation of Labor in the eyes of the delegates and the workers who read the reports of the convention. Second, it displayed the British imperialists as the only enemy of the Mexican workers and concealed the fact that AMERICAN CAPITALISTS ARE NOT FURNISHING ARMS AND SUBSIDING INSURRECTION IN MEXICO BECAUSE THE MEXICAN GOVERNMENT HAS CAPITULATED TO THEM.

Aid Wall Street In Mexico.

In other words the American Federation of Labor officialdom has, on behalf of American imperialism, stepped out as the foremost defender of its right to a monopoly of exploitation on the two American continents American imperialism and its labor wing, the American Federation of Labor will "protect" the Mexican masses from all oppression except that sponsored by Wall Street and its instrument in Washington, D. C. It is of course, much better for the Mexican workers to be robbed and murdered by the gunmen of Yankee oil well and copper mine owners than by similar agencies employed by British capitalists. Gompers and Coolidge agree on this. So do their Wall-Street masters.

The rivalry that can end only in war between British and American imperialism, but which the capitalist press has not yet been ordered to intensify by propaganda, in every field of imperialistic endeavor—oil, shipping markets, world finance—finds the Gompers' clique ready to champion the home-grown variety of imperialism. This attitude is the inevitable fruit of a policy that denies the class struggle and sets up a united front with capitalism on every possible occasion, a policy that leaves the American working class all but helpless and now intends to tame the militant Mexican workers and make them docile slaves of Wall Street.

While the federation met the British admiral, Jellicoe completes his tour of the empire's possessions and brings home a plan for an expansion of British naval power in the Pacific.

Blesses Navy Maneuvers.

American imperialism answers with naval maneuvers around Hawaii and the American Federation of Labor says amen.

All relations are broken off between Great Britain and Mexico and Wall Street makes hay while the sun shines. John D. Rockefeller places a chaste kiss on the brow of Sam Gompers' cast in the role of Maud Muller.

Nor is this all. In every phase of the policy of the state department and the most dangerous activity of the war and navy departments, the A. F. of L. bureaucracy adopts the policy of American imperialism.

Its attitude on the matter of Japanese exclusion is too well known to need mention, but at El Paso the metal trades department of the federation adopted a resolution urging the construction of more battleships—the logical corollary of the hostility of the parent body to Japanese workers.

The navy department is well pleased.

To Recruit Cannon Fodder.

At El Paso, scene of the complete degradation of the American labor movement, the war department is not forgotten. A resolution is introduced, to be sent to all affiliated locals, signed by no less than twenty-five union officials, the preamble of which reads as follows:

Resolved, By the American Federation of Labor in national convention assembled . . . that the citizens' military training camps are deserving of the support of American laboring men and the executive council is authorized and directed to nominate three civilian aides to the secretary of war at large, and one civilian aide in each of the forty-eight states, to co-operate with the government in recruiting candidates for these camps.

Among the signers of this resolution is the name of Ledvinka, representing the Ohio State Federation of Labor, a member of the United Mine Workers of America, an organization that has met bayonets every time it has engaged in a strike of any size.

The war department is well pleased.

Endorse American Fascisti.

The American Legion is the prize pet of the imperialists. It has been practically entrusted with the program of the bureau of education and it spreads in a thousand ways the specious propaganda of the militarists. Here was an opportunity not to be overlooked by any organization seeking to prove its loyalty to every institution of American capitalism, so the officialdom of the A. F. of L. formed a united front with these open class enemies of the workers, exchanged representatives with them at conventions and at El Paso endorsed the American Legion resolution for universal military service in the next war—mass mobilization of the workers disguised under the euphonious phrase of "conscription of capital and labor." The capitalists are supposed to part with their precious wealth while the workers will have to give only their lives.

The strikebreaking American Legion and its capitalist backers are well pleased.

Betrayed Mexican Labor.

We leave for a moment the question of what these things mean for the working class of the United States to say to the Mexican workers and peasants:

Gompers and the tools of the blackest forces of reaction met you at El Paso with hands outstretched and protestations of good will. They posed as your allies while they give the utmost support and cheerful endorsement to the self same exploiters that made Mexico a slaughter-house for a decade. Not only that, but they actually aided in the preparation of the navy, the army and the volunteer mercenaries of American imperialism who will murder you under the slogan of "teaching you democracy" if you try to keep the gains of the revolution by your comrades died for by the hundreds.

Another Dawes' plan is in force in Mexico today and the instrument of its enforcement is the officialdom of the American and the Mexican Federations of Labor. This brings us to another incident that shows the servility with which the Gompersites serve Morgan democracy.

Gompers Becomes "Internationalist."

The faintest taint of socialism is anathema to Gompers, while Communism sends him into a wild delirium whenever mentioned in his presence. He has been unable to tolerate any thot of affiliation even with the reformist Amsterdam International, but at El Paso his attitude suddenly changes. For the first time in many, many long years there is present at a convention of the federation a representative of the German Trade Unions affiliated with Amsterdam. English—"our allies, you know"—are barely welcome but have been tolerated, principally to give Gompers the opportunity of telling how much better off the working class is in this country.

But today there is a striking change. Gompers is very friendly towards Amsterdam. The European workers are in a bad way. The national economies are demoralized. The yellow unions have always depended upon the capitalists and capitalism is not so good just now.

Amsterdam needs money. So do the capitalist governments which its unions support. It is simple.

Aid to Morgan's Dawes' Plan.

The Dawes' plan and the entry of the American Federation of Labor into Amsterdam or rather the absorption of Amsterdam by the American Federation of Labor will, in the words of the classic "cure all diseases today." Amsterdam needs the A. F. of L. enough to surrender to Gompers but it does not need it as bad as Morgan needs to strengthen his hold on Amsterdam so that the slavery of the German workers can be made complete. Amsterdam will come to terms with Gompers. El Paso marks the abandonment of a policy of isolation from the international affairs by the American labor officialdom just as the Dawes' plan—the reason for it—marks the entry of American imperialism into world politics on a truly gigantic scale.

The circle is complete.

American imperialism is in deadly conflict with Great Britain for world supremacy. Japan is in the way—a nuisance. The finance capitalists, every day, increase their investments abroad (another $100,000,000 to France—more pocket money). They are drunk with the glorious vision of world supremacy that is to be baptised with the blood of the workers.

The officialdom of the American federation prepares the machinery that will be used to drive the working class of America and Mexico to the shambles. It is a procurer for cannon fodder. It ties the workers to the chariot wheels of American imperialism and prepares to act as its emissary in Europe.

Task of Communist Parties.

Upon the Communist Parties of the United States and Mexico—especially upon the party in the United States rest the responsibility of mobilizing the working class of the two nations for struggle against this basest of all plots, whose black putrescence poisons the whole labor movement.

It can be done and it will be done.

The evidence of the betrayal is at hand. It shrieks from every resolution adopted at El Paso. It is in every speech of the Trevinos, Habers, Mahons and Wolls. Mass murder for profit was sanctified at El Paso and in return the House of Morgan allows the blood money to be paid—thru labor banks.

War is no longer a prospect of the distant, but of the immediate future. El Paso states this plainly.

NEW MOVEMENT ORGANIZED BY INDUSTRIAL BARONS FOR UNITED ATTACK ON AMERICAN FARMERS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—Better understanding between industry and agriculture is the imposing title of a new movement announced by William H. Barr, president, National Founders' Association. A thoroly reactionary program is outlined by Barr, including a call for House cleaning by both old parties to get rid of "progressives" like LaFollette and Brookhart. Barr uses the costliness of strikes as an argument for open shop and attacks the child labor amendment. Representatives from the conservative farmer's organization, National Grange, will address industrial meetings and industrial speakers certified by the new movement—which will not form any new organization, Barr says—will speak to farmers.

EGYPTIANS ATTACK INVADERS

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

ROBERT M. LaFOLLETTE seems to think that the 5,000,000 voters who cast their ballots for him on election day have nothing much too worry about until two years from now. In an article in his own magazine, the alleged progressive leader calls on his cohorts to prepare for battle in 1926. He wants them to concentrate their minds for two years on one election day. During this time, millions of those who voted for him will be up against strikes and lockouts, wage cuts and unemployment. "Bob" will be braying about the supreme court and the private monopoly system, but the Workers Party will be on the job, giving the workers leadership in their struggles against the boss on the industrial field.

THE workers who are not class conscious and who see in LaFollette the personification of this vague farmer-labor movement they have in mind as a weapon that will help them, may best content to wait for 1926 and put on another spurt of activity to elect their friends to congress. But a goodly number of them will hear the Communist message of the Workers Party on the line of struggles, in strikes, and when the workers are in a battle, names have not much terror for them. They know their friends.

WHEN the Boston police were on strike in 1919 they applauded speakers from the Communist left wing. And this is true of every strike whether of the garment workers in Chicago or the silk workers in Paterson. And this is how a Communist party is built. The fakers may flatter themselves that they have isolated the Communists, but while the fakers and the petty bourgeois leaders are attending strictly to the business of [illegible] a hand to the [illegible] class, the Communists will be with the masses in their struggle.

OUT of this constant battle, rebels and militants will develop; the stuff that good Communists are made of. They may not be able to quote Marx at first, but they will possess one quality without which a Communist is but a dry document, that is, the spirit of rebellion and class hatred. When LaFollette killed the farmer-labor party, he did not kill the revolutionary working class political movement. He merely kicked a corpse out of the way and left the road open for the Workers Party. Who will dare say that the Workers Party does not represent working class political action?

THE S. L. P. wails in a most heartrending manner about the smallness of its vote and the fact that the "stalwarts" split the ticket. To think that "scientific," well-trained members of the S. L. P. and their shop keeper sympathizers should be carried away by the LaFollette illusion or the Al Smith illusion instead of standing up under the "arm and hammer of the fighting S. L. P.!" looks rather dreary for those who expect to turn the working masses into scientists before they accomplish the revolution. The proletarian party and the S. L. P. should get together and pool their grouches.

MUSSOLINI HAS BIG POLITICAL FAINTING SPELLS

Communists Only Other Party That Can Rule

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROME, Nov. 28.—Declaring that the Communists alone would take the place of the Fascisti as the rulers of Italy, Mussolini yesterday in a most humble speech begged for a vote of confidence in the chamber which was deserted by all except the Fascist majority and a few independent oppositionists.

The big feature of Mussolini's speech was his statement: "If I am overthrown, the government does not revert to you, but to the Communists who have a most precise program." Mussolini is apparently maneuvering for the position of leader of the so-called democratic forces against the "menace of Communism."

An Abject Surrender.

The surrender of Mussolini was the most complete of any public official of his character in history. Only a few weeks ago, the black shirt dictator, spoke with the his usual belligerency, and threatened to wade thru seas of blood, in maintaining the power of the Fascisti. Yesterday he was all meekness, promising that Fascist violence would be curbed, and that he would set a good example by moderating his own speech.

Promises to be Good.

Premier Salandra, who presented himself as Mussolini's friend, appealed to Mussolini to moderate the language of his adherents. The dictator promised to do so and in tears contritely apologized to parliament for the events of November 4, when war veterans and blackshirts clashed.

The Fascist premier promised to issue new instructions to his cut throats thruout the country and promised a new era for Fascism.

The internal budget was then carried, by a vote of 337, against 17. Former premiers Giolitti and Orlando voted against Mussolini. The open Fascisti opposition took no part in the proceedings.

Crisis Merely Postponed.

The abject climb-down of the black shirt leader will not alter the political situation. It merely postpones the crisis. Mussolini's surrender will be taken as a confession of weakness and as the rule of the Fascisti rested entirely on force and violence and not on the good will of the majority of the people, when the power on which it was maintained weakens its enemies, will be quick to take advantage of the situation.

The Conference for Progressive Political Action Serving the Interests of Bosses

To the Trade Unionists of America!
To the Workers and Poor Farmers!

BROTHERS AND COMRADES!

You have just passed thru an election campaign which resulted in the victory of the party of Big Capital, the republican party. Some of you permitted yourselves to be frightened into voting for Strikebreaker Coolidge and "Open Shopper" Dawes, which were also supported by such notorious labor fakers and reactionaries as John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America. Others of you have permitted yourselves to be deceived into the belief that LaFollette and his movement represent your interests and are fighting your battles. Only a small portion of the workers and poor farmers, who are permitted by the bosses to vote, about 100,000 were conscious of their interests sufficiently to vote the ticket of the Workers Party, the only political party of the workers and poor farmers. But the bulk of the masses voted for the parties of their enemies. The result is the strengthening of the power of the bosses and increased oppression and misery for the workers.

Wm. H. Johnston and the C. P. P. A. Are Serving the Interests of the Bosses.

William H. Johnston, president of the Machinists' Union, is also the president of the C. P. P. A. This organization, despite the fact that it is composed chiefly of trade unions, is a servile tool in the hands of small capitalist and disgruntled capitalist politicians which are leading the LaFollette movement. During the election campaign the C. P. P. A., together with Gompers, have succeeded in inducing millions of workers, trade unionists and poor farmers to vote for LaFollette and Wheeler,

THE SLAVE AUCTION AT EL PASO

AUCTIONEER COMPERS: "Going, going, going —!"

GALA PERFORMANCES FOR LAST TWO NIGHTS OF BAZAAR; GRAND BALL AND AUCTION ARE BIG FEATURES

Saturday night's program at the bazaar and dance for the benefit of the DAILY WORKER and Labor Defense Council being held all week at the Workers' Lyceum, 2733 Hirsch Blvd., includes a grand ball, the biggest dance so far. Saturday is the special night for the Jewish, Scandinavian, Greek, Armenian, Bulgarian, Roumanian, and Spanish performances. The Freiheit Singing Society and the Danish Workmen's Orchestra will be there in fine shape.

Sunday the doors will open at 2 in the afternoon. The musical program will include a vocal soloist. The Swedish national dance in costume is only one number of the elaborate entertainment on the program for Sunday. And of course, there will be the Young Workers' League orchestra and dancing. Sunday has an added feature—prize awards and auction day belongs to it!

The crowds that packed the Workers' Lyceum on Thursday and Friday surely had an opportunity to select from thousands of beautiful and useful things. They took advantage of the very low prices and carried off hundreds of valuable and useful articles.

And there are many more awaiting Saturday and Sunday's deluge.

The Czecho-Slovak "Market," the Polish Children's Fancy Goods, Metal, and China Ware, "Sweets" and other booths offer a flood of wonderful stuff which awaits your choosing—be you man, woman or junior.

Big crowds are expected Saturday and Sunday. Come early and get your dream" by well informed persons.

STONE FORGETS TO TELL HOW TO PREVENT THE DESTITUTION OF AGED

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—Fifty-four out of every hundred persons are destitute at the age of sixty-five, Warren Stone, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, said in a speech to women at the Biltmore Hotel. Stone did not object to the system of exploitation or speak for strengthening of the trade unions, but gave the fake advice that, "Our youth be trained in the spirit of thrift."

FOUR-POWER PACT FOR CHINA HINTED IN FRENCH DELAY

Imperialist Nations Cooking Up New Deal

(Special to The Daily Worker)

TOKYO, Nov. 28.—Japan believes ratification of the nine-power treaty is the most essential factor now towards providing a settlement of the Chinese question, according to one of the best informed government officials.

In this connection, it was pointed out today that this treaty which was drawn at the time of the Washington arms conference provides the machinery necessary for solving China's problems. The treaty also offers the opportunity to the signatory powers for forcing China to come to terms with them.

In the event that France continues to delay ratification of the nine-power treaty the suggestion has been advanced here that a four power consortium to include the United States Japan, England and France would be capable of drafting a plan for stabilizing China's finances.

A Dawes plan for China, however was characterized as an "impractical

DUNCAN MC DONALD IN DEBATE CHALLENGE TO FRANK FARRINGTON

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Nov. 28.—The state arsenal has been engaged by the progressive miners of Illinois for a public debate between Duncan McDonald, former secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers of America, District 12, and Frank Farrington, president of that organization.

The debate is scheduled for Saturday evening, Nov. 29, but it is doubtful if Farrington will appear, as he is known to have a deadly fear of meeting McDonald on the public platform.

McDonald was recently dropped from membership in local 448 under protest, when the local's charter was threatened by Farrington. The miners are now carrying on a campaign for a special district convention on the McDonald case and other questions of vital importance to the miners.

INFLICT HEAVY LOSS ON BRITISH TROOPS IN SUDAN

Fake Reports Issued by Baldwin Government

CAIRO, Egypt, Nov. 28.—The Egyptian military forces, whose withdrawal from the Sudan was one of the demands made on the Zaghlul government by Great Britain, today attacked the British troops at Khartoum inflicting severe losses on the invaders.

The British propaganda, which has been exceedingly prevaricative since the inception of the latest Egyptian crisis, outdid itself in making public a report of the engagement between the Egyptian and British forces.

Instead of describing what actually took place the British propaganda stated that the Egyptians attacked a military hospital "killing three doctors."

Baldwin Government Nervous.

British government leaders are plainly nervous over the developments since the resignation of Zaghlul Pasha. Heavy reinforcements for the imperialist invaders are still pouring into Cairo and Alexandria. The anger of the Egyptian masses is rising and messages are pouring in from other countries under British rule, urging the Egyptians to resist the further encroachments of the enemy.

Another significant incident of the Anglo-Egyptian crisis was the announced intention of Persia to raise the whole question before the league of nations. The protest of the Persian senate to the league was garbled by the British secretary of that organization, Sir Eric Drummond.

League to Meet in Rome.

The president of the league council also received a copy of the Egyptian senate's letter but it was fundamentally different to that officially sent out by Sir Eric Drummond, the Briton, the latter eliminating the part that called for league intervention. The next meeting of the league will be in Rome on December 8.

The British arrested 25 Egyptians today. Wholesale raids and executions are threatened. The usual network of "plots" have been discovered by the invaders, and a plausible excuse is being framed for glutting the gallows with active workers in the cause of Egyptian independence.

Four prominent members of the nationalist party with which former Premier Zaghlul Pasha was connected were arrested by the British on charges of conspiracy.

The Masonic lodges attended a memorial service for the dead sirdar, Sir Lee Stack, whose death was made the excuse for British annexation of the Sudan.

Protest Troop Withdrawal.

The nationalists held a monster mass meeting at which resolutions were passed protesting against the action of the Egyptian government in consenting to the withdrawal of the troops from the Sudan. The acts of the present government, said to be a creature of Britain, were declared null and void and impossible of ratification by the country.

The arrest of members of the government by the British has called forth severe condemnation against

REVOKE SCHEDEL DEPORTATION, IS LABOR'S DEMAND

Palmer's 'Red Raiders' Broke Up Home

The Labor Defense Council is known everywhere as the defender of the victims of Palmer's "red raids" and Daugherty's conspiracy with Burns, the infamous detective, and the big capitalists, to imprison revolutionary workers.

It is now taking up the case of John C. Schedel whose persecution is most extraordinary.

John C. Schedel was one of the victims of Palmer's "red raids" of 1920. In January of that year he was seized in his home in Fort Wayne, Indiana, separated from his wife and five small children, and without trial in any court was deported to Germany. The sole charge against him was that he was a member of the Communist Party.

Red Raids Bred Suffering and Death.

Separation from his family bred extreme privation for the family and a young baby died. Mrs. Schedel was so broken with grief and hardship that she temporarily lost her mind and was confined as a patient at the East Haven Asylum, Richmond, Indiana, until 1923. During this tragic period the four children left alive were placed in the Allen county orphanage.

Naturally, Schedel made every effort to bring his family together, but could not accumulate the necessarily large fund to have his ill wife and family transported to Germany. Finally, determined to help them personally, he made his way back to this country and had just got his family together when he was again arrested.

Now, merely upon his first deportation order which was made without trial in court, he faces a possible five years in prison, followed by another deportation to Germany, again breaking up the family.

Asks Protest Against White Terror.

It should be noted that the punishment inflicted in this instance for Schedel's being a German falls upon his American wife and his American-born babies. To save them from further tragedy the Labor Defense Council, whose address is 166 West Washington street, Chicago, is circulating petitions which they are asking all citizens to sign requesting the government to set aside the original deportation order and permit the Schedel family to remain in American unseparated.

THE Egyptians were just as helpless in face of the demands made by the British as the Persians were when the Washington government demanded a heavy indemnity for the death of one of its consuls. England sets a higher price on her stool pigeons, but then their uniforms are more brilliant than those worn by the agents of the American capitalists and the empire wants to uphold its dignity. But a time will come and that shortly when the exploited masses of Persia and Egypt will no longer pay tributes to the capitalist powers.

EVEN when the workers and peasants of Russia had their backs to the wall during the dark days of 1918-21, they were in no mood to bend the knee to the threats of the robber nations. But their morale was never higher than it is today and the threats of Chamberlain met with a bold defense. By the way, the papers did not make much noise over the turning over of the Wrangel fleet to the Soviet naval chiefs. Despite Gompers, Hughes and the British tories, the power of Soviet Russia is making the capitalists of the world pull in their horns.

G. O. P. PUTS BAN ON LA FOLLETTE AND FOLLOWERS

Barred from Caucuses of Coolidge Club

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28. — The republicans have barred Brookhart, Ladd and Frazier from future party caucuses.

The republicans adopted a resolution barring from future party caucuses Senator Robert M. LaFollette of Wisconsin, defeated independent presidential candidate, and three of his followers—Senator Smith W. Brookhart of Iowa, Senator Edwin F. Ladd of North Dakota, and Senator Lynn J. Frazier of North Dakota.

It was decided, however, not to remove any of the insurgent senators from their committee assignments in the "lame duck" session of congress, altho the resolution as adopted was interpreted as a rebuke to LaFollette and his followers and as a notice of more punishment to follow.

The resolution said: "Resolved, that it is the sense of the conference that Ladd, Brookhart and Frazier be barred from future republican conference and not named to fill any republican vacancies on senate committees."

The resolution was adopted without record vote.

Senator Ladd was the only one of the insurgent quartet present when the action was taken.

Public Speaking Class Starts Next Tuesday at N. Y. Workers' School

NEW YORK CITY, Nov. 28.—The class in public speaking given at the Workers' School of New York will hold its first session on Tuesday, Dec. 2, at the headquarters of the school, 108 East 12th street. Carl Brodsky, one of the ablest speakers of the party in New York, and well equipped to train others, will conduct the class.

The primary purpose of this course is to develop propagandists who can effectively present the Communist position in their activities in the party and the labor movement generally. The recent election campaign carried on by the party, as well as the various campaigns conducted by the militants in the trade unions, have shown the great need for trained speakers.

Among the problems to be dealt with in the course are, gathering and organization of material, methods of presentation, voice training, etc.

Comrades are urged to enroll now as the number of students will be limited. Information and registration at the office of Workers' School, 108 East 12th street. Telephone, Stuyvesant 4634.

MUSSOLINI DOGS IT IN FACE OF MASS PROTEST

Deserts Former Friends to Save Self

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROME, Nov. 28.—Every day is bringing increasing evidence that the opposition is making great inroads into the strength of Premier Mussolini and his fascisti government of Italy. The exposure by a leading home paper, yesterday showing that Gen. Balbo, commander in chief of the fascisti black shirts and one of Mussolini's right hand men, had ordered opponents beaten up and had interfered with police and judges in prosecuting offenders forced his resignation today.

Systematic Torture of Communists.

It was shown that Gen. Balbo wrote a letter to the newspaper editor Ferrera on Aug. 31, 1923, instructing fascists to force Communists acquitted of murder to leave town and in case of refusal to "beat them, without excess, but persistently, until the make up their minds to go. You can show this letter to the prefect, saying I have sufficient reasons to justify my conduct."

The letter adds:

"The police will do well in arresting them once weekly. The prefect must make the king's prosecutor understand that for such beatings there shall be no prosecutions or trials."

Gen. Balbo admitted writing the letter.

It is evident that Mussolini, despite the fact that the strength of his organization is being impaired, is afraid to disregard mass protest and defend his former aids. Five other leading chiefs were expelled with Gen. Balbo.

The opposition is presenting a long list of other cases and is threatening further exposure, while Mussolini's popularity with the fascisti is endangered by his action in deserting even his personal friends.

KUOMINTANG GETS HIGH POSTS IN NEW CHINESE CABINET

'Christian General' Sent on Visit

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PEKING, China, Nov. 28.—Of the four members of the cabinet announced as appointed by the new government of Tuan Chi-jui, two are members of the Kuomintang party, which is the party supporting the policies of Sun Yat Sen for national liberation.

These two are Admiral Lin Chienchang, appointed minister of the navy, and who now comands the independent fleet at Shanghai, and Yang Shukan, appointed minister of agriculture and commerce.

It is of major importance that the so-called "christian general," Feng-Yu-hsiang, has been forced to resign his command and allowed to depart shortly for America and England. Wu Pei-fu, the commander who was ousted by Feng, telegraphed the provisional government of Tuan Chi-jui that he would lay down his arms if Feng was dismissed. Tuan thereupon forced Feng either to quit or fight and he chose to quit.

Red Blooded Americans!

A holdup in which a motor truck carrying two shoe-making machines and shoes valued at $10,000 was the loot, was reported to the police here today.

The driver, John Barrett, said he was ordered from the truck by two armed men, and thrown into a touring car in which he was covered with a blanket. He was driven around for about an hour, he said, and then ordered out a short distance from where he had been first stopped.

Police Persecution Fails.

SAN FRANCISCO.—The vagrancy charges against Ed. Delaney, secretary California district defense committee, and two other I. W. W. members named Tulin and Stone, have been dismissed. The men were arrested in a raid on defense headquarters and not allowed to make any defense at the trial in police court. They were sentenced to 30 days each, but the superior court dropped the charge, stating that there was no evidence that they were vagrants in any sense.

COST OF LIVING GOES UP IN OCTOBER AS DOLLAR DROPS TO 60C

NEW YORK, Nov. 28.—The purchasing value of the dollar based on the cost of living figures compiled by the national industrial conference board in October was 60.6 cents compared with one dollar in July, 1914.

Some increases in the major items comprising the family budget are shown between Sept. 15 and Oct. 15 and are largely due to seasonal influences. The increases are approximately 1 per cent for food, 1 per cent for fuel and 2 per cent for clothing. The average cost of the other items include in the total cost of living remain unchanged. The total increase of all items combined during the month was .8 of 1 per cent.

The increase in the cost of living since July, 1914 is 65 per cent but this figure shows a decrease of 19.3 per cent from the high peak which was reached in July of 1920.

GANDHI BENDS THE KNEE TO FORMER FOES

Pacifist Policy Fails to Bring Freedom

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Nov. 28.—Declaring that he was not a lunatic but a reasonable man, Mahatma G. Gandhi signed a pact with the Swarjist leaders, C. R. Das and Punlit Motilalm Nehru, in favor of co-operation with all parties.

Gandhi signed the agreement at the All-India Congress committee. During the course of an address which was a tale of woe, dealing with the personal sufferings of the protagonist of foodless fighting, Gandhi said, "I am losing ground gradually and would have no hesitation in bending before the Swarjists and the liberals. If necessary I shall bend before the Englishmen also."

That the once powerful prophet of pacifism is now a passing figure in India's fight for freedom from British rule, was proved by his speech which was a humble confession of failure.

School Board Saves At Expense of Young Workers' Education

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, Nov. 28. Lying has been and is the consistent policy of the board of education, charges Henry Linville, president New York Teachers' Union, in an attempt to make the public believe that the present administration is saying great sums of money. Whatever savings are being made, Linville alleges on the basis of investigations by a special committee of the union, are made at the expense of the young people who most want to learn.

At Washington Heights evening high school the principal stated that twelve teachers had been dropped in September. Seven classes were dropped at the request of evening high authorities. The principal disclaimed responsibility for dismissals, contradicting statements of educational authorities. At east side evening high for men most of the classes were found to be much overcrowded and work therefore hampered.

FOSTER WILL SPEAK AT THE PITTSBURGH, PA., T. U. E. L. MEETING SUNDAY, NOV. 30

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 28.—William Z. Foster, chairman of the Workers' Party and secretary of the National Trade Union Educational League is coming to Pittsburgh. He will speak on the problems of the labor movement at a meeting of the Pittsburgh branch of the league at the International Lyceum, 805 James St., N. S., Sunday, Nov. 30, at 2 p. m.

Among the subjects to be discussed by Foster, the most important ones are the recent political elections, the convention of the American Federation of Labor and the elections in the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, carpenters and miners. Every sincere and progressive unionist should take advantage of this opportunity to hear Foster and should not only come himself but bring along a fellow worker.

Labor Must Learn that All Industry Rests on Its Broad Shoulders

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, while the tens of thousands of workers in the far-flung plants of the Pullman Palace Car Company were going to their jobs; lawyers for the widows of the deceased "Czar" Pullman's two sons were going into court to battle over the wealth these workers produce.

On the one hand the brutal exploitation of labor; on the other the lavish waste of the products of labor.

Only recently the Pullman Corporation broke another effort of the workers in the carshops at Pullman, Ill., to maintain their standard of living. That was merely an echo of the crushing, anti-labor tactics always employed by Geo. M. Pullman while alive. With Marshall Field, in Chicago, and Cornelius Vanderbilt, in New York, an alliance was formed that dominated the Pullman Company, and thru its unscrupulous management caused a ceaseless flow of gold to pour into its coffers.

Pullman amassed great wealth. Yet the Pullman family, as a dominating power in American capitalist industry, began and ended with George M. Pullman. The twin sons of the railroad magnate proved the worst of degenerates. They were typical "rich man's sons." They kept their father busy paying their bills out of exorbitant profits wrung from the workers. They both died at an early age, leaving behind them widows; two sisters, who still live in Chicago.

Where the twin sons left off, the two widows took up the fight to spend the Pullman fortune. They are now trying to get the summer home of the late Mrs. Pullman, at Elberon, N. J., property valued at $300,000 that it is claimed the father gave to his twin degenerates.

The attack of the widows is directed against Frank O. Lowden, former governor of Illinois, who married into the Pullman millions, and the Northern Trust Company, as executors of Mrs. Pullman's will. It was Lowden who tried to buy the republican presidential nomination in 1920, with Pullman's millions. With these same riches he has purchased a great estate in Illinois, and for political purposes advertizes himself as a farmer, to get the downstate vote. He was even mentioned as a candidate for secretary of agriculture, following the death of Secretary of Agriculture Wallace recently.

It is declared that nine sets of lawyers have refused to take the case of the widows against the great industrial, political and financial power represented in the Pullman Company, in Lowden and the Northern Trust Company. But the job has finally been accepted by James Hamilton Lewis, former democratic U. S. senator, who has his own methods for winning court battles.

This sordid page in the history of the Pullman family finds its counterpart in practically every chronicle of a family of the American great rich. There are the Goulds, the Vanderbilts, the Stillmans and the Astors as a few examples.

These families of the American plutocracy furnish none of the boasted "initiative" that is supposed to have lifted American capitalism to the most powerful position on earth. Industry goes on without them. The functions of management are taken over by the great banks, with their interlocking directorates. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., teaches his Sunday School class. The Standard Oil business flows on without him. He has nothing to offer to the oil industry. Morgan has no one to succeed him; neither has Gary, of the U. S. Steel Trust, or Schwab, of the Bethlehem Steel Co. The species of present-day plutocratic plunderers will soon be extinct.

Production of oil and steel go on just the same, because there are millions of workers upon those backs the tasks of everyday labor rests. They are the foundation upon which all civilizations have been built.

Yet these many millions of workers do not yet fully realize their important position in industry. The internecine squabble in the Pullman family should help teach them. They must learn that they alone are indispensable; that they can get along without their oppressors, who try to pose as the most necessary elements in society.

Once labor realizes its important position, it will proceed to take advantage of it fully. Labor will learn that capitalism—the capitalist social order—is its worst enemy. It will learn to build a new social order, without classes, without great rich and abject poor; without Morgans, Rockefellers, Pullmans and Schwabs, and other buccaneers of industry. It will usher in the Communist social order where human service will receive real recognition for the first time in all history; where the power of the individual to prey upon and plunder his fellow man will be exterminated forever.

SOVIET REPLY TO BRITAIN FIRM IN STAND ON ZINOVIEV NOTE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Nov. 28.—Russia's reply to Great Britain's notes repudiating the Russian trade agreement and declaring England's belief in the authenticity of the Zinoviev letter will be forthcoming immediately.

Christian Rakovsky, Russian charge d'affaires, said he expected the Russian reply would be received this evening. The reply will maintain, it was indicated, that the Zinoviev letter seeking former premier MacDonald's aid in "red" propaganda, was a forgery and insist that the question of its genuineness be left to a neutral committee of arbitration.

Russia will express regret that the Baldwin government did not see fit to recommend the trade agreement to parliament, it was said.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—England's action in repudiating commercial treaties with Russia because of the Zinoviev letters has placed the relations of the two countries on a precarious basis, said one of the two notes handed to the British government this evening by Rakovsky, the Soviet charge d'affaires. Again Russia told England the Zinoviev communication was a forgery.

INFLICT HEAVY LOSS ON BRITISH TROOPS IN SUDAN

this action and the new Egyptian cabinet is severely taken to task for permitting such an indignity. The students in the Egyptian military school have gone on strike against the British. The Moslem world is considerably aroused and mass meetings are called for. The British threaten to stop these with machine guns if necessary.

British Lord Gets Sick.

Lord Allenby, British high commissioner in Egypt, is ill. He is kept under close guard. British employes in Alexandria and Cairo are practically working under armed guard. The number of troops in the streets has been increased.

Lies Bad Second to Force.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—The Egyptian crisis is engaging the chief attention of the capitalist press. While the action of the government is endorsed, it is feared that the hasty dropping of the pacifist camouflage worn by the British ruling class during the reign of MacDonald, would have a damaging effect on British diplomacy. Still, the British capitalists know that lies are only a bad second to force as a means of attaining its end.

Considerable comment is made on the fact that former Premier Asquith, leader of the liberal party, or what is left of it, is interested to the extent of $200,000 in irrigation works and cotton planting in the Sudan. His firm received concessions last year from the government for the development of cotton planting. In addition to its strategic value the British have heavy economic interests in the Sudan.

MacDonald Warns Egyptians.

While former Premier Zaghlul Pasha was in London, great anti-British demonstrations took place in Egypt. These took the form of protests against British occupation of the Sudan. It is also worth noticing in view of recent occurrences that Zaghlul visited the French foreign office on his way to London. MacDonald, the socialist premier, not alone turned down the Egyptian demands, but warned Zaghlul that the empire would stand no nonsense from Egypt any more than it would in India.

The four main questions that MacDonald wanted to discuss with the Egyptian premier were, the Sudan, which England wanted for the defense of Egypt—for Britain; the interests of foreigners in Egypt—foreigners meaning British businessmen, and control of the Suez canal.

Sudan Necessary to Egypt.

As the Nile traverses the Sudan before reaching Egypt, control of the Sudan by the British could turn the fertile Egyptian valley of the Nile into a desert. It can thus be seen that the Sudan is of vital importance to Egypt.

The policy of the nationalist party, of which Zaghlul Pasha is a leader, is one of trying to gain concessions from England by means of diplomacy rather than arousing the masses against the invaders. Last March the organ of the Kemalists, of Constantinople, said: "The independence of Egypt has not yet come to life. Egypt must first free herself from her king. Then drive the English into the sea. She will not succeed by means of mere demonstrations. In order to establish a real independence it is necessary that she learns how to shed her blood and to die."

Zaghlul Betrayed Workers.

The party of Zaghlul betrayed the workers and peasants to the feudal aristocracy and the landowners. His government persecuted the Communists, dissolved the trade unions and arrested their leaders.

His policy of persecution of the revolutionary nationalists and Communists was so provoking that he lost the support of the workers and intellectuals. The British rewarded him for his perfidy by kicking him out when he no longer served their purpose.

A. F. of L. Delegates Seeing Mexico at Government Expense

(Special to The Daily Worker)

EL PASO, Texas.—Three hundred and forty delegates who attended the A. F. of L. convention here, and a dozen newspaper correspondents, left Juarez, Mexico, yesterday for Mexico City to attend the inauguration of President Calles and the convention of the Pan-American Federation of Labor. They travel on special trains with all expenses paid by the Mexican government.

WILLIAM F. DUNNE TO DISCUSS EL PASO CONVENTION AT NEXT MASS MEETING OF THE T. U. E. L.

The next public meeting of the Chicago section of the Trade Union Educational League will take place on Tuesday evening, Dec. 2, 8 p. m., in North West Hall, corner North and Western avenues. These meetings are one of the activities of the left wing movement in the local trade unions and are held for the purpose of unifying the struggle against the labor fakers.

The forthcoming meeting of the Trade Union Educational League promises to be of unusual interest as it will be addressed by William F. Dunne, editor of the DAILY WORKER, who was expelled from the Portland convention of the A. F. of L. because of his militant stand against the betrayal of the workers by Gompers. He will speak on the result of the A. F. of L. convention at El Paso. Workers Party members and left wing trade unionists are urged to attend and bring as many as possible to the meeting.

IMPERIALISTS IN NORTH OF CHINA BADLY SHAKEN

Head of Sailors' Union Reports on Conditions

(By Rosta News Agency.)

MOSCOW, Nov. 28.—Whatever the future course of events in China, one thing is certain, and that is the fact that the northern government of China, in which the imperialists seek their support, is being seriously shaken, in spite of diplomatic and material assistance rendered by the British, the American and other governments to Wu Pei-fu, according to a statement made to the Soviet press representatives by Mr. Lam Wai-mang, general secretary of the Chinese Sailors' Union, who represented the union at the recent international congress of sailors at Hamburg, Germany, and, on his way back home thru Russia, is staying a few days in Leningrad and Moscow.

Studies Russian Conditions.

In the Union of Soviet Republics the Chinese leader is studying the conditions of Russian transport workers. "Of course, says Mr. Lam Wai-mang, the Pekin government has many generals to fight against. But its chief and most dangerous enemies are the Chinese laborers, who are following the Kuomintang party, which leads them against imperialism. This party wields a great influence over the masses, and the toiling population of China is on the side of Dr Sun Yat Sen, the leader of the Kuomintang.

The anti-imperialistic movement is rapidly growing in China, and a special anti-imperialistic society, organized for this object, is popular not only in the south, but also in the North China.

Indeed, no one in China has any faith in the diplomatic notes of bourgeois governments, as everyone knows by now that these notes conceal a predatory desire to seize the best parts of the country, enslave its population and force it to serve the selfish ends of the bourgeoisie.

The news of the "Hands Off China" society, organized in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, must certainly have penetrated in the remotest regions of China, and this will tend still more to strengthen the bonds between the toilers of both countries.

In conclusion, Mr. Lam Wai-mang pointed out that the conclusion of the Soviet-Chinese treaty should be considered as the main impulse for the energetic intervention of bourgeois states into Chinese affairs. Indeed, this treaty showed to the Chinese people for the first time that another power spoke with China on equal terms. No wonder then that the toiling people of China demanded a revision of mutual relations with other states, so as to do away with the age-old oppression of the Chinese people.

No Return to the Past.

The imperialists, too, are well aware that the Soviet-Chinese Treaty has opened the eyes of the masses on the true situation. This is why the last efforts are being made to have regenerating China stifled by internal counter-revolution.

However, there is no return to the past; the Chinese people know who are its friends and who are its enemies, and it will let its wrath and hatred fall on the heads of those who are attempting to suppress its national freedom.

"ALL RIGHT, EAT IN SCAB HOTELS," MEEK ASSENT OF WAITERS' UNION HEAD TO GOMPERS AT EL PASO

By J. W. JOHNSTONE
(Special to The Daily Worker)

EL PASO, Texas.—The grand finale of the American Federation of Labor convention, which was to be ended with an eulogy of Gompers, was spoiled by the rude interruption of Kovelesky, of the Cooks' and Waiters' Union, who objected to the holding of the next convention at Atlanta City, New Jersey, as a "scab town."

Gompers Insists on Scab Hotels.

Gompers refused him the floor and attacked him vigorously. "It is unfair to talk about such things," shouted Sammy. And the poor delegate, surrendering meekly, said: "Well, if you want to eat in scab dining rooms, all right!" So nothing was done about it and next year the American Federation of Labor convention headquarters will undoubtedly be in a scab hotel at Atlantic City, just as it has been in the scab hotel El Paso del Norte in El Paso, Texas.

A. Adamski of the Garment Workers of America, a dumbbell servant of Gompers who has never opened his mouth in conventions for ten years, and Edward J. Evans of the Electrical Workers, were chosen without opposition as delegates to the unions of Great Britain. Chas. H. Moyer of the Mine, Mill and Smeltermen, was chosen delegate to Canada.

Favor the League of Nations.

Matthew Woll, reporting for the committee handling the resolution proposed by Andy Furuseth of the Seamen against the United States joining the world court or the league of nations, said that he had no information that the league of nations aspires to form a "super government" as claimed in the resolution. He would agree to protest any invasion of seamen's "rights" or the "freedom" of liberty-loving citizens—and he moved to refer the whole matter to the executive council. Furuseth agreed, in hope that "something might be done."

Upon the subject of Pan-American relations, Woll said that a "special effort to help this exploited people" had been made by "guiding them in the proper direction as expounded by the A. F. of L. doctrines, which by word and deed resulted in forming a democratic government."

Assails Mexican Communist Party.

"Our work is showing results in the Mexican federation representatives picturing in glowing (not red) and grateful language how our sound advice aided this struggling people," said Woll. "And in turn," he added, "the Mexican federation had pledged itself to protect the A. F. of L. The Communist element in Mexico is one that it is by adoption of Trevino's highly significant and statesman-like pronouncement that the C. R. O. M. does not permit the establishment of a Communist Party in Mexico."

Martin F. Ryan of the Carmen, reporting upon the situation in Porto Rico, quoted from the message of Iglesias upon the Porto Rican election of November 4, held under the laws and flag of America.

"Democracy" Shocks Ryan.

The old political parties controlling the economic forces of the island used violence and corruption, according the insular police, the department of justice and the voting of paid agents. The islanders were deprived of franchise, annulling legal ballots, proof of which will be presented to congress.

Ryan "is shocked" that such an election could take place "under the American flag; that the American principle of universal suffrage could be so degraded." I thought for a moment that he was talking about the recent election in Chicago. The recommendations were that the federation suspend its endorsement of legislation granting more self government, until congress investigate and grant honest free suffrage, that Gompers aid petition for an investigation and that copies of statement be sent to the United States government officials and to congress. Ryan's committee was "indignant" that people should be "ruthlessly exploited by a privileged few under the glorious stars and stripes in the same way they were when under Spain."

Nigaragua Gets "Moral Support."

In the report from Nicaragua, similar conditions were depicted. In the last election true representatives of the people were elected, "but special privilege is trying to prevent them taking office in January." The A. F. of L. pledged its "moral support" but declined to be responsible for the installation of unhappy Nicaraguans, concealing itself in splendid vagueness.

The resolution favoring the release of Rangel and Cline was passed without question, as its wording makes a bow to both the Mexican government and the American government and costs not a cent to the labor fakers or the imperialism they uphold in Latin America.

Spanish Dictator Raids Communists Of Barcelona

BARCELONA, Spain, Nov. 28.—The police forces of the military dictatorship of General Prima de Rivera have raided the Communist headquarters in this city. The work of the party is outlawed and has to be conducted accordingly. The police, in the effort to stop this, make raids under the guise of "looking for criminals." In this case they claim to be searching for the assassins of Senor Escartin, a police official.

NEW LEADER IS GRAVEYARD FOR DEAD S. P. PRESS

Another Socialist Paper Goes to Sleep

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NORRISTOWN, Pa., Nov. 28.—The latest victim of the pernicious anaemia which has overtaken the socialist party, is The Worker, formerly the Pennsylvania Socialist, published here. It has been living a precarious existence for some time, but the LaFollette campaign was the last straw to break the animal's back.

Instead of finding a grave for itself locally, the remains will be interred in New York, in the offices of The New Leader, where already rest the bones of the Call, New Age, which left its heirs nothing but a fake subscription list and several bills.

A Grave Digging Job.

This business of playing the role of undertaker to deceased socialist papers is not proving a lucrative practise for the New Leader, which is ailing, owing to lack of nourishment. The Leader was subsidized by Abe Cahan of the Jewish Daily Forward, but the latter tho willing to sink money in a fight against Communists, is first of all a businessman and sets a limit to his generosity.

Local socialists attribute the complete collapse of their weekly to socialist support of the LaFollette bubble which attracted the eyes of the workers from the socialist party and its press. The Scripps-Howard papers, the press of the labor fakers and that of the liberals supported "Fighting" Bob" so the workers did not see why they should continue to support a socialist press, which had nothing different to offer.

Wall Street's Two Parties Quarrel Over Connecticut Spoils

(Special to the Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Political leaders of all shades of opinion in the capital are going to watch with unusual interest the senatorial contest in Connecticut, in which a successor to the late Frank B. Brandegee is to be chosen three weeks hence.

Whether either party desires or not there is bound to be a decided league of nations twist to the battle because the democrats have nominated a man who perhaps deserves the title of the outstanding league advocate in American public life—Hamilton Holt former editor of the Independent, and in the closing days of his life, one of Woodrow Wilson's closest personal friends.

The republican nominee is Governor-elect Hiram Bingham, explorer, historian, aviator, and finally professor at Yale.

British and Irish Exploiting Classes Honor Dead Cardinal

DUBLIN, Nov. 28.—The high esteem in which Cardinal Michael Logue catholic primate of Ireland, was held by the ruling class of Britain and its Irish colony was demonstrated at the cardinal's funeral, when officials of the Irish Free State and northern governments, British officials, and British military detachments, special contingents from the Royal Ulster and special constabulary, the heads of protestant churches, foreign consuls and hundreds of catholic priests marched to the funeral procession.

The dead cardinal was a notorious reactionary and one of the British government's most useful agents in keeping the Irish people under the heel of British rule.

The arrangements committee promises to make this the most elaborate affair ever held by a workers' organization in this city. NEMESIS IS CATCHING UP WITH HUGHES

Things Break Bad for Whiskered One

By LAURENCE TODD.
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, Nov. 28.—Discovery in Berlin of a wholesale forgery mill, specializing in fake Zinoviev and Third International documents, has led the Washington Post, edited by Col. George Harvey, to twit secretary Hughes with the possibility that his alleged Zinoviev letter to American Communists, urging them to "plant the red flag on the White House," was concocted by the Berlin forgers.

The Post reminds its conservative readers that Senator Borah expressed doubts as to the genuineness of this document when Secretary Hughes made it public, last winter, as evidence that Moscow was actively plotting a violent revolution in the United States.

Charlie Keeps His Flag.

This rude conduct on the part of Harvey's paper is most annoying to the state department pashas. They cannot honestly suppress the hint that Harvey wants to be secretary of state, and that his editorial mask is now being employed in the process of shoving Hughes out of the nest.

They see that Harvey seems to have developed an alarming degree of sympathy with the viewpoint of Sen. Borah, who will be chairman of the foreign relations committee next month—that foreign relations are not the private affair of Hughes, but are public matters that require a great deal of open discussion and disclosure of sources of evidence. Hughes sits down and says his Zinoviev red flag document is genuine, and he won't tell where he got it. That's between him and his spy service.

Just now Hughes is up to the ears in a new attempt to swim across the Chinese quagmire. Some weeks ago the French government invited the British, Italian, Japanese and American governments to join it in a confab in Pekin, where the foreign diplomats meet every week anyhow to discuss the pulse of the patient. This time they would discuss the entire situation in China, trying to determine which of the warring and parleying factions had the best chance of establishing itself as a permanent government. Of course, the bankers in Wall Street could not loan any more money to China until there was listed a government sufficiently strong to be recognized and held to responsibility for payment of its financial obligations. Discussing the situation and trying to make a safe bet on a winner, who would have the support of foreign influence and foreign money, is as far as the conference seems to have gotten.

Sun Burns Charlie's Fingers.

China has been a bit trying to Secretary Hughes, anyhow. At first he put thru the Washington Far Eastern conference of imperial powers a number of resolutions instructing the Pekin government as to what it was to do. He refused to pay any heed to warnings that the South China government of Sun Yat Sen must be consulted. Japan vouched for the peaceful disposition of Chang Tso Lin, ruler of Manchuria. And then Chang and Sun began to undermine the Pekin regime. Fighting has been almost continuous, in one region or another, until now Chang and Sun are in conference at Tientsin with other leaders, to determine what regime shall be set up in place of the one which was recognized and which has fled.

Wu Pei Fu, latest ruler at Pekin, has set up his flag in central China, at Wuchang, where Sun started the original revolution against the Manchu monarchy.

Foreign backing has been a handicap to Chinese leaders in the past three years. And at each step toward dissolution of the old order, the influence of the Soviet Union has increased. Red flags are flying over many Russian consulates throughout China, and at each of these points the Soviet propaganda of self-determination for Asiatic peoples is active. Hughes doesn't like the drift of China. In a few years she may sweep all foreign concessions away, and assert her independence as effectively as has Turkey. Hence the conference in Pekin.

This Judge Denies Everything.

PARKERSBURG, W. Va., Nov. 28.—Emphatic denial of each and every charge of immoral conduct brot against him by District Attorney T. A Brown, was made by Judge William E. Baker, of the United States district court for the northern district of West Virginia, at his hearing today before the sub-committee of the judiciary committee of the house of representatives.

U. S. LOSES TRADE TO JAPANESE BY NAGGING MEXICO

Wanted Indemnity Renounced by Japs

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 28.—The recently ratified treaty between Mexico and Japan, providing for much closer relations in commerce and friendship is announced as soon going into force.

The basis of this treaty, which will give Japan a favored position in Mexico as compared with other nations, was laid a year and a half ago when Japan notified Mexico, still in the midst of revolutionary struggle, that Japan would not ask Mexico to pay for damages suffered by her nationals incidental to the revolutionary civil war within Mexico.

Japan renounced this indemnity at that time, when the United States representatives were continually calling upon the Mexican government in a threatening way, demanding full and punitive damages.

For the present, Mexico will encourage Japanese immigration.

Miner Dies in Jail Doing Time Because Friend Did Not Pay

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PORTAGE, Pa., Nov. 28.—A. Sapeta, a coal miner, died here yesterday from tuberculosis, contracted at the county jail. Sapeta was put into jail because he was not only unfortunate enough to be a wage slave himself, but also had friends who are wage slaves.

A friend of Sapeta's, a miner, had married. He needed furniture for his home. But he had only his weekly wages which were just enough to live on. So he had to get his furniture on the installment plan. His friend Sapeta was his reference. Then the friend lost his job, could not obtain work for months and had to leave the city. The furniture was not paid for. The company took the case into court.

Sapeta, the miner, himself with only a half time job, was sentenced to pay for the furniture, costs and six months in jail. While serving his term, Sapeta contracted tuberculosis from which disease he died.

How the Dawes Plan Works

Many interesting admissions are contained in the letter of Clementel, French minister of finance, to J. P. Morgan and company in connection with the recent loan of $100,000,000 underwritten by them.

Two paragraphs in particular are illuminating. One deals with results expected from the Dawes plan and says:

> The plan of the first committee of experts (Dawes plan), now in operation, provides for periodical payments to be made by Germany to the agent general for reparation payments. The receipt by France of her share of these payments will enable the government to accelerate the execution of its program of full financial rehabilitation and to proceed to the more rapid armortization of the public debt.

What does this mean except that the more pressure American investors bring on their government to enforce the slavery of the German workers under the Dawes plan, the more secure are their investments in France? "Only by copious quantities of blood and sweat squeezed from the German working class can your golden dividends be paid," says the mouthpiece of French capitalism to the gamblers in human lives.

The second inducement of importance to the American investor is proof submitted showing that the French government is oppressing the workers in a manner designed to commend itself to the best class of Yankee open shoppers that has a desire to participate in their exploitation. The paragraph reads:

> The improvement in the French economic situation since the armistice is shown, in a general way, by the improvement in the operation of the railway systems. The average ratio of operating expenses to gross revenues of the six great railway systems, which in 1920 was 130 per cent, has been steadily reduced to 91 per cent in 1923 and to an estimated ratio of 78 per cent for the current year.

If we read "railway wages" in place of "operating expenses" we have a fairly correct idea of the reduction in the workers' income that has made this saving possible.

It is not the German working class alone that pays tribute to the American capitalists, but the French working class as well.

The whole letter is the best of evidence that American finance capital is the real ruler of continental Europe today. This may be a source of pride to workers who are still confused as to the meaning of this, but one day the European workers will refuse to be ground to pieces in the dividend machine of continental and American capital and then—

Well, then the masses of the United States will be ordered to bring bayonet democracy to Europe once more. They will not like it, but unless they begin to prepare now for the overthrow of American capitalism, if they do not begin to understand who their class enemies are, if they do not dethrone the social reformists and trade union tools of American imperialism who control their mass organizations, there will be a blood bath compared to which the last war will be a Sunday school picnic.

Only the Communist Party of America sees the danger in this country and it alone organizes the workers for resistance to the Dawes plan—the most cold-blooded scheme of mass exploitation bulwarked by mass murder that has cursed the world to date.

Phrases and Labels

"The only satisfactory policy for a labor government to pursue," says Scott Nearing in writing of the lessons of the recent British elections, "is to frankly and vigorously espouse the interests of labor."

This is a highly meritorious expression of opinion, but it leaves out of consideration the very obvious fact that only a revolutionary government will act in this manner—in other words, it must be a Communist government and not a reformist organization with a labor label.

"To frankly and vigorously espouse the cause of labor" means to crush the power of the capitalists and the capitalist state. No party but the Communist Party urges the workers to do this.

Gompers and Pershing

"In his 44 years of piloting the ship of labor, the task of President Samuel Gompers has been greater than that of General John Pershing on the battlefields of France," said the mayor of El Paso in welcoming Gompers as a guest to the chamber of commerce luncheon given in his honor.

On the matter of comparative greatness we have no opinion but we agree that their tasks were similar in that both of them sent the workers to slaughter while remaining safe in bomb-proof shelters, one in France, the other in Washington, D. C.

Hands Off China!

It is notable that while the American Federation of Labor convention came and went in El Paso, that in none of its deliberations did the question of the assault of American capital upon China come up, not even parenthetically in any speech before the body.

This is not surprising in view of the component parts of the upper circles of the A. F. of L. Either the delegates are too abysmally ignorant to know or too indifferent to find out what social forces are moving the 400,000,000 of Chinese people to civil war. The only exception to ignorance and indifference are the more astute leaders of Gompers' immediate circle. These know quite well the meaning and significance of the civil war in China.

For more than a decade the body of China has been torn between the ravenous dogs of western imperialism. England, Germany, France, Italy, and the United States have openly taken over China by force, and in dividing up the so-called "spheres of influence" and trade, frequently have fallen to quarrelling with each other and hiring Chinese armies to do this nasty end of the job. It is no secret that Japan has edged in on this game and in the current civil war appears to be the victor thru its satrap ousting the satrap of British-American interests.

In only one way are the Chinese workers and peasants interested in this melee. That is in finding both foreign imperialist groups weak enough to permit the working masses of China, tired of foreign oppression, an opportunity to drive the whole crew into the ocean.

Particularly the national-libertarian movement of China, organized in the Kuomintang party and controlling the government at Canton in the south of which Sun Yat Sen is president, has set its forces at work to shake the clutch of foreign exploiters from the throat of the Chinese workers and peasants.

It is inspiring to workers to learn that at Canton the victory went to armed workers who, forced to yield at first to British and American threats of bombardment if they did not permit illegal importation of arms from the British bank of Shanghai to reach a fascist organization of Chinese merchants, disarmed these white guards after three days of heavy fighting. This shows that the Kuomintang party opposes native as well as foreign exploiters.

But in these struggles of the past and those that are to come, no word of cheer or encouragement comes to these oppressed masses of China from the organized labor movement of America, with one exception.

This is the left wing of the labor unions organized in the Trade Union Educational League. The T. U. E. L. has sent broadcast the call for "Hands off China!"—and in the labor movement it is fighting against the imperialist control of Gompers and company to bring the workers of America into solidarity of class feeling and class action against all exploiters.

The Railway Workers' Turn

Capitalist railway circles are busily at work preparing to cash in on their victory in the last election campaign. The railroad magnates have invested heavily in the drive to put over Coolidge and Dawes. The rail kings are itching to collect some of the dividends on this investment immediately. There is increasing talk and there are multiplying signs that a nation-wide attempt will soon be made to slash the wages of the workers on the railroads.

The added pretext to be seized upon by the financiers controlling the arteries of the country's industries will be the idle talk of "readjustment" in freight rates. There is not the slightest likelihood of a downward readjustment of freight rates. While congress will be investigating for many months and then only to begin another endless and fruitless investigation, the owners of the railway empire will be hastening wage cuts to the marrow.

President Coolidge is cautioning the rail overlords to go a little more slowly in their offensive. The dollar diplomat in the White House can see no pressing cause for a deep slashing of railway wages now. Apparently Mr. Coolidge would utilize a few months in preparing the strikebreaking machinery to function more smoothly. Mr. Coolidge is an experienced strikebreaker. He would rather wait a few months after the election so as not to tie up his administration so brutally, so brazenly with the gigantic open shop campaign on the railways. Mr. Coolidge would hide his official scabs in a forest of economic lies and political excuses so as to appear as a "neutral" in the conflict between rail workers and bosses while at the same time he would be utilizing all the government machinery against the strikers.

From present indications it appears that the railway workers will follow the textile workers in line for deep wage cuts. All of which is only added proof of the necessity for workers of all industries getting together to prevent a capitalist onslaught on the workers of any industry.

The new Egyptian cabinet is expected "to take a broader outlook toward the demands of and cooperation with England," according to dispatches. This broader outlook will doubtless embrace the Bank of England on which checks for the price of treason to the Egyptian masses will be drawn.

who have nothing in common with the working class. And now, after the elections, the C. P. P. A. continues to fool the workers into the belief that the LaFollette movement represents the interests of the workers.

Don't Trust the LaFolletta Movement.

If you happen to entertain any illusions regarding the ability of the LaFollette movement to come to your assistance in your hour of need, get rid of your illusions if you want to avoid bitter and costly disappointments. In spite of what Johnston and the socialists tell you, this movement is not yours. It is hostile to you. It is the political movement of the middle and small capitalists, of the disgruntled professional politicians, and of the labor fakers. This LaFollette movement will do nothing for you and your kind except raise false hopes which will never be fulfilled.

See what is already happening! Your union funds and union organizers are being employed by your official leaders to promote the political fortunes of a movement which is not yours. And as a result of this blood-sucking process, your unions become weakened, emasculated, and totally unfit for any effective struggle against the bosses. Your official leaders are neglecting and ruining your economic organizations in order to promote their own fortunes thru playing capitalist politics.

Meeting of C. P. P. A. Dec. 12.

On Dec. 12 the national executive committee of the C. P. P. A. will come into session to attempt to bolster up and revive the trust of the workers in the LaFollette movement. There will issue from this meeting a call to the trade unions to stick to the LaFollette movement because it leads to a new party, a third party, which will fight the political battles of the workers.

We don't believe these promises. The LaFollette movement and the new third party that may eventually result out of it will never fight your battles or defend your interests. Even tho the labor agents of the LaFollette movement and the C. P. P. A. may appeal to you as workers and trade unionists and speak of their new party as a labor party, they will betray you on the political field just as surely as they do on the economic field. William H. Johnston, in the capacity of president of the Machinists' Union, has all but ruined the organization by his B. & O. plan, other class collaboration schemes, and by his general surrender to the bosses. He will do the same on the political field where he functions as president of the C. P. P. A.

Onr Own Message to the Workers of America!

In this hour of coming crisis and need for the American working class the Workers Party of America considers it its duty to sound a note of warning against the coming dangers, and a word of counsel for unity and struggle against the common enemy.

The Workers Party of America is a Communist party. It is the political party of the class conscious workers, the wage-earning proletariat, and the poorest section of the farmers. It stands for the complete abolition of the capitalist order of society thru the seizure of political power by the working class, and the establishment of the dictatorship of the proletariat, that is, a Workers' and Farmers' Government. It calls upon the exploited masses of the country to join its ranks, to rally around its revolutionary banner for the struggle against capitalism and for a Communist order of society.

The Immediate Interests of the Workers Are Also the Interests of the Workers Party.

Because the Workers Party is the most implacable enemy of capitalism it has no interests other and apart from the interests of the working class. Whatever is a menace to the workers as a whole is also a menace to the Workers Party. Whatever promotes the interests, well-being, and security of the workers as a class, also promotes the revolutionary struggle against capitalism led by the Workers Party. Hence we appeal to the workers of America, organized and unorganized, employed and unemployed, Communists and non-Communists, to close your ranks, unite your power, and prepare for resistance against the coming onslaughts of the enemy.

You must meet the terrible meance of "open shop" drive and imperialist war, which requires drastic steps of mobilization and reorganization of the power of labor, of the millions of workers in the United States whether organized or unorganized.

You must overcome the demoralizing tendency to rely upon the LaFollette and "third party" movement for any kind of effective action against this menacing situation. And also to prevent the delivery of the labor movement into the hands of the forces of imperialism and the "open shop" employers.

Instead of putting their trust in the C. P. P. A. and in the LaFollette movement, the workers and poor farmers must unite with the Workers Party of America for a concerted struggle to secure the following demands of labor:

1. The immediate ratification by the state legislatures of the child labor amendment with the additional provision that the school children of workers and poor farmers be maintained at government expense. The funds for this purpose to be secured thru special taxes on high incomes.
2. Nationalization of the basic industries.
3. Withdrawal of armed forces from foreign territory.
4. Organize shop committees in every shop and factory.
5. Amalgamate the craft unions into industrial unions.
6. Organize the unorganized.
7. Immediate relief for the unemployed.

You must organize for struggle. You must reject the fake and deceitful leaderships of Gompers, the C. P. P. A., and LaFollette, and follow the leadership of a real working class party, the Workers Party of America, which stands ready to join hands with you in common struggle against the enemy.

Down with the servants of Capital!
Down with the Conference for Progressive Political Action!
Break the alliance with the big, small, and medium capitalists!
Hail the United Front of the toiling masses!
Hail the Workers Party of America!

But this branch also believes in reaching workers who do not speak English. They believe in reaching the South Slavic workers with their message and an entertainment, besides a great deal of pleasure resulted in a $20.00 donation for "Radnik" the leading South Slav Communist paper.

The South Slav branch of Bentleyville, Pa., under the leadership of Secretary Adam Getto believes in action on all fronts—and they prove it.

Miners' Campaign to Be Intensified Thru Organization Trip

The campaign conducted by the Young Workers' League among the young miners is being intensified and developed thru the sending of organizers thru the important mining fields Comrade Garver, who has returned today from a short organization trip thru the Iowa mining fields reports a ready response upon the part of the young miners to the mining program of the Young Workers' League.

A special pamphlet on the conditions among the young miners called "Out of the Darkness" is being prepared for circulation.

The next field to be covered is the Illinois mining fields. Tens of thousands of young miners are employed here. Unemployment has become so widespread that it is months between times when the bosses permit the miners to work. The reactionary officials, being too busy trying to drive the most militant elements out of the U. M. W. of A., are doing nothing about this situation.

Max Salzman, national organizer will cover the Illinois field, speaking on the subject, "The Unemployment of the Young Miner." His dates are as follows:

The Lessons of MacDonaldism

Speech of Comrade Zinoviev at the Opening of the Course of Instruction for Party Functionaries.

I should like to make a few observations regarding the most urgent question of world politics—the Anglo-Russian relations.

"Democracy" and MacDonald.

The MacDonald government took office about nine months ago. It was the day of the death of Vladimir Ilytch. The whole Second International endeavored to characterise the taking over of the government by MacDonald as a tremendously important historical event. One of the so-called "socialists," the "democratic" president of the Czecho-Slovakian Republic, Massaryk, regarded it as symbolic that MacDonald entered office on the same day on which Vladimir Ilyitch died. He said:

"That is the replacement of one system by another." "I noted in my diary on the 21st of January the news regarding the voting in the English parliament, which decided the entry of MacDonald into office. On the 22nd of this month I noted the news of the death of Lenin. Lenin departed precisely on the day on which the vote took place in London over the new government . . . . In England, social democracy triumphed without a bloody revolution, in Russia it triumphed by means of bloody revolution. That is to say, in England Marxian tactics were victorious. But in England there triumphed the more mature Marx. The revolutionary of the 'old tactics,' the tactics of blood departed. The revolutionary of the 'new' (bloodless) tactics arrived."

This idea is common to many statesmen of "democratic" Europe and of the whole Second International. They all believed that the entry of the labor party into office really opened up a new era, and that its rule would mean the greatest blow for the tactics of the Communist International. They wished clearly to demonstrate by the example of this event in England, the richest country in Europe, the advantages of the so-called peaceful democratic tactics of "constructive" socialism.

However the approaching elections may end, there is not the least doubt that they will mark a certain conclusion to the past nine months. MacDonald himself has for long been an apostle of petty-bourgeois, or as he himself calls it, "constructive socialism." He was often ridiculed by Vladimir Ilyitch and subjected to a merciless and cutting criticism. The representatives of this "constructive socialism" have only overlooked a trifling thing, and that is, that MacDonald succeeded to power, not through the will of the working class, conscious of its interests and victorious over capitalism, but by the will of the bourgeoisie, and that therefore his rule could not be otherwise than extremely uncertain. Whenever Baldwin and Lloyd George seriously desired it, they only had to wink—and MacDonald was no more. Lloyd George and Baldwin have often attempted to beckon, not only with the eye, but also with money bags, warships and occupation troops in order to "remove," not a sham labor government, but the real workers' government of our country. They found it a more difficult job with us than with MacDonald.

The representatives of the Second International have not noticed this "mere bagatelle." They threw sand in the eyes of the workers and tried to kid them that the MacDonald government signified an actual seizure of power by the working class. They characterised a peculiar parliamentary combination, originating in the special English conditions, as the victory of a new peaceful tactic of "constructive socialism."

How the "Labor Government" Came into Power.

Parliamentary elections have taken place rather frequently of late in England; in the years 1922, 1923 and now in 1924. In 1922 the conservatives were victorious. In the elections in 1923 the conservatives lost 89 seats. This was the direct consequence of the conflict which had arisen between them and the liberals. The conservatives obtained 257 seats, the labor party 192, the liberals 156.

At this time the policy of the conservative party, the personification of which was the notorious Lord Curzon, began to create great indignation among the masses of English people. It was impossible to continue the policy of the brutal, arch-reactionary, big landowner Lord Curzon. In consequence of this the cleavage between the conservatives and the liberals increased. In consequence of the squabbles of these two chief parties, who for decades past, on the basis of the famous two-party system, have alternately succeeded one another, it was decided to make a venture and give MacDonald a chance of governing, as both parties were firmly convinced that he would not betray them.

MacDonald received in the first place the support of the liberals, as he had no majority in parliament and as he was not accustomed to revolutionary measures. This experiment lasted about nine months.

Why Was MacDonald Turned Out?

The question now arises why the bourgeoisie turned MacDonald out at this juncture and what is the balance of these nine months.

As regards his home policy the most fault finding representatives of the bourgeoisie could not find cause for any quarrel with him. He carried on an open bourgeois policy, even in purely trade union questions, although he was dependent upon the trade unions. As regards the working class policy, he often represented the cause of the working class much worse than did the liberals and conservatives. Engels and also Lenin in a more concrete form often pointed out the fact that the English bourgeoisie, which in consequence of the enormous profits derived from the colonies, was in a more privileged position than that of other European countries and could allow itself the luxury of employing a few crumbs from these extra profits in order to bribe the higher strata of the working class. MacDonald did not even allow himself his luxury.

The Home Policy of the Labor Government.

As regards financial policy, MacDonald practically carried through the Curzon budget. He put forward the excuse to the workers that he had "no time" to prepare a budget for this year. The reformist leaders of the English trade unions who are not hard to satisfy accepted this excuse.

THE GIANT AND THE PIGMY.

The second most important question of English home policy and which concerns all members of the trade unions is that of unemployment. It was expected that the MacDonald government would help the unemployed. MacDonald greatly disappointed the workers in this respect. He has even denounced "poplarism," that is, the policy in practice in one of the suburbs of London where the administration is in the hands of trade unionists and where the trade union functionaries, along with George Lansbury, carried through the policy of granting benefits to the workers and especially supporting the unemployed. MacDonald declared that "public doles, poplarism, strikes for increased wages, limitation of output, not only are not socialism, but may mislead the spirit and the policy of the socialist movement." This shows that he was also against industrial strikes in order that he might help the English bourgeoisie as much as possible.

He granted money for the building of five dreadnoughts, he continued the policy of militarism, instead of making an end of it as he promised before the elections. And when he was reproached with this at the conference of the labor party he sheltered himself behind the unemployed and declared, he sanctioned the building of five dreadnoughts because that provided work for 2000 workers. Whereupon an old worker, the secretary of a trade union, asked whether he would perhaps declare a little war in order to employ a further number of unemployed.

The Prognostication of the Comintern has Proved to be Correct.

How do things stand with regard to foreign politics? "In this connection I will quote from an article I wrote on the 23rd of February, 1924 entitled "Five Years of the Comintern." With reference to the fate of the MacDonald government I indicated four possibilities:

"1. The MacDonald government will only remain for a short period, and will be overthrown in a short time by a simple adverse vote, leaving noticeable traces however behind it.

"2. MacDonald and Co. may adapt themselves to such an extent to the decisive groups of English imperialists, that the latter may deem it advisable to let them remain longer in office in order to carry on imperialist policy, and that at the same time thoroughly to discredited the present "labor" party in the eyes of the English working class and thereby to cause disappointment and confusion in its ranks.

"2. A process of differentiation can also set in within the working class itself. The left wing will become gradually stronger, the working masses will exert pressure upon the "labor" government and enforce effective measures for the alleviation of the life of the workers. MacDonald, Clynes and Henderson will of course offer resistance to the demands of the workers. All this will create the prerequisites for the formation of a Communist mass party in England.

"4. The 'labor' government, in spite of the incapability and the counter-revolutionary character of its members will, under the pressure of the masses, to a certain extent express the mood of the lower strata of the workers. A struggle is arising between the labor government of MacDonald and the bourgeoisie which can in a relatively short time mark the beginning of the sharpening of the crisis in England into a revolutionary crisis.

"In so far as it is possible to predict the development of events, it is highly improbable that the first and the fourth perspective will be realized. It is more probable that the second and third prospective will be realized."

We have come very near the truth.

If you follow the foreign policy of MacDonald you will see that the result of the first nine months of his government fulfill the two possibilities predicted by us.

The English Bourgeoisie Wanted, by Means of MacDonald, to Compromise the Labor Party in the Eyes of the Colonial Peoples.

There is not the least doubt that the bourgeoisie has throughout played with MacDonald as a cat with a mouse, this is particularly the case with regard to foreign policy.

In 1923 Curzon made himself impossible, chiefly because he conducted a too open and brutal foreign policy, especially towards the Soviet Republic and the English colonies. In the English colonies especially in India, upon which the fate of England depends, great hopes have been set for many years upon the labor party. The masses of the Indian people said: "When the labor party comes into power they will carry on another policy in India. Then India will be able to breathe freely."

A Party of Shop Nuclei

By Arne Swabeck

With the capitalist victory on November 4, the "progressive" illusions have received a severe shock. The working class will again face the grim realities of the class struggle in a more acute form.

This capitalist victory will be further consolidated. To reap the fruits thereof, labor's resistance to increased exploitation must first be crushed. Thus the workers will be called upon to battle for the life of their terribly weakened organizations and once gained. Their immediate task is to proceed from the present inertia to vigorous but well-planned preparations to maintain the standard of living to meet this situation.

From propaganda to action is the next task of the Workers Party. To lead in these struggles proceeding from the shops and factories where the workers will feel the weight of this further consolidation of the capitalist victory; to give the political direction and organize effective resistance to the coming attacks; to lead in the creation of the organs of resistance—the shop committees and factory councils—; to lead in the actions for relief of the unemployed masses and organize and strengthen the labor unions. These are some of the immediate tasks facing the Workers Party. The shop nuclei form of party organization will make a solution possible.

In Constant Touch with Workers.

The shop nucleus will be a permanent organization in constant touch with the workers. Its problems are those of the workers on the job. As a combination of militant fighters it will take up all these problems and work out the immediate plans of action. As a basic Communist unit, it recognizes that the proletarian revolution is the only solution for the labor problem and all its plans are worked out with that goal in view. The workers, learning by experience that only thru active struggle can any gains be secured, and any relief be obtained from the pressure of exploitation, will soon turn toward the party shop nuclei for direction and leadership.

The obstacles in the path of the proletarian revolution can only be removed gradually by the training, educating and organizing of the workerr thru the struggles. These obstacles are present also in the industries where the trade unions have obtained a foothold. There the faithful capitalist lieutenants, masquerading as trade union leaders, are using all their powers of persuation to discourage the workers from entering the struggle. They are making glowing promises to be fulfilled when the members completely submit to their class collaboration schemes. These schemes vary from the celebrated non-partisan political policy to plans like the B. & O co-operation plan, proposed by the international president of the Machinists' Union, to make the unions efficiency instruments for the railroad companies; the plan of speed-up and cheaper production, as proposed by Frank Farrington of District 12, United Mine Workers, by which the operators of the union fields should be able to compete with the non-union operators and the plan of permanent compulsory arbitration boards set up in collusion with the bosses to have disciplinary powers, to impose fines, suspend or expell union members, as already pursued by the building trades, to mention a few examples.

Fight Class Collaboration.

The party reorganization does not in the least change its objects or its tasks, but it does change the mehods of carrying them out. While the present branch formation allows only for an abstract treatment of such schemes due to the fact that altho the members work in the shops, they are scattered into many different branches, thus completely paralysing any effort at united action in the shops. The shop nucleus, however, directed by the general party policies, will take these points up with the workers and, proceeding from the actual experiences on the job, expose the injurious character of class collaboration schemes not only from the point of view of the need of the ultimate victory over the capitalist system of exploitation, but also as an obstacle to the improvement of the every day conditions of work.

By planned united action of all party members in a shop, thru the shop nucleus and taking advantage of all experiences gained, it will be comparatively easy to convince the workers that any plan or agreement which pledges the organized workers to a greater speed and efficiency of production so as to make the cost of production of their work less than that of the unorganized, will only serve as an additional weapon in the hands of the employers, united in their organizations, to create an endless competition between organized and unorganized workers and thus force down the standard of living as a whole. It will be comparatively easy to convince the workers that arbitration boards composed jointly of representatives of labor and of the employers serve the interests of the latter because all accomplishments recorded in the history of the working class have been made only thru actual struggle. It will be easier yet to show that both methods weaken the organized power of the workers and strengthens that of the employers, thus giving the latter all the advantages in future struggles which, no matter what schemes are advanced, nevertheless become inevitable.

Strengthen Left Wing in Trade Unions.

Having learned this, the workers will naturally turn to the party members organized in the shop nucleus and listen to further advice. They will then be shown the need of attending to their union affairs and fight with the Communists, organized in the trade union fraction (the T. U. E. L.), to prevent the adoption of such measures and their strength will go to swell the ranks of the left wing trade union groups. Thru the diligent work of the party shop nucleus to unite the workers for the struggles in the shops and factories, it will soon become apparent to these workers, by actual experience, that the craft union form of organization has outlived its usefulness and now serves to divide their ranks. The demand for amalgamation of these unions into industrial unions will thereby be transformed from paper resolutions, buried in trade union headquarters, to the realities of life.

During the election campaign just concluded the lack of leadership in the shops was particularly apparent. The LaFollette movement everywhere presented its combination of so-called friendly republicans, democrats and "progressives" and appealed for the support of the workers. It was the non-partisan political policy of Samuel Gompers changed a little in its appearance and just another form of class collaboration to support capitalist politicians and strengthen the capitalist system. The capitalist propaganda machinery became very active indeed and the workers being unable to discover its class interests from such presentation, mostly voted for the imaginary "full dinner pail." Only those who were already class conscious supported the Communist ticket.

Political Education.

The real issues of an election campaign are insolubly bound up with the struggles of the workers in the shops. From there the fight for workers' power must be organized. However, it will take the party shop nuclei to make these issues clear and to organize that fight. One functioning shop nucleus within a factory will make a systematic practice of convincing the workers that the non-partisan political plan divorces the workers from their real class issues. It will demonstrate that no matter what capitalist politicians the masses support, at the time of actual conflict he will immediately become their enemy because he is part of the capitalist system of government. It will show that the capitalist government is always an enemy of the working class. In the shops the election campaigns will thus assume the character of a class contest for power and on that basis the party shop nuclei will organize the workers for the struggle for political power.

Our party must win over the large masses of workers for the revolution. The shop nuclei will easily gain the confidence of the workers because they are part of their ranks and the most active part, speaking their language and proposing practical measures for relief of their misery. Thru the shop nuclei the Communist units become organically connected with the working masses at the place of production. Thru the shop nuclei the connections will be established which builds the united front of the workers from the bottom. They become a counter balance against the treacherous and strikebreaking activities of the trade union fakers—the proponents of class collaboration. Being the basic political units of the party, they will establish the proper connection between its industrial and political activities and give political character to the struggles in the shops and from the unions by convincing the workers of the need of the conquest of power.

Altho the power of the trade unions, controlled by the reactionary leaders, is steadily declining, the workers in the unorganized industries are worse off. And today many of the great basic, raw material and manufacturing industries are almost entirely unorganized. The workers are left helplessly in the grip of the most ruthless capitalist exploitation. Their sporadic, unplanned and isolated strikes are either mercilessly crushed or slowly starved to death. Their latent forces as a factor in the struggle for working class power is dormant. The problem facing the Workers Party in these industries, as the militant champion of the working class interests, is that of organizing these actions, these strikes and organize the workers into shop committees and into industrial unions. To believe that the American Federation of Labor with its present methods will organize these industries would be an idle illusion. That task remains to be done by the militants.

Organize Shop Committees.

Shop committees, composed of representatives of all workers in the shops, is the basis of up-to-date unions are necessary to the workers in the organized industries. But in the unorganized industries they become not only the organs of struggle of the workers, but also the most effective instruments with which to organize the unions. That is the starting point for party shop nuclei in the unorganized industries. While the nuclei themselves are confined to Communists, to party members, their task will be to initiate the formation of shop committees which take in all the workers.

During the sporadic, isolated strikes of the workers in the great car shops of Pullman and Hegewisch, Illinois, last summer, the lack of leadership became particularly apparent as it does in all such cases. The party took whatever actions it could under the circumstances as an outside force coming in to lend a helping hand, and actually succeeded in stiffening the morale of the strikers. Yet a party shop nucleus in each instance would inevitably have stepped to the fore. It would have gained the leadership of the strike because of its being an organized group and part of the strike itself. It would give organized direction to the strike and if it would accomplish no more in this first attempt, for all future purposes, the shop nucleus would map out the strategy of the struggles. It would make an estimate of the relative strength of the contending forces, attempt to choose the most opportune moment for an offensive, propose the measures needed for united action by the workers always bearing in mind the object of steadily gaining positions of more power to the workers and prepare for the actual organization of the workers. In Gary, Indiana, where one party shop nucleus has recently been organized in one of the large mills, it was demonstrated that the attention of the comrades naturally and immediately focused on the problems of the shop. At their first meeting they took action to carry out certain measures in regards to a couple of definite issues pending before the workers in the shop.

Of course, while the party is just taking the first steps toward the formation of shop nuclei some of the points here mentioned may seem a little novel. Yet, as the shop nuclei are being established, the basis is being laid for contact with the large masses of workers thru their struggles and for the united proletarian front for the conquest of power.

WORKERS PARTY IN NEW YORK CITY PLANS LENIN MEMORIAL FOR SUNDAY, FEB. 1, AT MADISON SQUARE GARDEN

NEW YORK CITY, Nov. 28.—Madison Square Garden has just been rented by the Workers Party for the huge demonstration which is to be held here Sunday afternoon, February 1, at 2 p. m., in memory of Nicolai Lenin. It will be remembered that fully 20,000 workers assembled on this occasion last year. It is expected that this figure will be far surpassed at the next meeting.

Organizations which are supporters of Leninism are asked to begin at once to make arrangements for this big affair. It is reported that a number of organizations have already planned to hold novel parades and demonstrations in honor of the occasion. There is every reason to believe that this affair will be one of the outstanding gatherings of the year. Further details may be obtained from the district organizer of the Workers Party, 208 East 12th street, New York City

Letters From Moscow -

By Anna Porter

A VIEW OF MOSCOW.

SINCE the first of September, the theatres have been working up to full swing, and there is more of interest than one can possibly hear and see. The grand opera first with its fine conventional presentation of standard operas—a large proportion of them old Russian tales set by Russian composers. The familiar ones are done in a particularly spectacular way—more impressive in this particular respect than I have ever seen them given. Around the corner, under the same direction, the more modern and more original presentation of the same operas. And then still more modern and original the setting of both opera and drama at the three Moscow Art Theatres or "studios."

For instance, in contrast to the splendid conventional "Carmen" at the Bolshoi, or Grand Opera House, there was the setting at the Art Theatre—"Carmen" restored to its original form and rhythms, and freed from its tawdriness, with an entirely modern idea of setting, the chorus a mere background of effective posturing and accompaniment. The same set was used thruout, some trifling addition of detail and a different diffusion or concentration of lights giving the required change of scene and atmosphere. The same treatment is given to "Boris Godonov," whose composer, Mousorgski, was so far ahead of his time that so good an artist as Rimski-Korsakov thought it necessary to reduce him to conventional standards. Now this opera is to be restored to the composer's own expression of the crude barbaric early Russian spirit.

At the Meyerhold Theatre in the Sadovaya Ring are given plays which are the last word in modernism. No concealment of stage mechanism, no curtain even, the scenery shifted around by the actors, sometimes as part of the drama—scenery that may consist of a floored scaffolding, on which characters are posed to indicate distance, or an effect of "scenic railway" curving down to the footlights—if, on second thought, there are footlights—representing the perspective of a country road. In a wild burlesque of old-fashioned comedy given at another theatre some evenings before, the family made exit from the drawing room thru a row of sheets on a line, which sheets were removed in the next act as the family wash. The action and dialogue were satirically distorted beyond recognition.

In this fashion was given the terribly impressive revolutionary play from the French of "La Nuit." Motor cycles dashes up the theatre aisle, and the fallen revolutionary hero was carried down it under a red pall past my elbow, to the strains of the revolutionary funeral march, "As Martyrs Ye Perished." Royalty and diplomacy were satirized beyond limits, and in the spirit of the mother of the fallen martyr, symbolized as a young woman, one felt the very tragedy of the revolution and its hope. On another night was given a fantastic conception called "Let's Take Europe," which was described on the program as episodic material for a play. That, too, was satirical and revolutionary.

Revolutionary after another fashion was an evening of dance by Isadora Duncan and her pupils—The International, the Marseillaise, the Spirit of 1905—most beautifully given to a noisily demonstrative audience. Except for these direct interpretations, there does not seem to be anything very revolutionary in her art—not such as we find in the Russian dramatic art at the time of its introduction, it was a revolutionary change from the old ballet.

A young musician tells me there is also very little tendency in music to wander from the old ruts, which static spirit he deplores. There is, tho, the symphony orchestra which has rebelled against the dictatorship of a director, and directs itself democratically. The initiated say the result is the only manifestation to be found here of the revolutionary spirit in musical art, and this spirit is the sine qua non in Moscow.

The other evening in the Labor Council "pillared hall," was given that remarkable thing, a recitation chorus, with the different voice-timbres interpreting the ensemble and solos the different dramatic parts—these parts being assigned to the voices as they are to the instruments of an orchestra. So far as I know, this is a purely Russian development. Very effective was a proletarian number with the factory hum given by voices in the background. A vigorous youth in worker's blouse, with a high dramatic gift, recited an impressive fragment in the role of an iron worker who is himself iron, and then changing to a sailor's blouse, tramped out a recitation to the accompaniment of the "Left March," "We Sailors Too Are Soldiers. We Are All Soldiers of the Red Army.'" Some effective and beautiful excerpts from Pushkin filled out the interesting program.

At the Moscow Art Theatre we have had Stanislavski fresh from his American trip. Some of the classic plays in new artistic presentations, and Aristophanes' comedy, "Lysistrata," with the feminist anti-war strike, which brought the soldiers out of the trenches to dance with their colorfully draped women, in a Greek frieze effect, about some grouped temple columns, on a revolving stage. A Moscow art setting altogether charming and original was the "Princess Turandot," and at the Summer Hermitage, with its beautiful gardens to stroll in between acts, a morbidly interesting mystic Jewish play, "Between Two Walls," which had been seen by my companion at the Yiddish Theatre in New York. This was staged by the same artists as the "Princess Turandot," and in as grim a key as the other was gay and bright.

I am afraid to look at the theatre lists ahead because of all I simply cannot miss, and yet must in leaving Moscow. For it has come to that—I am leaving Moscow, and already I have stayed too long, long enough to make leaving an unhappy wrench.

Parents and Children -

By Max Shachtman

THOUSANDS of working class parents will be found to agree, in the abstract, that the principle of the junior groups is an excellent one. They will agree, again in the abstract, that working class children should be organized in the spirit of the struggle, trained in the ideas and ideals of the Communist movement. Many of them will even wax quite enthusiastic over the thing; they will contribute most generously towards the finances of the young Communists. But when it comes to getting them to urge their own children to join the red juniors, they begin to find numerous objections; when they are asked merely to do nothing to prevent their children from joining the groups or attending of their own wish, these same objections will be raised.

Yes, you will find workers who stoutly maintain that they are good revolutionaries, and yet refuse to have their children enter the ranks of the Communist movement. This type of radical is not confined to any one country, or any section, but can be found everywhere. And his hesitation brings up the problem of the new and old relationship between parents and children.

It is unfortunate and true that most parents, however progressive minded politically, do not rule their households in the spirit of the new society. They rely on their economic power, the fact that the child is financially dependent upon them, to tyrannize over their children, more over the mind than the body. Realizing their own very natural human shortcomings, their pride is disturbed when the child begins to question that which exists. And especially the children whose minds are sharpened by a growing consciousness of self and class; when their observation of social injustices brings to them at least an inkling of unjustified treatment and consideration at home; when they begin to feel and understand the economic basis of the family; when they acquire the critical outlook on society and the individual and see thru the foibles of those humans who are parents—in short, when they have received a training in the Communist junior groups—their attitude is certainly not relished by those parents in whose minds the poison of bourgeois life has not yet been eliminated.

These parents see in their Communist children only that which shatters their vanity. They are unconsciously annoyed, angry at the thot that the "impertinent brat" has the audacity to question their authority and superior brains and knowledge. They cuttingly answer all the child's arguments and counter their proposals with the unfair slurs: "When you've gone thru what I have, then you'll have the right to say something" or "Listen to that kid talking about politics!" And if the bitterness of life under capitalism has brutalized him inwardly, the child is given one of those old-fashioned thrashings which only widens the breach between the old and the young, which is remembered only with bitterness and hatred by the child.

And should our junior be a real rebel and earn the antagonism of his teacher, his father or mother may be inclined to be peevish when they think that their Jimmy has raised a rumpus in school, while Mrs. Brown's little Harry is always petted by teacher, get A-A-A as his marks on the report card, and delivered a speech on "What Our Flag Stands For." Instead of being proud and happy to find their boy or girl developing into a protestant, a fighter, a rebel, many working class parents actually apologize for the terrible misdemeanors of their children.

The other type of working class parent who is opposed to his children joining the junior group is the one who wants to give his child a "good education," teach him to be an "engineer, or a lawyer, or doctor or something"; perhaps to set him up in business, and make of him a successful pants manufacturer or two-by-four banker. These parents have felt the iniquities of capitalism. They know what it is to be wage slaves to toil long hours for a meager wage, to attempt to support a proletarian family. But instead of seeking to train their children in the battle against the vicious system, instead of instilling into the children an undying hatred of bourgeois society, and the ideas and principles of revolution, they too often sacrifice all to make a business man out of him. How well we know the parent who denies himself everything, who scrimps and scrapes together enough money to send his boy to a university out of which the youth comes with a clear memory of fraternities, college yells, piffle about the "ol' Alma Mater," and the parting recommendation to some shyster lawyer where he is to receive his "practical training."

The proletarian parent has a duty towards his children. He must suppress the tendency that urges him on to exercise the big stick on his economically dependent child. To that stain on his revolutionary spirit which brings the pain of his annoyed vanity, at the development of the child's critical faculties, he must say: "Out, damned spot!" Between the revolutionary child the bond of comradeship must be established. The child must be treated as a young, inexperienced comrade, who relies upon the adult for support and guidance in his own struggles. The "love" which parents ordinarily bestow upon their children is a relationship based on the child's meekness, upon ignorance, upon imposed authority. True love of children depends upon an understanding of their problems and battles, in the home and in the class struggle.

In the junior groups of the Young Workers' League, in the Communist children's groups all over the world, this new bond is being formed. A new relationship is springing up. It is based on a new community life; it is expressed in a wide comprehension, common struggles, mutual aid and comradeship. In the groups there is no authority but that of the children who have learned self-confidence, class solidarity, Communist initiative under the unobtrusive guidance of their friend and comrade: the group leader. Those parents who fear that their guardianship is having its place taken by the relation of the group leaders and the children have two courses open to them. They can raise the cry of the pen-prostitutes of capitalism who shout that the Communists are breaking up the home, and thus play into the hands of their class enemies; or they can burn out the dross of bourgeois prejudices and ideology, and accept the new relationship.

The group leader is the new parent, and the new educator. The Communist child is the fighter of today and the embodiment of the child of the new society. To the hesitating parents I can do no better than to quote from one of Edwin Hoernle's pamphlets: "Children naturally expect and depend upon the support of the adults. The bourgeois educational system utilizes this inclination to make the children conform to rules and regulations which insure the comfort and peace of the adults. Communist education teaches the child to overcome this inclination and to accustom himself to independence." Let the working class parents signify their assent by aiding us in our work of building the Communist movement among their own children!

The Party Discussion

HOW SHALL WE BUILD A MASS COMMUNIST PARTY?

By ALEXANDER BITTELMAN.

THIS is the fundamental question: How shall we proceed to build in the United States a mass Communist party? The basis of the C. E. C. (majority) says: By building and strengthening the Workers' Party. To which the minority replies: No, in order to build a mass Communist party, we the Workers' Party, must first build a farmer-labor party and thru that party we shall create the mass Communist party.

I will deal with the minority thesis in my next article. Here I want to state very briefly the position of the C. E. C. on how we intend to proceed with the building of the Workers' Party.

When we say that the Workers' Party is good enuf as a basis and as a starting point for the creation of a mass Communist party, and that it is not our business to create other political parties for that purpose, we do not mean, of course, that the Workers' Party will become a mass party overnight and by the mere force of our wishes. No, we are not so simple or naive as that. We realize more fully than the minority that the building of the Workers' Party into a mass party is a process of hard struggle, involving complicated strategy and difficult maneuvering, and calling for the most active participation of our party in the everyday struggles of the workers. We have nothing in common with that brand of "Communism" which avoids the masses and their struggles for fear of losing its "purity." We are at one with Lenin in everything he ever said about the dangers of sectarian sterility.

But at the same time we must make it as emphatic as we can that we still have faith in the Workers' Party, that we still believe in its ability to develop and grow and become the recognized leader of the American working class. We are not disappointed in the Workers' Party.

It All Depends Upon Strategy and Tactics.

What we maintain is this: that the success of the Workers' Party will depend wholly (objective conditions developing our way) upon its strategy and tactics. And further, that our strategy and tactics must always be based upon the realities of the class struggle. If you accept this principle then the first question to be answered is: Where are we at? What is the main link in the chain of present-day events that we must seize upon and hold in order to pull developments our way?

The answer to that question is: The elementary needs and struggles of the workers in the shops, factories, mines railroads, and on the farms. It is there that the masses will feel hardest the increasing pressure of triumphant capitalist reaction. It is there that revolt is brewing already. And if our party, the Workers' Party, can supply the proper economic, political, and organizational slogans and also determined leadership, we shall have linked ourselves with a growing mass movement which will carry us to great accomplishments in the near future.

The United Front From Below is the Way.

In other words, we propose to begin to practice in reality and in earnest the tactics of the united front from below. Just the other day we proposed and adopted in the C. E. C. a thoro plan for united front campaign to combat child labor exploitation. We also provided, something that has not been done before, for a special sub-committee of the C. E. C. —a united front sub-committee—to continuously survey the field for the initiation and development of united front action on every question that becomes a burning issue in the lives of the masses, such as child labor, the Dawes' plan, nationalization of the mines, etc. The basic principle of all these campaigns will be to arouse the masses to struggle, to direct that struggle into the channels of class political action in alliance with and under the leadership of the Workers (Communist) Party.

Furthermore, we do not propose to wander around aimlessly and without definite immediate objectives in these united front campaigns. We have learned enough from the Communist International to know that each united front campaign must pursue a definite, concrete and immediate objective for our party. And we consider this immediate objective to be twofold in nature. One is to combat the LaFollette illusion in the labor movement by bringing large masses of workers into conflict with the C. P. P. A. and the LaFollette movement generally, and thereby into conflict with capitalism. The other objective is to absorb into the ranks of our party the mature sections of the workers and poor farmers. In this process we shall hasten the growth of our party and at the same time continue the development and crystallization of a powerful left wing in the American labor movement following the lead of the Workers Party on the economic and political fields.

Farmer-Labor Party is a Poor Slogan.

The slogan, "For a Farmer-Labor Party," which the minority in their zeal have elevated to the position of a Communist principle, we say is at present a poor slogan. It is no Communist slogan at all, and for that reason we reject it.

What is a Communist slogan?

It is a tactical means of mobilizing large masses of workers and poor farmers for immediate struggles against the capitalists. A Communist slogan must, first, be of such a nature as to appeal to large masses. Second, it must contain enough dynamic power to move these masses to struggle and to action against the enemies of the working class. Third, it must offer a means for rank and file organization into direct organs of struggle. And fourth, it must enable the Workers Party to become part of these struggles and to win leadership over them.

Measured by these four requirements, we say, the farmer-labor slogan, which means a call for the creation of a new party to stand in between the Workers (Communist) Party and the LaFollette third party movement—this slogan is a dead one. It will not appeal at present to a single rank and file worker or poor farmer outside the farmer-laborites in our own party. This slogan does not possess sufficient dynamic power to move ten workers one inch. You will hardly get a gathering of 100 workers in any large center in the country to listen to a speech on the necessity of forming a farmer-labor party distinct from the LaFollette slogan.

Study the thesis of the C. E. C. (majority) and you will find the reason—mind you, not the facts, these you will observe in your own surroundings. Try to talk to your neighbors, in the shops and in the unions, about forming a farmer-labor party, distinct from the LaFollette movement, and see how much interest you will arouse. Then talk to these same workers about preparing to resist wage cuts, "open shop" drives, dangers of new imperialist wars, child labor exploitation, and about joining with the Workers Party in a united front for common struggle. Talk about forming shop committees to organize these struggles in the shops, and watch the reaction.

The thesis of the C. E. C. merely explains these facts and draws the proper conclusions. Study and discuss the thesis.

Bourgeois Control of the I. W. W.

By HARRISON GEORGE

IT is not with any pleasure that one must record the shame of an organization whose working class history is replete with instances of struggle consciously directed by leaders who understood the necessity of rallying the workers against the repressive forces of the capitalist state

To Expose Capitalist Agents.

But there is a duty to be done when the results of many years of syndicalist confusion have brot to a position of influence an editor on the Industrial Worker of Seattle, a man who is so impregnated with capitalist ideology that he puts out as mental pabulum for general working class consumption such abominable capitalist rot as that which is hereinafter set forth as taken from the issue of Nov. 22.

In the beginning it must be remembered that, about two weeks previously, about 150 I. W. W. strikers on a Stone and Webster construction job at Concrete, Washington, had been rounded up by Sheriff C. K. Conn of Skagit county, reinforced with a large body of armed deputies and assisted by Major K. W. Thom of the United States army, and deported from Skagit county into Snohomish county.

Some of the deported men were married men whose families were left destitute. Houses were broken into men in them beaten, furniture wrecked, and all strikers run out at the business end of guns and told to stay out. Some who came back, and other I. W. W. who dared to go up to investigate the status of stranded families and property, were received first with searches, then—sure that none were armed, with a beating with brass knucks.

Tolstoy Versus Brass Knucks.

"When Conn was assured that none of the party had guns," says the Industrial Worker, "he sneaked up behind Henry Gehrig and struck him with his brass knuckles behind the ear."

What is the lesson the editor of the Industrial Worker draws from this added incident of the function of the capitalist state? Is there any effort to clarify the minds of working class readers as to the necessity of removing by revolutionary action of the whole class this capitalist state, this engine of class repression, which stands like a huge monster between the working class and their goal in the society of the future?

And in Army Pants! Scandalous!

Not at all! Even in the news item this sponge of capitalist class ideology is squeezed and gives out these precious drops of misinterpretative statement: "Houses were broken into men beaten therein, household goods wrecked, and not a single officer charged with execution of law has moved a finger!" And again: "What almost passes belief is that a military man, Major K. W. Thom, assisted in these lawless antics. This officer was among the raiders with a rifle in his hand and he personally threatened workers and citizens. Scores of witnesses testify to this public scandal. It is stated that he had on pants of his uniform." What degradation the olive drab pants must have felt! Never again to be able to show their face, so to speak, among their honored fellows!

That an officer in the army, the essential section of the force department of the capitalist dictatorship should threaten workers, and even "citizens"—sacrosanct as they may be, with a rifle, may appear strange to the witless nincompoop who is pumping capitalist interpretations of capitalist society and capitalist opposition to Communist programs for overthrowing it, into the heads of trusting workers who accept this bunk as truth because of the influence the fighting traditions of the I. W. W. has upon them. But that policemen, sheriffs and officers of the army exist for just such function is well known by Communists, at least. This is the dictatorship of the capitalists in action

The Other Side of Anti-Communism

But now we understand why it is that the Industrial Worker has been the receptacle for all the counter-revolutionary vomit the anarchists could puke up against the Workers' Republic of Russia, which makes no pretense of being a "neutral force keeping the peace between two classes" but which glories openly that it is a dictatorship of the proletariat, in which all the poppycock about "human rights," "justice," "decency" and "law" does not have the weight of a feather when the class interests of the workers necessitate the deprivation, repression, imprisonment or worse for one capitalist or for the whole bourgeoisie.

But the cream of this pollution rises to the top in a long and unspeakably idiotic editorial. It is proof positive that the I. W. W. of today is not the old I. W. W. of prewar days, or else, before the issue in which this is printed had reached me, he would have been removed with none too easy hand by a box-car rebellion.

The "Economic" Power of Rifles.

Here are some of the choice parts of this impossible stuff: "Without bother to go to court, Sheriff Conn was persuaded to swear in a large band of deputies and gunmen and proceed upon a line of economic attack. Without warning he raided the homes of the strikers and ran them out of the county." A strange kind of "economic" action, one will admit But this editor has discovered a new language according to which anything which really happens is always preceded by the adjective "economic" or "industrial." When Conn got on his brass knucks he hit Henry Gehrig an "industrial blow" behind the ear, we must remember.

But we must continue. And in doing so we see what a devastating effect this bourgeois ideology, which has been penetrating the I. W. W. for years, has upon the members when they are in conflict with the capitalist class. We are told that the chairman of the strike committee, Fellow Worker Rainey, "Was threatened with bodily wounding by a deputy."

To Police for Protection.

This deputy sheriff was a law officer, a part of the capitalist dictatorship. Did this discourage the faith of Rainey in the neutrality of the capitalist state? Did he perceive it to be one more instance of dictatorship and conceive of the repressive engine of governmental force as a unit opposed to the workers? By no means! If the sheriff and his deputies were evil and "lawless" fellows he would appeal to the police department, which he was sure was the haven of refuge for strikers attacked by "lawless" sheriffs. And he did.

When an Arrest is in Doubt.

"He appealed for police protection two days before the raid," says the Industrial Worker, "and was thrown in jail." This astonished Rainey, perhaps, and certainly the editor who must bray every time he speaks, is hard put to it for an explanation. He ventures, thus: "This might be called an arrest, altho no warrant was ever issued. But this man was locked up and restrained of his liberty." Perhaps the police merely wished to introduce him to the bedbugs in the jail, who received him as a guest, not as a prisoner. Sociology, certainly has no other explanation for the editor.

Then, when deportation was effected, our editor rises on a point of parliamentary procedure and says—perhaps citing Roberts' rules of orders—"Was this a properly organized posse? If so, why were the prisoners dumped into another county?" This is no way for a capitalist government to act, at all, according to his conception. And his mystification increases when he states: "The sheriff of Snohomish county has made no move to vindicate the dignity of his shrivalty. He accepts the insult and invasion."

A Shrivalty Insulted! Awful!

This is unbelievable to our long-eared editor. If the sheriff of Snohomish can bear with this indignity, he cannot! He will call attention to this depraved sheriff who has no regard for his "shrivalty." A "shrivalty" is something to be loved and cherished until strikes do us part! He, the editor of an I. W. W. paper, will protest this outrageous "insult" to the county government of Snohomish, incidentally using an ancient word which is approximately as obsolete as his ideas.

Such things are unprecedented in the class struggle, according to this emissary of capitalism in the editorial office of an I. W. W. paper. He says, "Mankind will be startled by . . . such unusual methods—and that the capitalist world accepts the fruits of this raid, unconscious that every guarantee of civic liberty has been violated." The Bisbee deportation, he says, "occurred in time of war when passions ran high, but even then the president protested against that outbreak of class hatred. Governor Hart has had more than a week to consider his position and has done nothing to remedy this break of public decency."

After Twenty Years' Experience.

But what can be learned from this "unexmapled" phenomenon of every official of the capitalist dictatorship from police to governor assuming such an "indecent" posture toward the relations of the working class to the capitalist class? "This indecency," says our editorial interpreter of the class struggle," is only the herald of other and worse exhibitions of capitalist incompetence. Law is proving its inefficiency to restrain the power of the lords of industry." And this from an I. W. W. editor after twenty years!

The Remedy? "Down with Politicians!"

But he is hard put to find a solution. He can only hang to the old tattered shreds and screech against "politicians." "Zealots," he remarks, "will propose polical nostrums." And he turns away with the hopeful proposal which has come echoing down the winds of futility for twenty years, "but with all its difficulties industrial organization is the only road to freedom." Then he has the unblushing gall to end up with, "No formula of words fits the present situation."

Not until all wordy formulas have been laid aside and the nature of the capitalist state and the necessity of the political struggle (the struggle for power) against it, to overthrow it and establish a dictatorship of the proletariat, is accepted by the I. W. W., so long will the I. W. W. be in the control of the capitalist class, regardless of the proletarian composition of its membership.

The Red Soldier's Manual

By L. Trotsky

Solidarity and Mutual Aid.

22. The high fighting qualities of the Red Army can be kept up only thru its intimate, close contact with the toiling masses of the union and of the entire world. The moral strength of the Red Army is founded upon the best qualities of the working class. Solidarity is the first among those qualities.

23. The essence of solidarity consists in an understanding of the community of interests of all workers and in willingness to fight in closed ranks against betrayers and oppressors and by practicing mutual aid and mutual support.

24. Since the army is a part of the proletariat, especially organized and armed for battle, it follows that in its ranks solidarity must be of the highest and purest quality. All Red Army soldiers represent one fighting community. Each soldier is a faithful member of his regiment, each military unit remains under all circumstances loyal to the Red Army, and finally, the Red Army as a whole, is to the last drop of blood, to the last breath devoted to the interests of the working masses and of the workers' and peasants' government.

25. Solidarity demands mutual relief in each individual case. Never leave your comrade in distress, especially on the battlefield. Remember that during the battle your life and safety depends upon the loyalty and support of your comrades. Remember that their lives depend upon your support. And above all, remember that success and victory can be won only thru mutual aid and support by all fighters. All for one, and one for all!

Revolutionary Discipline.

26. Without discipline there can be no organization, no industry, no government, no co-ordinated action, no victory. In military affairs discipline is even more important, more necessary than anywhere else. Discipline in the Red Army means submission to the laws of the workers' and peasants' government, observance of the rules of the army, exemplary fulfillment of military duties and of the orders of the commanders and commissars.

27. In capitalist armies discipline is based on class divisions; the privates have to submit to the aristocratic and bourgeois officers. In the Red Army the commanding staff is being recruited from among the peasants and workers. The discipline of the Red Army is based not on class submission, but upon the necessity for an adequate division of labor, adequate leadership and responsibility.

28. Revolutionary discipline falls like a heavy burden only upon those who do not understand its purpose and meaning. Therefore, try to penetrate into the meaning and spirit of the military rules and of the orders which are given to you, and your discipline will assume meaning and will cease to be a burden to you.

Initiative.

29. Military initiative means independence of thot and action and adaption to military situations. It is impossible to foresee everything in statute books, military codes and military orders. Time and place change. There may occur new situations, new environment, especially in war. The purpose of military training is to prepare for war. Discipline therefore, must go hand in hand with the development of individual and collective initiative. Without discipline there can be no unity of action and consequently, there can be no army. Without initiative the army is a dead organism.

30. The commander and commissar best fitted for his high position is the one who is able to combine in his own work as well as in the work of his subordinates, strict discipline with individual initiative, individual activty, who is able to stimulate the creative abilities of his soldiers and to develop their confidence in themselves and in their power. It is not advisable to look after the subordinate too much, to watch over his soul, to annoy him with unimportant matters. Those in the higher ranks must show confidence in those under them, allow them freedom of action, helping and advising them in difficult situations. Let there be less of the official spirit, less of blind formality and red tape. First of all there must be a live interest in the living soldier, in his achievements and deficiencies!

Fight Against Poison Gasoline.

NEW YORK.—Responses to the workers' health bureau plea for labor bodies to act against the dangerous tetraethyl lead gasoline are coming into the New York office. Schenectady Trades Assembly resolved to urge the state and local departments of health to take action. New Jersey state federation appealed to the state health department and is investigating the deaths of the five Standard Oil workers at Bayway, N. J.

The German Elections and the Communist Party

By PAUL SCHWENCK.

The German reichstag was dissolved on the 20th of October. At no time has its character as a screen for the dictatorship of German and international heavy industry been revealed more clearly than during the last five months. The secret bargaining and negotiating which have been conducted during this time, particularly in connection with the Dawes' plan, constitute a record.

It would be quite a mistake if one saw in the eagerly conducted bargaining merely the business haggling which is usual between the various groups of capitalist interests. These, of course, were only a side issue. The main business was that of filling all the important positions of state power with representatives of German and international heavy capital, and to kick out the lackeys of the bourgeoisie, the social democrats. The insolence with which the parties of the right have acted, proves how excellent has been the preparatory work of the social democrats, which they have carried on with such eagerness because they hoped thereby to make sure of their partnership in the business which is so fateful for the working class population.

Ebert Acted to Hold Job.

The question of "distribution of the burden," which the social democrats want to put in the foreground in order to delude the masses, has played no part in this. This question had already been decided quite definitely against the workers, with the active help of the social democrats, with the acceptance of the Dawes' report and of the laws connected with it. Reichs President Ebert would certainly not have regarded this struggle after soft jobs as an occasion for dissolving the reichstag if his own position had not been endangered. The heavy capitalists and the agrarian dictators believe they can now dispense with his assistance, which has been so extremely valuable hitherto. In order to maintain his threatened position was, as a matter of fact, the sole reason which induced him to decide on dissolution. If the parties of the right had guaranteed his re-election next year, Ebert would have accepted any conditions, no matter how disadvantageous for the proletariat; and the social democrats would have made no difficulties for him, even if they thereby ran the risk of the discharged functionaries entering upon a disagreeable opposition to the party executive.

The new elections will take place on the 7th of December. The elections for the Hessen and Prussian diets will be held at the same time. All parties, with the exception of the Communists, enter the election campaign with the handicap of having voted for the London pact, with all its resulting misery for the working class which is already making itself felt. Unemployment, short time, rising prices, falling wages, lengthening of work time and pressure of taxes—all these are heavily oppressing the broad masses. This is an extremely unfavorable fact for the parties from the social democrats to the German nationalists. But the social democrats believe they have already hit upon the right trick by seeking to make it appear as if the bourgeois block and the government of the bourgeois block, which was so brilliantly prepared by them and by them alone, would mean the setting up of the dictatorship of capital. They wish to make the mass of electors forget that capital has already for long exercised its dictatorship and now believes that it can dispense with the help of the social democrats. They wish to make it appear that only by the bourgeois block government would there be carried thru "the taxation privileges of the property owners and the ruthless burdening of the broad masses by reduction of wages, increase of food prices, and lengthening of work time." (Vorwarts, October 21, 1924.)

ALL SERVANTS OF MORGAN.

Program of Communist Party.

The Communist Party of Germany, as against this, has a clear position. Its policy has demonstrated that it is the only party which energetically stands for the interests of the workers in town and country. It is becoming more and more recognized that the C. P. of Germany is the only workers' party in Germany. Its unrelenting fight against the London pact is from month to month becoming more and more appreciated by the masses. The emergency program which it has set up against the enslavement plans, is becoming recognized more and more as the only way out. The Gotha demands, which the C. P. adopted as its own, are finding a great response in the factories and work places. The campaign for an amnesty for political prisoners is exercising effect beyond the confines of the party. Under these circumstances the C. P. of Germany welcomes the opportunity to lay before the masses in the election campaign its attitude and demands.

White Terror Against Communists.

The bourgeoisie, and its petty bourgeois social-democratic appendage, fully realize the advantageous situation of the Communists. They also perceive the danger which the Communist Party constitutes for them and they have therefore sought for a long time, by means of the most ruthless employment of white terror, to weaken and to cripple the Communist Party of Germany. They will redouble their efforts in this direction. The fact that immediately after the announcement of the dissolution of the Reichstag numerous comrades, who hitherto have stood under the protection of the immunity afforded to members of parliament, have been subjected to domiciliary searches and persecution—some comrades have already been arrested—gives a foretaste of what is intended. It is intended to make use of the most trifling pretexts in order to rob the party of its best forces and to hinder the Communist Party of Germany in its election campaign. No stone will be left unturned in order to prejudice the Communists in the eyes of the electors.

The difficulties which thereby arise for the Communist Party of Germany will serve as a stimulus to all its members to redouble their energies in order to frustrate the social-democratic bourgeois plans.

True Proletarian Internationalism

Editor's Note.—Every day until publication has been completed, the DAILY WORKER will publish a new chapter from the book, "Lenin: The Great Strategist of the Class War," by A. Losovsky, secretary of the Red International of Labor Unios. The thirteenth chapter is entitled, "True Proletarian Internationalism."

As with agrarian problem, so also with the national problem, Lenin has given us a new conception of its significance. The international social-democracy attempted the solution of this problem in a purely rationalistic manner. The social-democracy protested formally against the colonial policy of the bourgeoisie. It became apparent, however, right at the beginning of the last war, that international reformism is putting the so-called national interests above the class interests, and is accepting the point of view of the bourgeoisie in the matter of colonial policy. Long before the revolution Lenin had been studying the national problem. During the war he had been writing against the great Russian chauvinists, exposing the false position of even many of the left wing elements of the labor movement.

When Lenin came to power he commenced to put into effect his own policies. In doing so, it must be admitted, he found resistance even in the ranks of his own party. Lenin had fought with particular energy against the attempt to carry on a nationalistic and Russifying policy under the cover of internationalism. It is known that Lenin was the spiritual father of the international policies of Soviet Russia. But it is not so well known that he had been following with particular attention Soviet Russia's eastern policies. From the workers of those countries which hold in subjection other nations, he used to demand not only platonic sympathies for the oppressed, but practical political and technical measures of support to the revolutionary masses which are struggling against the yoke of imperialism.

For Lenin the demand for "self-determination of nations up to the point of separation" was no mere demagogic phrase, but a real law of practical policy. If we follow the line of policy pursued by Soviet Russia since its existence we find that this was the actual policy of Lenin put into effect. He was never satisfied with general principles alone. He carried out his ideas in all details.

Lenin took part in the debate on the national question which took place in December of 1922. He wrote: "I have already mentioned in my writings on the national question that there is no use in considering this problem abstractly. It is necessary to distinguish between the nationalism of a people which oppresses, and the nationalism of a people which is itself oppressed, that is, between the nationalism of big nations and the nationalism of small nations. We, as representatives of a big nation, are almost always guilty of endless wrongs against the small nations. And furthermore, unconsciously for ourselves, we perpetrate outrages and give offense. The internationalism of the so-called big nations, of one who is oppressing others, must consist not only in formally accepting the principle of equality of nations, but also in creating conditions for the abolition of the wrong doings of the great nation. He who does not understand this will not be able to assume a correct proletarian position on this question. He will assume substantially the point of view of the petty bourgeoisie, being liable at any moment to follow the lead of the bourgeoisie. What is it that is of importance to the proletariat? It is not only important but absolutely essential that the proletariat possess great confidence in itself. How can this be secured? To establish the principle of formal equality will not suffice. Only thru our deeds, thru the actual concessions that we make to other nationalities, which will wipe out their memories of former oppression by the old ruling classes, can we establish the necessary self-confidence. I believe that a Bolshevist or a Communist needs no further explanations. A true proletarian policy would demand of us in this sphere of activity, to be particularly careful and conciliatory, and in this given instance it would be much better to yield too much than too little to the national minorities. The interests of proletarian solidarity, and consequently of the proletarian class struggle, demand that we consider the national question not merely in a formal way. We must take into consideration the difference of conception and ideas between the great nation and the small nation. Nothing is so detrimental to the development and consolidation of proletarian solidarity as a sense of national injustice. Nothing calls forth such bitter reactions from the national minorities as the sense of being oppressed by our own proletarian comrades."

This quotation shows the whole genius and simplicity of Lenin's deep understanding of the psychology of the oppressed peoples. Now, has Lenin's national policy brought any positive results? If there is any doubt on that score it can be obliterated by merely inquiring of the oppressed peoples of the East. The oppressed peoples of the entire East have a very correct understanding of the deeply international and revolutionary proletarian character of Lenin's national policy.

How Little? - - -

By Robin E. Dunbar

This question is not a favorite one amongst the bourgeoisie, except when put to one of us out-of-job stiffs in search of a master. To ask a merchant how little he'll take for one of his choice adulterated wares, is to insult him terribly and to incur his bouncer's ill will forever, so that it becomes dangerous for us again to enter his emporium of bargains and the arts. Also to inquire in a dulcet voice in front of a theater box office how little is the price of admission is to meet with haughty scorn and an uptilted nose. So with our contributions to the churchly collection box as it swings close to our gaping eyes of a Sunday morning. We are supposed to put in all our wad or the biggest part of it and no questions asked or answered. When we are arrested for indulging too freely in free speech and blocking the bootleggers' traffic, we should not ask how little, judge? That would be contempt of court besides our other crimes and misdemeanors.

However, we are forced too often to put this unwelcome query and to those we love best, owing to the h. c. l. and the l. g. w. (low going wage). Friend wife goes thru our pants and finds the usual vacuum there and then kindly requests us to get busy and fetch in a weekly wage of sin and misery, so that she can clothe and feed the family, purchase school books, pay rent, car fare, gas and light bills, water rent, and the monthly dues of the Workers Party, and the campaign stamps and literature, with a quarter for the open forum; we scratch our heads and say: Just how little can you get along on? And when she replies that it takes ten dollars and forty-nine cents per diem to run our small shebang of six souls and keep us in good standing in our party, we groan and ask: "Now just where in h—— do you suppose we are going to raise that amount from now on to the revolution?"

Mother replies voluminously and profusely that if she had to depend on me . . . Me . . . ME! . . . alone, the head of the family, she'd never get to see half or a quarter of that much. All she wants . . . all she expects . . . all she is looking for, is for me to get a job, any sort of a job, whereby I can earn wages, regular wages, so she can know what to depend on and she will, with the help of the older children, her needle and her dogs, dig up the rest.

"All the ten dollars and forty-nine cents?" I ask her innocently and meaning no offense. And then the storm breaks, comrades; the real storm, all others shrink into nothing in comparison with it. I have been thru Missouri with the mules in a ford stuck in the mud; I have been in Michigan, Indiana, and Illinois when the blizzards roared down the lake and the thermometer struck 20 below zero; I have been in Kansas and Nebraska when the cyclones made us hunt for cellars and none in sight; I have been on some pretty high mountains, and in some damned low valleys, including Death Valley and Hell's Half Acre, and yet I have never experienced half the severities that I got in reply to my simple innocuous family query mentioned above when put in a calm and soothing manner to my better half. You see, she is only half radical; she says she believes as I do, but she clings to her old bourgeois vocabulary. It is rich in all kinds of expletives, too, I'll tell the world. But then I'm used to her and to hard words too; for you see, I'm a proletarianized bourgeois, and that is to say I'm a pretty hard boiled member of the Communist Party.

Since the world war, I've had an alibi. I say now, "Mother, what's the use of complaining? We didn't lose any of our children in the war; all we lost was our real estate and our bourgeois ideals; they were all the better lost. Let's get busy and figure if we can't get along on less than $3 and ten cents a day each; or if we can't, then try and devise ways and means to raise that sum without stealing, or incurring the unwelcome attentions of the police!"

And so we settled down to hard cold figures, and take a run around amongst the industrial stores and lay in a second-hand wardrobe for pennies that would cost dollars on Broadway; drive Lizzie thru the wholesale vegetable and fruit market and collect a week's supply of edibles for half or quarter what they cost at the neighborhood stores, go along the railroad track and load up old ties thrown away by the section boss, for our fuel, pick up books and magazines cast off by thriftless members of the bourgeoisie, and settle down to making over furs, furniture and fol de rols for foolish folks, who pay us well for their silly fancies, including our high-bred Pekingese dogs. You see, when it comes to a show down, we are loaded for the bourgeoisie; we buy by the rule, how little? and sell by the formula, how much?

No; you'll not find our names on the income tax list, or on any other one for that matter. We pay enough indirect taxes to keep a couple more small children in board and round, and so we feel we are doing our share towards supporting the bourgeois government and the Wall Street hounds.

It is a waste of energy to have to do all the small contemptible tricks and turns we are forced to in order to raise our $10.49. We are a well-educated bunch and full of creative power and might be of hugh service to our country if allowed to exercise our talents free from the petty worries of sordid bourgeois cares. But, no! We must stoop to the smallest subterfuges and devices to raise enough money to live in comparative comfort and decency, and expend all our time or the most of it in employments beneath contempt in order to get along as well as the better sort of domestic animals do. If we did not put up a heroic and heart-breaking struggle against odds, we would be submerged instantly. The moment we lose courage we are gone. While we seem to boast on how little we can get along on, yet we realize that is nothing to brag about. One's living should be gained almost without thot or effort in these prodigious days of mighty machine production. One should be able to live well and even luxiously on a couple hours' work a day; and have the remainder of his time for art, science, literature, music, philosophy and the higher walks of human life. Russia is slowly forging ahead in that direction; and when she begins to show the world how to live, how well she can live and how much she can spend and still have a surplus, then the conundrum of our needing more than we can raise in spite of all sorts of ingenious makings, and savings in order to cling together as a family, will solve itself. The bourgeoisie can't be expected to embrace Russia's example; they'll have to be forced to do so by us Communists; who are only asking ourselves how little? now so we can answer to the roll call of how much? hereafter.

I have not the least doubt that it was one of the chief aims of the far-seeing representatives of the English bourgeoisie, to compromise the labor party in the eyes of the English colonial people, in the first place in India, Egypt, Irak and now also in China. Has the bourgeoisie achieved this aim? Yes, to a considerable extent. The MacDonald government is seriously compromised in the eyes of colonial peoples. As regards Egypt, India, and particularly Ireland and now also China, it has carried on the old policy, the same predatory, imperialist, slave-holding policy as was carried on by Curzon. How pathetically MacDonald expressed himself over his own policy in his speech in Derby on the 27th of September, when he declared that not a single tory or liberal can prove to the intelligent electors of our country, that the name, the respect, the stability, the prospects and the position of our country have suffered in the least in the eyes of the world under the labor government. This was as much as to say: I am no worse than Curzon or Lloyd George, what more do you expect from me? That is the import of the speech of MacDonald.

For What Purpose Did the English Bourgeoisie Need the "Labor Government"?

If anybody had asked us for what purpose the English bourgeoisie had ventured on so hazardous a game as to let MacDonald take office,—which it is true is a first class menshevist government but still connected with the working class—we already see that the game was worth the candle. To compromise the increasing power of the working class, the only power in which the suppressed colonial peoples believed,—this was something worth while to Curzon and Lloyd George. Paris is worth a mass. In this respect they have achieved serious results. And when the English working class will have settled with the traitors, when they have not a royal labor government, not a sham labor government, but a real proletarian workers government, then they will have considerable pains in wiping out from the consciousness of millions of colonial slaves of England the impression left behind by MacDonald.

The English bourgeoisie considered it necessary to meddle in Chinese politics. They were far better able to carry this out under MacDonald than they would have under Curzon. You could see that the English working class hardly reacted at all to the imperialist policy of MacDonald in China. The proletariat of our Soviet Union formed a "Hands off China" League; in Germany this organization met with great sympathy among the working masses. The English working class hardly raised a finger against MacDonald's policy in China.

If Curzon had done the same as MacDonald it would have been easier to rouse a protest amongst the working class against this policy.

Finally, if you are familiar with the notorious Dawes plan. This plan was almost hailed as a victory for "constructive socialism;" at any rate as a victory for pacifism. As a matter of fact, it is becoming continually clearer that it is a noose round the neck of the workers of Germany and of a number of other countries. It was more convenient for the capitalists to have this "work" carried out by MacDonald than by Curzon. In this question England outwardly played the first fiddle. It was not without reason that the leader of the conservatives, Baldwin, at the annual conference of the party in Newcastle, fully approved of the policy of MacDonald in this question and disclosed the true reason for the necessity for carrying through the Dawes plan. This is what he said regarding it:

"The Dawes report has shown clearly that the first preliminary step is in the negotiation of a loan for Germany. What kind of a loan is that? I shall speak presently of the proposed loan to Russia, and I want you to be very clear in your minds what the essential difference is between those two loans. The loan proposed to Germany is a loan to be raised by private subscription, with no form of government guarantee. That means that the liability for loss, if any, will fall on those alone who subscribe to that loan.

"But all the same, there is a real risk to our trade in this country that Germany, relieved as she has been of all her mortgaged debts and prior charges, may have such an advantage in competition that we my find that her exports may do us serious damage.

"But there are opponents to the carrying out of the Dawes report. There are opponents to a loan to Germany. There are opponents to the rehabilitation of German trade. Now this has not been pointed out before, but it is a matter of very great importance. Who are the opponents to that arrangement, negotiated by the labor party, supported by us, and supported—I have no reason to think otherwise—by the liberals? The opponents of the Dawes report are the Communist Party. Two days ago there was a whole column in the daily press reporting a meeting of that party, full of objections to the carrying out of this report on the ground that it made Germany a servile state. But why do the Communist Party in England object to it? Because they have their orders from Moscow. Why does Moscow object to it? Because Moscow has never repudiated the ideal for which she has stood for the last few years, to cause world revolution, and she knows that a settled Germany and a contented Germany will be a barrier to her ambitions, that a Germany in its present condition cannot be feared.

"Western Europe has a civilization to preserve, and it is our duty to do all we can to preserve it in these days. The barrier of western European civilization must be made strong and firm against any subversive onslaughts that may come from the east, and there is no surer and no better way of doing that than to begin by carrying out the terms of the Dawes report and bringing once more that great German market into contact with the markets of the world. No one knows better than I do the cheap and easy argument that may be used against doing this, but I ask you to think seriously and deeply on this subject as to whether our plain duty to Europe and to the world is not to strengthen that common civilization to which all of us belong in the west of Europe." ("Times," October 3rd. 1924.)

The Dawes plan which was held up before the working masses of Europe as a triumph for democracy and pacifism, this robber plan, which was chiefly dictated by the English imperialists, could most conveniently be carried out through the mediumship of MacDonald. In a number of fundamental foreign political questions therefore, the menshevik labor government was the tool of the English bourgeoisie.

The Attitude of the English Workers Towards Us.

But there was one question regarding which the English bourgeoisie was not quite satisfied, that is the question of the relations between England and the Soviet Union. We have learned something of this question to our own cost. We still remember all the interventions in which England took such an active part.

The Russian revolution was so big a factor that it even stirred the heart of the most backward, petrified, the most moderate English worker. This was especially to be seen from the reception accorded our trade union representatives in Hull. Even the most moderate English trade unionists have been speaking lately to the following effect: The Russian Bolsheviki may be as bad as you please, they may have destroyed a good deal, they have often called us social traitors, but one cannot deny that they have overthrown the bourgeoisie, they have created something new, they have settled with the czar, they have not dealt with him so politely as MacDonald and his ministers have dealt with their king. The English workers have perceive this.

Why Do the English Bourgeoisie Wish To Prevent Our Loan?

MacDonald's allies in the camp of the conservatives and liberals are crying out on account of the treaty with the Soviet Union and proceed to wreck it in parliament. Discussion was particularly heated regarding the loan question. Why? There is a good deal of nonsense talked about it. It is claimed that it is a loan for the Comintern. The liberals and conservatives know perfectly well that it is a question of a loan for the reconstruction of our national economy and not for the Comintern.

Why then did they wish to prevent the loan? Perchance on account of the 30 or 40 million pound sterling which they are to give? Nothing of the kind. These people know quite well that the treaty signed by MacDonald and Rakovsky is not without advantages for them. We had to make large concessions. It created a certain amount of opposition within our own ranks, because we have been too indulgent towards the English. But taken as a whole it was and remains acceptable for both countries. From a purely business and commercial standpoint it is perfectly acceptable for the English capitalists. The assertion that it would be dangerous to invest a sum of 30 to 40 million pounds in a loan for Soviet Russia is absurd. Our regime is more stable than any other, and the obligations entered into by our government are more secure than the obligations of many other powers. Europe grants loans to Poland, Roumania etc. although it is clearly seen that the days of the Polish bourgeoisie and of the Roumanian landowners are numbered. Why then this opposition to the treaty? In the first place I believe that here the consolidation of the interests of the English and American imperialists is making itself felt. Pressure has been exercised here by the American imperialists. Pressure was certainly exercised on the part of Mr. Hughes. Only today we received telegrams from America, according to which all the most influential New York newspapers, even such an ultra-conservative paper as the Sun, characterized the activity of the first labor government in England as being very successful. The American press in the leading articles devoted to the English crisis, speaks of the "great service" rendered by the English labor government regarding the question of home and foreign politics—with the exception of the treaty with the Soviet Union, which it describes as being "a great mistake."

The English lords and the American millionaires are beginning again to form a block against the Soviet Union. You know the policy of the American foreign minister Hughes, who wants to force us to our knees, and obstinately declares that America will never recognize the Soviet Union. This is what the English worker must understand.

I mentioned already that the treaty is more advantageous for the English capitalists than for us. They want markets and know that our country will develop into an enormous market. Our national economy is on the upgrade. They follow very attentively such petty prosaic details as the demand for textile goods. It is known thruout the world that we cannot sufficiently supply our market with textile goods. It it known to the American capitalists that we are buying many millions of gold roubles worth of cotton from them. Some of them say that we do not purchase cotton in order to extend our textile industry, but in order to gain de jure recognition from America. But they are mistaken. For us, cotton is a much more valuable product than recognition. We need cotton in order to produce textile goods and to supply the villages with them. It is therefore obvious that the English and American bourgeoisie, the richest in the world, do not always allow themselves to be led by immediate business and commercial considerations. They can sometimes look beyond their immediate pocket interests and judge these things from the point of view of the "broad-mindedly" conceived political interests of their class. And from this standpoint they have come to the conclusion that the treaty is politically undesirable for them. They hate the Soviet Union with a savage hate on account of the victorious revolution.

COMMUNISTS FIGHT CHILD LABOR

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

BRITAIN continues to murder the natives of Sudan, because they want the right of self determination. Woodrow Wilson said that was one of the main issues involved in the world war. England declared she was fighting for the rights of small nations. But not so that the Irish, Egyptians or Hindoos could see it. The United States government is not showing as much concern over the rape of Egyptian and Sudanese liberties by Britain as it did about the German march thru Belgium in 1914.

THE United States government now acquiesces in the British murder campaign in the Sudan, because her interests and those of Britain do not happen to clash there. But if Britain hopped onto Honduras or Mexico, the eagle would flap his wings. France does not like what England is doing in Egypt and the Sudan, but France is going thru the pockets of the Moroccans and at times thieves must maintain an attitude of involuntary neutrality towards each other. The peoples of the exploited eastern countries are rapidly organizing their forces for the purpose of giving the robber nations the bum's rush.

LLOYD GEORGE, the discredited lackey of British imperialism, writing for the Hearst syndicate, quotes Theodore Roosevelt's brutal advice to the British ruling class, in a speech delivered in London by that mountebank in 1910.—"Teddy" endorsed Britain's occupation of Egypt on the ground that it was necessary to restore order. For the benefit of those who may still suffer from the delusion that Roosevelt was not one of America's most notorious and unconscious hypocrites the following quotation from his speech is given:

UNITED FRONT CALL ISSUED BY WORKERS PARTY

Big War on Exploitation of Children Starts

The Workers Party has issued a call for a united front of all workers' organizations to combat the exploitation of children.

It is planned to immediately enlist all labor organizations, unions, co-operatives, women's organizations, fraternal organizations, and similar bodies in this campaign.

Double-Edged Drive.

The object of this drive is two-fold, as follows:

1. Compel the state legislatures to immediately ratify the child labor amendment to the constitution.

2. Compel the state and federal legislatures to pass a law providing for full government maintenance of all school children of workers and poor farmers, without which, the Workers Party declares, a child labor law is useless.

The statement on policy, organization and propaganda for this drive, sent out by the central executive committee of the Workers Party, to all the party's district organizers, foreign language federation secretaries, the Communist and labor press, is as follows:

Statement of Policy.

1. To immediately begin intensive agitation in all labor organizations, unions, co-operatives, women's organizations, youth organizations, fraternal organizations, cultural organizations, etc., for a united front campaign to

THE INTERRUPTED LYNCHING

MASSACHUSETTS GIVES WORKERS PARTY CANDIDATE 24,044 VOTES

By JAMES J. LACEY.

BOSTON, Mass. — Winfield A. Dwyer of Roxbury, Massachusetts, candidate for state secretary on the the Workers Party ticket in the recent election, received 4,921 votes in the city of Boston alone, and 24,044 votes in the state of Massachusetts as a whole.

Comparing this to the vote of 1,999 and 2,816 for the S. L. P. and the S. P. candidates, respectively, for the same office, it is seen that workers increasingly understand that Communists are taking the leadership in the everyday struggle, and they, the workers, are more and more ready to follow Communist leadership. Comrade Dwyer is now leading the unemployed workers of Boston.

COMMUNISTS FORM COUNCIL OF UNEMPLOYED

Boston Workers Party Aids Jobless

By JAMES J. LACEY.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

BOSTON, Nov. 30.—The brass check press here is filled with accounts of a demonstration staged at the state house and the city hall by over a thousand unemployed workers under the leadership of Winfield A. Dwyer of the Freight Handlers' Union, who was the Workers Party candidate for state secretary (polling 24,044 votes) in the recent elections.

The army of jobless invaded the city council chamber and from the gallery cheered their spokesman as they challenged every utterance of the councilmen. Declaring that there had been too much passing of the buck, Dwyer said that if needed measures were not passed there would be consequences more serious than he would like to predict.

From the city hall the men marched to the state house where they met acting-Governor Cook (Gov. Cox is in Florida), who referred them to General Sweetser who in turn referred of your school children; (f) Don't rely upon the lobbying of the legislative committees of the Gompers' machine; (g) Don't rely upon the C. F. P. A. and LaFollette; (h) Organize your own strength in a united front of workers and poor farmers and fight for your demands; (i) Join and support the Workers Party; (j) The child labor amendment is meaningless without government maintenance of the school children of workers and poor farmers.

Organizing the United Front.

1. Local united front conferences to combat exploitation of child labor, these conferences to consist of organizations of labor and poor farmers.

2. Special effort should be made to draw into these conferences organizations of working class women, youth organizations, and especially organizations of poor farmers.

3. The call for these conferences should be issued by the local organization of the Workers Party in conjunction with sympathetic labor organizations.

4. The date of issuing call for the conferences will depend upon whether sufficient agitation has been raised in favor of such a campaign. We must guard against a premature calling of such conferences.

5. The central executive committee must be kept informed regularly, by weekly reports, on the development of the campaign in each locality.

Planning the Propaganda.

I. The Duty of Press.

1. Start displaying every news item bearing on child labor.

2. Popularise our demands as outlined in "Policy" and criticize child labor amendment in the light of our demands.

3. Urge the necessity of united front action by workers and poor farmers.

4. Emphasize futility of relying upon A. F. of L. legislative committees at C. F. P. A. petty bourgeois politics.

5. Urge the joining of and support to the Workers Party.

Pamphlets to Be Issued.

The following pamphlets should be published:

1. A pamphlet describing the brutality of child labor exploitation.

2. A pamphlet describing and proving the effect of child labor upon the physical wellbeing of the working class. Preferably written by a doctor.

3. A pamphlet describing the effect of child labor upon wages, hours, unions and general standard of living of the adults.

4. A pamphlet showing the criminal negligence of the Gompers and C. F. P. A. crowds to fight child labor exploitation.

5. A special pamphlet to the poor farmers showing how they must be interested in combatting child labor and in securing government maintenance of their school children.

6. A pamphlet showing how child labor is breaking up the working class family. This especially for working class women to be written preferably by a woman.

7. The Research Department should immediately prepare the necessary material for these pamphlets. The educational committee will assign the writing of these pamphlets.

Put Labor on Record.

A resolution should be drafted giving expression to our policy in this campaign and calling upon the workers and their organizations to go on record as favoring a united front campaign along the lines of policy as outlined above. This resolution is to be introduced in all labor and poor farmers' organizations later on when the ground will have been prepared for such action by our agitation.

"SOCIALIST" LA GUARDIA FINALLY DECIDES HE IS JUST PLAIN PROGRESSIVE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—Fiorello LaGuardia, representative from the 20th district of New York, is demanding of the house that he be listed as a progressive, and not as a socialist, which he was elected to office by running on the socialist ticket.

LaGuardia has changed party "affiliations" more than once during the course of the election campaign. In the primaries, he was a candidate on the republican ticket. Defeated there, he had himself certified as a member of the socialist party. The secretary of state of New York did the certifying, and in this way LaGuardia became a member of the socialist party thru endorsement of democratic officials. His expense accounts for the campaign were listed under socialist accounts. At least one expense account had the word "progressive" crossed out and the word "socialist" written in.

Gompers Is Present As He Takes Over Power

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 30.—Today at noon the office of president of the Mexican republic was handed over to General Plutarco Elias Calles, by General Obregon, the retiring president.

By this ceremony, which took place in great pomp at the national stadium, the nominally independent satrapy of American imperialism which lies south of the Rio Grande, was delivered from one satrap to another.

Gompers Shies at Soviet Diplomat.

The occasion was marked by the presence of many Americans, led by the American Federation of Labor and the American chamber of commerce. Sammy Gompers was quite at home in the midst of American bankers and capitalists and only appeared nervous when it was necessary to pass by the diplomatic body where sat Ambassador Petkowski representing the Soviet republic of workers and peasants of revolutionary Russia.

The Pan-American Federation of Labor will open here on December 5, and the officials of the A. F. of L. are awaiting its opening.

A Real Guy to Do This.

Obregon, the retiring president, is hailed as having at one and the same time "secured the triumph of the principles of the revolution" and also as having "created a national sentiment against revolution."

I. C. C. Quits Rate Hearing.

The next public meeting of the Chicago section of the Trade Union Educational League will take place on Tuesday evening, Dec. 2, 8 p. m., in North West Hall, corner North and Western avenues. These meetings are one of the activities of the left wing movement in the local trade unions and are held for the purpose of unifying the struggle against the labor fakers.

The forthcoming meeting of the Trade Union Educational League promises to be of unusual interest as it will be addressed by William F. Dunne, editor of the DAILY WORKER, who was expelled from the Portland convention of the A. F. of L. because of his militant stand against the betrayal of the workers by Gompers. He will speak on the result of the A. F. of L. convention at El Paso. Workers Party members and left wing trade unionists are urged to attend and bring as many as possible to the meeting

TROTSKY'S NEW BOOK DECREASES HIS PRESTIGE

Communist Workers Resent Implied Criticism

MOSCOW, Nov. 30.—The elimination of Leon Trotsky from political life is predicted here by high officials of the Russian Communist Party unless he abandons his expressed opposition to the policies of the party and his attempt, made in his most recent book, "Lessons of the 1917 revolution," to pose as the sole interpreter of Leninism.

It is considered here that Trotsky has again sinned once more against the discipline of the Communist Party, particularly in the preface to his book in which he once more raises questions settled in the course of the party discussion last year, a discussion which ended in his overwhelming defeat.

Is Political Question.

Trotsky is a member of the political bureau of the Russian Communist Party and as such his book is of major political significance, a fact which Stalin and Kamenef emphasize in articles by them criticizing Trotsky's statements. That Trotsky's description of himself as the chief aid of Lenin in 1917 was designed to re-open controversial questions there is little doubt and altho there is no intention on the part of the Russian Communist Party to take any disciplinary measures against his supporters and sympathizers, Stalin urges the party to conduct an energetic campaign against the Menshevik ides disclosed by Trotsky and prevent these from becoming a theoretical rallying point for the remnants of the bourgeois in Russia.

Trotsky last year, in the discussion that took place, found most of his support in the ranks of the young student elements and military cadets but this time there is but little evidence of support from any quarter. The Russian party is a unit behind the central executive committee and the factory workers particularly are hostile to Trotsky because of the sympathy and publicity his statements and criticism of the party receive from the capitalist press of the world.

One thing is very clear in the present situation. It is that the Communist Party is supreme in Russia and that even men of genius and practical ability like Trotsky, if they oppose the party, can pass from public life without leaving a ripple to indicate their withdrawal.

New Open Shop Drive Beginning on Rail Shopmen discharged or made to join the union

Management Starts Open Shop Drive

The management discharged the scab, but began to victimize the union men who had brot the complaint, and gave about forty of the oldest union men employed at the shops a five day notice of discharge. To cover up the discrimination against the union men the company pretends that it is merely enforcing an agreement o 1921, which provides that all employes of 50 years or more who entered service since agreement was made, may be discharged at the discretion of the company.

The Company's Thin Excuse.

The company also sets up the excuse that because the union had no "humane feelings" for the scab Turner, who was an old man, the company is justified in firing all old union men, regardless of either their welfare or the union rules.

The particular injustice of their action lies in the fact that conditions in the shops are so rotten and the wage standard gives such poor sustenance that many of these employes who have worked at the shop for many years, technically have entered employment since 1921, because ill health caused by bad shop conditions have compelled them to lay off and lose seniority rights, coming back as "new employes."

Shop Solidarity Must Rule.

As bad as conditions are, the workers know that things will become worse if the management is successful in this discrimination against the union men, which is looked upon as an opening attack on the shop crafts. If this attack is not checked by the vigilance and solidarity of the entire body of workers in the shops, it is certain that further attacks will be made upon the shopmen all over the country and an effort made to wipe out the unions completely.

The various union committees in the shops have met and expressed the indignation of the men at this brutal attack on the unions, and the chairman of the shop craft federation is expected to confer today with the management and see that the union rule, recognized by the company under agreement that no worker shall, after he has passed the thirty day probation, be discharged as these forty union men have been, without cause.

RETURNS SHOW COMMUNIST VOTE BEAT SOCIALISTS

Explains How S. P. Cut Own Throat

By Charles Schwartz.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

REVERE, Mass., Nov. 30.—In this little town of Massachusetts, the state of rock-ribbed conservatism, a most significant indication of what the own lega against the "progressive" sweep, an indication which, in view of the lingering memories of Paul Revere, makes rather amusing the slogan of the socialist party in the election—"Backfire."

In this instance, where apparently at least a part of the Communist votes were counted, is the proof that the socialist party got it in the neck as it richly deserved.

Comparative Agitational Strength.

It is instructive as well as interesting to know that in this city the "Forwards" of Abe Cahan, has 500 readers, while the "Freiheit" has only 60 and the DAILY WORKER only 30. In the light of this comparative strength, the following returns of this one town should be reckoned:

For president, Coolidge, 3,882; Davis, 1,874; LaFollette, 1,758; Foster, 87.

For governor, Curley, democrat, 4,238; Fuller, republican, 3,552; John Ballam, Workers Party, 92; Hutchins, socialist, 51.

For lieutenant-governor, the republican got 3,563; democrat, 3,326; E. R. Stevens of the Workers Party, 128; the socialist, 90.

For secretary of state, republican, 3,760; democrat, 2,367; W. A. Dwyer, of the Workers Party, 320; socialist, 150.

For senator, the democrat, 4,964; the republican, 2,531, while Antoinette F. Konikow of the Workers Party, got 132 votes.

them to the state unemployment agency.

The men then paraded to the common, carrying banners, where they held a demonstration at the Parkman bandstand and from these with added numbers they marched to the headquarters of the Workers' Party at Broadway and Shawmut avenue where they organized a Boston unemployment council.

Demands Work or Wages.

Comrade Dwyer tonight stated that there were over 80,000 unemployed here from the state's own figures This is in Boston alone. "At the employment agency" he said, "out of 1,280 applicants only 40 received work. The situation is rapidly approaching that of 1921 when over six million were unemployed. The profit system is again breaking down and those who produced the swollen surplus are being thrown on the labor market to starve. There is only one answer to this as far as we are concerned; that is: Work or Wages!"

"Industry must take over the burden of paying unemployment benefits We'll see that the surplus we create is used to keep us from starvation The bosses say: where there is no profit for them—there is no work for us. But we demand that the profit we created be used to support us until the capitalists are able to stabilize their own broken down system Finally, there is the alternative: if the profit system cannot maintain itself, we, the workers, will take over industries and administer them in our own interests—ultimately, the profit system must go."

United Front with Unions and Parties.

"Our immediate demands" he stated, "are that the government levy special taxes to create an unemployment fund. This fund shall be administered by the unions, and from it union wages shall be paid to the unemployed. Unemployment councils will be created thruout the country with delegates from trade unions from working class political organizations and from unemployed groups We in the unions are going to work shoulder to shoulder with our unemployed fellow workers and we'll resist wage cuts and see that the working day is shortened as well."

Only Under Communism Will Machinery Become Servant of All Mankind

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, 300 more workers in Chicago go out hunting jobs. Another battalion is added to the growing army of unemployed. The struggle for a place to work becomes more bitter.

They come from the "white collar" workers in the city hall. Most of them are women. Many are mothers, heads of fatherless families. The loud boast of the kept press that there are plenty of jobs cutting ice and shoveling snow does not touch these.

* * * *

The 300 were not fired because there is less work to do. There is more work than ever. But their places have been taken by machines.

Instead of 370 workers, folio writers and comparers, in the county recorder's office, there will now be 70 workers and 10 photographing machines. The 10 machines take the places of the 300 workers. The saving, it is claimed, will turn a department deficit into a surplus.

But there will be hungry on the streets.

* * * *

When Mussolini took charge in Italy, his Fascisti rule set out to save money in the conduct of its government. The ranks of the government workers were decimated. In the absence of obedient machines, additional labor was piled upon the remaining workers.

Mussolini saved a little money; but he did not take account of the hundreds of thousands thrown out of work. They constitute today one of the great menaces to his bloody dictatorship.

When the League of Nations took over control of Austria, it demanded that the army of government employes be cut down. This was done in the name of "efficiency." It was going to help put the Austrian capitalist government on its feet again to promote the stability of West European capitalism.

The Austrian puppets of the League of Nations' jackals obediently followed orders. A little was saved, but the cry of the hungry for bread in Austria grew louder and the problems of capitalism are as great as ever.

* * * *

Under capitalism labor gets little benefit from machine production. Increasing numbers of workers find themselves cast upon the industrial scrap heap while the profits of the owners of industry mount higher and higher. Instead of reducing the number of working hours, with the introduction of machinery, the employing interests fight to maintain the workday as long as possible.

* * * *

The 300 workers thrown upon the streets in Chicago today have no powerful economic organization to protect them. The unions of office workers in the United States are weak and scattered.

Where these unions have come into existence, and shown any activity, it is because of their Communist membership. But the Gompers' regime in the American Federation of Labor has quickly broken this spirit. It reorganized the New York union of office workers immediately it was shown that the Communists had a dominating influence. In the reorganization the Communists were left on the outside. This condition has been duplicated in other cities.

Faced with the introduction of new machinery, of every conceivable kind, on the one hand, and the rank betrayal of the organized labor officialdom on the other, the white collar office workers, who like to consider themselves a little above the wage worker in overalls, have a difficult time of it.

But the white collar workers will be forced to build their unions, in spite of reaction; militant unions for active struggles. In their battles with their employers they will learn that there is no solution for the unemployment, machine and wage problems under capitalism. They will learn that all the evils that afflict them are inherent in the present social system. All this the machine will help teach them.

Conditions will force the white collar workers into the growing proletarian army, that marches forward to the destruction of capitalism and the seizure of the machine as labor's greatest ally in building the new social order. Only under Communism will the machine become the servant of mankind.

M'ANDREW RULE THREATENED BY NEW RESIGNATION

William K. Fellows, member of the board of education, whose term expires on April 1, 1925, has asked Mayor Dever not to reappoint him. With the resignation of President Moderwell and the expired terms of Hart Hanson and Julius Smitenka, Fellows' resignation will reduce Superintendent McAndrew's support to a minority on the school board.

Mayor Dever, a few months ago, when approached by the members of the Teachers' Federation with the request that he appoint two new members in place of Hanson and Smitenka thus giving their side a majority on the board, said that he would not make any appointments during his term of office. However, with the new turn in events which will reduce McAndrew's power in the board, the mayor has dropped his non-partisan policy and has announced that he is looking about for someone to take the president's place who will favor McAndrew's policies.

Legislature Robs School Children.

The Chicago school board faces another deficit in its treasury. A chance in the distribution of the state funds provided by the legislature at its last session will reduce the Chicago school revenue by $245,000.

E. J. Tobin, county superintendent of schools, in preparing his new budget, has just finished the Chicago district allotment. According to the report Chicago under the new provision is allowed 1½ cents for each child and 70 cents for each teacher. The total amount Chicago will receive this year is $2,908,883 as against $3,154,246 received last year from the $8,000,000 state fund.

SOVIET RULE ACTS INSTEAD OF TALKS ON TRADE IN NARCOTICS

MOSCOW, Nov. 30.—While the capitalist nations of the world were bickering in Geneva for control of the world's opium trade, Soviet Russia embarked upon a vigorous anti-narcotic campaign to exterminate the use and sale of drugs. In future, sale of cocaine or other drugs will be punished by imprisonment, deportation and confiscation of property.

Probe California Cotton Fields.

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 30.—The California state commission of housing and immigration is investigating the California cotton fields, which are becoming an important feature in the agricultural life of the southern part of the state. The pickers are mostly Mexicans, Negroes, and poor whites from Texas and Oklahoma. Whole families work together, children and all, many of them living in unsanitary shacks and huts. Edward A. Brown, the commission's sanitary director has returned from an inspection trip and proposes to clean up the camps, establish permanent homes and organize school for the children.

WORKING RULES CHANGED OFFSET WAGE INCREASE

75,000 Engineers and Firemen Affected

Seventy-five thousand engineers, firemen and hostlers employed on 45 western railroads have received wage increases of approximately five per cent, in a decision of the United States railroad labor board.

The wage increase is somewhat nullified, it is declared, however, because of changes in the working rules in favor of the railroad carriers.

Won't Affect Strike Ballot.

The strike ballot now being taken on the Southern Pacific railroad by the brotherhoods of locomotive engineers and firemen and locomotive firemen and enginemen will not be affected by the labor board's decision. The decision will probably be ignored by the two brotherhoods, as the officials have denied the right of the railroad labor board to assume jurisdiction of the dispute between the carriers and the brotherhoods.

The brotherhoods refused to accept the authority of the railroad labor board last June, walking out of the conference room, and stating their intention of dealing direct with the individual carriers. Charges were made at that time by the brotherhood officials that the railroad labor board was prejudiced in favor of the railroad owners. The board then ordered ninety officials of the brotherhoods to testify before it, but they refused.

Demand Union Officials Testify.

In the test case of D. B. Robertson, president of the firemen, and J. N. McGuire, of the engineers' organization, who refused to obey the board's summons, the federal courts decided that the railroad union officials must testify. The brotherhood officials announced that the case will be taken to the United States supreme court.

It is not known whether the officials of the brotherhoods will accept the decision of the railroad labor board. The Southern Pacific employes lose by the decision, as the former rule of 100 miles to a day's work as the basis of pay has been abolished, thus doing away with most of the overtime pay.

Three rules which are still before the board will be decided by the test case before the supreme court. Meanwhile individual negotiations between the brotherhoods and the carriers are still going on.

Students of Moscow Send Red Message to Chinese Comrades

MOSCOW, Nov. 30.—The students of the Leningrad Labor University have sent a letter to the Chinese students, in which, referring to the present events in China, they remind their Chinese comrades that it is only by following in the path shown by Marx and Lenin that they will free themselves from oppression and enslavement by capitalist society.

"Long live the fraternal solidarity of the students of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and of China! Long live the world Communist revolution!"

This letter has been addressed to the Chinese Students' Union at Peking.

fight the battles of the workers and that is the Communist Party. Zinoviev points out in an article, or speech, published in last Saturday's supplement to the DAILY WORKER, that the British ruling class was able to carry out its policy of robbery in China much better under the MacDonald government than it could under either liberal or tory. The British workers could be more easily induced to protest against the actions of the tories than against those of a government calling itself labor.

WHILE the robber powers carry on their policy of brigandage thruout the world, there is only one country that stands out as a shining light giving inspiration to the oppressed of all lands. That country is Soviet Russia. As Sun Yat Sen declared a few days ago, Russia is the only white nation (red nation would be better) that believes in the right of self determination for the Asiatic and all other subject races.

Find It Is Profitable Source of Graft

Police officers are conducting wholesale raids without reason on the homes of south side Negroes, victims of police raids charge.

The police on the south side are in league with the numerous bondsmen who infest the police stations and courts, bailing out those arrested and giving commissions to the police, Perry C. Thompson, Negro writer, charges.

Prey On the Negroes

Arrests must be kept up to a certain level in order to make the graft profitable, and as usual, the Negro residents are counted as legitimate prey.

An example of wholesale persecution of Negroes by the police is seen in the arrest by Officers McMorrow and McKenna, of the Wabash avenue station, of Irene Mathews, 4925 Calumet avenue. Miss Mathews was approached by a white man who, she charges, made some fresh remarks to her, and when she refused to go with him, called to the two officers who were standing in readiness nearby.

The Negroes charge that scores of Negro women are being framed up in similiar manner by the police, the white men accosting the women being "stool pigeons" in league with the police.

Complainant Fails to Appear

Miss Mathews was discharged by the judge trying her case after she had given evidence of her good moral character. This is the first time in the many similiar cases in which the complaining witness has failed to appear to make his charges.

It cannot be charged that there is more crime rampant in the blackbelt as the gangs centering around Dean O'Hanlon, Tommy O'Connor, Big Tim Murphy, Gene Gary, the Torrios, and O'Donnell made their habitats in other sections of the city. Many of the Negroes unjustly arrested are forced to "pay off" the police officers rather than spend the night in jail, it is charged.

Negro Made the Goat

The south side Negroes are now paying rent which in many cases is 50 per cent higher than whites pay for similiar structures. These homes are broken into without search warrants by officers on the trail of graft for themselves. As usual, the Negro, who is unorganized, and on the bottom of the wage scale as well as the social ladder, is made the goat.

WORKER CRACKS JOKE, WITH ANOTHER; BOTH TAKEN INTO CUSTODY

EAST ST. LOUIS, ILL.—"Coolidge ought to be killed," jocularly remarked Mike Naujoks to Arthur Billedo, both cheesemakers in the Armour plant. The two were arrested by U. S. marshals and confronted with charges of having threatened the life of the president in violation of a federal act prohibiting such threats. Their bonds were fixed at $5,000 which Naujoks furnished.

NEWS OF THE NEW CAMPAIGN.

THE big mailing of $50,000 worth of insurance policies in the campaign to INSURE THE DAILY WORKER FOR 1925 has been completed. Every branch in the party now has in its hands letters, directions, policy books—everything essential to put over the campaign.

Policy books were printed and letters were written in eight different languages. This in itself is a task which our printing plant can be proud of.

J. A. Hamilton, organizer of Local Cleveland, writes that it is his personal opinion that the policy is too elaborate and expensive, altho the general idea impresses him as very good. Well, it shows what YOUR printing establishment can do in the line of high-class printing. Then also, we decided that we would put out a piece of campaign printing that would make the membership sit up, look and buy, the minute they saw it. And we guess this we did do.

Mat Jenkins, of Pittsburgh, encourages us greatly. "Altho we just raised $1,000 for the Freiheit," he writes, "still we are going to raise a big sum for the DAILY WORKER. Send the equipment, special delivery, to put us to work." His branch has elected a special committee to carry on the work.

The house committee in the National Headquarters Building has set the pace. The call to INSURE THE DAILY WORKER FOR 1925 is for the sum of $50,000. Of this sum more than one-fiftieth has already been raised by this committee. Figure it out for yourself. One-two hundred and fiftieth part of our Workers Party membership has raised one-fiftieth of the sum needed. If all members will show an equal interest, we will raise $250,000 for the DAILY WORKER, instead of only $50,000. If we do, you'll not hear any complaint from this center of our party activity.

To induce comrades each to buy $35 worth of policies is just a matter of knowing how. Steve Rubicki of the house campaign committee at National Headquarters knows how. He tells the comrades in groups of the birth, history, present and future need of our daily in such a way that comrades feel compelled to respond liberally to make our paper safe for the year to come.

A speech in similarly positive language was made by Nick Dozenberg to Lettish comrades gathered at the Chicago bazaar.

The Irving Park English branch, Chicago, has pledged every member for a $5.00 insurance policy. The Chicago German branch followed suit. We add, that not a single member of the party ought to buy less than a $5.00 policy.

And if they do, then we WILL cover their yellow with a coat of RED.

FEDERAL JUDGE UP ON CHARGE OF CONSUMPTION

But Not the Kind Cured by Sun Baths

PARKERSBURG, W. Va., Nov. 30.—Charged by T. A. Brown, United States district attorney, with "drunkenness, confiscation and consumption of intoxicating liquor, imprisonment of a citizen without cause or justification, high crimes and misdemeanors and unfitness and incompetency to fill the judicial position," held by him, Federal Judge William E. Baker, of the northern district of West Virginia went on trial before a sub-committee of the house committee on judiciary here today. The sub-committee is to determine whether Judge Baker, who was named to his position by the late President Harding in 1921, should be presented to the senate for impeachment.

Members of the committee sifting the charges include L. C. Dyer, Missouri, chairman; I. M. Foster, Ohio; A. J. Hickey, Indiana; J. B. Kritz, Pennsylvania; F. H. Dominick, South Carolina, and J. W. Wise, Virginia.

Imperialists Get Singed.

LONDON, Nov. 30.—Fire in the exclusive British Empire club in Tor St., Picadily, claimed one life today. Eight members of the club, who were trapped in their quarters by the flames, were injured. The building suffered heavy damage.

MILK PROFITEERS STAGE RIOTS IN HIGH PRICE WAR

Meanwhile Oakland Old and Babies Suffer

OAKLAND, Cal., Nov. 30.—As the result of a milk war between producers and jobbers, Alameda county is practically without milk, 22 persons are under arest, drivers have been held up and shot at, and state troops have been requested.

The trouble arose when the East Bay Milk Producers' Assn., the jobbers between farmers and distributors, refused to supply any more milk until the price was raised from 17c to 29c a gallon. Milk retails in Oakland for 8c a pint, as against 12c in San Francisco. Dairymen within 200 miles normally send milk to Oakland. The small independent milk producers, continued to serve Alameda county, and the big association, it is claimed, hired gunmen to prevent their doing so.

There have been several clashes between gunmen and strikers, and the only way to get milk in Oakland today is to stand in line for hours. Then only old women and children with babies in arms are served. San Francisco producers are sending some surplus milk to the east, but the district, but almost none is coming from the back country. It is unlikely that the governor will send trop at the milk distributors' request, as owing to the trouble in southern California, where the farmers in Owens river valley have diverted part of the Los Angeles water supply to provide themselves with water for irrigation, all available troops may be needed there.

The producers' association states that the farmers they get their milk from are desperate, and will not provide any more milk until the price is raised. The independent producers say the big association is sabotaging and that it is simply trying to raise prices for its own benefit. Meanwhile disorder continues and Oakland children are crying for milk.

FASCISTI MENACE CANNOT STOP COMMUNIST ACTIVITY IN ITALY

MILAN, Italy, Nov. 30.—Today is "all saints day" so the saviors of the Italian bourgeoisie, the Fascisti, used the holiday as the occasion for more display of their potential strength. As usual it was a parade—this time of the boys and girls ranging in age between six and twelve. I will let the readers of the DAILY WORKER guess why they are organized and by whom and also what they are taught.

They carried banners denouncing Bolshevism and promising that when they grew up into big black-shirts like their daddies, they would defend with equal fervor this system of exploitation. They migh have been boy and girl scouts such as one sees parading on occasion in any town in the United States except that they were black shirts. They were of course too small to carry pistols and clubs like their elders.

Must Prepare to Fight Fascism

We have Fascism in the United States although as compared to Italy it is in its infancy but let us have a real revolutionary crisis and it will grow into a conscious, cold-blooded armed force that will show absolutely no quarter either to the members of the party or to the proletariat. The comrades must work hard to prepare themselves for what is surely to come, for we have the most powerful bourgeoisie in the world with murder as one of its lesser and more gentle crimes.

Yesterday I went to call on some of the comrades at the office of the L'Unita, the party's official organ in Milan. They are all young men full of enthusiasm and were at the moment enjoying a scoop they had made at the expense of the chief of police of Milan.

Communists Have Them Worried.

A letter had been sent from Rome ordering him to renew efforts to stamp out the activities of the party amongst the steel workers around Milano, and to use any methods he deemed advisable. The letter went on to say that they, the Communists were becoming a real menace in this district and should be stopped at all costs. This letter instead of reaching the chief of police had somehow been delivered, by mistaken, of course, to the L'Unita, where it was photographed and published the same day. So in spite of the clubs of the Fascisti the work is going on here as usual and it would seem from the letter successfully.

WAR CHIEF ASKS CONGRESS FOR GREATER ARMY

Far-reaching Plans for Jingo Propaganda

(Special to the Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 30.—Secretary of War Weeks pleads for greater war appropriations and for an increase in size of the army in his annual report made public today.

Weeks praises the "citizen army" provided in the national defense acts

Prepared for War.

"Our program for national defense conforms to military requirements in view of the state of the world and the traditional traits of our people" says the secretary of war.

"It was made so that should we again be confronted suddenly with an international crisis the nationals of America would defend themselves in an effective organization, the citizens of the nation forming part of a citizen army.

"The training activities of the army of the United States and its personnel procurement branches are on the increase".

While stating that the size of the army is increasing, Weeks admits that conditions under which the soldiers are forced to work are many times very poor.

"The condition under which officers and enlisted men live in temporary camps and cantonments, due to lack of funds for new construction, tends seriously to reduce the efficiency and morale of both officers and men.

Worries About Appearances.

"Lack of funds for the manufacture of clothing for enlisted men and the forced issue of war stocks of these articles has resulted either in very unmilitary appearing commands or has compelled the soldier to expend a large proportion of his own funds in order to present before the public the military appearance necessary".

Plan War Propaganda

The secretary of war shows that progress is being made toward the perfecting of a system for the spread of war propaganda.

"Eventually we shall have representatives of one or another of the national defense system in all communities and their influence will be felt among their neighbors until all our people come to appreciate the wisdom of supporting a national defense plan so essential to security and peace, so beneficial to our youth, and yet so economical to the taxpayer".

The war department again pleads for more money and a larger army declaring, "If satisfactory normal progress is to continue there must be provision for expansion beyond the narrow bounds imposed by the temporary considerations of the post war reaction".

Church Leadership in Strike Brings Weak Settlement

HULL, Canada, Nov. 30.—The two months strike of girl match workers, in which some of the Roman Catholic clergy sympathized, is at an end.

The church leadership in the strike is undoubtedly responsible for the weak settlement. The E. B. Eddy Co. agrees to take back all of the 300 employes "only as needed" and only 3 out of 15 machines are to be operated at present. The company will not sign an agreement with the union, but the objectionable form of contract, prohibiting union action in working hours, is dropped. The company persist in its refusal to appoint forewomen, but agrees to appoint women inspectors, who will not have the power to hire and fire.

Expect to Save Miners.

SWANSEA, England, Nov. 30.—Four miners had not been reached by rescue parties working today in the Penland Colliery where 18 were caught in the rush of waters into the mine but it was believed that all would be brot out alive.

The rescue workers first feared that nine were imprisoned beyond hope of salvation.

IT HAPPENS IN MILWAUKEE

By IDA DAILES.

Wisconsin is La Follette's model state. Milwaukee is Victor Berger's model city. Could one wish for a happier combination? And yet . . .

strange things happen in Milwaukee, Wisconsin. Things that really shouldn't happen in a city and a state that are run by those who represent themselves as the friends of the "common people."

A man, a wife, six children. Two of the children had been committed to county institutions for delinquency. Another child, six years old, is to be placed in an institution for theft.

An indignant probation officer testifying in the juvenile court, charges, "The mother won't stay home and take care of her children, your honor!"

The father is called to the stand. He explains:

"I make $15 a week when work is scarce and $21 a week when I work full time. My wife must work or we cannot eat."

The case was dismissed. But that will neither put food into the mouths of the hungry ones nor will it straighten out the psychological kinks which grow into the minds of children who are brot up in poverty and misery. And when they grow up, there will be no costly alienists to explain away their possible crimes.

WEST VA. COAL STRIKERS MEET DEATH IN PRISON PERSECUTIONS

MOUNDSVILLE, W. Va., Nov. 30.—It took the death of two convicts and the probable fatal injury of another at the state penitentiary coal mine here to fasten the attention of the public on the conditions existing in the state prison.

For months convicts in the state prison have been carrying on an intermittent strike against these conditions.

Terrific Driving Goes On.

All prisoners are forced to work in one of the several workshops of the prison. It was while driving a shaft for a coal mine to be operated by convicts that the two prisoners were killed and the other one injured. The state manager of the prison permitted the work on the shaft to be carried on in such manner as to lead to the tragedy.

In all the work shops a certain amount of work is demanded of each prisoner. If he fails to do it he is punished. Several times recently the work quotas have been raised. Finally in desperation the prisoners struck against conditions demanding that the standards be fixed so that the aged and infirm and sick prisoners should not be required to do as much as the young and stronger prisoners.

Prisoners Persecuted.

The strikers were all put in solitary confinement and the prison authorities refused to give them either food or water till they agreed to work. After three days the strikers were forced to agree to work. Several days later another strike occurred and again the strikers were put in solitary without either food or water.

Many of the prisoners are coal miners who took part in the battle of Clifton-ville in 1922. They are all serving five-year terms. Since they were union men who were all fearless and were not timid in demanding that conditions be improved, they were blamed for the strike by the prison authorities. They are receiving the worse treatment than any of the other strikers.

Some "forward looking liberals" hope that the death of the two prisoners killed in the mine blast will serve to arouse the public to demanding that prison conditions be set right but the workers and the convicts who know something of the political rottenness of this estate state and its government machinery are cynical about the outlook. In the meantime the intermittent strike of the convicts goes on. The cycle runs: work and misery, strike and starve, work and misery, strike and starve.

LIGHTS GO OUT; BOOKS STOLEN; IN UNION MEET

Bosses' Thugs Stage Raid on Candy Union

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—That the workers who produce the sweets are having a very bitter time of it was the consensus of opinion at a mass meeting of candy workers here at Astoria Hall, 62 East 4th Street.

They called this meeting to organize into a union to secure better working conditions in candy factories.

Over 150 attended. The lights went out suddenly. There was a skirmish. Then five men rushed up to the platform, snatched up the books and file card index containing names of the members of the union and made their getaway.

The officers and members said they could easily explain the hold up. The manufacturers of candy are worried, in fact, they are desperate. They have always been able to exploit the candy workers without any redress. Profits were big—salaries the lowest of any workers in the country and hours the longest. Now the candy workers are organising. And the holiday season is here. The workers' demands become serious. It is a bad time for bosses to have a strike on their hands. But it is a right good time for the workers.

The candy workers have sent out the following appeal to workers in their trade:

"Candy Workers, Attention!

"How long are our conditions going to remain worse than those of other workers? How long will our wages be so low and hours so long? How much longer will our bosses and foremen be able to insult us with absolute impunity? Do you realize that our lives are endangered by the rotten conditions under which we labor? Do you know, candy worker, that you can improve your condition by coming to this meeting? It is your duty to come. You cannot afford to miss it. In union there is strength, and We Must Organise!"

There will be another meeting of the candy workers very soon at which they will go into the final plans for the organization of their union.

Discussion of Our Party's Immediate Tasks

THE WORKERS PARTY IS THE LEADER OF THE LEFT WING

By EARL R. BROWDER.

In the thesis of the Central Executive Committee, on the tasks of the Workers Party (printed in the DAILY WORKER Nov. 26), the majority takes the position that the Workers Party is itself the political leader of the left wing in the American labor movement.

The thesis of the minority (printed in the DAILY WORKER Nov. 27), on the contrary, declares that it is only under the banner of a "class farmer-labor party" that we can mobilize "the left-class-party bloc" and thus "again establish contact with the trade unions and with the organization of the poorer farmers."

Here is a definite issue. Is the left wing of the American proletariat entirely leaderless? Is it impossible for the Workers Party to lead this left wing except by first organizing it into a non-Communist farmer-labor party? The C. E. C. majority says: "No!" The Workers Party has already established itself as the leader of the left wing. The minority says: "Yes!" They think the Workers Party stands alone and naked unless it has the covering of a farmer-labor party, a "left-class-party bloc" (whatever that is.) with which it will beguile the left wing into following it. Which is correct?

Do We Need a Farmer-Labor Party to Lead the Left Wing?

The left wing is that section of the working class which understands, definitely enough to fight for its immediate aims, that it has a bitter and implacable enemy in the capitalist class, and that only thru uncompromising struggle is it possible to win improvements in the lot of the workers and strengthen the working class for future struggles. In the trade unions it is that section which follows the general line of the Ill. I. L. U. and the Trade Union Educational League, the line of class struggle and against class collaboration.

Does this left wing follow the political leadership of the Workers Party? Does it support the Workers Party as the Workers Party?

Yes, it does. True, this left wing was a backbone of most of our farmer-labor parties in the industrial centers during the past two years. But we did not find all these elements there. We took most of them in with us. The left wing of the industrial proletariat went into the farmer-labor parties largely under the leadership of the Workers Party. They will go into farmer-labor parties again, if we advise them to do so. But they are not inclined at all to force us to organize a farmer-labor party for them as the price of our leadership. They will follow the Workers Party under its own name just as readily—indeed; many portions of the left wing with even more enthusiasm, as was proved in the New York campaign where thousands of dollars were donated by unions for the W. P. campaign, more than was ever forthcoming for a farmer-labor party.

Do We Need a F.-L. P. to Widen the Left Wing?

No, says the majority thesis. The C. E. C. of our party does not believe that such protective coloring, necessarily evasions of primary questions of the class struggle, will widen and strengthen the left wing. Only by the most active organization and leadership of the left wing by the Communists, and the launching of struggles for definite immediate demands (shop committees, amalgamation of the unions, resistance to wage cuts, unemployed councils, etc.) can the left wing extend its influence and, at the same time and as a consequence, strengthen the influence of the Workers Party. Recruits to the left wing are not won on the basis of abstract, organizational slogans, such as "for a labor party"; rather they are won in the fight for immediate protection and betterment of the workers, in the trade unions and out, for political and industrial demands.

This struggle can only be led by the Workers Party. It is impossible for a farmer-labor party, without definite revolutionary principles, to lead a left-wing struggle. If it argued that the Workers Party will give it the Communist backbone—what then is the use of the farmer-labor party if it contributes nothing? The masses are not in it, so it cannot contribute mass and volume. About all that a farmer-labor party created by the Workers Party could possibly add to the struggle would be some additional illusions that would have to be destroyed before its members would be really left wingers.

Workers Party Alone Leads and Strengthens Left Wing.

In short, the more we examine the arguments of the minority on this point of left-wing leadership, the more definitely must we conclude that it is not only incorrect—that would be bad enough—but that it betrays a fundamental misconception of the class struggle, of the process of the revolutionization of the masses, and of the role of the party therein. And not only that—it betrays also a complete lack of confidence in our party, in its ability to stand openly before the conscious workers as well as before the masses—winning their confidence and the leadership of their struggles on the merits of its superior knowledge and program, its more militant fighting spirit, its greater practical ability to organize the struggle.

The Workers Party has won its place in the party of the class struggle in America. By that fact it has won leadership of the left wing of the American proletariat. It does not need a cloak-of-many-colors, whether it be called "farmer-labor party" or whatnot, to hold and widen this leadership. What it needs is better organization in its own ranks, the transformation on the basis of shop nuclei, the more complete assimilation of the principles of Leninism, and more—ever more—practical activity under its own name and on the basis of the united front in the daily struggles of the working class. The minority is wrong. The thesis of the Central Executive Committee is correct. It points the road upon which must travel the Communist movement in America.

THE "LOGIC" OF THE MAJORITY THESIS

By C. E. RUTHENBERG.

THE most striking feature of the thesis of the majority members of the Central Executive Committee on the political situation and the tasks of our party is the illogical conclusion which is drawn from the facts submitted. This conflict between the analysis of the economic and political developments in the United States and the policy which it is proposed that our party shall follow is so glaring that it strikes one in the face even in a most casual reading of the thesis.

What are the facts which have guided our party policy during the past two or three years?

World War Now on Crisis.

Our position has been: The world war has resulted in the crisis of capitalism. The economic burdens growing out of the war and the destruction of the means of production in Europe as countries have decreased the productive power of capitalism and brot a sharpening of the class struggle. The United States is not immune from these conditions, as has been shown by the swiftly recurring period of depression in this country. As a consequence have had a period of intenser class struggle in the United States since the end of the war. In these struggles the use of the state power against the workers and exploited farmers has developed their political consciousness and resulted in the movement for independent political action by these exploited classes.

Every attentive student of our policy in our party will agree that this was the line of our argument during the two and a half years of our united front Farmer-Labor Party policy. The whole basis of our policy was that the intenser class struggles of the period of the crisis of capitalism would develop the political consciousness of the workers and exploited farmers and create a movement for independent political action by these classes. We said, this is our best point of contact with these masses By raising the slogan which expresses the need which is dawning in their political consciousness, we will win their confidence, establish our leadership, draw these masses closer to us and in the process of working and fighting with them we will draw the best elements into our party and thus build the Workers' Party. Our policy had a two-fold purpose, to further develop politically those workers and farmers in whose minds the idea of independent political action was growing and to build our party.

Workers Learn of Our Party.

For us this policy was a success Our party became a political factor in the United States thru its united front Farmer-Labor Party Policy. Our activities in putting into effect this policy brot us before the masses, our party became known to the workers and exploited farmers. We gained prestige and leadership.

What are the facts now?

The thesis of the majority of the C. E. C. agrees with the viewpoint of the minority thesis that the future in the United States—not the distant future, but the immediate future—holds continued and new oppressions of the workers and exploited farmers and as a consequence even more intense class struggles than in recent years.

In other words the majority thesis agrees that the conditions which created the movement for independent political action by the workers and exploited farmers will continue, that these conditions will even be intensified. And what is the logical deduction from this? The deduction of the majority thesis is, the movement for independent political action by the workers and exploited farmers is dead. Their argument is, all the conditions which create a movement for independent political action by the workers and exploited farmers will prevail in an intensified form, but there will not be any movement for independent political action and therefore we must discard the slogan "for a class Farmer-Labor Party." That is the "logic" of their thesis.

The minority of the C. E. C. declares that since nothing else can come out of the economic and political situation in the United States than sharper struggles between the workers and exploited farmers and the capitalist government, the logical deduction from this is that the movement for independent political action by the workers and exploited farmers thru a Farmer-Labor Party will be even stronger than in the past and that we must maintain our contact with these masses thru continuing our campaign under the slogan "for a class Farmer-Labor Party," because we can thus best fulfill our task of developing the political consciousness of the workers and exploited farmers, leading them into political struggles and thus creating the basis for class action by these two groups against the capitalist government. The minority of the C. E. C. declares that it is only thru such participation in the actual, developing political movement of the workers and poorer farmers that we can build the Workers' Party and make of it the mass Communist Party of the United States.

The LaFollette Bugaboo.

What answer does the C. E. C. majority make to this reasoning. Why they declare, LaFollette has swallowed the whole Farmer-Labor Party movement. No doubt, temporarily, he has swallowed a goodly part of it. But is the LaFollette illusion stronger than the economic forces which compel the workers and exploited farmers to fight their respective class battles? The economic forces which throw these groups into struggles have been powerful enuf to compel them to leave the republican and democratic parties. They will be powerful enuf to break the weaker hold upon these workers and exploited farmers which LaFollette has temporarily gained over them.

The reading of the C. E. C. majority thesis gives one the impression that the LaFollette illusion has taken hold of the minds of the majority there is a fatalistic bowing of the knee before LaFollettelsm. . For the C. E. C. majority it seems a definitely established fact that the workers and exploited farmers who are for independent political action have settled in the LaFollette camp and are going to stay there for a long, long time to come.

There is a reason for this which is not stated in the majority thesis, but which runs behind the whole argument of the thesis. This same reason explains the desire of the majority to abandon the slogan for "a class Farmer-Labor Party" and substitute for it directly against the LaFollette movement the slogan "Join the Workers' Party." It is the majority theory that the Labor Party in the United States must of necessity be a "broad, all-inclusive Farmer-Labor Party." Any other Farmer-Labor Party, even tho it united a half million workers and exploited farmers, was taboo for the C. E. C. majority. In the background of the minds of the members of the C. E. C. majority there is the view that the LaFollette movement is it—the broad, all-inclusive Farmer-Labor Party. That is the basis for abandoning the united front Farmer-Labor Party policy. That is the basis for raising the slogan "Join the Workers' Party" against the LaFollette movement. It would be a correct policy if in the LaFollette movement we had the Farmer-Labor Party of the United States. That this is the case the C. E. C. majority dare not say.

Against "Folded Hands" Policy.

The minority declares, that it is not creditable for a Communist Party to fold its hands and let the workers and exploited farmers, who are resting there temporarily, remain in the La Follette camp. That we must continue to combat the slogan "For a class Farmer-Labor Party" with the slogan "Join the Workers' Party." That by raising the issue of a class party of workers and exploited farmers against the LaFollette movement we will be wielding the strongest weapon against that movement, and for the developing of the political consciousness of the workers and poorer farmers. That in conducting such a campaign "For a Class Farmer-Labor Party" we will continue contact with the masses who are moving in that direction and that in participating in the fight with them we will have the best opportunity to raise the slogan "Join the Workers' Party" and to build our party.

The minority thesis draws the logical conclusion as to policy from its analysis and the facts it submits. The majority jumps to a conclusion in direct conflict with the analysis it submits.

Recognition by the United States has not been withdrawn, but direct diplomatic dealings are in a state of suspense awaiting the constitutional changes.

STILL TIME TO REGISTER FOR CLASS IN HISTORY OF THE AMERICAN COMMUNIST PARTY

Alfred Wagenknecht substituted for Jas. P. Cannon at the class on Communist party history at Technical Hall, 1902 West Division Street, Chicago, Tuesday night. Comrade Cannon was sick and therefore could not attend.

The lecture by Comrade Wagenknecht covered the period of inter-party activity in workers' political party organizations from the socialist party national convention held in April, 1917, to the organization of the Communist Labor Party and the Communist Party in September, 1919.

The lecturer made plain and interesting the following occurrences during this period: The April, 1917, national convention of the socialist party; the anti-war resolution; the effort of the leftists in the socialist party to carry out this resolution into life; anti-conscription agitation; in Cleveland, Ohio; in the language federations; in the Y. P. S. L.; Debs in 1918. The Bolshevik revolution in 1917; its effect upon the Slavic federations and upon the English speaking elements in the left wing of the socialist party; referendum of the socialist party to join Third International overwhelmingly carried; left wing international delegates and national executive committee of socialist party elected; referendum declared illegal by reactionary party officialdom; expulsion of 40,000 federation members by the national executive committee of the socialist party, expulsion of the state organization of Michigan and Ohio for their left tendencies.

National left wing conference in New York, June, 1919; split in the left wing executive, the Slavic federations demanding the calling of a convention to organize a Communist party irrespective of the coming August socialist party convention, and the English branches of the left wing holding that it would be better tactics to attend the socialist party August convention and there propagate for the left wing; the election of the left wing from the socialist party to the convention by the Chicago police upon call of Germer and other reactionary S. P. officials; the meeting of these left wing delegates in hall below the S. P. convention to organize the Communist Labor Party; the organization of the Communist Party during these same days in a hall on Blue Island avenue, Chicago; the attempt to unite the C. L. P. and C. P. conventions, resulting in failure, the ideological difference between the two parties and memberships, the leaders in the two parties and the leadership of the remnant left of the socialist party.

Students wishing to register can still do so for the next lecture which will be given Tuesday, Dec. 2.

Philadelphia Open Forum is Workers' Center of Education

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 30.—Considering the great interest that is being shown by the Philadelphia workers in the Workers' Party Open Forum it promises to become a real center of education for the advancement of working class interests.

William Weinstone of New York, addressed the second meeting of the forum on "The Labor Government of England vs. Soviet Government of Russia." He made a careful analysis of the nine months of administration and showed that during all that time not a single bill was introduced in parliament that would interfere with the domination of the capitalist class over the working class. No legislation was put into effect that would increase the standard of living of the workers or relieve the unemployed and otherwise be in the interest of the workers. He drew the conclusion that it was nothing other than a continuation of the former Baldwin imperialist policy. He further showed how different was the situation in Soviet Russia, how the proletarian dictatorship had successfully served the interests of the working class and today is stronger economically and politically than it had ever been in the seven years of its existence.

During the discussion one of the survivals of the S. L. P., Silver by name, tried to show by quoting Engels' introduction to Marx' "Class Struggles in France 1848-1851" that the workers will get their power by legal means. Weinstone explained that the document quoted from was distorted by Eduard Bernstein who published it originally and furthermore a very important part of the document was omitted which completely refuted the idea of legalistic emancipation. This was made public by the Marx-Engels Institute of Moscow.

On Sunday, Nov. 30, Lovestone, who is well known for his writings on imperialism, will speak on "American Imperialism and the Dawes Plan." The forum meets every Sunday evening, 8 p. m., at Girard Fraternity Hall, 1628 Arch St. Admission is free.

ELECTION SURVEY SHOWS MINORITY RULES AMERICA

Disfranchisement of the Negroes Clearly Shown

Only 52.8 per cent of the populace eligible to vote went to the polls on November 4 according to a statement issued following a survey made by the national association of manufacturers

This is an increase of but 3.7 per cent over the 1920 figures when 49.1 per cent of the electorate went to the polls.

The minority basis of the parliamentary structure of American government is clearly indicated in the figures which accompany the report of the survey. The figures of the association also reveal in a startling form the systematic disfranchisement of the Negros in the southern states.

Nineteen of the 48 states cast a smaller vote than in 1920 and the "solid south" upheld its reputation as the home of feudal reaction by percentages ranging from 8 in South Carolina, 10.1 in Georgia, 10.8 in Mississippi, 12.5 in Louisiana, 7.5 in Florida to 37.4 in North Carolina.

In Kansas and Indiana approximately 82 per cent of the total eligible vote was cast due to the fight between the klan and anti-klan forces.

The enfranchisement of women has had little appreciable effect on the per centage of voters altho it has increased the number who go to the polls.

The tabulation of the percentages for the nation is as follows:

	Pct. votes cast '20.	Tot. votes cast '24.	Pct. vts. cast '24.

GERMAN FASCISTI APE BRITISH TORIES IN FORGING COMMUNIST DOCUMENTS FOR THE ELECTIONS

BERLIN, Nov. 30.—As a climax to the exposure of police graft amounting to at least $5,000,000, officials here have been forced to admit that a group of police heads have been forging and "planting" a series of Russian documents, among them a series of forged Zinoviev letters.

The "discovery" of these letters by the police, often by the very men who forged them, created a scandal of some proportion in Germany. One after another these Russian documents would come to light thru "clever detective work," and have not only helped line the pockets of the police force, but have also given the newspapers an opportunity to condemn Soviet propaganda.

Shown Gigantic Frame-up.

With the forging of the last link in the "chain of evidence" concerning Russia, the whole thing is discovered to be a gigantic frame-up.

The officials have attempted to muzzle the press and prevent discussion of the Zinoviev forgeries, by stating that by means of complete silence they hope to obtain a confession.

At the same time that the forgeries have been exposed, discoveries were made of a $10,000,000 slush fund for buying the elections for the monarchist and nationalist parties.

Locomotive Boss Takes Lead.

Documentary evidence has been published proving that Herr von Borsig, president of the Borsig Locomotive Works, one of Germany's biggest industries, was the person chiefly concerned in the raising of the slush fund.

Cleveland Winds Up Anti-Red Week Drive with Party Dance

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 30.—A successful membership meeting of the Young Workers League and the Workers Party concluded our campaign against anti-red week. The meeting wound up with a social—singing of revolutionary songs, a dance, eats and a good time for all.

This with the party, came at the end of a week of real hard work. The league and the party distributed from ten to fifteen thousand leaflets "Forward to the Soviets". Branches discussed the slogans for that week. A mass meeting was held in conjunction with the party. An enthusiastic crowd listened to Jim Hamilton, city organizer of the party who spoke on "The Fraud of National Education Week." Max Lerner, organizer of District No. 6 of the party spoke on "Proletarian Dictatorship vs. Capitalist Democracy". Herbert Benjamin, of the executive committee of the district, spoke on "Working Class Loyalty vs Capitalist Patriotism", and George Papcun, organizer of local Cleveland Young Workers League spoke on "The Fight of the Young Workers League Against Perversion of Education".

New Sacco-Vanzetti Appeal Bill Filed in Massachusetts

DEDHAM, Mass., Nov. 30.— The first of five bills of exceptions in the case of Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti have been filed in Norfolk country superior court. The exceptions were taken to procedure in the recent hearings before Judge Webster Thayer on the motion for a new trial of these men convicted in Thayer's court for murdering a paymaster and guard at South Braintree in 1921. Thayer brushed aside new evidence of importance and would not heed the discrediting of state witnesses in the new trial hearings so that these two workers who have always maintained their innocence and that prosecution was a frameup must continue their fight thru the state supreme court.

Sacco-Vanzetti Defense Committee, Box 93, Hanover St. Station, Boston, announce William G. Thompson as defense attorney. The committee solicits funds from sympathizers to save these two Italian-American workers from the electric chair.

JAPANESE LEADER WIRES KARAKHAN URGING TREATY

Felicitates Soviet Ambassador to China

By ROSTA

PEKING, Nov. 30.—The following message has been received by the Soviet Ambassador, Mr. L. M. Karakhan, from Mr. Sentaro Honda, the noted Japanese thinker and a leader of public opinion in Japan, replying to a telegram sent by Mr. Karakhan in answer to a message first sent by Mr. Sentaro Honda end of September:—

"I was praying for solution of the Russo-Japanese question at Daisekiji, our head temple at the foot of Mount Puji, when the arrival of Your Excellency's telegram was announced.

"Then I hurried home and read it with joy: I admire your spirit and rejoice that my sincerity is applied. I present my humble respects to Your Excellency with cordial wishes for continued health and welfare.

"It was indeed by inspiration that I cabled Your Excellency. I have already made sincere representations to our government. If Your Excellency will solve the long pending Russo-Japanese question, it will be a godsend, it will impart great vitality to both nations, lead to their spiritual revival and stabilize public feeling. Therefore I earnestly entreat Your Excellency to make every effort to bring this high mission to a successful conclusion. Sentaro Honda, Tokyo."

PHILADELPHIA GIVES CONCERT FOR STRIKERS

Story of Struggle Is Cheered by Audience

By R. BAKER.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 30.—Over a thousand workers jammed the Lulu Temple to hear the strikers of Paterson in the splendid concert arranged by the Workmen's Circle branches Nos. 135 and 521 for the strike relief.

The cold rain did not dampen the spirits of these workers who came to demonstrate their class solidarity to the striking silk weavers of Paterson.

Great Cheering for Strikers.

The great hall trembled to the cheering and applause when the Paterson workmen's chorus and the orchestra appeared on the stage to prove their ability to sing and play with the same spirit and vigor with which they carried on their strike for the last 16 weeks.

The strikers' chorus came late, but, the workers knew of their long nine-hour ride in the trucks from Paterson thru the cold rain and realized that this was but one of the many hardships and obstacles the strikers had to overcome in their battle to establish decent working conditions and a union in their shops.

Great was the applause that greeted H. M. Wicks, the leader of the strike and well known among the Philadelphia workers, when he appeared on the platform to tell the story of the strike and of the fighting spirit and the determination of the Paterson strikers to stay out until they win. Especially did the audience appreciate the statement of Wicks, "When the Associated Silk Workers win the strike in Paterson, they will come to Pennsylvania to organize the silk workers here."

Altho the admission was one dollar, a collection of $140 was taken in view of the fact that many in the audience are unemployed, this was a good showing.

Eat After 14 Hours.

The concert was a fine demonstration of the ability of workers to create, interpret and appreciate first-class music and as Wicks pointed out, a great contrast to the mill owners standard of music which consists of jazz.

After the concert the strikers were taken to a restaurant and given their first meal during the 14 hours since they left Paterson. Many friends and sympathizers accompanied the strikers to the restaurant and with songs and cheers helped them enjoy the meal preparatory to their long journey back to the picket lines of Paterson.

Belgian "Big Biz" Joins in Demand for Recognition of Russia

MOSCOW, Nov. 30.—"We are convinced that Belgium could conclude numerous deals with Russia and we should be happy if we could in any way contribute to the restoration of mutual relations between the two countries," is the opinion and wish expressed in a letter received by the north western regional chamber of commerce, Leningrad, from a number of prominent Belgian business men, headed by the editor of the Lloyd Commercial, the biggest trade and industrial journal, published at Brussels. The authors of the letter state that this journal is launching an energetic propaganda for the re-establishment of the interrupted relations between Belgium and Soviet Russia. In conclusion, they ask for a list of Soviet firms which could carry on trade with Belgium.

EMPLOYERS BOAST OF PROSPERITY; WORKERS ARE GIVEN PAY CUTS

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—American railroads continue their record-breaking business, it was indicated today by a statement from the American Railway Association showing that 1,015,704 cars were loaded with revenue freight in the week ended November 15.

It is the tenth week this year in which freight loadings have totalled in excess of a million cars. Only one commodity showed a falling off. This was ore and ore products, and the loss was due to seasonal decline.

The Southern Pacific has refused to grant an 8 per cent increase to engineers.

BOSSES LOCK OUT 4000 COAL MINERS IN FERNIE, B. C.

Act Means the Fiercest Privation This Winter

FERNIE, B. C., Nov. 30.—The Crow's Nest Pass Coal Co has issued orders closing down the mines here and locking out the workers. The company's announcement cites failure to retrieve sufficient business to continue operation, but the shutdown is merely a method of lockout handled in the kidglove manner.

The winter will bring destitution to many Fernie miners and their families. Preceding the lockout by the company, the failure of the Home Bank of Canada, which had a branch at Fernie and in which many of the Fernie miners lost their savings, was a severe blow. The closing down means complete ruin to many workers in these parts.

Fernie is the largest camp in District 18, having about 4,000 miners. In the past the Fernie miners have been noted for their militancy and the ready support they have extended to other workers in their struggles.

The lockout shows to what an extent the operators can go now that the district is led by creatures of John L. Lewis who signed an agreement succeeding a reduction of $1.17 a day, after a seven month strike, in spite of the opposition of the rank and file.

Soviets' Constant Advance is Shown in Various Fields

(By Rosta)

MOSCOW, Nov. 30.—It is reported from Teheran that a new Soviet-Persian company for automobile transport has been founded under the title of "Autotran." Passenger and goods traffic is to be carried on by motor cars in northern Persia.

MOSCOW, Nov. 30.—The Academy of Science, Leningrad, has detailed a learned member of the academy to Mongolia, in the district of Urga, to investigate the deposits of precious stones which are said to exist there.

VLADIVOSTOK, Nov. 30. — The export of lumber from Vladivostok is steadily on the increase, which is partly due to the exceptional interest for lumber resources in the maritime area displayed by foreign industrialists. Most of the wood materials exported from Vladivostok were destined for Japan: in 1922, 12,071,000 cubic feet; in 1923, $15,200,000 cubic feet, and in 1924 the export will reach 16,500,000 cubic feet.

DELAY MEANS DECAY

PAYS $2,000 FOR ONE HOUR'S RIDE TO CATCH TRAIN

Immigration Chairman Rushes to Montreal

VANCOUVER, B. C., Nov. 30.—Albert Johnson, republican, paid $2,000 for an hour's ride in a taxi in order that he might catch a train for Montreal.

Johnson had hired a taxi for himself and his daughter to come from Seattle to Vancouver to connect with a train for Montreal. Canadian customs officials refused to allow the cab to proceed without a bond. That would have meant several hours' delay. So Johnson asked the price of the car, forked over the $2,000 and went on his way.

Why the Great Rush?

Johnson's mission was not known. However, in view of the fact that the congressman is chairman of the immigration committee, that he has gotten thru congress the bill which keeps all but the most docile wage slaves from the country, and that he is nursing another scheme whereby the "undesirable foreigners" can be finger-printed, measured, quizzed, stamped and classified in order that the department may get its noose around the right neck at a moment's notice—in view of all this, it is more than possible that Johnson, with the help of one of the D. of J. sleuths, was hot on the trail of finger-prints in the snow.

Who Pays for the Trip?

As for the dough and where it came from—Johnson used to be news editor of the Washington Post, which made a name for itself as the absolutely independent organ of Daugherty, Burns, Jess Smith and Jake Hamon, who kept Washington politics well oiled and their own palms well greased with government gasoline during the reign of the late Harding.

Chinese Union Men Disarm Fascisti, Shoot Two as Lesson

CANTON, Nov. 30.—The first session was held on Oct. 22 of the council of forty representatives of all layers of the people, convoked by the Sun Yat Sen government to discuss questions connected with the disarming of the Fascist "tigers," ensuring order and peace in the city, lifting heavy taxation, carrying into life local self-governments, and so forth.

Of the forty members of the council, four are representatives of trade unions, four, of the merchants, and the rest, of various associations, universities, public organizations, etc. The main object of the council is to promote union between the government and the people.

The papers report that Ahoytsen and Wu Kit-nan, who held high posts on the "tigers'" side, have been apprehended and immediately shot. All Fatshan the "tigers" are being disarmed, their arms are confiscated. About 4,000 men have been disarmed up to the present.

Shows Up Capitalist Propaganda Against Child Labor Regulation

NEW YORK, Nov. 30.—State Senator Benjamin Antin, chairman New York state child welfare commission, speaking to students of Wadleigh high, denounced propaganda being circulated by representatives of manufacturers' associations and chambers of commerce against the federal child labor amendment. Antin will introduce the resolution for ratification of the amendment in the coming session of the legislature, which is expected to pass it. Antin pointed out to the students that the amendment was not a law and did not deal with education but only gave congress the same opportunity states have to regulate the labor of children by statute.

Bookbinders Want 24c An Hour.

LEIPSIG, Germany.—The bookbinders of 50 Leipsic shops, over 3,800 men and women, are striking for one mark (24c) per hour and a 46-hour week. The big publishing houses recently ordered the 9-hour day without overtime pay, and without any raise in wages. The binders are well organized.

DUBLIN THEATRE EMPLOYES PICKET PICTURE HOUSES

Huge Crowds Gather to Watch Scene

DUBLIN, Nov. 30.—The division in the Irish Trade Union movement was strikingly emphasized here last night when pickets were posted before the entrances to motion picture theaters by the Workers' Union of Ireland James Larkin's organization, a rival of the Irish Transport and General Workers' Union from which Larkin was recently expelled.

A Divided Front.

The motion picture operators and other theater employes were organized in the Transport. Since the new union was started a bitter fight has been waged between the two unions for the adherence of those workers. Some of them joined the Workers' Union, while the remainder stayed with the Transport. The present strike finds the theatrical employes in two opposing camps.

Enormous crowds gathered at the theater entrances. The police tried to stop the pickets, but the latter refused to obey the police order. It was late at night when the police succeeded in clearing the streets of the huge crowds that gathered to watch the excitement. At Sackville and Brunswick streets, the police were unable to cope with the crowds, and fired their revolvers in the air.

Yellow Cab Trust Faced with Strike At Toledo, Ohio

TOLEDO, Ohio, Nov. 30.—The employes of the Yellow Cab company went on strike following the discharge of five employes who were protesting against a wage cut of 20 per cent. The men are striking against the reduction in pay and also for the re-instatement of the five men who were fired as "agitators."

The Yellow Cab company hauled the scabs in the railway shopmen's strike in Toledo. The striking employes are joining the union.

The Brown and White Cab company has been declared unfair to organized labor. John Juniliven of the Central Labor Union declares the men in this union will also be called out on strike.

Paterson Strikers Appeal Cases in Free Speech Fight

PATERSON, N. J., Nov. 30.— Two members of Associated Silk Workers' Union, Ivo Rista and Carlo Reverta, are appealing their case from Recorder Munson Force's sentence of 5 days in jail for alleged disorderly conduct. Defense counsel argues that since the men were arrested in a free speech demonstration at City Hall during the recent strike the charge against them should have been unlawful assembly, an indictable offense which would not have brought the union men before the recorder. Judge Joseph Delaney in common pleas court reserves decision in the appeal. Ten other union workers arrested at the same time have cases pending the outcome of the appeal.

Legion Boosts Pershing for Office.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 30.—Gen. Pershing is boomed by the American Legion element as a candidate to succeed John Weeks as secretary of war in the new cabinet. Pershing has returned from one of his frequent trips to Europe, and has a room set aside for his use in the war department despite the fact that he is on the retired list. He is announced as going to South America as head of a military mission to assist in celebrating a Latin-American revolutionary battle of a century ago. This keeps him in the newspapers, and has a tendency to gloss over his Philippine record and his failure to capture Pancho Villa in Mexico after his much dramatized crossing of the Rio Grande.

Pershing in the cabinet would be a Fascist idol second only to Dawes.

TOIL 12-HOUR DAY IN THE SUGAR FACTORIES OF GREEN BAY, WIS.

GREEN BAY, Wis., Nov. 30.—Workers in the Green Bay factory of the Menominee River Sugar Beet Co. have to work in shifts of 12 hours each, with average wages of 35c to 37½c an hour, or $4.50 for 12 hours. Many of the workers are Mexicans brought up from the south by jobberders who collect a fee for each Mexican furnished. The plant is non-union.

DEFENSE REPORTS CASES HANDLED

portation cases, some of them involving action on simple deportation warrants, and others carrying with them prosecution under the criminal law.

Deportation Cases

A considerable number of deportation cases have come up, most of them growing out of the brutal "Red Raids" conducted under the agents of former attorney general and presidential aspirant, A. Mitchell Palmer, in the early part of 1920. These men are all out on bail and anxious to get a disposition of their cases. In practically every instance, the sole charge against them was membership in the Communist or Communist Labor Party.

From the new deportation cases that have come up, and which the Labor Defense Council is now defending, it appears that the United States government has not given up its practice of forcibly deporting "undesirable aliens" from this country and is, indeed, carrying out its old policy with extreme callousness, not hesitating to seperate husband and wife, and father and children. These cases are the Halonen case, the Vajtauer case, the Kush case and the Schedel case.

Schadel was arrested only about two weeks ago. He had been deported to Germany in 1920 and had just made his way back here to try to get in touch with his wife and four small children, all of whom had undergone extreme privation while he was away, the wife actually going insane for a while. Schedel's deportation is now demanded. Moreover, he is being prosecuted under the law making it a felony for any deportee to return to this country, and faces a possible four-year term in prison before re-deportation to Germany. In our opinion, the Schedel case offers a good opportunity for a general anti-deportation campaign which should have as its slogan the writing out of law of the deportation orders against the other Communists now out on bail.

Farrell Cases.

Late in January, 1924, the police of Farrel, Pa. raided the local headquarters of the South Slavic Branch of the Workers Party and confiscated all literature found there, which consisted of newspapers, books and pamphlets, very mild non-radical. A few days later the homes of 13 workers were raided, with search warrants calling for their arrest on a charge of sedition against the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania. The police were unable to locate all of the 13 for whom they had warrants, but the following Slavic workers were arrested:

Tony Kovacovich, Andy Kovacovich, Andy Dugan, John Radlas, Tony Marich, John Sarich.

Two of the defendants, Andy and Tony Kovacovich, have been tried and found guilty by a jury of Mercer County farmers. Attorney I. E. Ferguson, of Chicago, went before Judge McLaughey, of Mercer, Pa., in the early part of September, to argue for a new trial for Tony Kovacovich. All of the other Farrell cases are being held in abeyance until the decision in this case is made public. The defendants are all steel workers; the only evidence of any importance against them is of a "gang" nature, having all the earmarks of frame-up. The point at issue is whether Tony Kovacovich did or did not make an "illegal speech" calling for the overthrow of the government, etc., in violation of the Pennsylvania sedition law—and also whether that sedition law is constitutional. The six defendants in the Farrell cases are out on bail.

Pittsburgh Cases.

On April 27, 1923, a squad of federal D. of J. agents, state policemen and county detectives descended upon the headquarters of the Workers Party in Pittsburgh, ransacking the office, confiscating checks and creating general disturbance. As a result of this raid and another which took place on the following night, nine men were arrested. They are as follows: Alex Andor Voytik, John Kowalski, John Urban, Morris Pasternack, Max Jenkins, Ed. J. Horacek, Fred Merrick, A. Rostrom, national secretary of the American Ido Society, a victim of police ignorance. (The police found Ido literature in Rostrom's residence and thought it something seditious.) George Katsiolis, barber by trade, native of Greece, was passing through Pittsburgh and was unfortunate to be at the Labor Lyceum while the raid was in progress.

All were indicted on the charge of sedition and are now out on bail. There have been repeated delays in the matter of bringing them to trial and it is apparent that there is no real evidence of any kind against them, but that the raids were a part of the usual May Day plot "discoveries" of the police. The Labor Defense Council is anxious to get these cases wiped out so that the indicted men can be definitely freed and the bail money released.

"Red Flag" Case Again

Another "Red Flag" prosecution is coming up, as indicated by the recent arrests. A worker by the name of Lillin, member of the Workers Party, Hungarian branch of Philadelphia, was arrested Nov. 3 in that city for distributing Workers Party campaign literature. He is held under a $1,000 bail in a charge of distributing seditious literature. The hearing is set for next week. Lillin has been living in this country for three years and has his first citizenship papers.

The Labor Defense Council is also interested in the case of John Bukss, arrested about a year and a half ago while riding on a street car through Wheeling, West Va., for distributing the party program. He was tried and found guilty under the "Red Flag" (criminal syndicalist) law of West Va., after the jury had been out five minutes, without even having read the program. The case was appealed to the circuit court but was ruled out of order. Appeal has now been asked of the supreme court of the state.

Imperialist Snobs in Pretty Pickle Over Soviet Envoy

PEKING, Nov. 30.—It is well known that the unfriendly attitude of the members of the Peking diplomatic body towards the Soviet embassy was made evident in the matter of the transfer of the former Russian legation. Everything was done in that question to put in relief this unfriendliness towards the Soviet government.

Now these diplomatists have opened a new page, also hostile to the government of the Soviet Union by trying all sorts of means to prevent the Soviet ambassador from entering the diplomatic body. Indeed, altho there are no reasons for this, the Peking diplomats have decided not to have relations with Ambassador Karakhan or at any rate to postpone as far as possible the moment when Karakhan will sit with them as their equal and a member of the diplomatic body.

It will be worth seeing how they are going to extricate themselves from the uses, habits and practice which they have themselves established.

Strike Settled in Three Hours.

BOSTON, Nov. — Milkwagon drivers settled their strike for the restoration of the $38 wage scale within three hours from calling it. Milk companies wanted to install a commission payment scheme. Fred M. Knight of state board of conciliation and arbitration took up the case at once and a compromise settlement which is supposed to bring the weekly wage to $38 by combining a minimum scale and commission was adopted.

CAPPER'S BLOC AGAIN WAGS ITS FINGER AT CAL

Asks Cal for Few Paper Reforms

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30.—To block or not to block, the action of the so-called farmer bloc in the senate will be one of the problems confronting President Coolidge during the "lame duck" term of congress.

The president is known to have a decided aversion to blocs of any kind that do not meekly accept what his masters, the big capitalists condescend to hand them. Blocs savor unpleasantly of class grouping and create a bad impression in a country where the fiction that there are no classes is so sedulously cultivated.

Perhaps a Dirty Farmer,

Senator Capper of Kansas, not a "dirt" farmer by any means, but a full fledged millionaire, declared that the western senators would combine to support a program of legislation to place the American farmers on their financial feet."

What they are after is: (1) Government aid for co-operative marketing; (2) easier credits for the live stock industry; (3) lower freight rates on farm products. A resolution declaring agriculture to be a "basic industry" will be re-enacted declared Capper, so that agricultural products will be given a lower rate.

Mongolia Stands With Soviet Power Against Intervention

MOSCOW, November 30.—If the civil war in China be prolonged it is bound to seriously affect the northern provinces and jeopardise trade between outer Mongolia and China, thus provoking a crisis in the selling market of Mongolian raw materials inasmuch as they are exported to China, is the opinion of Mr. Gursid, Mongolian charge d'affaires at Moscow, expressed in an interview with Soviet journalists.

To the question as to the views held by Mongolian statesmen on the intervention of foreign powers in Chinese affairs and on its possible effects on Mongolian affairs, Mr. Gursid remarked that the foreign powers intervened in China with the sole purpose of consolidating their old bases and positions in China and conquering new ones. Such bases and positions they need not only as such, but also for further invasion of Central Asia—which will be a direct menace to a number of countries and, first of all, to Mongolia.

Consequently, concluded the Mongolian diplomat, a blow dealt by the imperialistic powers against any one of the oriental countries—in this case, China—will be, directly or indirectly, a blow at all the oriental countries.

It is reported from Urga that out of the newly elected members of the central committee of the Mongolian people's party, six belong to the left wing, whose sympathies go to the Third (Communist) International and who stand for the closest relations with the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics.

It is believed in competent quarters at Urga that the composition of the new central committee of the people's party is bound to be reflected on the future activities of the Mongolian government.

Wage Cut Helps Organization Work.

WOONSOCKET, R. I., Nov. 30. — Three new locals of the United Textile Workers' Union are in operation in the Globe, Social and Nourse mills of the Manville-Jenckes cotton company, the $39,000,000 concern which cut wages 10 per cent before election. The union started the organization drive when the cut was announced and declares the former wages must be restored.

Fascism's Only Enemy

Nothing shows clearer the breakdown of Italian fascism than the resignation of General Balbo, commander-in-chief of the fascist militia, following the publication of a letter written by him to the head of the fascist organization in Bologna. The letter itself confirms everything its bitterest enemies, the Communists, have said of fascist methods and reveals in an official communication the coldblooded bestiality of the Mussolini regime.

The letter written by the deposed general was inspired by the acquittal by a jury of three Communists charged with killing some fascisti. The acquittal itself is ample evidence of the weakness of fascism's grip on the masses.

The letter says in part:

As for those Communists, you had better explain to them that a change of air would do their health good and that they had better remove themselves to another province. If they insist on remaining, you had better beat them up—without exaggeration, but systematically—till they make up their minds. Show this part of my letter to the prefect of Bologna and say to him in my name that I have plenty of evidence to justify my demand not to allow such desperados to reside in my city or province. The police would do well to persecute them by detaining them at headquarters at least once a week, and it would be well if the prefect were to let the king's prosecutor understand that we do not wish any lawsuits as a result of our beatings up (which must be performed in the grand style).

When Gary and Dawes endorse the Mussolini methods we can understand now exactly what they have in mind. Note that it is the Communists who come in for these pleasant attentions—they and the workers they organize and inspire are the only force that fascism fears.

That this communication had the sanction of Mussolini is shown by the sentence with which the murderous Balbo concluded his letter: "If I write you from Rome it is because I know what I am saying."

Let us get this clear: The American fascist Dawes, the fascist American Legion which supported him for vice-president, the Gompers machine which has a united front with the legion and which is preparing to absorb the Amsterdam International to smooth the road for the Dawes plan in Europe, are all of one piece. They all fight the Communist Party just as do the Italian fascisti.

The only reason that their methods differ in degree is because the class struggle in America is not yet as intense as it is in Italy.

The Battleship Blues

In an editorial entitled "The Naive Yellow Press," the Milwaukee Leader, organ of the socialist party, boldly accuses Wall Street of betraying the American nation.

The proof it addues to support its statement is interesting for more than one reason. This proof consists in the statement that the betrayal was accomplished by the scrapping of the battleship Washington.

The Leader says.

The enemy who sold the nation lives in Wall Street and upholds the banner of 100 per cent Americanism. The interests of the American nation were betrayed for the simple reason that the House of Morgan and its steel trust directors ruled the Washington conference with a single eye to their private profit.

It pays the steel trust and Morgan's finance sharps to have the American taxpayers' money thrown into the sea or into the bottomless European pit. All the wanton waste of ship scrapping, munition wasting, blasting and bombing means more fat contracts for the interlocking looters. That's the simple secret of the Washington conference. There is no need to look for any other.

The thing that irks the Leader apparently is the fact that battleships, munitions and the taxpayers' money are wasted instead of being used in a good old-fashioned war like we used to have in 1914-18. The Leader is against this kind of inefficient militarism.

It wants the workers murdered by the imperialists with the smallest possible expenditure of the taxpayers' money in the best Hearstian style and it feels even an old battleship might be useful.

Down with this sinful extravagance, says the Leader, or the taxpayers will become so disgusted that they will not fight for the nation any more. The prospect appalls the Leader.

This is the way to socialism—via the socialist party.

Austin Chamberlain, tory successor to Ramsay MacDonald in the British foreign office, has used the labor leader's name frequently in his correspondence with the Soviet envoy Rakovsky over the forged "Zinoviev" note. Chamberlain cannot find more severe terms to use against the Workers' Republic than those used by the hypocritical yellow socialist MacDonald.

One Traitor to Another

It would be hard to find a more studied example of hypocrisy than the speech of Samuel Gompers on the occasion of the presentation of a watch to his pal in the lucrative profession of betraying the working class, "Brother" Grassman, fraternal delegate from the Dawes plan devotees of the German unions to the American Federation of Labor convention.

Our space is valuable but we willingly spare sufficient to give to our readers the world's finest specimen of congratulation from one traitor to another for betrayal successfully carrired out. Here it is. We have emphasized some of the finer nuances of Gompersian oratory that their exquisite hypocrisy may not escape the reader:

I wish, Brother Grassman, that I could express myself in your language fully and freely the words that well up in my soul to convey to you and thru you to the great rank and file of the toiling masses of the democratically inclined people of Germany our feelings.

Believe me when I say that I am thoroly convinced that I interpret the sentiments of 100 per cent of the great rank and file of the men and women of the labor movement of America when I say that you are heartily welcome among us. The people of our respective countries were not at war with each other of their own volition. TO US THERE WAS NO OTHER COURSE OPEN THAN THE ONE WE ASSUMED IN THAT TITANIC STRUGGLE. CONDITIONS IN YOUR COUNTRY WERE CONSIDERABLY DIFFERENT FROM THOSE PREVAILING IN OURS. FORCE AND POWER WERE EXERCISED OVER YOUR PEOPLE. WITH US IT WAS OUR OWN VOLUNTARY ACT. We feel sure now that had the voice of German labor been given the opportunity of being fully heard the war would never have occurred. But be that as it may, with us, I repeat, the war is over and we want the democratic peoples of all the nations of the earth to strive in a common cause of justice, freedom, democracy and humanity.

As a token of the affection which the delegates to this convention and those they have the honor to represent feel, we ask that you accept at their hands and my hands this testimonial of our binding affection and fraternity, to wish for you, the German toilers and the German people, and the German republic, your place in the world with every other democratic, peace-loving and liberty-loving people. Accept, sir, not only this splendid watch and chain as that testimonial, but my right hand which goes with it and the hope for your return home in happiness and WITH GREATER JOY AND FUTURE FOR THE GREAT MASS OF THE PEOPLE OF GERMANY.

"The greater joy and future for the great mass of the people of Germany" is to come via the Dawes plan aimed at their enslavement and of which both Gompers and Grassman approve.

At this point we began to vomit violently.

Blacklisting in Northwestern Shops

Shopcraft workers in the Northwestern shops in Chicago are feeling the effects of a drive made by the company that is planned to weaken the unions by driving out the most militant workers from the shops.

The trouble started with the protest of members of the Painters' Union against the employment of a scab as foreman, and now the company retaliates by serving notice upon the most active workers that their seniority rights are no longer recognized and that they are on the discharge list.

That this is part of the preparation for a new open shop drive as soon as unemployment becomes more critical, there can be little doubt. The workers in the Northwestern shops must prepare to meet this offensive without delay.

Their most effective weapon is the shop committee, taking in all workers in the shop, organized and unorganized, without regard to craft distinction, electing its spokesmen and fighting the railway bosses every day right on the job—where attacks are first felt, and where the daily struggles of the workers can be fought on lines easily understood by all. It strengthens the unions by enlisting the unorganized workers.

If the workers in the Northwestern shops will organize their shops on this basis at once they can forge a weapon of offense and defense that will make the bosses think twice before they undertake a wholesale breakdown of wages and working conditions.

Communist workers in the Northwestern shops must take the lead in the organization of shop committees.

There are rumors of another counter-revolution in Mexico, tho all those mentioned as its instigators strenuously deny the honor of participating in it. One thing is certain, if it does break out, Gompers will be either in Washington or New York, the American labor fakers will be in their favorite crap and pool parlors, but the Mexican Communists who helped to defeat the fascisti in the last counter-revolution, will be active in the next, on the side of the workers and peasants.

The December issue of the The Workers Monthly is off the press. The November issue was good. This one is still better. A leading article by William Z. Foster on the significance of the elections should be read carefully by every class conscious worker.

Benito Mussolini admits the failure of the fascist dictatorship, but the American capitalist press has not given much publicity to the historic speech. Had Zinoviev made the confession that the proletarian distatorship was up against a stone wall, would they be so silent?

Have you purchased your DAILY WORKER insurance policy yet? This should be your first order of business. And after you do your first duty do your next by talking somebody else into helping to insure The DAILY WORKER for 1925.

TWO THOUSAND SILK WEAVERS ARE STILL OUT

Hard-Boiled Employer Surrenders to Union

(By The Federated Press)

PATERSON, N. J., Nov. 30.—More than five thousand broad silk weavers are back in settled shops and enjoying the two-loom system and increases in wages as the result of the long struggle that began last summer. Two thousand are still on strike, supported in part by their fellow unionists, while their employers are debating whether they shall yield to the union demands.

One of the bosses who recently conceded the two loom system and a wage increase is Otto A. Haenichen, a hard boiled anti-unionist, who got out an injunction against the Associated Silk Workers and gave the Federated Press an interview praising the child labor system which gives some competitive silk states an advantage over Paterson. Haenichen at that time announced himself the spokesman for the mysterious Broadsilk Manufacturers' Association, an under cover employers' organization which concealed the list of its officers and was solely concerned with the war on union labor.

Court cases include those of 107 strike pickets who are appealing fines.

Aggressive picketing is still going on against the die hard bosses. The day this is being written a woman picket was roughed up by two silk employers, of the Imperial Silk and S. J. Aaronson companies. When she refused to take an injunction paper they held out to her, the men seized her and tried to force it down her clothing. Court action will be taken against the employers.

Under Union Conditions.

One hundred and twenty-five shops are now working under full union conditions, with the two loom system and wage increases ranging from ten to forty percent. Another fifteen shops are back on an unofficial settlement basis, the bosses conceding certain demands but not officially recognizing the union. Such employers are warned by the union that when organization is completed in those shops they must sign the regular agreements.

Renewal of the fight against twenty-five of the smaller employers who have quietly reduced piece work rates after settlement is likely. About 600 workers are affected. A threat of a new general strike prevented more bosses from following their lead and the union is serving notice on the recalcitrants that the agreement must be kept or their shops would be again paralyzed.

MUSIC -:- By Alfred V. Frankenstein

"The Divine Poem," the third symphony of Alexander Scriabin, was played on the seventh program of the Chicago Symphony orchestra at Orchestra Hall last Friday and Saturday. Scriabin in his symphonies attempts to express philosophic ideas in tone and almost succeeds. The titles of the movements of "The Divine Poem" are "Strife," "Sensuous Pleasures," and "Divine Activity." The kick in hearing the symphony is not in appreciating the philosophy of the music, but in the hearing of the music itself. It is all melodic, and the melody is of vast power and scope. The interpretative directions thruout the score are delightful. Scriabin used large, mouth-filling French words such as "mysterieux, romantique, legendaire," and "doux, dimpide," and again "haletant alle," (breathlessly winged.)

A most unusual man, this Alexander Scriabin. Toward the end of his life he conceived of an art combining sound, light and smell in one whole. His color organ has recently been achieved, but an instrument for projecting odors arranged in a scale and played from notation is yet a long way off.

Another Russian work, the piano concerto of Nicholas Medtner, played here for the first time by its composer, came before the symphony. It is probably the dullest, most stupid long-winded piano concerto ever played in Orchestra Hall. It is worse than the Dohanyi concert and that is saying the utmost in condemnation.

The well known overture to the opera "The Secret of Suzanne," by Wolf-Ferrari, and the bitter known E flat or "Clarinet" symphony of Mozart, opened the program.

Bosses Plant Their O'Banions in Porto Rican Polling Places

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 30.—Wholesale intimidation, driving of voters from the polling places, and even the locking up of working class voters so that they might not exercise their franchise, are reported by Santiago Iglesias, socialist senator and head of the labor movement of Porto Rico, as characterizing the election in the island on Nov. 4.

He presents a long series of telegrams of protest sent from towns thruout Porto Rico to Gov. Towner, showing that the unionist-republican alliance rode rough-shod over the socialists, violating most of the election laws and stealing the election by main force. Watchers for the socialists were thrown out of poling places, ballots cast by plantation laborers were opened by the judges in order to identify them, and riots were started by election judges when complaints were voiced.

Room Wanted.

Young man wants a room in a private family, preferably on the West Side. Answer M. S. N. in care of THE DAILY WORKER.

From Newark, N. J., to Wood River, Ill.

CLASS conscious workers who want to send good cheer to class war prisoners in jail by sending money to pay for subscriptions our publications, are not confined to one particular place.

From Newark, N. J., Michael Bakosh, a rebel who does not forget his comrades, writes us:

Dear Editor:

I have seen in the DAILY WORKER that you want to send your publications to our imprisoned comrades. The same evening I went to a Slovak workers' home at 52 West street in Newark. I found a group of young girls and men. I decided to take up a collection, something that I never tried before, but it took only a little courage and time. I found a young man by name of John Burko, who helped me to collect. He took the slip into the hall where they had the meeting and inside of fifteen minutes he returned with $2.10 he collected. I collected $1.25. I wish that others would help in the same way.

Fraternally,

MICHAEL BAKOSH.

From Wood River, Ill., a little town that would never be heard of, if it were not because a class conscious worker lives there. J. Rubin sends us a sub for the Workers Monthly for six months. But with this pleasure for himself, he remembers class war victims and adds all he can spare—$1.75 additional to pay for a subscription to some political prisoner.

The labor movement is the richer for the fact that such loyal comrades as these contributors of Newark and Wood River are in it.

CUTS MILLION OFF FRENCH LOAN TO HELP MORGAN

Jusserand and Mellon Thimblerig U. S.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 30.—The French ambassador, Jules Jusserand, has begun informal and preliminary discussion with Andrew Mellon, secretary of the United States treasury, looking to the funding of the French debt, originally a borrowed sum of $3,340,606,376, to which unpaid and accumulated interest has added $750,000,000.

France has long been hedging on paying anything to the United States, while at the same time furnishing Poland, Czecho-Slovakia, Roumania, and numerous white guard Russian "governments" with unlimited funds wherewith to war against Soviet Russia.

Attacks Russia—Lets France Go.

The United States government, which has raised no end of a hullabaloo because the Soviet government refused to pay the international bankers the loans made by the czar to crush the Russian revolution of 1906, has been as meek and mild as a school girl with her lover, when France, the leading anti-Bolshevik country of Europe, was squandering billions of francs on white guard satraps while telling the United States that it suspected too much.

Two years ago, M. Parmentier, an agent of the French treasury, visited America to discuss terms of settlement, but left after hinting that Uncle Sam was "too harsh" when it wanted both the interest and the principal to be "recognized" even if not paid.

Morgan's Terrible Men.

Now that J. P. Morgan has made his second loan to France and is possessed of a mortgage on the income of the French government, Coolidge and Mellon are apparently given orders to see that Morgan's private loans are strengthened by weakening the loan made by the government.

This is seen in the defensive camouflage put out by Washington officials who talk reverently about France being "compelled" to pay every cent. But the fact is that at least the nearly $1,000,000,000 of interest is already agreed to be cancelled, and the principal of three billion as above noted, is "funded," which means put off indefinitely so far as any payment is concerned.

SUGAR TRUST WANTS TO CLOSE STREETS IN BLOW AT THE WORKERS

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Nov. 30.—Brooklyn citizens are protesting against the proposed closing of three streets to permit the American Sugar Refining company to build a new factory. Alderman J. W. Sullivan headed a delegation of citizens at the court hearing who declared the bottling up of the three streets would cut off many tenements and shut off air from the East river.

DAWES PLAN FAILS IN GERMANY

Communist Exposes Tory Trick

AS WE SEE IT
By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THE Chicago Daily News correspondent in Russia recently sent out a big yarn about persecution of non-Communists in Russia. One of the sad facts related by this journalist, was that a devoted admirer of Patriarch Tikhon, kissed the ground on which that bewhiskered prodigy of superstition trod, and for this offense was thrown into prison. One of the luxuries that he most missed was the privilege of licking the ground. We do not know whether such a man was ever imprisoned or not, but we are inclined to believe that the health department of any American city, would have put him in a straight jacket. The moron was lucky that he did not catch the foot and mouth disease.

A CHRISTLY pose is not the best device to escape suspicion nowadays, as Anton Lang, the famous passion player of Oberammergau, Bavaria, may readily admit. Lang has portrayed the role Jesus Christ in the play for many years. He is now under suspicion of being a grafter. The trouble began when the players were induced to come to the United States by wealthy Americans, and the financial side of the venture was underwritten by thirty men who put up $1,000 dollars each.

THIS Passion Play and the revenue therefrom appears to be a considerable part of the visible means of support of the Oberammergau villagers, so they organized to get what they could out of the American tour. What they got was so little that they got sore and sent an investigator to the States. He learned that the players had made at least one hundred thousand dollars on their trip, the they only handed over a paltry ten thousand to the villagers. Oh, Jesus, how many robberies are committed in Thy name!

THE New York Times comes to the defense of British rule in the Sudan. Och's journal tries to take the rough edge off Britain's brutal ultimatum to Egypt. It says that England was only making a gesture to impress the "oriental mind" which is awed for a gesture of force. These gestures have proven that given equality of bayonets and other weapons of war, gestures have no terror for it. Japan is just as "oriental" as Egypt, but force has no more terrors for them than it has for any other race.

ENGLAND, says the Times, encourages progress towards self government in its colonies. What brazen lying! Britain is no exception to any other imperialist power and has always resisted any efforts on the part of its exploited colonial peoples to win their freedom. The Times says more or less bluntly that the British are interested in Palestine because that country is regarded as a first line of defense against invasion from the East. There is great unrest thruout the Mohammedan world today and Spain's defeat in Morocco has awakened the spirit of revolt in the Near East. The Times does not think the league of nations should embarrass England by taking up the question raised by the Egyptian parliament. Birds of a feather stick together, when there is danger that their victims may unite against them.

GRAND Duke Cyril, who now exists in Paris, was so offended by the action of France in recognizing the Soviet government, that he threatened to leave the country which he had so long honored with his presence and go to the United States which so far had the kind of a secretary of state who is the ideal of the Grand Duke. But trouble was in store for Cyril. The French and American authorities refused to vise his passport, not on the ground that he is too reactionary, but simply because there is too much competition for Czar Nicholas' grave. Cyril will have to do the best he can now in Paris, and put on blinkers whenever he passes the Soviet embassy where the red flag flies proudly. It is reported that the American aristocrats in Paris are getting a kick out of life by keeping Grand Duke Nicholas in hot dogs and coffee.

ZINOVIEV GIVES FINAL KICK TO STUPID FORGERY

Outlines Real Tasks of British Communists

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW (By Mail.)—Branding as a stupid forgery the now famous letter which the British tories injected into the closing days of the election campaign, Gregory Zinoviev, chairman of the executive committee of the Communist International, issued a statement in which he exposes the objects of the British ruling class in framing such a plot and expresses astonishment that Ramsay MacDonald, the so-called labor premier, should give his sanction to the publication of a White Guardist concoction.

Task Is in Workshops.

Zinoviev ridicules the suggestion that the British Communist Party is now concerned with perfecting "military sections" and training leaders of its "Red Army."

The most important task of the British Communists just now is winning over the majority of the workers to the idea of the Communist International thru work in the trade unions and the workshops.

It would not be a matter of surprise if the German ruling class tried a similar stunt in that country before the coming elections, declared Zinoviev. These fake letters come in very handy to bourgeois statesmen, like the American, Charles Evans Hughes, when they are hard put to defend their plots against the Workers' Republic.

Here Is Zinoviev's Letter.

The declaration of Comrade Gregory Zinoviev, chairman of the Communist International, on the alleged "Red plot," is in full as follows:

The letter of Sept. 15, 1924, which has been attributed to me is from the first to the last word a forgery. Let us first take the heading. The organization of which I am the president, never describes itself officially as the "Executive Committee of the Third Communist International;" the official name is "Executive Committee of the Communist International." Equally incorrect is the signature: "The chairman of the presidium." The forger has shown himself to be very stupid in his choice of the date. On the 15th of September 1924 I was taking a holiday in Kislovodsk and therefore could not have signed any official letter.

Forgery Is Clumsy.

All these things are of course trifles. The clumsiness of the forgery can best be seen by examination of the contents of the "document."

Wm. Z. Foster, secretary treasurer of the T. U. E. L. will be present at this meeting to give a general outline of the T. U. E. L. program and some specific examples of the application of the program in various industries of the country in which he has worked. Foster's talk will be preceded by reports by industrial organizers in such industries where a strong T. U. E. L. group is functioning. All members and sympathizers of the Trade Union Educational League are urged to be present.

LESS BREAD FOR WORKERS

PORTLAND, Me., Nov. 25.—Textile employes in this state were summarily notified today that their wages had received a ten per cent cut. The number of employes affected is 13,000. The latest wage decrease suffered by the workers was in 1923, when the bosses slashed their standard of living to the tune of 12½ per cent. This means a reduction of 22½ per cent in a little over one year.

REVAL WORKERS RISE IN ARMED FIGHT FOR POWER

Esthonian White Guard Gets Hot Protests

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, England, Dec. 1.—Reports as yet unconfirmed from Reval, Esthonia, state that following the sentencing by court martial of 138 leading members of the Esthonian Communist Party and the execution of a Communist member of parliament by the white guard army, a Communist uprising has occurred in which many police were killed and a government minister shot.

Martial Law Rules.

The reports indicate that the Communists occupied the railway station, the telegraph and telephone offices and government buildings. The heaviest fighting was at the railroad station. Presumably an attempt was made to release the imprisoned Communists.

Wants to Divert Attention.

So severe is the undercurrent of resentment among Esthonian workers against the murder of a Communist member of parliament, the trial of others by the white guard army and the sentencing of 138 leading Communists to terms ranging from five years to life, that the Esthonian government is trying to divert attention by raising the question with Soviet Russia as to why it permits the tremendous demonstrations in Russia which have aroused the people of Esthonia.

Asks Soviets to Suppress Workers.

Esthonia is sending a note to Moscow, wanting to know why the Soviet covernment permits workers who are employed in Soviet offices, etc., to join in and lead the immense demonstrations held in front of the Esthonian embassy in Moscow. Esthonia thinks that the Soviet government should suppress the Communist international and forbid workers in Soviet employment from expressing their antagonism toward the murderers of Communist workers in Esthonia.

Gigantic Demonstrations Going On.

In Moscow and Leningrad great crowds of workers are gathered continually, day and night, before the offices of the Esthonian representatives, hot anger is expressed by speaker after speaker, and attacks on the Esthonian capitalist government are cheered by tens of thousands, including the Red Army soldiers posted before the Esthonian quarters to guard them.

In Moscow, after Vorovsky was murdered in Switzerland, the Soviet government changed the name of the street where all of the foreign embassies are located, to "Vorovsky street." This is an unpleasant reminder to the diplomats from capitalist countries, but it pleased the Russian workers to give them such a reminder.

"TOMORROW THE WORKERS WILL PASS JUDGEMENT ON YOU!" CHALLENGE OF THE ESTHONIAN COMMUNISTS TO COURT

BERLIN, Dec. 1.—Thirty-nine Communists, sentenced to life imprisonment for revolutionary activity, and eighty-nine others, sentenced to an imprisonment amounting to 876 years by the Esthonian court at Reval, had this to say to the court:

"We remain Communists and consider it superfluous to defend ourselves before a bourgeois court. Today you pass sentence on us. Tomorrow the workers will pass sentence on you."

The trial of these Communists in the country which has been made a rallying place for the international counter-revolution and which has been used by the capitalist governments as a base of attack on Soviet Russia, was a parody of even the usual proceedings of courts of "justice."

Jan Tromp, one of the defendants, was seized when he attempted to speak in court, dragged from the courtroom, placed before a military tribunal and shot. Others were executed before their trial, because they tried to free the prisoners.

MOORS ASSASSINATE CHIEFTAIN WHO WOULD MAKE PEACE WITH SPAIN

MADRID—The rebel chieftain, Cibara, intimate friend of Abdel Krim, leader of the rebellious Riffs, paid with his life for his efforts to bring mediation between Spain and the tribes in conferences with Romanos Echevarrieta. Advices from Tetuan confirmed reports that natives have assassinated him.

WILLIAMSON CO. REPORTS THIRTY MINERS KILLED

MARION, Ill., Dec. 1.—The murder of workmen in the mines has taken a heavy toll of lives this year in Williamson county, according to the final report submitted by Coroner William McCowan to the county board of supervisors today, upon his resignation of eight years of service. Deaths resulting from insecure working conditions in the mines were greater in number than all the others combined. This despite the fact that warfare in Williamson county has been made a by-word thruout the nation during the past year.

The mine explosion at Johnson City brought death to thirty miners with sorrow to that number of families and has shoved the total number of inquests this year higher than ever.

Along with McCowan, State's Attorney Delos Duty who has prominently figured in recent open klan warfare in Williamson county, taking the side of the opposition rettired with the remark that he was escaping "living hell."

LODGING HOUSE FIRE TAKES FOUR LIVES ON NEW YORK'S WEST SIDE

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—Trapped by flames while they were still sleeping, four persons were burned to death, and ten others were seriously injured in a fire in a four-story lodging house at number 113 west Sixty-third street early today.

The body of Mrs. Mary Donnelly, forty-five, was the only one identified. The bodies of the other victims were found when the ruins cooled. They were so badly burned that even their sex could not be determined.

ANTI-FASCIST CONFERENCE IS HELD IN MILAN

Mussolini Gives His Thugs Sealed Orders

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROME, Italy, Dec. 1.—Now that Mussolini has shown indisputable evidence of weakness, the yellow socialist leader Filippo Turati, has assumed leadership of the constitutional opposition.

While the Communists were battling against the murderous cutthroats of the Fascisti this same Turati was the best ally of Mussolini and the most bitter foe of the Communists.

No better evidence of Mussolini's weakness could be had than that the yellow socialists have definitely decided to beard the enemy in the open, by attending a conference in Milan, at which there were present seventy-four members of the chamber of deputies, ninety-nine representatives of various opposition committees from towns in northern Italy, hitherto the stronghold of fascism.

Many Leaders Present.

Turati was chosen chairman of this conference. Giovanni Amendola, former minister of war, who represented the national union, Angelo Mauri, a catholic deputy and former minister of agriculture who spoke for the popular party, Giovanni Di Cesaro, former minister of posts, a social democrat and other representatives of bourgeois liberal organizations spoke and declared the time had arrived for Italy to assert her inalienable right to discuss her own destiny.

Under Secret Orders.

Much speculation was caused today by the action of Mussolini in sending all the fascist members of the chamber of deputies home to their respective constituencies with sealed orders, under instructions not to open the letters until they were prepared to read them to the local fascisti organizations.

Whether it means a new declaration of war or another surrender is a matter of conjecture.

MORE BRITISH REGIMENTS ARE SENT TO EGYPT

Zaglul Pasha Buys a Ticket to France

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Dec. 1.—A report from Lord Allenby received here announced that "good order prevailed in Egypt" but dispatches from Gibaralter received at the same time reported the departure of another regiment of regulars—the First Buffs—for Egyptian duty.

CAIRO, Dec. 1.—The students are still on strike and but one or two schools have ben reopened.

The arrest of thirty-four nationalists by the British has been protested by a delegation of members of the chamber of deputies and a manifesto, addressed to the masses of the people has been circulated by the thousand, which also denounces the arrests.

Zaglul Pasha, former premier of Egypt has obtained a passport for Europe. He is scheduled to visit Italy and France. While his destination is said to be watering places, it is more likely that his health will permit him to visit the foreign offices of both countries.

Unconscious From G. O. P. Prosperity

OAKLAND, Calif., Dec. 1.—When Mrs. H. Glotz, a widow, dropped unconscious in a street car nothing was found in her worn purse but want ad clippings. Revived, she said she had been hunting work unsuccessfully for weeks, and had had nothing to eat for three days. Emergency hospital officials are trying to find her a job.

GERMAN LABOR FIGHTS TO WIN WAGE INCREASE

Prices of Food and Clothing Go Up

(Special to the Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Dec. 1.—The Dawes plan has failed in Germany. Organized labor in Germany has declared its intention to fight in all trades for increase in wages, following the failure of the government to do anything to reduce the extremely high cost of living.

The Dawes plan has made the crisis more acute in Germany rather than otherwise for the tendency of prices for articles of food and clothing continues to rise.

Even the best organized and most skilled trades are suffering. The railway workers, one of the most strongly organized trades, are forced to work four hours for the price of a pound of butter. The average hourly wages of the railway workers are: Skilled, 18 cents; semi-skilled, 13 cents; unskilled, 12 cents, and women, 9 cents. A skilled metal worker averages 13 cents an hour and a woman metal worker receives 7 cents.

The cost of living is meanwhile exhorbitant. Butter sells at sixty-five cents a pound, eggs five cents each, a loaf of bread 13½ cents, and beef 32 cents a pound.

The railway workers are expected to be the first to actively inaugurate their campaign for higher wages.

Small's Counsel Prepare His Alibi For State's Suit

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Dec. 1.—A motion to vacate the report of Master in Chancery, C. G. Briggle was the first move of Governor Small's counsel when hearings in the state interest money suit against Small reopened in circuit court here today. The prosecution replied immediately with a counter affidavit and argument on the motion begun.

Small sat with his attorneys as they opened their battle on the report which recommends he be ordered to account for interest earned on state funds while he was state treasurer from 1917 to 1919. The motion to vacate the report was based on alleged prejudice of the master and asked the appointment of a new master to rehear the case.

DUNNE SPEAKS TONIGHT AT NORTH WEST HALL ON A. F. OF L. CONVENTION

The next public meeting of the Chicago section of the Trade Union Educational League will take place on Tuesday evening, Dec. 2, 8 p. m. in North West Hall, corner North and Western avenues. These meetings are one of the activities of the left wing movement in the local trade unions and are held for the purpose of unifying the struggle against the labor fakers.

The forthcoming meeting of the Trade Union Educational League promises to be of unusual interest as it will be addressed by William F. Dunne, editor of the DAILY WORKER, who was expelled from the Portland convention of the A. F. of L. because of his militant stand against the betrayal of the workers by Gompers. He will speak on the result of the A. F. of L. convention at El Paso. Workers Party members and left wing trade unionists are urged to attend and bring as many as possible to the meeting.

KILLS POLICEMAN, WOUNDS TWO, IN FEAR OF ATTACK

Week End Death Toll in Chicago Grows

The week-end death toll from guns was increased to three today when the body of an unidentified man, a bullet wound in the head and the lower jaw completely blown off, was found in an alley in the rear of a saloon.

Dog Fights Police.

A police squad, sent to investigate the killing, was held at bay by a ferocious German police dog in the saloon and a preliminary examination of the body, police say, indicate the dog may have played a part in the death. Four persons, connected with the running of the saloon, were arrested and held for questioning. All deny knowledge of the slaying.

The finding of the body climaxed 24 hours during which police lines tightened in an effort to end the reign of crime in Chicago, the bandit fear instilled over the city by recent killings and crimes of violence, was responsible for two more deaths.

Police Mistaken for Thugs.

Patrolman William A. Perrin was killed and two other officers were wounded when Hugh A. Stewart, V bank cashier, opened fire on the trio, mistaking them for thugs, when their machine pulled up behind his automobile as he stopped in front of his home.

The second killing was that of Charles H. Hendricks, 26, world war veteran, shot to death by Luke Ressor, "L" station cashier, just outside the cashier's cage. Ressor says Hendricks had attempted to rifle the cash drawer while he was temporarily absent from the cage.

PARDON FOR MOONEY SEEN AS OBJECT OF JURY FOREMAN'S VISIT TO CALIFORNIA GOVERNOR

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Dec. 1.—Another effort to free Tom Mooney from the living tomb in which he has suffered since his conviction on a framed-up charge of participation in a bomb explosion here on July 22, 1916, was seen in the visit of George M. McNevin of San Francisco, foreman of the jury which convicted Tom Mooney, with Governor Friend W. Richardson.

It was reported the conference was in reference to executive clemency for the imprisoned labor leader.

ZINOVIEV WRITES ABOUT FORGERY

such a group, which, together with the leaders, might be, in the event of an outbreak of active strife, the brain of the military 'cells' detailing from party. Go attentively thru the lists of the military "cells" detailing from them the more energetic and capable men, turn attention to the more talented military specialists who have, for one reason or another, left the service and hold socialist views. Form a directing operative head of the military section."

This, it is alleged, was written by the E. C. C. I. to the central committee of the British Communist Party. Of course the thing is an absurdity from beginning to end. At present there exists no military section in the C. P. of Great Britain. The British C. P. has no need to bother itself with attracting "talented military specialists" to its ranks. More important tasks: the winning of the majority of the English workers by means of agitation and the propagation of the ideas of Marxism.

"The military section of the British Communist Party, so far as we are aware, further suffers from a lack of specialists, the future directors of the British Red Army."

This quotation from the alleged letter of the E. C. C. I. needs no comment. Everyone knows that the C. P. of Great Britain today has far more urgent business than the creation of a British Red Army. The British Communist Party, supported by the "minority movement" in the trade unions, is seeking to propagate the views of the Communist International among the masses of the ordinary English workers. There is not the least doubt that the C. P. of Great Britain is fulfilling this great task with ever-increasing success. If this were not the case the English bourgeoisie would not have recourse to such extraordinary methods as the forging of documents.

Hits at "Daily Mail."

What is the meaning of the whole stunt regarding the alleged "letter of the E. C. C. I."? And who is the chief culprit in this forgery?

Apparently the "Daily Mail" played a great role in the whole affair. A telegraphic report states that "a copy of the document is in the possession of the 'Daily Mail' and we consider it our duty to publish it. Yesterday at noon we sent copies to the other London papers, and somewhat later the foreign office decided to publish the document." It is evident that the "Daily Mail" is not quite innocent in this matter.

It is remarkable how the date was chosen. The "exposure" of the alleged letter of the E. C. C. I. took place at a time when it was impossible for our answer to arrive in time in England, as only a few days remained to the end of the elections.

It is not difficult to understand why some of the leaders of the liberal-conservative bloc had recourse to such methods as the forging of documents. Apparently they seriously shot they would be able, at the last minute before the elections, to create confusion in the ranks of those electors who sincerely sympathize with the treaty between England and the Soviet Union.

It is much more difficult to understand why the English foreign office which is still under the control of the Prime Minister, MacDonald, did not refrain from making use of such a white-guardist forgery.

Trade Unions Will Investigate.

We, on our part, have proposed to entrust the examination of the whole affair regarding our alleged "letter" to the English trade unions, the general council of which will appoint a commission which shall have access to all documents, and whose decision we will regard as final. I hope that by means of this proposal we shall best prove to all English workers and to all unprejudiced people in England, that we have nothing to fear from an investigation of this affair, and that the "document" attributed to us constitutes a forgery.

Today we received news from fairly reliable sources that the forged letter originated in Polish circles. In Poland, apparently, there is a permanent group of enterprising people (who are probably closely connected with the Polish counter-revolutionary spy service), who supply similar "documents" to those foreign governments who, for any reason, require them.

A strange state of affairs! It suffices when any bourgeois statesman of Europe or America—let us say Mr. Hughes—finds himself in a difficult situation, if this or that "letter" of the Executive of the Comintern, alleged to be signed by us, is immediately placed at his disposal. This "letter" is solemnly published and the press of a certain camp raises the necessary alarm.

It would seem therefore as if the Executive Committee of the Comintern take a pleasure in writing letters which are very convenient to states men of the type of Hughes and Curzon. And in a strange manner these alleged "letters"—like eggs at Easter—fall into the hands of the respective bourgeois ministers, precisely when they need them in the course of political campaign against their "own" working class, or against the Soviet government.

Now It Is Germany's Turn.

The parliamentary elections in Germany are approaching. It will be a terrorist election. Has not the head of the German government, to the advantage of the social democrats, is throwing almost the entire staff of the Communist Party and thousands of the best workers who sympathize with the Communists into prison. We shall not be surprised if some days before the German elections one or the other reactionary German newspapers, or one of the other bourgeois ministers of Germany, likewise at the most appropriate time, receives from somebody a "letter" of the Executive of the Comintern, which will be worded precisely in the way in which the enemies of Communism require it.

Nevertheless, this weapon will become blunt from too frequent use. We are convinced that the too frequent abuse of forged "letters" of the Executive of the Comintern by the statesmen of Europe and America will result in this weapon of lies finally losing its point.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS FOR CLASS IN ELEMENTARY MARXIAN ECONOMICS

Class in Elementary Marxian Economics meets Dec. 3, Wednesday night at 8:15 p. m. sharp, at 2613 Hirsch Blvd. Earl R. Browder, instructor. This week's lesson is a review of the entire pamphlet "Value, Price and Profit," by Karl Marx. Next week the class starts on "The People's Marx," an abridged edition of Volume I, of "Capital."

Questions.

WRITE a review of the pamphlet, in your own words, of from 500 to 1,000 words, which will take up and explain the following questions:

1. The nature of a commodity, which is the elementary form of wealth, and what determines the value of commodities.

2. An explanation of how the socially necessary labor time required for their production determines the ratio at which commodities exchange for one another.

3. Explain how the labor-power of the worker becomes a commodity on the market of capitalism, and how the value of labor-power, being always less than the value of the product of the labor, gives rise to surplus value which is appropriated by the capitalist-employer.

4. Explain how prices, being determined in the long run by value and always fluctuating around value, can be made lower or higher by changes in the methods of production.

5. Show how increases of wages of the workers result, not in increase of prices of commodities generally, but in the reduction in the volume of surplus value available for the capitalist; that the question of wages is a question of struggle between the worker and his employer over the division of the values created by the labor of the worker.

6. Explain why it is that the working class benefits by a shortening of the hours of labor even more than by an increase in wages.

7. Show the points of similarity, and also the points of difference in the exploitation of labor under (a) slavery (b) serfdom, and (c) wages system.

8. Show how the capitalist realizes the surplus value expropriated from the workers, by their transformation into profit, by an exchange of commodities at their value.

9. Explain the division of surplus value, realized in general profit, among the various circles of capitalists in the form of interest, rent, and commercial or industrial profit, showing that all these forms of capitalist income are mere subdivisions of surplus value, being determined by the amount of surplus value available and not themselves determining the amount of surplus value.

10. Explain the relation between value and price; between wages and price; between profit and price; between profit and wages; and how changes in one of these may or may not result in changes in the other.

THE BEST REVIEW OF THIS PAMPHLET WILL BE PUBLISHED IN THE DAILY WORKER.

Answers to Last Week's Questions.

1. Surplus value, realized in profits thru the exchange of commodities for money, is normally distributed among the capitalists in the form of rent (the share of the landlord), interest (the share of the finance-capitalist or banker), and commercial or industrial profit (the share of the immediate employer).

2. There is no such thing as "value of land" in the Marxian sense of the term. Land has a price not by virtue of any "value" inhering in it, but because its monopoly enables the holder to demand and receive a share of the values created by labor applied to the land. Improvements placed in or upon land by labor, whether in the form of buildings, artificial manuring, drainage, etc., does have value, just as all other products of labor, but the value inheres in the improvements and not in the land.

3. Rent, interest and profit all have a common source, coming alike from surplus value, of which they are subdivisions arrived at between the capitalists.

4. For the worker, the most important relationship is that which he holds to the employing capitalist; because it is the employer who expropriates the surplus value of the labor of the worker, and is in the struggle with the employer that the worker finds the rate of exploitation established.

5. A rate of profit, figured on the basis of the amount of capital advanced in wages, gives the rate of exploitation of labor; that is, if the profit is $500, on commodities for which the labor to produce received a wage of $500, then the rate of exploitation is 100 per cent; on the other hand, when the capitalist figures his profit upon the basis of the total capital employed, adding to the wages of $500, the amount of $2,000 for raw material, then the rate of profit is only 20 per cent. The amount of profit is the same; the 100 per cent expresses the relation to the wages of the worker, the 20 per cent is the relation to the total capital employed.

6. From the foregoing it is seen that the ordinary capitalist method of basing profit rates upon total capital, hides and obscures the actual rate of exploitation of labor.

7. When, from the present value of a commodity is deducted the value of the raw materials used in its production, what remains the value added to the commodity by its immediate production. This is the total available value that can be distributed, on the one hand to the worker in wages, and on the other hand to the capitalists in rent, interest, and profits.

8. It follows from the foregoing that the value of commodities is not affected in any way by any changes in the division of this value between workers and capitalists, or between the various capitalists themselves.

9. Specifically, a change in wages cannot change the value of a commodity, but it will affect a change in the rate of profit. A change in profit will not affect a change in the value of a commodity, but it will affect wages.

10. Neither increased profits, nor increased wages, will affect the prices of commodities, aside from temporary fluctuations; what raises or lowers prices is either (a) an increase or decrease in the amount of socially necessary labor-time for their production; or (b) a change in the value of money brought about by an increase or decrease in the socially necessary labor time embodied in the currency.

LAFOLLETTE AND WHEELER SEEM WELCOME AGAIN

No Real Enmity Seen on Senate Floor

(Special to the Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The last session of the 68th congress opened today with the "insurgent" element which is controlled by LaFollette still holding a balance of power. The democrats announced they would "go along" with the republicans in the routine business of appropriations and so on, and Senator Wheeler, running mate of LaFollette, made a similar announcement for the insurgents, although LaFollette himself has not yet declared himself.

Another 100 Years War.

Wheeler says "The progressive group, instead of obstructing, would itself bring forth a constructive program." "Two of the measures in this constructive program," he said, would be: "A constitutional amendment to abolish the electoral college and provide for direct election of president and vice-president, and another amendment to provide that congress by a two-thirds vote may override supreme court decisions."

Coolidge, who had gathered all the important leaders of the republican party at one of his "political breakfasts," is expected to bring up very little before this session in his message to be delivered on Wednesday. He is going to let things ride until next year.

The republicans are not altogether a unit on the expulsion of the four LaFollette senators from the G. O. P. a group around Borah asserting that it was a mistake, while the eastern hard-boiled bunch uphold their action in "reading them out."

Friendly Enemies Make Up.

When the senate convened there was a slight murmur when LaFollette Ladd, Frazier and Brookhart entered LaFollette smiled when Senators Smoot and Watson, leaders in the fight to expel him from the republican party, rushed over and were among the first to shake his hand.

Similar ceremonies were carried on by both the progressives and the old guard. Both agreed that there was nothing personal or insurmountable between them. Both silently conceded that while the bourgeoisie and the petty bourgeoisie have differences, they must stick together against the working class.

Dems Let Wheeler Stick.

Senator Wesley L. Jones of Washington was appointed the republican whip in the senate.

Democratic leaders say that they will not expel Senator Wheeler for running with LaFollette as an independent.

PRESIDENTIAL PARDON RIGHT IS CONTESTED

Grossman Contempt Case is Made Test

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—The power of the president to pardon in contempt of court cases was brought before the United States supreme court in arguments in the case of Philip Grossman of Chicago.

Grossman was convicted of contempt of court and sentenced to prison by a Chicago federal judge. Before he started serving his term he was pardoned by President Coolidge. The validity of the pardon was denied by a federal court and Grossman was held in custody by the warden of the jail. The government brought the case to the supreme court of the United States for decision and Attorney General Stone today argued in support of the unrestricted power of the president in exercising the right of pardon.

Soviets Only Hope For Human Race, Say Nearing and Darrow

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—A crowd of 1,700 people gathered here Sunday to listen to Scott Nearing debate Clarence Darrow on the question, "Is the Human Race Worth Working For?" These two experts on the subject took opposite views, Nearing upholding the affirmative and Darrow the negative.

Nearing's chief point was that the human race may be worth a little trouble because Soviet Russia proves that something can be done with the human race to make it human. Darrow, taking his usual stand that life isn't worth living in spite of his continuing to waste his time in doing so, said that he would be very glad to see the Bolsheviks succeed in Russia, but doubted that they would.

Neither one of these two wise men explained what they were doing to help Soviet Russia succeed.

American Labor Should Watch Toilers' Struggle in Mexico Under Calles

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, Gen. Plutarco Elias Calles is president of Mexico.

President Samuel Gompers, with 300 officials of the American Federation of Labor, delegates to the recent El Paso convention, were conspicuous participants in the festivities incident to the inauguration. American socialists, with whom Calles fraternized during his recent brief stay in this country, hail the new regime in Mexico as their own.

* * * *

Gompers accepted the rule of Premier MacDonald, in Great Britain, that stood loyal to all the imperialist policies of the British Empire, and the socialists of the United States have not stinted in their declarations of solidarity with the bloody regime of Fritz Ebert, president of the German capitalist republic of the Krupps and the Thyssens.

* * * *

American labor must realize that there is as yet no Workers' Republic south of the Rio Grande. There are new struggles ahead for the Mexican workers and peasants before they achieve Soviet Rule. Gompers was not in Mexico City to help toward the emancipation of Mexican labor. He was there to help strangle it in the chains of American imperialism; to keep it obedient to the capitalist system in which he believes.

* * * *

The Communist International has clearly pointed out that there exist but two possibilities for the Calles government in Mexico, just as a double alternative faces every hesitating, compromising, betraying social-democracy. These are the following:

First: Either to betray the workers and peasants shamefully, (i. e. to put the state apparatus fully at the disposal of the capitalists, to restrict and sabotage all the gains of organized labor, ruthlessly to apply the pressure of taxation on the peasants and the petty bourgeois, to maintain an expensive military apparatus, and to achieve all this by placing their own men in the appropriate administrative posts), or,

Second: By trying to satisfy everyone, to end in complete bankruptcy.

* * * *

Both of these alternatives give equal benefits to the enemies of the working class. They pave the way for the return of the capitalists to power.

* * * *

Calles acquiesced in the ousting of the Communist delegates from the gathering of Mexican labor at Jaurez; a crime against the Mexican workers and peasants under the tutelage of Gompers himself.

Thruout the entire period of Obregon's regime, Calles was a party to the attacks of the government on the working class.

As president over all Mexico, Calles will be no different than the late Felipe Carrillo, who headed the socialist regime in Yucatan. He will suppress the more militant trade unions opposed to him, accompanied with brutal persecution of the Communists. He will not hesitate to shoot them down when necessary.

* * * *

Workers and peasants at the inauguration ceremonies held at Mexico City, cheered the right hand man of President Calles, Deputy Luis Morones, the Gompers of Mexico. But the Mexican masses will learn that neither Marones nor Gompers is their friend; that their real champions, the faithful fighters for their class interests are the Communists who have been expelled from the Gompers' American Federation of Labor, and Marone's Confederacion Regional Obrera Mexicana.

* * * *

The Washington correspondent of the Federated Press grows as enthusiastic about the Calles regime in Mexico, as he did about LaFollette's prospects during the recent elections in the United States.

He says that the trade unionists in Mexico are relied upon as the first line of reserves. The arsenals are in the hands of labor officials. Many trade unions go thru military drill with full accoutrements furnished from these arsenals, he points out.

* * * *

But the big crime comes when the workers in Mexico, as in Germany, and elsewhere, will be led to turn their guns on the militants in the labor movements, just as they use their votes in their trade unions to expel the Communists. The armed strength of labor must only be turned in one direction: against the capitalist enemy and all its allies.

* * * *

The future struggles of labor in the United States will be mirrored in the experiences of Mexican labor under the regime of Calles. Germany, Italy and Great Britain are on the other side of the Atlantic Ocean, thousands of miles away. Mexico is close at hand.

American labor's officialdom holds aloof from Europe. But it is interested in Mexico, like America's great imperialist interests. Labor north and south of the Rio Grande will find many interests in common.

Labor in Mexico will not be free until it has established a Mexican Soviet Republic to usher in the Communist social order. The only way that labor in the United States can ensure the freedom of Mexican labor, once it has achieved its emancipation, is to rear on the ruins of the capitalist order in this country the Soviet Republic of the United States. This will be the beginning of Soviet Rule thruout North and South America. These are things worth thinking about as the self-proclaimed saviour of Mexican labor, Calles, mounts the presidential chair at Mexico City.

MASKS PROVIDED BY STANDARD OIL TO WORKERS NO PROTECTION AGAINST "LOONEY GAS" POISON

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—As Dr. Andrew F. McBride, state commissioner of labor of New Jersey makes a report declaring that "experience has demonstrated that workmen cannot be safeguarded against the effects of poisonous contact" with tetraethyl lead (looney gas material) the American Chemical Society issues a different kind of a statement, to the effect that tetraethyl lead is only dangerous if workers and chemists are "careless."

Dr. McBride, however, finds that it was the Standard Oil company which was careless (and thus responsible for five deaths). He says the Standard failed to show that the gas masks which the company furnished were adapted to give protection against the lead fumes.

DEBT FUNDING FARCE CARRIED ON IN SECRET

French Agreement to Beat British

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 1.—Andy Mellon, multi-millionaire and secretary of the treasury, reported yesterday to the "debt funding commission" on the private conferences held between himself and the French ambassador over the debt owing the United States by France. However, what was said was held in strict secrecy and neither Mellon nor any of the commission would talk. Evidently there is something to conceal from the American masses.

A feeler was put out, however, by rumoring that altho the French have made no offer to settle the debt and have been waiting to see what America would offer them in terms, the "suggestion" has been made that the debt be funded over a period of 80 years at a very low rate of interest.

This "suggestion" is looked upon favorably by American officials, who now consider France as a part of J. P. Morgan's colony and who wish to make the debt owed to the American government as light as possible so that Morgan's private loans will not be injured.

Only one fly appears in the ointment. The British debt which America funded for a term of 62 years, may be affected by reason of the notice served by Britain at the time, to the effect that if better terms were made with any other nation, the British government would act accordingly.

America Wants Reparations.

PARIS, Dec. 1.—The international financial conference scheduled for Paris in December, will be postponed until January, at the demand of Great Britain, it was declared in diplomatic circles today.

The British experts, it was learned, were unable to agree in their preparatory conferences, on America's insistence that the payments under the Dawes' plan include American reparations dues from Germany on the basis of the German-American peace treaty.

WU WOOS FICKLE FORTUNE; ALMOST LOSES HIS HEAD

Morgan's Tuchun on the Way to the Sticks

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PEKING, Dec. 1.—Diplomatic intriguing and jockeying for power and position on the part of the capitalist powers has monopolized the interest of newspaper correspondents here to such an extent that quite a respectable war was waged between the now down-and-out Wu Pei Fu and his antagonists, Generals Chang and Feng, without more than passing notice being taken of it.

Yet it was an important link in the chain of incidents that again brought China dramatically to the attention of the world when the late civil war burst like a bolt from the blue.

The downfall of Wu Pei Fu means the defeat of the British and American capitalists, temporarily at least, and if one is to judge from the progress being made by Dr. Sun Yat Sen, it may be quite a long time before Wall and Downing Streets will again have as much freedom in China as they had while Wu held the reigns of power.

Wu Tried Again.

Wu's latest bid to restore his fortunes was made on November 22, when he launched an attack on Feng and Chang forces. The result of the fighting did not strengthen Wu's position. Despite all the suggestions of the British and American capitalists, the new Peking government will have nothing to do with Wu as yet.

The "boy emperor" is hiding in the Japanese legation.

Tsao Kun, the deposed president, remains in the palace from which his brother's body was removed Saturday.

Pathologists to Say How Ohio Clergyman's Wife Met Her Death

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Dec. 1.—Report of the pathologists, who are conducting experiments to determine whether Mrs. Addie Sheatsley, wife of Rev. C. V. Sheatsley, was murdered or whether she crawled into the furnace voluntarily, is expected soon.

After being the center of public interest for two weeks following the tragic death of his wife, whose charred body was found in the parsonage furnace, Sheatsley, with his family, returned today to the acquietomed avenues of life.

BOSTON UNEMPLOYED STORM CITY COUNCIL 1,000 STRONG LED BY COMMUNIST WORKER

BOSTON, Mass., Nov. 27.—(By Mail.)—Under the leadership of the Workers Party, an unemployed council was formed here yesterday when Winfield A. Dwyer, a member of the Freight Handlers' Union and a candidate for state secretary in the recent election on the Workers Party, led 1,000 jobless men in a demonstration against the city and state government demanding "Work or Wages!"

Jobless Getting Desperate.

The unemployed in Boston are desperate. Walter Z. Kowalski, living in the North End, leaped from the third floor of the house in which he lived in an attempt at suicide, driven mad by worry over unemployment. At the same hospital to which Kowalski was taken, John Julliano, another unemployed worker with a young wife and three children starving in Charlestown, was given some smelling salts after he had collapsed from hunger in his home.

Dwyer led a crowd of jobless men from the city employment office, to the council chamber where, packed in the galleries, they sent Dwyer onto the floor of the council to demand relief.

Councilman Has Guilty Conscience.

Collarless and in his working clothes, Dwyer stepped up to the witness stand. A heavy piece of wood protruded from behind his coat lapel and a councilman, probably with a guilty conscience, nervously demanded, "What's that under your coat; a blackjack?"

Dwyer pulled out a bale hook. "I'm a freight handler, a real worker, working with my hands rustling freight," he said, explaining his appearance with some pride.

How the Unemployed Knew Him

"My appearance here is not only spontaneous, but my speech is extemporaneous. I was a candidate of the Workers Party during the campaign. I am a Communist. When I spoke on the streets for the Workers Party during the election these men came to know me. I received 5,000 votes here in Boston.

"Today I was passing into the washroom here when these men, collected downstairs outside the employment office, saw me. They called on me to lead them. So we marched up to the gas house—I mean the state house. Talk is cheap. We were handed the bunk. But we're going to the headquarters of the Workers Party and we're going to organize."

When a councilman said that he did not represent the unemployed, Dwyer appealed to the men: "Is that so, men? Do I speak for you?" There were shouts of "Yes! yes!" Dwyer continued and told at some length what could be done for the workless.

Asked to Build a Jail.

The council, however, decided that there was nothing it could do. Mayor Curley, non-plussed, said that the men might wait three weeks, until the construction of a new police station was begun. It is presumed he meant that they could build it first and inhabit it afterward.

Dwyer has announced his intention of organizing all the unemployed in Boston and parading thru the city streets. Whenever the councilmen tried to be witty, Dwyer gave them sharp rejoinders and, pointing to the ragged men on the benches, declared that their presence was a warning of worse things if their condition was ignored or laughed at.

Jobs Don't Materialize

MANCHESTER, N. H.—The 10 per cent wage cut which company union propagandists hoped would start the idle spindles and looms of the Amoskeag Manufacturing Co. is not delivering the promised goods. One small preparatory room increased its working force but several score workers were laid off in other departments. About 5,000 are employed out of 14,000 workers.

HAITIAN SENATOR EXPOSES UNITED STATES TYRANNY

American Imperialism Bleeds People

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, December 1.—Pierre Hudicourt, a Haitian senator and member of the American Institute of International law, denounces United States tyranny in a statement issued thru the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Hudicourt charges that under the U. S. marines' occupation the gourde, once equivalent to an American dollar, has depreciated to 20 cents and Haitian laborers and their families must support themselves on $5.20 a month, on an average.

People Have No Voice.

Heavy taxes are crushing the Haitians, he says. National funds are going into pockets of U. S. officeholders. Haitian people have no voice in their government or in their taxation, but are ruled by an American dictator. Louis Borno, present president, is a puppet in the hands of the American occupation.

"Upon the much advertised roads built by the American occupation of Haiti," says Hudicourt, "there have been spent $8,000,000. The heavy rains of last season virtually obliterated these carelessly constructed affairs, and there are at present some 40 to 50 automobiles abandoned on them."

Education Atrocity Exposed.

The farce of pseudo-scientific methods by the American occupation is illustrated by the agricultural school at Port au Prince where an American director gets $15,000 a year and imported American professors who cannot speak French, the language of Haiti, get $500 to $600 a month for talking to their students thru interpreters.

The American occupation has been attacked as unethical because of its tyranny and murderous methods. Hudicourt exposes it as inefficient.

Chandler Auto Plant In Cleveland Makes Big Payroll Slash

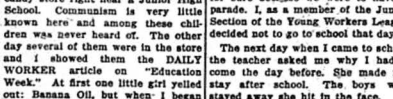
CLEVELAND, Ohio, Dec. 1. — The Chandler automobile factory of this city, enjoying even better business than most auto manufacturing firms is working only two and three days a week while some departments have been cut to the bone and others closed completely, according to reports just received.

This situation is a reflection of that prevailing thruout the auto industry and follows the news of sharp cuts in the forces of the Ford and Dodge plants in Detroit.

John Bull Wants His Dough.

LONDON, Dec. 1.—The foreign office expects the question of interallied debts to come up at the forthcoming meeting of finance ministers in Paris and Premier Baldwin's cabinet is anxious to discuss the question with France, without making any concessions.

Cancellation will not be considered, it was announced.



No Banana Oil in Communism

To The DAILY WORKER:—I run a candy store right near a Junior High School. Communism is very little known here and among these children was never heard of. The other day several of them were in the store and I showed them the DAILY WORKER article on "Education Week." At first one little girl yelled out: Banana Oil, but when I began reading the article to them they listened. When I finished reading they said that sounds good and one little girl said, "There is no Banana Oil in that." Another little girl said Coolidge was a Tea Pot Domer and no good. Others joined the discussion and now they ask for The DAILY WORKER when they come into the store.

L. H., San Antonio, Texas.

Dear Comrades: I want to tell you how they treat the children in the capitalist schools. On armistice day the teacher told us to come to school for sure because we were to have a parade. I, as a member of the Junior Section of the Young Workers League decided not to go to school that day.

The next day when I came to school the teacher asked me why I hadn't come the day before. She made me stay after school. The boys who stayed away she hit in the face.

Later I heard from a friend of mine that the children had to march a long distance, while the teachers followed them in autos.

RUSSIA UTILIZES CAPITALIST EVILS FOR WORKERS' GOOD

By ANISE.

(Federated Press Staff Correspondent.)

MOSCOW, Dec. 1.— Poison gas, that terrible product of modern war, is being used in Russia to rid the fields of the plague of sooslike, small rabbit-like animals which live in underground burrows and eat grain. They form a plague of long standing, consuming vast quantities of wheat and rye.

The first year's test of gas against these creatures has proven successful, according to Prof. Inkanof, director of the micro-biological institute of Saratov which conducted the experiments in the southeastern plans. The gas used is not strictly poisonous but suffocating. It is introduced directly into the sooslik burrows by means of a tube. While deadly underground, its only effect when mixed with plenty of air above ground is to slightly dilute the freshness of the air.

Some 15,000 acres have been treated with this gas, and 723,000 burrow holes filled with it. The result has been a complete freeing of the region from sooslike.

SUN YAT SEN IS GREETED BY BIG CROWDS IN TOKIO

Largest Hall Packed to Hear Him

TOKIO, Dec. 1.— Thousands were turned away from a meeting that packed the biggest hall in Osaka to hear Dr. Sun Yat Sen, the leader of the movement for the unification of China, and staunch friend of Soviet Russia.

Flayed Capitalist Powers.

Sun denounced the capitalist powers and declared there was only one government in the world that followed the policy of giving the Asiatics assistance in freeing themselves from foreign rule. He declared it was the duty of the Asiatics to help the oppressed colored races in Africa and America.

The agents of the capitalist powers, particularly those of the United States and Britain are working hard trying to line up the new Pekin government on their side. One of their demands is the return to power of Wu Pei Fu, the British-Wall Street agent. Whether they shall be successful or not cannot be predicted just now.

What the Admiral Says.

Admiral Takarabe, minister of the Japanese navy, declared that Japan is willing to consider a proposal for further reduction of armaments on a basis compatible with her needs for national defense. The admiral indulged in the usual diplomatic twaddle about the traditional friendship between the United States and Japan, but both governments are building ships against each other.

Protests against the projected naval maneuvers of the United States Pacific fleet at Hawaii continue to come from Japanese organizations.

Boy Emperor Not Happy.

PEKING, Dec. 1.—It can be said without fear of contradiction that the "boy emperor" of China, Hsuan Tung, is no longer the happiest man in this city. It is said that the youthful descendant of the once powerful Manchus puts his hand on his throat every morning when he wakes up to see if his head is still on his shoulders.

Hsuan Is Suspicious.

No threats have been made against Hsuan's life, but he is just suspicious and lots of people don't blame him. This is a bad era for kings.

Road Relies On Rail Board

NEW YORK.—Julius Kruttschnitt, chairman Southern Pacific railroad, rests his hopes on the rail labor board in the wage dispute involving about 6,500 engineers. The railroad magnate in a statement attacks the workers for talking strike, attacks the heads of the unions for refusing to attend hearings of the board and hits at the Barkley bill, which would end the board's opportunities to serve the railroad owners. The statement is issued from his New York office.

Fight Industrial Diseases

NEW YORK.—Not the slightest protection against occupational diseases is afforded the worker in Rhode Island and New Hampshire, says the Workers Health bureau announcing a campaign for a blanket occupational disease law to give workmen compensation to the numerous victims of industrial chemicals and other perils that inflict a total of disease and death equal to the obvious accidents provided for to some extent under present laws.

Wants Strikers To Shut Up

BOSTON.—Asking a woman strikebreaker of the Morris B. Anderson clothing company why she did not work in a union shop is the offense supreme court judge Crosby lays to the door of Samuel Fraulchman of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers union. Violation of an injunction is charged and Crosby says he will impose sentense in a few days.

GOVERNMENT OF FRANCE FACING MUCH TROUBLE

African Colonies in a Rebellious Mood

PARIS, France, Dec. 1.—The French government is facing serious problems in the north African colonies, especially Tunis, and at a meeting at the Quay d'Orsay Premier Herriot decided to send a commission to look into the complaints of the various sections of the population.

Choice of Two Evils.

Altho administration officials say the inhabitants of Tunis have much less ground to complaint against the French administration than have the Egyptians against the British, the French admit that a serious anti-French movement has been developing since last summer. The inhabitants are being urged by the Communists to overthrow the French protectorate.

Premier Herriot's determination to use diplomacy before using the mailed fist, was explained by the Communists as merely an artifice of imperialism, and was one of the most useful weapons of the robber empires.

Indications are that the Bolshevist propaganda is the most dangerous in Tunis where there is a large industrial population.

French authorities tell the usual yarns of Moscow spending millions of rubles in trying to provoke an uprising in Tunis where the French are less strong than in Morocco, whose people are more advanced intellectually. Communistic troubles have already taken place in several Tunisian towns and in several instances the troops have fired on the crowds.

Reds Take Over Fleet.

The arrival at Bizerta of the Bolshevist naval mission to take over the Wrangel fleet is said to have alarmed Admiral Exelmans, the French commander of the naval forces in Tunis, to such an extent that he asked the secretary of the navy to relieve him of his duties, fearing that the presence of many agitators in the Bolshevist mission would cause serious trouble.

Agents of the Turkish nationalists, the French authorities say, are working in connection with the Communists because the Bolshevist propaganda in the east, is conducted with the view of "freeing subject races from the yoke of capitalist countries" and with a view to undermining the strength of the capitalist powers possessing colonies.

Fear Communists.

The French government says it sees the danger in the situation but is not prepared to use strong measures. Premier Herriot has appointed a commission of some twenty prominent men to go to Tunis to study the situation and report to the government. It is expected that as soon as the report reaches the authorities Paris will draft a new constitution for Tunis giving the natives a larger share in the administration of the country.

Schwab, Steel Baron Finds Everything Nice After the Election

PITTSBURGH, Pa., December 1.—Charles M. Schwab, the gentleman who worked for one dollar a year during the patriotic days of the war visited Pittsburgh today to honor Andrew Carnegie, at the annual Carnegie day exercises at Carnegie Institute of Technology.

Schwab found everything all right. The elections suited him perfectly. "Isms" were crowned in a flood of votes, he declared, and the Dawes plan was working wonders for Germany.

Schwab was satisfied. He has good reasons to be, but the slaves of his steel mills have no reason to be happy. What is good for Schwab is bad for them.

Uncle Sam Squeezes Boilermakers

WASHINGTON.—Boilermakers employed in private shops in the District of Columbia get a minimum rate of 85c an hour under union agreement and men of the same trade in the region including Washington, Baltimore, Wilmington and Philadelphia average about 84c an hour. Yet the wage board for the navy department, seeking to fix the wage for boilermakers in the Washington navy yard, demands that its existing rate of 80c an hour be continued.

FARMING THE FARMERS BETTER BUSINESS THAN WORKING ON THE LAND

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—Farming the farmers thru the banks still pays better than working the land. Statistics issued by the department of agriculture show that capital invested in agriculture in the form of mortgages and other indebtedness was paying an average rate of over 6% per cent in 1921-22, the return on actual farming was only 1.4 per cent.

"Even this meagre showing," says the report, "was made only by valuing the labor of farm operators and their families at no more than the current rate for common labor."

A. B. Swales for Unity With Russ Unions Despite Sam

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 1.—That A. B. Swales, chairman of the Trade Union Congress of Great Britain, is still holding out, in spite of his companionship with Sam Gompers, for labor union unity with the Russian unions by the British unions and trade and peace with Soviet Russia, appears from an interview given by Swales, who is here to attend the inauguration of President Calles.

Even C. T. Cramp, his colleague who is more bitter against Bolshevism than most of the British unionists, agreed with Swales that "a whole nation cannot be permanently isolated from the rest of the world."

Says Russian Trade Helps Machinists

"I am an officer of the machinists' union," said Swales, "and I know that full resumption of trade relations with Russia would open up a huge market for our industry and give employment to thousands of our members who have been involuntarily idle for months and in some instances, years. There would be a revival of trade for other industries also, for Russia is in need of other material besides railroad tracks and engines."

Swales asserted that Russia was in very good financial condition, having stabilized the ruble and keeping expenses within the budget, and said no one who has traded with Russia had lost by it.

British Business Lost No Money.

"More than a year ago," Swales stated, "Sir Allan Smith, chairman of the British engineering industry and one of the shrewdest business men in the country declared that members of his industry were trading with Russia without any guarantee, and they had not lost a penny. Since then Vickers and other large firms have taken orders on the same terms.

"British workers," he said, "are indeed sorry that the $100,000,000 loan to Russia did not go thru. At least two-thirds of that sum would have been expended in England. Think of the work that would have provided. I should not be surprised if the conservative government carried thru the loan, for there is a demand for it on the part of the business men."

Unemployment Bankrupting Unions.

The 158 unions affiliated to the Trade Union Congress paid out $120,000,000 in unemployment benefits during the last three years, and successive wage cuts have taken $5,000,000,000 out of the pay of British workers between 1921 and 1923, while the unions have declined from their highest figure of 6,505,482 in 1920, to 4,328,235 members at present. But this is nearly twice the union membership before the war.

The British delegates would make no comment on the action of the A. F. of L. metal trades department, which, unlike the British workers, oppose trade with Soviet Russia, and to stimulate the industry advocated that more and bigger warships be built up by United States government.

Capmakers' Union Gets Job Guarantee in St. Paul Contract

ST. PAUL.—Cash guarantees against unemployment are part of the new agreements signed by Local 10 United Cloth Hat & Cap Makers with two St. Paul employers.

If the firm of McKibbin, Driscoll and Dorsey gives employment to the union members 46 weeks in the year the firm's guarantee fund amounting to 5 per cent of the total payroll will be returned by the union. If only 47 weeks employment has been given the union retains one-fifth of the guarantee, to be distributed to those unemployed the full period. The union retains two-fifths if employment reaches only 46 weeks; three-fifths if 45 weeks, four-fifths if 44 weeks and nothing is returned if only 43 weeks employment or less is furnished. The agreement expires Nov. 11, 1926.

The agreement with Gordon & Ferguson entails a cash payment of $3,000 a year (3 per cent of the payroll) to the union by the firm as an employment insurance fund to be administered by the union and not to be returned to the firm. The agreement expires Oct. 22, 1926.

Both agreements provide for a 44-hour week, with time and a half for overtime. St. Paul capmakers are 100 per cent organized.

Sports Bring Big Gains to Bosses.

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 1. — Last year was a prosperous one for the sporting goods manufacturers, but their employes had a starvation wage. Few of these workers are organized; the best are miserably paid.

The census of manufacturers shows that 170 establishments paid only $10,440,207 in the year 1923, as wages to an average of 9,683 persons—less than $1,080 a year average. Salaries amounted to $2,860,414 for 1,427 salaried officers and employes. The gross profits amounted to $10,000,000 The excess profits for the year were enough to pay a total wage of $1,700 to each wage worker, instead of the $1,080 which was paid.

DETROIT OFFERS RUSSIAN FILMS FOR FIVE DATES

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 1.—The most intensive campaign of motion picture entertainment and education ever undertaken in any one city at any one time will take place in Detroit during the month of December. No less than ten motion picture dates for five different pictures produced by the International Workers' Aid, will be run in various parts of the "flivver king's" city. The proceeds will benefit the workers' relief funds.

Include Comedy and Drama.

The first program, extending from Dec. 8 to 12, inclusive, includes two pictures, "The Beauty and the Bolshevik" and "Russia in Overalls." The first is a comedy drama of love in the Red Army, and throws interesting light on the many fundamental social changes that are taking place in the Soviet Republic. The National Board of Review recommends it as "valuable as a record of present day conditions in Russia . . . the picture ought to be interesting to the general public." "Russia in Overalls" shows actual industrial conditions in the workers republic, especially the help rendered by American labor thru Kusbas, R. A. I. C., and the International Workers Aid. A worker who has just returned from Kusbas will appear in connection with this film.

This program will be shown on the following schedule:

Medbury Theatre, Detroit, Dec. 8 and 9.

Canif Theater, Hamtramck, Dec. 10 and 11.

Royale Theater, Detroit, Dec. 12.

Another house is also to be engaged in the Jewish section and after these four dates are made successfully it is expected to book in a chain of fifteen other neighborhood houses.

Doheny Still at Large.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., December 1.—With the final arguments of counsel for both the defense and the government scheduled to end today, the Edward L. Doheny naval oil reserve lease cancellations case was to be in federal Judge Paul J. McCormick's hands tonight for decision.

CANADIAN TELEGRAPH OPERATORS SHOW AUTOMATIC MACHINES ARE USED TO REDUCE WAGES

By ART SHIELDS

(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—Shall automatic labor saving machinery be allowed to reduce the standard of living of the workers? This issue, facing so many industries with the advance of machine technology, is presented before a Canadian board of conciliation in a brief prepared by the Commercial Telegraphers' Union of America, Canadian Pacific system, Division 1 and Canadian National Division 43, with the technical assistance of the Labor Bureau, inc. of New York.

Eliminating Hand System.

The Canadian issue arises out of the union's demand that pay for operators of automatic telegraphic machines equal that of Morse manual telegraphers, in the service of the Canadian Pacific Telegraph and the Canadian National Telegraph systems. The automatic machine operators get a basic rate of 60c an hour, notwithstanding their productivity is far greater than the Morse operators who get 70c an hour. At present, approximately half the total business of the companies is done by machines, but the tendency is toward the elimination of the hand system.

The automatic machines—Multiplex, Morkrum and Teletype—have typewriter-like keyboards and require the skill of an expert touch typist and the ability to edit and censor messages correctly and rapidly. Wear and tear on the operator's nervous system is much worse than from the Morse instruments. Yet pay is 20c an hour less, due to the poorer bargaining power of this class of workers at the time of installation.

Automatic is Speedier.

Accurate measurement of the increased productivity of the machine system and the cost saving to the companies has been made by the union. Thru the machine system the average cost of each message would be about 42.5 per cent less, even at the equal wage scale asked by the union. This cost reduction comes (1) by the increased speed of the operator; (2) by the more intensive use of each wire permitted under the machine system. The average speed of the automatic instrument is 60 messages an hour, compared to 35 from the Morse instruments. And each wire, under the machine system, carries the traffic on from two to four times as many instruments as by the Morse method. This saving in wire overhead more than cancels the cost of the machines.

ENGLISH AND AMERICAN BANKS MAKE LOANS TO STATE BANK OF RUSSIA

MOSCOW, Dec. 1. — At the moment when English-Russian relations on the political field are strained the London banks, including some London branches of large American banks, have come to agreement with the state bank of Russia for loans totalling tens of millions of rubles.

These are short term credits to finance Russian imports. The amounts are sufficient to play a significant role in the state budget for long years. These credits are not the long term loans which have been under discussion in the Anglo-Russian treaty for rebuilding Russian industry and agriculture. They are purely short term credits for financing trade.

French Soundness Is Doubted

NEW YORK.—Morgan & Co's offering of $100,000,000 in French bonds went quickly. The books were closed in 45 minutes. Americans getting into Europe with their money in this loan will get about 7.53 per cent interest. The bonds are 7 per cent bonds but they were sold at 94, which brings the actual interest on investment to the higher figure. Conservative comment in that portion of Wall Street not in on the deal say the high interest rate indicated that the investment is not gilt edged. Doubts on the future of French credit are given as reason. The previously issued German bonds seemed equally insecure if not more so. Their issue price was 93.

DR. WARD SEES HUMAN MACHINE WORK IN RUSSIA

Big Contrast with West European Conditions

CALCUTTA, India, Dec. 1.—"In Russia, for good or ill, they know where they propose to go and in the main how they are going to try to get there. There is at work a tremendously powerful human machine, the like of which has seldom been assembled in human history.

"Roughly speaking, it is the sense of concentrated power which is my chief impression now. The other capitals of Europe are trying to have roses without having provided bread, and so most of the people have neither."

Lectures in India.

The contrasts in the capitals of the social-democratic and fascist capitals of Wesetern Europe, between extreme poverty and riches, and the rottenness of the system prevailing in these countries as compared with the situation in Russia, form the basis of a series of lectures which Dr. Harry Ward, who has just finished a tour of Russia, is delivering in the outstanding student centers of India.

"The thing that hits you hard when you come out of Russia, as I did, to Warsaw and Vienna, where luxury and 'smartness' are so evident on the streets and in the stores, is the contrast between a situation where the energies of life are concentrated on the pursuit of essentials and one in which energy is largely devoted to inanities.

Like Different World.

"You do indeed have a sense of being in a different world. You have been where life is stripped for the struggle with realities and then you are where much of it is frittered away in the getting of gewgaws.

"Watch China and the contest between Russian diplomacy and ours over that country. There lies the material for the devastating world conflict."

Lots of Sympathy But No Jobs.

TORONTO.—"What the unemployed want is not doles, not tag days, they want work or full maintenance," declared Albert Arnold of the Toronto Trades and Labor council unemployment committee in a speech in the Labor Temple. He said that after a three week canvass of factories and business men, nothing had been obtained but sympathy. Not a dozen jobs were found.

Discussion of Our Party's Immediate Tasks

PROPAGANDA OF PURE ABSTRACTION

A Criticism of the Minority Thesis.
By ALEXANDER BITTELMAN.

The fact that the minority thesis is replete with beautiful phrases about "action" and "struggles" and "united front from below," and such like, does not mean anything so far as the basic outlook of the minority is concerned. Substantially and basically the minority thesis is nothing more than a grandiloquent call for the propaganda of pure abstraction.

We shall see later that these abstractions do not possess even the virtue of being Communist. What the minority want us to do is to preach to the masses the abstract proposition of an ideal class-party, not the Workers Party but the image of a farmer-labor party. We shall also see that the advocacy of this "ideal" farmer-labor party means in effect, irrespective of the pious wishes of the minority, killing faith in the Workers' Party and preventing its growth into a mass Communist Party.

"No Class Political Action Without a Farmer-Labor Party."

This is the basic idea of the minority, that class political action is impossible without a farmer-labor party. Here is what they say in the thesis:

"If we abandon the united front policy politically by abandoning the slogan 'For a Class Farmer-Labor Party,' we will surrender the most effective agitational weapon."

Now, mark the meaning of that sentence. It says, if we abandon the farmer-labor party slogan we thereby abandon the united front on the political field. This means, according to the minority, that the only way open to the Workers Party to arouse the masses to independent political action is thru a campaign for a farmer-labor party.

This is interesting. It shows a very peculiar (for Communists) conception of political action. Just consider the following: Up until now we were all laboring under the idea that a campaign against injunctions is political action. Now we find that it isn't because there is no labor party. So says the minority.

Last year when we attempted, with quite some success, to arouse the masses for the protection of the foreign-born workers, we thought we were arousing them for independent political action. Now we are told that we were all wrong because no political action is possible without the magic slogan "For a Class Farmer-Labor Party."

During the past two years we were also conducting a wide united front campaign for the defense of the Michigan prisoners. We thought that it was political action and of the "purest" kind such as to satisfy even such puritan abstractionists as Comrades Lovestone and Ruthenberg. Now we find that we were laboring under a delusion, because the only way to arouse the masses to independent political action is thru a farmer-labor party!

Another Pearl.

And here is something which is even more stunning than that. I quote from point seven (7), summary of minority thesis. It reads:

"The slogan of a class farmer-labor party is such a slogan. It tends to develop political consciousness amongst the masses."

Please, digest the deep reasoning of the above phrase. It says that the farmer-labor party slogan tends to develop the political consciousness of the masses. This being so, we are bound to conclude that we were all wrong again.

Look here. We have a program for the unemployed. It calls for the organization of the unemployed workers for a struggle against the capitalists and their government on the basis of concrete immediate demands to relieve the sufferings of the unemployed. We thought this was a good way of developing the political consciousness of the unemployed masses. Why? Because we were laboring under the idea (accepted by Marx, Lenin, and the whole Communist International) that the best, if not the only way of developing the political consciousness of the masses is to bring these masses into motion and struggle on the basis of their most elementary economic needs and thereby bringing them into conflict with the capitalist state.

We thought that when a Communist Party arouses the masses to strike for higher wages and shorter hours; when it succeeds in leading the masses in fight against child-labor exploitation or the high cost of living, it is thereby setting on foot a movement which tends to bring the masses into conflict with the agents of the capitalist state, thereby developing the political consciousness of the masses. We thought also that it was the business of a Communist Party to see to it that these elementary mass-movements arising from the burning economic needs should produce the maximum of political understanding in the minds of the workers.

Now we find that we were all wrong. And so were Marx, Lenin, and the Communist International. Why? Because the slogan "For a Class Farmer-Labor Party" is the only way of developing the political consciousness of the masses. So says the minority.

Still Another Great Idea.

The brilliancy of the minority is blinding! The depth of their analysis is unfathomable. Just read Comrade Ruthenberg's article in the December issue of the Workers' Monthly. You will find this:

"The reason why the slogan (For a Mass Farmer-Labor Party.—A. B.) remains a potent slogan for our party to use as the basis of its united front maneuvers on the political field is because capitalism and the intensification of the class struggle remain."

Read it again, please. Memorize it. And then ask yourself, what does it all mean? It means that because capitalism in the United States remains in existence (a great discovery!) and because the class struggle is intensifying, therefore . . . Long live the Farmer-Labor Party!

Strange, very strange. We know (unless we are wrong in this, too) that in Germany also capitalism remains in existence, and in France and in a few more countries in the world. We also know that in some of the countries where capitalism still remains in existence the class struggle is much more intense than in the United States. And yet the Communist Parties over there do not seem to feel the burning need for a farmer-labor party slogan. How do you explain it?

The Missing Link.

Yes, yes, we know. There is one link missing here. We go back to the minority thesis and we find it. It is this: The only way the masses in the United States can enter into independent political action is thru a farmer-labor party.

By inserting this missing link we have saved the logic, merely the formal logic, of Comrade Ruthenberg's article, but not its Communist logic. The minority has still to prove that no working class struggle is political unless connected with the slogan or expressed thru the organization of a farmer-labor party. When they succeed in proving the correctness of this, they will have succeeded in proving that Marx, Lenin, and the Communist International were all totally wrong.

Now to conclude. The potency (the Communist potency) of the slogan "For a Farmer-Labor Party," depends neither upon the existence of capitalism (the beast is around in some other countries and yet they do not chase it with a slogan for a farmer-labor party), nor upon the general intensity of the class struggle. It depends upon a combination of secondary factors which produce an actual movement of masses towards a new party. This situation prevailed in the United States until about May, 1924, but it does not prevail now. The masses which are dissatisfied with the two old capitalist parties—as parties—have now found their haven in the LaFollette movement. As far as building a new party is concerned; the masses are now at rest.

The way to set these masses again in to motion is thru their immediate economic and political needs. The tactic to be pursued toward this end is the tactic of the united front from below. This is the correct Communist position.

OUR FARMER-LABOR POLICY

By SYLVAN A. POLLACK

In the Central Executive Committee statement on the results of the elections, appearing in the Nov. 7th issue of the DAILY WORKER, we read: "A general agitation campaign by the Workers Party under the slogan of 'For a Mass Farmer-Labor Party,' would not be profitable. The policy of apply the united front tactic by attempting to form a mass farmer-labor party of which the Workers Party would be a part, is not adaptable to the present period."

In plain language, the majority of the C. E. C. of our party feel that the time has arrived to dump overboard our united front tactic of the farmer-labor party, and as they say latter, in the statement: "Our chief task of the immediate future is not building of such a farmer-labor party but the strengthening and developing of the Workers Party . . ."

No one can find fault with that part of the statement which calls for the strengthening and development of our party, but when it is claimed that it must be at the expense of our united front tactic of the farmer-labor party, I must disagree.

It is not difficult to state that we are going to come before the American workers and poor farmers with a "pure" Communist program. To shout, "Forward to the Soviets!" all that is necessary is a loud voice. But that does not solve the question which is not quite so simple. Are we, with our small influential party able to successfully come out with such tactics and successfully rally the workers to our standard. Another thing, is the farmer-labor party movement so dead at the present period of our existence that we can completely forget about it? Have those who in the past believed in it, given up the ghost? Have the masses of the workers and poor farmers who had hopes of a national farmer-labor party being born before its embryonic parts were swallowed by the LaFollette movement forgotten all about their aspirations? I believe not. And furthermore, I feel that a large part of the masses could tell the difference between a bona-fide farmer-labor party on the one hand and a so-called third party on the other. As proof, let us examine the vote in Minnesota, and we find that Magnus Johnson, running as a farmer-labor candidate polled a much larger vote than LaFollette, who while accepting the support of the farmer-labor party, yet ran as an independent.

While our C. E. C. may not realize it, I feel confident that a large part of the workers could tell the difference between real independent working class political action, as represented by a farmer-labor party and independent heterogenous third partyism as represented by LaFollette. let us not forget that we were comparatively successful in the farmer labor party movement considering that the majority of it supported LaFollette.

We have only to look at the large vote polled by comrades Youngdahl and Emme in Minnesota, who ran as farmer-labor party candidates and at the same time proclaimed that they were Communists. To this can be added the election of Comrade A. C. Miller, who was elected to the North Dakota state legislature in spite of the opposition of the official heads of the farmer-labor party movement.

Does that look as though the farmer-labor party tactics of our party have outlived their usefulness?

The fact that two large unions brought in resolutions in favor of the formation of a labor party, (not a liberal or third party) before the A. F. L. Convention at El Paso, Texas, is another important feature that must not be overlooked.

The writer, was an active participant in the past election campaign as an out door speaker and every place where he spoke and threw the meeting open for question a desire for a farmer-labor party was noticed.

The masses have been confused by LaFollette, but if we continue to explain and educate them, they will see the difference.

At the present we should proclaim our willingness to engage in a real united front thru a farmer-labor party. We would show that we are different than the socialist party, the Mahoneys and the local farmer-labor parties that dropped the idea of a farmer-labor party at the call of La Follette. That our oranization is one that the masses can really rely upon; that stands for a united front, for independent political action of the working class.

We would keep the banner of a farmer-labor party unfuried to rally the masses to us, the Workers Party, which in the final conflict is the only organization to lead the workers to the dictatorship of the proletariat and the Soviet Government. But at the present period we must rally the workers to us with the slogan: "We stand for a Farmer-Labor Party!"

WITH THE YOUNG WORKERS

CONDUCTED BY THE YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE

CALL FOR THE NATIONAL CONVENTION OF THE YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE OF U. S.

To All Nuclei and Branches of the Young Workers League of America!
Comrades:—

More than a year and a half has elapsed since the last national convention of the Young Workers League in 1923. In that period of time our league has grown immeasurably and its influenced has been increased. Its work has been broadened towards a mass basis.

The first important steps have been taken towards the total reorganization of the league on the basis of shop nuclei; our press has become greatly improved in character and circulation; we have definitely participated in a number of struggles of the young working class, in strikes and in trade unions; a children's movement has been built up which is starting to engage in the school struggle; our anti-militarist work has begun to take a clearly defined form; and we have knit more closely than ever, the struggles, discussions and activities of our party, the Workers Party, with the work of our own organization.

Our mass activity has placed us plainly on the road towards becoming a Young Leninist League.

In the course of the time between the last convention and the present day, we have gained greatly in experience, rectified our mistakes, and have been confronted with new problems. This, together with the growth of our league and the necessity of greater clarification and unified action in the face of the coming great struggles against the oppressing ruling class, has impelled your national committee to issue this call for a national convention of the Young Workers' League of America.

Our national convention will be confronted with serious and important tasks. American imperialist capitalism is preparing itself for greater and more bitter onslaughts against the working class, the first victims of which are the unorganized working youth. New imperialist slaughters menace the proletariat of this country. The horrors of unemployment threaten to increase in the future months. The exploitation of working class children grows in volume and brutality. Wage cuts, longer hours, wars, unemployment, greater miseries face the workers and their weakest section, the youth. In this situation our young Communist league must outline its future tasks on the basis of its past program in order to go ahead more unitedly and firmly in our work of rallying the masses of young workers to our banner.

The date of the convention has not yet been set, but it will take place immediately after the convention of the Workers Party. The Workers Party is to hold its convention shortly. The Fourth Bureau Session and the Fourth World Congress of the Young Communist International have already been held. Our convention must take place in the immediate future.

Comrades thruout the country are urged to immediately begin the discussion of the problems that will come up before our convention. In a short time the exact date of the convention will be issued together with the basis of representation of delegates and the agenda. Discussion should be guided by the resolution on the subject passed by the national executive committee of the league. As soon as the exact date of the convention is issued, all preparations should be made for the holding of city and district conventions to elect delegates to the national convention.

All together for the convention of the Young Workers League of America!

Join for the work towards a young Leninist League!

With Communist Greetings,
The National Executive Committee,
Young Workers League of America.
John Williamson, Executive Sec'y.

YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE ACTIVITIES. LOCAL NEW YORK.

The membership campaign which the District Executive Committee has instituted has opened with the formation of four new branches in a period of less than two weeks. If the rest of the campaign runs at this rate the district will have doubled its membership before the campaign is over.

The new branches organized are, Lower Bronx, Yorkville and Yonkers, all English and Newark Jewish comrades living in this territory should at once communicate with the district office and we will supply them with the time and place of meeting of these new branches.

New branches are now in the process of formation in the following places: Newark, Astoria, Ridgewood, East New York and West Side. All these are to be English branches.

Respond to Shop Nucleus Work.

Great enthusiasm has also developed for the nucleus work. Aside from the many fractions being formed, fractions that will surely be real nuclei before the next two months are over, there has been organized the Rosa Luxemberg shop nucleus as a basic unit of the organization. The nucleus is at the present time carrying on a strong campaign in the shop where many young workers are employed making garments for the parasites, to increase its membership. The nucleus had recently collected $50 for the Paterson strikers in the shop.

On the industrial field we have greatly intensified our work. Many of our comrades are joining the unions and getting into activity. Youth fractions are being formed in the needle trades and the building trades.

The campaign for the fund to make the Young Worker a weekly by Jan. 1 has aroused a great deal of enthusiasm. Money is coming in and all the branches will surely raise their quota. One branch, Bronx Jewish, has set the example by raising its quota from the amount set by the district committee, $30.00, to $100.00.

The league has already opened its training school, where a selected number of comrades will be given a fundamental training in Marxism-Leninism and organizational subjects to prepare them for leadership in the Communist movement. In addition the district committee has arranged class in the fundamentals of Communism in every branch.

The district committee has just issued the first number of the Bulletin, the official organ of the district committee edited by Comrade Herbert Zam. This Bulletin is devoted to organizational questions within the district only, and has for its aim a closer relation between the members of the league and the District Executive Committee, so that there may be a better understanding of the tasks and the best methods of performing them.

The activities of the New York district show that the comrades in New York know how to carry into life the decisions of the Y. C. I. and that they are building a mass Communist league in district No. 2.

BRICKLAYERS IN UNIONS PROVE BEST WORKERS

Do Better Work Than Non-Unionists

By LELAND OLDS.
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

You get more bricks laid per hour and your work will cost you less if you demand a straight union job in Chicago.

This conclusion, which is a body blow to the pet argument of the open shoppers, is based on figures on labor productivity and costs in certain building trades gathered and published by the U. S. bureau of labor statistics.

In Chicago this investigation covered 24 jobs involving the laying of nearly 400,000 bricks in straight-away wall construction. Of these bricks 150,149 were laid under strict union conditions, 130,500 on nonunion jobs and 117,333 under Landis award which is treated by the bureau as mixed union and nonunion.

The number of bricks laid, the number of hours paid for and the rate per hour on the job are shown for each of the 24 jobs in the table:

Job	No. of Brick	Hours	Rate
Union	13,630	91	$1.50
"	12,960	104	1.50
"	4,320	32	1.50
"	1,139	8	1.50
"	73,800	356	1.55
"	1,720	12	1.55
"	2,412	10	1.55
"	2,593	26	1.63
"	33,400	228	1.65
"	2,375	17	1.50
"	2,040	13	1.50
Nonunion	5,500	36	1.50
"	8,000	80	1.50
"	117,000	873	1.55
Landis award	4,156	24	1.50
" "	4,563	37	1.50
" "	10,500	72	1.65
" "	4,125	16	1.50
" "	3,240	23	1.50
" "	6,125	32	1.65
" "	4,300	30	1.60

" "	9,274	75	1.70
" "	28,000	201	1.50

Scabs Make Poor Showing

From these figures it appears that in 1923, when the investigation was made, bricklayers on union jobs laid 150,149 bricks in 898 hours for a total wage of $1,416.97. They averaged 167 bricks per hour with a wage cost $8.92 per 1000.

In sharp contrast on nonunion jobs averaged 133 bricks per hour, laying 103,500 in 989 hours for a total of $1,526.38 in wages. The wage cost of nonunion jobs averaged $11.70 per 1000 brick or nearly $3 a 1000 more than union jobs. Similarly under the Landis committee bricklayers averaged 148 per hour at an average cost of $10.80 per 1,000.

TAX REPORT REVEALS TERRIFIC EXPLOITATION OF LABOR IN WILLIAM MORGAN BUTLER'S TEXTILE MILLS

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Who prospered under the brand of prosperity dispensed in the Harding-Coolidge regime?

Corporation income tax returns uncovered in Massachusetts show that William Morgan Butler, head of the republican national machine and Cal's political godfather, was among the chief beneficiaries.

Butler's New Bedford textile mills appear to have accumulated profits during 1923 at rates of $25.20 and $16.85 a share of common stock.

Publication of income tax returns has given the public a glimpse of the profits being made by a number of textile companies whose financial reports have been studiously withheld. These are companies owned by a few wealthy families who probably are not anxious to have the contrast between their christian professions and their cottonmill exploitation brought too glaringly to public notice.

The profits of 9 of these concerns together with the income tax returns from which they are estimated are shown in the table:

Textile Company	Tax paid	1923 profits	Per share
American Felt	$104,413	$800,000	$36.25
Sagamore Mfg. Co.	100,433	790,000	25.00
Seule Mills	61,454	442,346	33.11
Quisset Mills	50,317	352,219	16.43
Hosiery Mfg. Co.	54,321	380,247	24.98
New Bedford Cotton
Mills Corp.	44,229	309,603	25.20
Nevild Mfg. Co.	31,399	219,793	18.31
Pierce Mfg. Corp.	24,301	170,128	28.35
Booth Mfg. Co.	21,101	147,756	11.25

The two Butler enterprises in this list are the Quisset Mills and the New Bedford Cotton Mills corporation. Without running down the profits of other Butler concerns it is apparent that the new senator from Massachusetts was well supplied with cash with which to back his protective tariff candidate for president.

Women Supplant Men In Cigarmaking

NEW YORK.—Women are doing most of the work in the cigar and cigarette plants of the United States, the committee on regional planning of New York and its environs, declares. Fifty-eight percent of the cigar and cigarette workers are women and girls compared to 19.5 per cent in other industries—that is, proportionately, three times as many women and girls as in other industries. The drift of the industry, the report shows, is away from the big cities to the smaller industrial communities where men are employed at other work—as in the coal towns—and their wives and daughters can be bought cheaply by the tobacco concerns.

Ibanez Is Small Potatoes

NEW YORK.—Experts from Alfonso Unmasked, V. Blasco Ibanes' new book against the Spanish monarch, which are being made public here do not indicate any wide social consciousness in Ibanez' rebellious mind. He sets out to prove that Alfonso was partial to the Germans during the war, not that he is hostile to the workers and tillers of the soil. Radical Spanish groups in New York point to the criticism he has made of wage earner's revolts. What Ibanez wants is merely capitalist republicanism.

CLOTHING WORKERS IN CHICAGO COLLECT FUNDS FOR PATERSON STRIKERS

Hyman Schneid of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America turned in $22.50 for the benefit of the strikers in Paterson, New Jersey. He said the clothing workers of Chicago showed fine feeling of solidarity when they willingly made donations to assist the silk strikers.

N. Botento turned in $13.30 for the strike fund and said that more would be coming next week.

Workers everywhere are urged to make contributions to the Paterson Silk Workers' strike. Send the money in to Room 303, 166 W. Washington St.

Brindell, Building Trades Czar, on Eve Of Leaving Prison

SING SING PRISON, New York, Dec. 1.—Robert P. Brindell, prize labor faker of the New York City building trades and one of the pillars of Tammany Hall, is not finding it so hard as political prisoners do to get out of the penitentiary. He will leave prison the day after Christmas "on parole."

Brindell was known as a "czar" in the building trades. The contractors did not mind having such crooks as Brindell controll the unions, as long as he controlled them for the contractors, but when he used his control to gouge graft from contractors for himself, they had him put away for three years as a lesson in deportment.

He is estimated to have cleaned up a million dollar fortune while in control of the building trades unions, and now that he has learned his lesson of how to treat contractors, the state has released him with the understanding that hereafter he graft off the unions and not from the contractors.

Labor Must Fight State Cossack Bill in Next Legislature

Another attempt of the employers to push thru "military police bills" in the Illinois house and senate, providing a constabulary which will be used as a strikebreaking agency in time of strikes is expected to be made at the next session of the Illinois state legislature.

Henry M. Dunlap, senator from Champaign who has already introduced three constabulary bills in the senate, all of which were defeated, and representative Howard P. Castle of Cook county, are expected to sponsor the bill in the sepate and house respectively.

The previous bills introduced provide for a military police force entirely free of local responsibility, under the control of a "commanding officer" known as "superintendent of the Illinois state police," who is to be appointed for life. Members of the state constabulary, the proposed bill provides, are to have absolute power to make arrests, and to search, even without warrants.

Overgaard to Speak At Detroit T. U. E. L. Meeting Sat., Dec. 6

COAL COMPANY HEADS IGNORE CONSTITUTION

Only Use It When It Suits Their Needs

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—If a private citizen is set upon in a closed company mining town and assaulted and thrown into jail he can claim no damages from the coal company which employs these thugs, a verdict in the Supreme Court of New York finds.

Even though the lawlessness of the assault were established by the conviction of the assailants in a court of law and the unwarranted character of the arrest of the thugs' victim proved by the local records showing that he had been promptly discharged it makes no difference to the New York Supreme Court. The coal company is exonerated from blame and payment of damages.

Absolves Coal Company

The decision in question absolves the Vinton Collieries company, incorporated in New York, for responsibility for the assault and arrest of Arthur Garfield Hays, prominent New York attorney, who made a test of the right of free speech in the gunman ruled town of Vintondale, Pennsylvania, May 27, 1922, during the big coal strike.

Hays went there representing the United Mine Workers that organizers were being unlawfully kept out of the town and union men beaten up.

Seized By Gunmen

Hays, other attorneys and newspapermen visited the town and narrowly escaped being ridden down by the dozen mounted coal and iron police there. On insisting on remaining in the town till a justice of the peace had been seen relative to the laws relating to free speech Hays and the writer, who represented the Federated Press were seized by the gunmen at the direction of Lloyd I. Argosat.

Coal Baron's Judge

After two and a half years Hays' suit for $35,000 damages came before Judge William Harmon Black of the New York Supreme Court. The judge would not allow records of the gunmen's conviction to be presented nor evidence as to the barring of visitors from the closed town. Black ruled also that Hays could claim no damages for the indignity of the arrest.

The verdict means that this illegally closed town—one of many—can continue to fester as far as the court is concerned. The case may be appealed.

New York and London Bankers Extend Credit to German Railroads

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—Banking houses in New York and London are advancing credit amounting to 15 million dollars to the German state railway company, a private company organized in accordance with the Dawes plan to operate the railroads.

The money advanced is to be used for temporary working capital in order that the German railroads may be placed on a money-making basis. Three-quarters of the proceeds will go to the directors—that is, to the bankers of the Allied countries, in whose hands has been placed the complete control over this field of German industry. The remainder of the proceeds goes to the German government.

The financing of a private German railway company assures greater profits and speedier payment of reparations for the Allied bourgeoisie, which is now in a position to lengthen the workday and lower the wages of the workers on these railroads. Moreover, under the terms of the Dawes plan the directors of German industry have the right to maintain the proper order in the country—or, in other words, there must be no revolution of the working class since that might impair efficiency on the roads.

Basil Manly, the noted statistician, in his pamphlet, "Are Wages Too High?" sums up the present condition of the standard of living of the working masses in the United States as follows:

"With the exception of a few isolated occupations that were miserably underpaid in 1900, no class or group of workers has succeeded in maintaining unimpaired the real value of their wages as measured by the buying power which they possessed in 1900.

"With the exception of a few isolated and exceptionally skilled trades, the wages of American workers are insufficient, without supplement from other sources, to provide for the subsistence of a family consisting of husband, wife, and three minor children, much less maintain them in that condition of 'health and reasonable comfort' which every humane consideration demands."

LETTER OF AN OLD FRENCH WORKER TO THE RED RELIEF

We publish the following letter of an old French worker to the International Red Relief as a wonderful document of labor solidarity. The old worker regrets that he is too old and too poor to take a child of a German fellow worker, of an "enemy" as the bourgeois school and press would say.

He gives his last penny for the support of his German comrades who suffer behind prison walls. Nothing can deprive this old father of his belief in victory and future. Let him be a shining example of devotion and solidarity to all workers, men and women, and particularly to the working class youth!

Paris, Aug. 31, 1924.

My dear Comrades:—I want to say a few words to you to win your confidence. I am an old man of 68 years. During the war of 1870 I was 15 years old and since that time I live in France because I am an Elsacian. I have seen and experienced much in my youth and have learned and understood that all human beings are equal and that all poor people are oppressed, whether they speak French, German or any other language.

Communist Sun Shines Everywhere

My confidence in the future is great. 50 years ago there was still a terrible darkness in the world and today the Communist sun shines everywhere and its beams reach the most remote countries. Everywhere is struggle—even in far off China. In England and France the Communist parties are growing.

In the factory where I work many workers join the Red Relief and collect money for the German children. On every pay day I take 50 to 60 francs to the Red Relief. The Red Relief is international. We want to support the oppressed and inspire them with hope.

The beginning of all things is difficult. But once the stone has fallen, it falls more and more quickly. Progress is slow in the beginning but gets quicker and quicker later on.

In the last war the eyes of many people have been opened. The immense slaughter has made clear to the oppressed what Karl Marx taught. Many poor devils cannot read, but the horrible war was an immense book which was understood by all poor people and which told them that the capitalists have deceived us all the time. Thus we have become brothers.

Moscow the Capital of the World

All states have so many debts that they cannot pay them. We will have still much to fight and to suffer, but whatever may come, we will be victorious. Moscow is the capital of the world. Recently the fifth world congress took place. The Communists of all countries have gathered there. Russia is very powerful, it is the heart of the world.

Thus, my dear comrades, be patience! Patience and good hope! We shall not abandon you! We have taken German children to France and the Red Relief gives money to your families. I would have been so glad to take a German child, but I am too poor and old. What we suffer in our struggle is for our dear children. Life will be better for them. A life in peace and for themselves and no more for the capitalists, no more war, but equality, liberty and fraternal love. This is our aim. For this future we suffer and die.

My comrades send you with me their best greetings.

Your good friend,
Joseph Mehl.

WANT AND STARVATION STALK THRU THE SOUTH AS JOBS FAIL WORKERS

CHARLESTON, S. C.—Want and starvation is stalking abroad in the south. Work is not to be had. Banks in many places have closed their doors. Several bankers in South Carolina are held by the courts for illegal banking. One banker, upon conviction, killed himself.

A headline in a Charleston paper reads: Family Here in Dire Need, Man Appeals for Work. Wife Ill—Children Hungry. The Associated Charities is making an earnest appeal for help for a young man who is very anxious to secure work. He is willing to do any kind of honest work. This man has a family in desperate need. A visit to the home revealed the fact that the family was without food. His wife is ill, and there are two little children, the charity worker reported. The case is typical.

CLEVELAND, Dec. 1.—"I'd rather be sheriff of Cuyahoga county than president of the Union Trust Co.," a Cleveland politician remarked during the recent campaign.

Why the sheriff's office is such a tasty morsel in the politician's mouth is revealed by a suit brought by a taxpayer against Sheriff Cody Stannard, asking that worthy to pay back to the county $33,000. That is the amount, according to the taxpayer, that Stannard has placed in his own pocket by overcharging the county for feeding prisoners.

Hires Belly-Robber

The graft works this way: The county allows 75c a day for feeding each prisoner. The sheriff hires a cook (known in the prisoners' parlance as a belly-robber) who hammers down the cost per day to a few pennies. The rest goes into the sheriff's pocket.

The Ohio supreme court has decided that the taxpayer has a right to force Stannard to return his "profit" of $33,000, the result of one year's activities in starving county prisoners. The sheriff himself hurriedly paid a visit to his confederate, the county prosecutor, offering to return $5,000 to the county treasurer.

Sheriff's Job a Jolly Plum

Those innocents who have gazed in astonishment at the frenzied efforts made by aspiring politicians to grab the sheriff's job, and have wondered at the huge amounts spent by candidates to attain this plum, have the key in the prison food bill. The system is worked not only in Cleveland, but in nearly every city of the country and is considered legitimate graft for the sheriff's office.

N. Y. Herald-Tribune Is Sudden Convert to Freedom of Press

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK.—It all depends whose ox is gored. When hundreds of workingmen were jailed during the war for exercising their rights of free speech; when since the war workingmen were sent to Sing Sing for exercising their rights of free speech and free press the New York Tribune said Amen! It even assent, too, to the persecution of papers which exercised the rights of free press.

But now the leading editorial of the Herald-Tribune Nov. 26 is The Freedom of the Press and the feature of the editorial is the text of the first amendment to the federal constitution:

Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the government for a redress of grievances.

The Herald-Tribune is calling on the constitution of the United States to protect its friend—Attorney General Stone who has had it indicted, charged with unlawful printing and publishing of income tax returns. Ogden Reid, president New York Tribune, inc., which owns the Herald-Tribune said his defence will raise two contentions: (1) that the act of congress on which the indictments were based did not prohibit the publication of income taxes paid; (2) that that statute is unconstitutional, because it violates the freedom of the press clause of the constitution.

Scientists Inherit Church Position

NEW YORK.—"Why has the moral supremacy of the church passed to the scientist?" asked Dr. Stuart L. Tyson, of an audience at Grace church. "You know that it has. It is because the scientist seeks truth without prejudice. He changes his views on the acquisition of knowledge, while the Christian church defends old things."

That Railway Wage Increase

The eight per cent wage increase received by the engineers' and firemen's brotherhoods on the western railway lines, which the railway labor board appears to have granted merely to show its authority in such matters, will not settle the real controversy which revolves around both the power claimed by the railway labor board and certain changes in the working rules upon which the 8 per cent raise is made contingent.

These changes, in methods of computing running time and the re-classification of different kinds of work into grades paying a lower rate, have been accepted by the officialdom of the railway unions on eastern roads, but only in the face of much discontent on the part of the more militant membership.

The major question, that of the right claimed by the unions to deal directly with the railway companies and not thru the railway board, is still open. By this maneuver, however, the railway board obviously hopes to disorganize the opposition to it as the official expression of the railway influence in government and pave the way to a complete surrender to its authority.

Wage increases secured thru concessions weakening the control of the unions over the job conditions of their membership are not victories but defeats. If the membership of the engineers' and firemen's unions have not already learned this, they will in the near future.

"The major question of the revolution is the question of power," said Lenin and this applies to every struggle of the workers whether it be for the overthrow of capitalism or merely for more gasoline for the Lizzie on Sunday.

Pure Democracy

Official figures are now pouring in to show that approximately half of the eligible voters participated in the November elections. This is especially meaningful because of the strenuous efforts made by the employers' associations thruout the country to get a large voting "turnout."

The Communists have always maintained that the parliamentary structure itself is not conducive to an unrestrained, an unlimited expression of the will of the masses. The artificial, the arbitrary bicameral divisions do not make for the facility of expressing mass opinion. In fact, the present parliamentary method of voting only tends to confuse the masses. It throws together huge numbers on a common basis which doesn't exist. While organically suited to maintain and perpetuate the rule of the employing class, the present parliamentary structure pretends to be based on the non-existence of economic classes.

A glance at this phase of our "pure democracy" shows that nineteen of the forty-eight states have cast a smaller vote this year than in 1920. In South Carolina, for instance, only 8% of the eligible voters went to the polls. For the whole country the present figures tend to indicate that about 52% of those eligible to vote participated.

There are numerous reasons for such display of lack of interest on the part of so large a mass of voters. First and foremost among these are: the unfitness of the system of voting itself, the various restrictive circumstances like residential and other qualifications, interference by the bosses with the exercise of even the limited franchise, and general disgust with parliamentary voting as an institution.

The Communists propose to establish a Workers' and Farmers' Republic based on the mass organizations of the working and poor farming masses. In this republic, men and women will express themselves politically thru their workshops, in the places where the issues are nearest and clearest to them. In this Soviet Republic, the exploiters, instead of the workers, will be disfranchised. This will be a government of, by and for the workers instead of the pure capitalist democracy of today.

"Vigorous Action"

The direct connection between the murder of colonial workers and the profits of imperialism is seen in the fact that stocks of the companies which control the Sudan irrigation project rose on the British market when the announcement was made that the Gezira area was to be extended.

The same stocks fell when the Sudanese rose in revolt but as soon as they had been safely slaughtered the stocks rose again.

"City circles," says a London dispatch, "unanimously endorsed the vigorous action of the government."

Speed the day when "vigorous action" will leave on the battlefields not the corpses of workers, but those of the silk-hatted fraternity of plunder.

Coal Diggers versus Gold Diggers

Hardly a day has gone by since the ratification of the agreement in the anthracite district which followed the election of the Lewis-tool Cappellini as district president, that a strike, growing out of unadjusted grievances, has not been going on with the officials trying to drive the rank and file miners back to work.

At present 11,000 anthracite miners are on strike. President Lewis, enjoying the hospitality of the Mexican government in Mexico City, has wired the miners to get back to work or lose their charter. This is the kind of support that warms the heart of the coal mine owners and makes them thank their god for such safe and sane labor leaders as the Lewis variety.

There is another angle to this situation. An election is coming in the United Mine Workers of America and the anthracite miners, after more than a year's experience with the agreements forced on them by the Lewis machine, after receiving numerous communications from their president, all containing the same phrase—"Go back to work"—are not so enamored of the Lewis-Cappellini machine as they once were.

Lewis probably wants to revoke a few charters of doubtful locals, following the ancient custom in the United Mine Workers, which makes the interest of the membership secondary at all times to that of the officials.

In the anthracite district as elsewhere the miners, with the progressive miners' committee taking the lead are learning that Lewis' agreements are made for and by the operators, that their chief purpose is to keep the miners digging coal while the officialdom tours the various districts and revises agreements for the benefit of the operators.

Organization of the left wing, control of the organization for the and by the membership instead of the operators and a nation-wide campaign of unionization bringing the unorganized miners into the U. M. W. of A., is all than can save this once powerful union from defeat in the next few years.

The coal digging rank and file against gold digging officials.

Congress Re-opens

The second session of the sixty-eighth congress just opened will be important not so much for what it will do or attempt to do as what it will disclose to be the plans of the various groups in the coming political struggles. At best congress is more of an indicator of the struggles fought outside before the masses than an arena of battle itself.

The first session of the sixty-eighth congress was held at a time when the processes of political disintegration were going on at a swift pace. The second session is being convened on the morrow after what appears to the superficial a downward trend in these disruptive processes of politics. In view of the more favorable conditions for the biggest business interests in the sixty-ninth congress, there is every likelihood that the reactionary republican forces will avoid sharp clashes in these closing days of the old congress. Such clashes can only hurt their case before the masses, much of whose support they won thru a campaign of terrorism, villification, intimidation and outright purchase of votes.

But let none make the mistake of thinking that the reactionaries, flushed with victory, will tarry long before consolidating their November victory. Their decision on removing LaFollette, Brookhart, Ladd and Frazier from their committee posts shows which way the wind of their temper blows.

In the coming sessions of congress there is every reason to believe that the so-called progressive forces will show an even weaker front than they did last year. The reactionaries will show a much stronger front. However, let no one conclude that this is proof that capitalist reaction is in the ascendency for a long time to come in the United States. We recall what happened to the Harding landslide within two years. The actual class struggles are in reality fought outside, fought outside the halls of congress by the working masses against the exploiters and their allies ranging from the trade union reactionary officialdom to the weak-kneed petty bourgeoisie. While the immediate outlook for clashes in congress is slim, the outlook for gigantic mass struggles is becoming more certain.

More Efficient Slavery

Judge Partridge of the California federal court has ruled in the case of William Burns, a member of the I. W. W., tried in his court because he was arrested in Yosemite Park, United States property, that slowing down of work is to be considered sabotage insofar as the state criminal syndicalism law is concerned.

The inference is that for slowing down on the job in California a worker can be sentenced to from one to fourteen years in the penitentiary under the provisions of the law.

There are a lot of people who think that slavery was abolished by the civil war. Our opinion is that it was made a little more efficient, for the simple reason that many workers actually believe they are free.

William H. Anderson, former head of the anti-saloon league, is out of Sing Sing where he was sent after being convicted of graft. He was paroled in the care of the salvation army. Birds of a feather have a habit of flocking together.

DEMAND RELEASE OF COMMUNISTS SAYS RED RELIEF OPEN LETTER SENT TO SECOND INTERNATIONAL

BERLIN, Germany, Dec. 1.—The International Red Relief has sent an open letter to the Second International, demanding that the Second International agitate for the release of Communists imprisoned in capitalist countries.

The executive committee of the Red International Relief exposes the hypocrisy of the "democratic pacifist" propaganda of the Second International, which seems to be used only to protect counter-revolutionary traitors imprisoned in Soviet Russia.

The open letter follows:

We address ourselves with this letter to the Second International and its affiliated socialist parties in the firm conviction that the workers will not allow them to leave this letter unanswered. The working class must receive clear and unequivocal information on the attitude of the Second International to our concrete proposal the purpose of which is the relief for tens of thousands of workers who are suffering in the prisons of the capitalists because they fought against capitalist oppression.

What Has Induced Us to Take This Step?

The press and the leading bodies of the Second International and its parties have been carrying on recently with special persistency a propaganda of so-called "democratic pacifism" which they say, will put an end to the civil war and will make impossible further imperialist wars.'

Our organization which stands on a revolutionary platform, never deceived itself on the true significance of this campaign the purpose of which is to mask the policy of robbery and violence of imperialism against the working class, against the colonial peoples and those peoples who have been defeated in the world war. The happenings of the last months have sufficiently exposed this socalled "pacifism." It is sufficient to mention the enslavement of Germany by the Dawes plan, the offensive of imperialism in China, Asia Minor and Africa, the preparation of armed intervention on the part of the league of nations against the Soviet Union and finally the continuous mass persecutions and acts of violence against Communist workers and revolutionists in the colonies and the refusal of the capitalists and of the Second International to bring about an amnesty.

How "Pacifism" Works.

"Pacifism" and its defenders, the Second International, are silent when it is a question of plundering peoples or oppressing workers, but the Second International immediately stands for the counter-revolution when it is a question of an attack against the Soviet Union, as was the case with the lamentable bandit action in Georgia. The demand for the liberation of the revolutionary workers in the prisons is raised louder and louder in all countries, but is not at all supported by the Second International and its affiliated parties. Naturally, also the capitalists refuse definitely to give an amnesty. All parties of the Second International make their "pacifism" only in connection with the menshevists, social revolutionists and anarchists who have been arrested in Soviet Russia because of preparation of counter-revolutionary attacks. Despite all reports stating that these prisoners in the prisons of the Soviet Union live in under the best possible circumstances the Second International does not stop in its campaign against the Soviet Union and opposes this campaign to the demands of the working class for the liberation of the prisoners in the capitalist countries.

Is this onesidedness accidental or does the Second International hold the view of supporting the counter-revolutionists in the Soviet Union?

Exchange Prisoners.

The parties of the Second International are in the governments of several states of capitalist Europe and support a number of other governments. Thus they could do much for the liberation of the political prisoners in the capitalist prisons. This circumstance induced us to make our proposals. We propose the following:

1. The Internationaal Red Relief and the Second International will, after previous agreement, see to it that the fate of the victims of the civil war is relieved.

(a) The International Red Relief will do everything in its power to induce the Soviet Union to exchange these persons in the prisons who, without shrinking from any means attempted to rob the workers and peasants of this country of their revolutionary acquisitions, for the prisoners of capital who suffer in the prisons of the capitalist states because they are accused of having fought against the capitalist rule in these states.

(b) The Second International and its affiliated socialist parties will utilize their influence on the governments of the capitalist states in order to induce them to open the doors of the political prisons and to release the revolutionary fighters in exchange for the counter-revolutionists in the prisons of the Soviet Union whom the Second International defended on many occasions.

Workers Await Answer.

2. If the Second International declares its agreement with this main proposal, the International Red Relief suggests that both organizations, for the purpose of the exchange of the prisoners, support each other by mutual information on the situation of the victims of the civil war. On the basis of the collected material this situation can be stated without prejudice.

A refusal of this proposal or the non-arrival of a public, official and unequivocal answer would justify our worst expectations and would expose the true value of all phrases and demagogic attacks of the Second International.

The workers of the world wait for the answer of the Second International.

Pittsburgh Mining District Gains One More Y.W.L. Branch

By CLARENCE MILLER.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Dec. 1.—The newly organized branch of the Young Workers' League in Rural Ridge, Pa. is the third branch in the mining towns in the Pittsburgh district. The branch when organized consisted of eight members but it is expected that the membership will increase considerably at the next meeting when the new recruits will bring the message of the Young Workers' League to the other young miners and workers in the town.

There are not many young miners in the town at present as most of the mines in the neighborhood are shut down. The miners are compelled to either leave or work in the steel mills.

An interesting incident at the organization meeting was the attendance of the father of one of the young miners, also a miner. He came to the meeting he said to find out what it was all about. On learning that a Communist organization was being formed and that they expected to fight for all the problems of the young workers in that town, he not only approved his son's joining the league but actively participated in discussing plans for the growth of the branch. After the meeting he talked to the party members present and it is expected he will join the party.

Open Shop Editors And Employers Shown To Be Flagrant Liars

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—A study of the productivity and costs of some of the building trades, made by the bureau of labor statistics, shows that while a bricklayer in Birmingham, Ala., laid 1,528 bricks in eight hours in straight-away wall construction, the average for 15 cities studied was only 1,365 bricks. In Indianapolis the day's work was 765 and in Boston 781.

A bulletin by the social action department, national catholic welfare conference, analyzing these returns, calls attention to the claim made by anti-union employers that bricklayers before the war laid 1,200 to 1,500 bricks per day, but that since the war they have dropped to 600 or possibly 800 as a day's output. The average shown in this government study is twice as high as the open shop editors and employers have asserted it to be.

25 PER CENT OF HOMES VISITED IN NEW YORK REVEAL CHILD LABOR

Child Workers in Tenement Houses.

Child labor was found to be prevalent in nearly a quarter of the 15,000 houses licensed to engage in home work in New York state, according to the 1924 report of the New York state commission to examine laws relating to child welfare.

The commission made an extensive study during 1924 of tenement manufacturing. Its report states, "Children of tender years—many of them under ten years of age—are commonly permitted or required to engage in this work." The commission recommended to the legislature as a result of its study that the list of trades in which homework is prohibited should be extended and that eventually homework should be prohibited.

BOSSES SILENCE GUNS DURING THE MONTHS PRECEDING ELECTION

WASHINGTON.—Use of the national guard in breaking strikes seems to have been less popular during the past year—leading up to the presidential campaign—than usual. The annual report of General Rickards, chief of the militia bureau in the war department, says there has "been a marked decrease during the preceding fiscal year in the number of states in which national guard troops have been called upon to aid in the preservation of law and order or to render emergency assistance in great disasters." The strength of the national guard June 30, 1924 was 174,322—a gain of 15 per cent since June 30, 1923.

THE GIFT OF ORIENTATION

Editor's Note.—Every day until publication has been completed, the DAILY WORKER will publish a new chapter from the book, "Lenin: The Great Strategist of the Class War," by A. Losovsky, secretary of the Red International of Labor Unions. The fourteenth chapter is entitled, "The Gift of Orientation."

Lenin possessed the exceptional ability of orientation and Marxian farsightedness. As a realist in class politics he quickly perceived the nature of bourgeois democracy. But it was in this field that great efforts had to be made to free oneself from historic traditions. For was not Lenin the founder of the social-democracy which had inscribed on its banner that the way to socialism lies thru democracy? Yet in spite of all this he was successful in destroying all fetishes of democracy. He succeeded in this because of the revolution which in its development had to overcome these democratic obstacles. He did not shrink even from dissolving the constituent assembly, which had been a sacred thing in the minds of many generations of Russian intellectuals. Political democracy was never able to blind his eyes to the social and economic problems of the revolution. As against bourgeois democracy he placed the democracy of the proletariat.

International reformism saw in this act of Lenin's his heaviest sin, while in reality it was one of his greatest contributions of the proletarian class struggle. The civil war in Russia had exposed the fractions and parties, which had been fighting under the banner of democracy and the constituent assembly, as real counter-revolutionists. The last years of struggle in the West have proved very convincingly that the democratic co-opera-

[illegible] democracy and the bourgeoisie is nothing more than betrayal of the working class.

PROTEST WHITE TERROR UNDER THE DAWES PLAN

Big Mass Meeting in New York City

(Special to the Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Dec. 1.—The Workers Party and the International Workers' Aid has arranged a mass protest meeting against the Dawes plan and the arrests and persecutions of Communists in Germany.

This meeting takes place Dec. 5 at the Labor Temple, 243 E. 84th street.

Every worker should attend this meeting. Be there to raise your voice in protest.

Organized capital is going mad in its brutality in forcing the Dawes plan upon the German workers. It has brot about a white terror in Germany which daily takes on more and more brutal forms.

With the adoption of the Dawes plan every day brings new attacks against the Communists with sentences of long terms in prison and hard labor for the revolutionary workers.

Shipping Board Busy Turning U. S. Ships to Private Ownership

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 1.—The United States shipping board has been busy consolidating American shipping lines and turning government ships over to American owners, according to the annual report made public today. It is not revealed in the report how much the private shipping corporations paid the government for these ships.

Among those buying ships from the government at an unknown figure was the Los Angeles shipping company which bought the "City of Los Angeles" and an ex-German vessel seized at the beginning of the war. Seven vessels of the so-called 502 foot class, described as "large, medium speed freight vessels with a limited but extremely comfortable passenger accommodation," were sold to the Dollar Steamship Line for operation in a round the world service.

The W. P. Grace company purchased two vessels for operation from Pacific coast ports to the West coast of South America. It is not stated how much the government lost on these sales or what the purchase price was.

FIVE MILITANT CARPENTERS ARE SUSPENDED FOR EXPOSING CROOKED DEAL OF OFFICIALS

Outdoing the worst cases of so-called justice ever administered by a capitalist court, five militant, active members of the Carpenters' Local Union No. 181 of Chicago, were suspended last Monday thru the connivance of General President William L. Hutcheson and president of the district council of carpenters, Harry Jensen, for having exposed the "open shop" agreement signed on behalf of the Chicago carpenters by this gentry.

Constitution and laws of the union were flagrantly violated in railroading this case thru to suspension. But then, what is law and constitution amongst crooks and labor fakers!

This action comes as a climax of counter-measures taken by the officials of the Carpenters' Union to subdue the struggle made by the rank and file workers in opposition to the infamous open shop agreement entered into by President Hutcheson and Harry Jensen.

Trick Aids Jensen's Reelection.

This agreement was signed just the day before the last district council elections and was heralded by the capitalist press as a victory for the Carpenters' Union. Undoubtedly in an effort to line up the votes behind Harry Jensen who had proved himself such a faithful tool of the bosses.

The trick worked: Harry Jensen and his staff were re-elected.

The agreement signed is almost word for word the same as the award handed down by Judge Landis in the summer of 1921 which the overwhelming majority of the workers refused to accept and which resulted in a mass protest demonstration participated in by 141,000 Chicago workers.

The agreement is based on the following principles: (1) That there shall be no limitations as to the amount of work a man shall perform during his working day. (2) That there shall be no restriction of the use of any raw or manufactured material except prison made.

Traitor Provisions in Agreement.

In other words there shall be no objection to handling non-union made material.

The agreement provided that the employers are at liberty to employ whomsoever they see fit whether union or non-union and there should be no stoppage or cessation of work for any cause whatever, individually or collectively, even the seabs of other trades may be employed on the same building.

All grievances are to be referred to an arbitration board which would have authority to decide the case, impose fines or to suspend or expell members of the Carpenters' Union.

Local Unions Protest.

Many locals protested this agreement and just prior to the International Convention held in Indianapolis, Ind. this summer, Carpenters' Local 181 adopted a protest resolution which stated that the agreement was to all intents and purposes the Landis "open shop" agreement and that the fruits of many hard fought victories had been given up and the Carpenters' Union of Chicago made a part of the "open shop" machinery to be used to force upon other trades the so-called American plan and to punish to the extent of suspension any members of the union who refuse to handle non-union made material or to work with strikebreakers or under the protection of police or gunmen.

The resolution resolved that Carpenters' Local 181 condemns the agreement as being detrimental to the interest of the carpenters and further condemns the method used in entering the agreement as being the cheapest kind of political trickery. It demand that the delegates to the 21st quadrennial convention of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America read the Chicago agreement and pass judgment upon the same before the adjournment of the convention.

Hutchesen Gets Busy.

This resolution was forwared to the convention but not even read before that body.

Shortly thereafter the arch labor faker, William L. Hutcheson, demanded that the local retract the resolution adopted and that charges be preferred against the ten members who were signatories to the resolution and that they be properly punished.

The recording secretary of the Local, Einar Larson, the pliant tool of Hutcheson, charged the ten members with violation of section 54, article A, B and C and for entering into a conspiracy with the publishers of the

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

UNLESS religion quickens its pace, civilization will go on the rocks, declared John D. Rockefeller, Jr., in a sermon to his Sunday school. What the wealthy oil can fears most is that the religious bunk which sends those severely affected by it into a trance, will lose its ability to dope the workers, and the latter, freed of one more chain with which capitalism binds them will strip the Rockefellers of the loot they have taken from the toil of labor. Last week we called attention to the fact that Rockefeller added fifty million dollars to his income in one day thru a rise in the price of oil stock. That amount is sufficient to keep many ministers worshipping the Lord as no much per prayer.

JUDGE JONES, of Illinois, democrat, was Len Small's opponent for the governorship of this state in the recent elections. Naturally, Jones did not think very much of Small, being his opponent, but the opposition was more bitter than usual even in elections. Jones frankly stated that if Small was not a crook, he, Jones, was a walking gooseberry. Small got away with two millions of the state's funds while he was treasurer. The voters elected him, thinking he might need some more. Jones, who was to clean things up, got cleaned up instead. But there is no hard feeling between Jones and Len. They were just playing the game.

A FEW days ago Len and Jones met in an elevator in the Sangamon country court house, Springfield. "By George, judge, I believe you are getting fat," remarked Len, as he moved his mitt into that of Jones, which was already on the way to meet Len's. "I ought not to be," said Jones, "seeing how hard I worked in the elections," acting at the same time as if Len were his favorite affinity, and not the champion burglar of the state. Small and Jones jollied each other on the ways of voters and they went their separate ways, Jones to try an innocent crook, perhaps, and Len to tell some other judge that a crook who can keep out of jail is the right kind of a crook. This is a tale to which anybody can attach his own moral.

NORTHWESTERN SHOPMEN WIN IN FIGHT AGAINST NEW OPEN SHOP DRIVE

By J. CHRISTOPHER.

The conflict between the shop craft unions and the Northwestern railroad shops over the discharge of union men by the management under the pretense that the agreement of 1921 provided for their taking such action, has been settled by the solidarity of the workers in backing up the shop crafts' chairman in a conference held Monday.

It was agreed that the forty union men who had been notified of dismissal, would be taken back and that the union, which had been trying in vain to get a painter to join, should take up the matter with him, his return being also agreed upon, and a little "moral suasion" used to make him line up.

During the election campaign thousands of copies of the DAILY WORKER were distributed at the gates of the Northwestern shops, and the DAILY WORKER'S story of the conditions over which the conflict arose was the subject of much favorable talk among the shopmen.

ARMY DICTATORSHIP DECLARED IN ESTHONIA AS THE NATION IS SHAKEN BY WORKERS' REVOLT

LONDON, Dec. 2.—Advices from Reval, Esthonia, via Copenhagen, indicate that the armed uprising of Communist workers growing out of the outrageous persecution of the leading party members, including the execution without trial of a prominent Communist member of parliament, nearly succeeded altho engaged in by only about 200 workers, part of whom were killed in action, another part shot after surrendering following exhaustion of munitions, and a third and larger group which escaped by the aid of friendly workers and are supposedly seeking refuge beyond the Soviet Russian lines.

Military Dictatorship Declared.

Altho the white guard government pretends that all is quiet and the revolt is "completely crushed" the fact that the parliament, from which the Communists and even the labor fraction has been unconstitutionally withdrawn by arrest, has voted emergency powers, proclaimed martial law and appointed General Laidonner to the position of military dictator, shows that the Esthonian capitalists and landlords are none too sure of the "loyalty" of the workers and peasants.

How the Fight Began.

In 1922 a leading Communist, Kingisepp, was murdered by the white guardists who were never even tried for the crime. Then the party headquarters was raided and destroyed by the white guards, this also going unpunished. The shop structure of the Communist made possible the continual fight after all raids and which have been unceasing.

Following the 1922 attacks front was built up on the concrete issues which beca general demands of the wh ing classes. On a basis of 13 Communists, lost the revolutionary labor unions left wing, landless peasants, joint ticket of candidates for the elections to parliament, which took place in the spring of 1923. As a result the social democrats were defeated and the Communists and groups in sympathy with them gained greatly.

To combat the influence of the Communists the capitalists used ruthless suppression. At the end of January 1924 over 250 active workers were arrested, including all the deputies representing the Communists and the labor fraction in both parliament and municipal councils, while the legal Workers Party, with its 105 locals, and the Workers' sports clubs together with 124 trade unions were dissolved by police and soldiery recruited from white guard bands.

A Strange Coincident.

After the arrests one man among the prisoners was released and it was understood that he was a police spy who intended to testify at the trials, if the government was going ot prosecute. This spy was shot dead on the streets shortly afterward, and no one was apprehended for it.

The farcical "trial" finally opened about two weeks ago before a military court which had decided the prisoners' "guilt" long before. In fact the "court" was composed of the same white guardists who had raided the Communists previously.

The Communists, refusing to acknowledge the jurisdiction or authority of such a "court" or, to countenance by silence the farce of such a "trial," began to make speeches against employers and landlords to the crowd in the courtroom, which listened disregarding and drowning out the solemn palaver of the army offi-

BELGIAN MINERS WIN SLIGHT PAY RAISE BY STRIKE

Police Used Violence; Miners Retaliated

BRUSSELS, Belgium, Dec. 2.—The barricades are down and temporary peace has returned to the Borinage basin mining district of Belgium.

The strike began many weeks ago with the demand of the miners for an increase in wages. The employers insisted on as 5 per cent reduction. A few of the employers met the workers' demands with small increases, less than the miners required. From time to time, since June mine locals went on strike and finally on Aug. 13 the strike was declared official and general. In September the matter was submitted to a board of arbitration, consisting largely of friends of the employers. But the employers refused to consider the arbitrators' mild suggestions, and the workers refused to return.

Then begain a police and miner struggle with the erection of barricades and determined fighting by the workers.

Eventually the employers offered to the striking miners an increase of 8 per cent which the miners accepted, after many protests, and the strike was ended. There is a strong tendency among the miners to take action unless their conditions are rapidly improved.

FREE STATERS MAY QUIT HELM OVER BOUNDARY

LONDON, Dec. 2.—That the Free State government may resign as a result of the disagreement over the competence of the boundary commission set up under the terms of the Anglo-Irish treaty, was the substance of a sensational story published in the Daily Mail today.

The prestige of the Daily Mail has suffered a damaging blow as a result of its part in the "Zinoviev forgery" and nobody believes that the lackeys of the British government who now run the Free State government, would quit their fat salaries because of any squabble over a boundary.

The president of the Irish Free State receives the rather respectable salary of fifty pounds a week, which is almost as much as a second class American labor faker draws for assisting the capitalists in keeping the workers in submission. To desert such a friendly payroll is believed to be beyond the capabilities of the good natured henchmen of British imperialism in the Cosgrave cabinet.

The refusal of Cosgrave and his associates to carry on the government would mean turning over Southern Ireland to the DeValera party, there being no other organized element now with either the necessary numerical strength or ambition to undertake such an effort.

Perhaps even the tory government will prefer to dicker with the Free State government rather than have another Egypt on its hands.

cause of the short notice, and it was decided to make the $10,000 the very minimum amount to be raised by the New York comrades.

The new insurance policies, in denominations of ten dollars, five dollars, and one dollar, have been distributed to the branch agents and funds are expected to begin to pour in immediately. Every Workers Party member and sympathizer will be asked to take out an insurance policy and make sure that the only English language daily newspaper published in the interests of the working class will have enough funds to not only keep going, but to grow.

Show Excellent Spirit.

Comrade Loeb declares, "The spirit of these New York comrades is excellent. They have added twelve hundred new subscribers to the DAILY WORKER in five weeks and they mean business in the DAILY WORKER builders' drive."

Comrade Loeb is on tour in the interests of the campaign to build the DAILY WORKER., Comrade Loeb was in Massachusetts yesterday, and will be in New York again today, then going to Philadelphia and other eastern cities.

LIBERALS LOOK DISCONSOLATE IN NEW PARLIAMENT

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Dec. 2.—The forlorn looking bunch of liberals who escaped the debacle at the last election, looked rather disconsolate in the house of commons today. They occupied the back seats from which the Irish nationalists filibustered for many years. The liberals have not even a fight left in them.

Conservatives were on hand early to get seats with the government party. The tory majority is so large that many of their number will be compelled to sit with the opposition, owing to scarcity of seats.

The laborites will occupy most of the seats to the left of the speaker.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Dec. 2.—Judge Frank Burton this afternoon denied the motion of Governor Small's attorneys to vacate the report of Master in Chancery C. G. Briggle, which recommended the governor be required to account for interest earned by state money while he was state treasurer.

N. Y. CHAMBER OF COMMERCE KEEPS ROGUE'S GALLERY

J. P. Morgan is Leader of the Collection

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—Portrait galleries of America's political rulers are many. The chamber of commerce of New York is now displaying, in its great hall at 65 Liberty St., a portrait gallery of the rulers of finance and industry. Here are some of the men our big business body thus honors:

Junius Spencer Morgan, founder of the House of Morgan, and J. Pierpont Morgan, his son; Theodore A. Havemeyer, once head of the American Sugar Refining Co.; James J. Hill, railroad king; James De Peyster Ogden, first president, New York Life; Amos R. Eno, who founded Second National bank; Commodore Vanderbilt, projector of New York Central and founder of an illustrious line of idle descendants; John Jacob Astor who had the forethought to buy up the upper part of Manhattan island; Andrew Carnegie, steel king.

A notable group—the real rulers of America—more powerful than the smaller men who ride into the white house on a slush fund tide and ride out again while these remain.

Senator Borah Heads Senate Committee on Foreign Relations

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—Senator William E. Borah, republican, of Idaho, was today promoted to the chairmanship of the senate foreign relations committee by the republican conference on senatorial assignments.

The chairmanship of the judiciary committee went to Senator Cummins, republican, Idaho, and the chairmanship of the immigration committee to Senator Hiram Johnson, republican, California. These vacancies were caused by the deaths of senators Lodge of Massachusetts, Colt of Rhode Island and Brandegee of Connecticut.

The committee assigned Senator William M. Butler, of Massachusetts, spokesman for President Coolidge, to membership on the committees on judiciary and naval affairs.

MUSSOLINI'S LETTER TO FASCIST CAPTAINS IS CUE TO SURRENDER

ROME, Dec. 2.—The mysterious letter which Mussolini instructed his local fascisti to read at blackshirt meetings is not a call to arms; it is a further surrender.

He appeals to his supporters to maintain order to dissipate the bad impression created in the public mind by recent events. As Mussolini's power was built upon violence and not on mass support, that power is now tumbling down when his bayonets are no longer sufficiently numerous to maintain it against the increasing opposition of the masses.

MILITANT CARPENTERS SUSPENDED

DAILY WORKER and the Trade Union Educational League to create dissension within the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of America. This alleged conspiracy is undoubtedly due to the fact that these debased fakers have discovered that the DAILY WORKER as well as the Trade Union Educational League have constantly been active on behalf of the rank and file workers opposing any attempt on the part of the officials to force down their throats such outrageous agreements which are word for word the Landis award.

Larson Heads Inquisition.

Larson who became the prosecutor in the case conveniently got himself engineered into the position of the secretary of the trial board. The members were questioned before this board. All were asked if they had ever been inside the Workers' Lyceum, on 2733 Hirsch Blvd. where pictures of Lenin and Trotsky hang on the walls This little hall happens to be the place of general congregation of Scandinavian workers and so even some of the accused members could remember of being at this hall at lodge meetings and on various other occasions.

The local officials succeeded in inducing three members out of the five on the trial board to sign the report which was made to the local meeting last Monday. The report fraudulently stated that all the members charged had pleaded guilty and that the three members of the board therefore found that they had violated the constitutional section mentioned. When as a matter of fact none of the members had pleaded guilty but all had stated that criticism of the agreement contained in the resolution was in their opinion justified.

Upon this report, one of the former officers of the local, Thorkelson, proceeded to interpret that part of the constitution applying to the general president as vesting full authority in the local president to proceed to pronounce sentence.

Gavel's Sentence Thru.

One member of the union succeeded in obtaining the floor and reading the constitution which specifically provides that at such trials the defendant as well as the prosecuting witness or their personally or by representatives which shall be allowed to state his case and that it shall require a two-thirds vote of the members present to convict the defendant and affix the final penalty as they may deem

The stupid officials knew that they could never even muster a majority vote against the accused militant members and therefore in complete violation of this constitutional clause, the president proceeded to pronounce sentence. He banged his gavel and stated that five of the accused members were suspended and the other five reprimanded. The two members of the trial board who had refused to sign the falsified report of evidence attempted to get the floor but to no avail. The meeting turned into an uproar. The members demanding that the accused be granted a hearing and that the local union decide the case. The president ordered the suspended members to leave the hall. They refused and challenged the president to throw them out inasmuch as no legal trial had been obtained

Members Charge Railroading.

The uproar turned into bedlam The overwhelming majority of the members shouting to the officials that they had railroaded the case and that they were the ones that were destroying the union. The president applying the celebrated czarist methods of the labor fakers adjourned the meeting, and thus succeeded in making the railroaded case stick, at least for the time being.

The members of Carpenters' No. 181 are determined that no matter what accusations are made against any other member that at least the constitution shall be complied with and a regular trial be granted.

Call for Membership Protest.

They must, however, voice an energetic protest and spare no effort until such a trial has been granted.

It would be well to remember that these are precisely the methods which have been pointed out by the Trade Union Educational League that the labor fakers will in all instances resort to in order to keep their jobs and remain immune from any criticism. Even tho when they, as in this case sell outright, the whole membership to the bosses.

Other members of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters should join their voices with those of Local 181 in demanding that the officials according to the constitution of the brotherhood place this whole case before the membership of the local and let it decide, because there can be no question of a doubt that the same fate of railroading will befall all militant members who dare to stand up for true union principles.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Dec. 2.—The question of whether newspapers have the right to publish income tax returns will go directly to the supreme court of the United States from the United States district court for the western district of Missouri. Trial of Col. Forbes Shows Big Chance For Graft in Army

Elias Mortimer, star witness in the trial of Col. Charles R. Forbes, former head of the U. S. Veterans' Bureau, now proceeding in federal court, charged that Forbes held a $100,000 position with John W. Thompson, a St. Louis contractor, in a crooked deal between the two. Mortimer gave details of an alleged deal whereby the cost of three Western Hospitals was to be boosted $150,000 apiece. This surplus was to be split three ways, Forbes, Thompson, and the Hurley Wason company, a firm for which Forbes previously worked, each to receive $50,000.

These hospitals were at Livermore, California; Camp Lewis, Washington, and St. Cloud, Michigan, Mortimer testified. This fifty thousand dollars was in addition to the 35 per cent of the profits on awards to Thompson and Black which by a previous arrangement he and Forbes were to split.

They Sit Up Nights Thinking of Ways to Give Resources Away

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—A brand new proposal for disposing of the government's huge $100,000,00 water power project at Muscle Shoals, Ala., was sponsored in the senate today by Senator Oscar W. Underwood, democrat, of Alabama, on behalf of the congressional group that formerly supported the offer of Henry Ford.

The Underwood plan, under alternative proposals, would direct the secretary of war to lease the project to private interests before July 1, 1925, or then organize a $50,000,000 government corporation to operate the plant for the manufacture of fertilizers.

MINNEAPOLIS F.-L. F. BOSSED BY ATTORNEYS

Daily Star Forces in the Saddle at Meeting

By LESLIE R. HUNT.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

MINNEAPOLIS, Dec. 2.—Out-maneuvered in their attempt to unseat Communist delegates or sympathizers, reactionaries in the farmer-labor federation meeting held last night offered a resolution to deny representation to political parties other than the farmer-labor party.

The sponsors of the resolution admitted frankly that the action was directed at the Workers (Communist) Party.

The resolution was adopted by a vote of 25 to 11.

Last night's meeting looked more like a convention of lawyers, doctors and professional men than a farmers' and workers' gathering. In the news columns of the Daily Star yesterday, an appeal to the conservative element was printed urging them to attend the meeting. It was clearly an attempt to take the control of the farmer-labor federation out of the hands of worker and farmers and place it in the hand of professional politicians by packing the meeting with this element which is plentiful in the local movement.

Attorney Introduces Resolution.

Gustaf Drake, a local attorney opened the proceedings by presenting a resolution demanding the unseating of delegates who held Communist views or who were not citizens of the United States.

Irving G. Scott, labor's fighting alderman in the city council, who was chairman, promptly ruled the resolution out of order. This took the professional politicians by surprise and it took them some time to rally. Doctor Henry L. Wuerzinger appealed from the decision of the chair, but after much debate the chair was sustained —35 to 6.

"Red" Cramer Turns Yellow.

It remained for R. D. Cramer, editor of the Minneapolis Labor Review, rated as a progressive until his "pie-card" was threatened, to function as a progressive fig-leaf for the reactionaries. This time his tirade was not delivered against the bosses but against that part of the workingclass that fights the bosses uncompromisingly— the Communists. Cramer showed last night that his spiritual leader is not Lenin, but Gompers. He predicted disaster for the local movement if the resolution was not adopted.

Jack Bradon in replying to Cramer, pointed out that the only two candidates on the farmer-labor ticket that did not repudiate their Communist support—Olson and Holmes—received the largest vote. Bradon stated that the drive against the Communists did not spring from the rank and file but from the officialdom of the American Federation of Labor.

Reactionaries Brought Defeat.

"There are some silly persons," he said, "who seek to blame the Communists for the defeat of the state ticket. They know that to be a lie. The defeat of the farmer-labor ticket in Minnesota was directly due, not to the Workers (Communist) Party, the most active workers for the ticket, but to the sabotage of the right wing element in the labor movement."

"They permitted LaFollette's henchmen to run the campaign to the almost total exclusion of the candidates on the state ticket. After all, there isn't much to be accomplished by the workers going to the ballot boxes. If the time ever comes in this country when the workers and farmers are able to put over a sweeping nation-wide victory at the polls, don't you suppose that capitalism is going to fight against seating these representatives? What was done in Italy by Mussolini and his blackshirts when the workers took over the factories?

"Let's quit kidding ourselves. If you men and women vote tonight in favor of the resolution endorsed by Cramer, which is directed against the Workers (Communist) Party, you are fighting the most progressive and militant wing of the labor movement."

Mahoney Present.

Gunnar Olson, wearing an American Legion button in his coat lapel and who was recently defeated as a candidate for the legislature, made an attack on the Soviet government, and defended the resolution. When he had finished he came over to the correspondent of the DAILY WORKER and shouted:

"Put that into the DAILY WORKER again, will you?"

William Mahoney and Ralph Harmon, leader of the farmer-labor federation, sat in the session which lasted several hours.

Gompers' Agent Sides With Mine Owners In Minnesota Disaster

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the widows and orphans of the 41 miners who lost their lives in the Milford mine disaster, near Crosby, Minn., Feb. 5, are told that the mine owners are not to blame for the tragedy.

The investigation committee, that now makes its report after 10 months, and absolves the mine barons, was headed by William E. McEwen, of Duluth, typical Gompers' labor faker.

"Steel Czar" Gary could not have rendered better service to the ruling class than McEwen has done.

• • • •

McEwen received his appointment at the hands of the republican governor of the mine owners, Mr. Preus, who has been fought most bitterly by even the most reactionary elements of the Minnesota Farmer Labor Party. He has been attacked by the most conservative elements in the trade unions as the worst enemy of labor.

But McEwen not only accepted this appointment at the hands of Governor Preus, but proceeded to bootlick the capitalist interests of Minnesota. McEwen learned to do this in the best style as editor of a Gompers' labor sheet published at Duluth, the metropolis of the Northern Minnesota iron country, where the steel trust has located one of its largest mills.

It was while the Minnesota Farmer Labor Party was strongest that McEwen joined its ranks. His nomination, however, for congress on the Farmer Labor Party ticket in thte Duluth district, was bitterly fought by the Communists, urging a revolutionary working class program. The Communists, waged a magnificent campaign that almost resulted in the nomination of their candidate, J. O. Bentall.

• • • •

But the workers and poor farmers in Minnesota, in the final elections, gave their votes to Coolidge, the strike breaker, for president, and turned the state government of Minnesota over to the republican machine of the mine owners, the big bankers, the grain gamblers, the rich farmers and the landlords. This reversal finds McEwen treading softly back into the republican camp, using the Milford mine disaster as the basis of his treason.

• • • •

The miners knew the danger that threatened them. They were forced to blast and dig out under Foley Lake. Daily their work places drew nearer the waters overhead. They protested, as the DAILY WORKER pointed out at the time of the disaster. But no heed was given their protests. If they didn't like their jobs they could quit. There were other workers waiting to take their places. They had no union. Many brilliant strikes on the iron range had been broken. The workers were cowed. Then the day of death came—Feb. 5, 1924.

• • • •

The lickspittle McEwen, in his report, argues that the waters might have rushed in when the men were not at work. Or the mud and the muck and the lake water should just have oozed in slowly, philosophizes McEwen, so that the miners could have escaped. But it didn't happen that way. McEwen turns his eyes skyward and says this in his report:

"But some power decrees that this arch should break thru in the middle of the afternoon of Feb. 5, when all of the men were peacefully working in their places and expecting nothing out of the usual routine of their work."

Thus McEwen proves a bulwark against any real protection of the lives of Minnesota's miners for the future. His committee merely recommends the usual mine safety commission to propose the customary safety legislation; $5,000 for safety educational work; permission for mine inspectors to attend safety conferences, and that an assistant be provided mine inspectors in counties where there are more than 50 operating mines.

This hackneyed report, however, offers several opportunities for Governor Preus, or his successor, the republican, Christensen, to appoint McEwen to some soft job where he can wait on providence to determine the time and the place for the next mine disaster.

This is the type of Gompers' agent that spends most of its time trying to drive the Communists out of the unions. It is the brand of American Federation of Labor machine politician that joins the capitalist class in its red-baiting drives in every political struggle.

• • • •

Some measure of safety on the job under capitalism can come only thru workers' control. Every mine operation in Northern Minnesota, as everywhere else, should have its Communist nucleus. Communist will fight for the safety of the workers. Communists will make war on every danger that threatens the workers. For Communists wage the only struggle that hits at the vital interests of the bosses; all of these interests being opposed to the welfare of the workers.

• • • •

In the hour that the great mass of labor unites in support of the Communist struggle, not only for the day's needs, but for all power; then McEwen and his capitalist friends will not speculate about what power it was that decreed their downfall. They will know that it was the power of the workers united against all their oppressors. Let the miners of Minnesota, as they read the Judas' findings of the Compers' agent, McEwen, resolve to work harder than ever to build that class power of their own.

Pay $3,063,952 to Elect Coolidge; Call It Good Bargain

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2.—The republican party boasts the expenditure of $3,063,952 to elect "Cautious Cal" Coolidge. They claim they expected to have to stake much more of their plunder but they managed to get by with that little sum thru the very efficient handling of their manager, William M. Butler, famous for his exploitation ability in his textile mills at Bedford, Mass., which within the last two weeks has cut wages down ten per cent.

Butler issued a detailed statement which will be filed with the clerk of the house. This statement discloses that sixteen labor exploiters made contributions of $16,000 each and thirty-nine donated amounts ranging from $5,000 to $10,000.

The problem of child labor among children of schol age, was of course, not seriously taken up. Only upholders of the present system of wage slavery were allowed to speak, and no problems of the children of workers were broached.

Sharing Responsibility Today As We Will Share Victory on the Morrow

MILLIONS of workers and poor farmers were bludgeoned by the bosses during the recent election.

Workers were induced to give their vote to Coolidge for the promise of steady work. Farmers were threatened by the bankers with mortgage foreclosures and the calling in of overdue notes.

Coolidge did not have to make any speeches. Coercion and intimidation spoke louder than the words of an army of republican campaign orators.

The bosses have the workers in hand. It is out of their hands and from under the influence of their yellow press that we must take them.

THE DAILY WORKER is helping wonderfully in this work. Wherever it circulates it covers their yellow with our red. We must continue it a virulant fighter. We must keep it safe and make it secure for the year to come.

In making the DAILY WORKER safe we intend sharing the responsibility gladly. Every member must give his share. Every subdivision of the party must subscribe its quota.

There will be members of our party, who, because they are out of work or for other reasons, will not be able to purchase a $10 INSURANCE POLICY. A few will not find it possible to buy a $5 INSURANCE POLICY.

BUT BY FAR THE GREATER MAJORITY OF THE COMRADES CAN GIVE FIVE DOLLARS, MANY CAN GIVE TEN DOLLARS, TO INSURE THE DAILY WORKER FOR 1925.

We want every comrade to center his aim upon the purchase of a $5 policy. We must raise $50,000. Every party federation, every district organization, every city committee, every branch will have to raise its share of this sum.

QUOTAS WILL APPEAR IN TOMORROW'S DAILY WORKER.

We'll share the victory tomorrow!

Let's share the responsibility today!

BRITISH PRESS URGES MEX PACT; RIVAL INTERESTS FIGHT FOR OIL

By CHARLES ASHLEIGH

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Nov. 15 (By Mail.)—It is perhaps something more than a coincidence that, while there are now appearing leading articles, in various British dailies, on the ever-engrossing subject of oil, there seems also to be a commencing a movement for the recognition of Mexico by the conservative government.

This desire was well expressed in a front-page article in the Daily Express, of November 13. The arguments for the recognition of the Mexican republic are there given with that frank regard for economic advantage which is sometimes manifested by the press, and which is infinitely less nauseous to read than the marshalling of a series of humanitarian and ethical reasons for the recognition of a power which has previously been outlawed.

It is understood, the Daily Express says, that recognition will be urged upon Downing Street, not only by the city of London (the banker) and British industrialists, but also by various of the Dominions, whose trade has been suffering by the incertitude engendered by the present situation.

It is likewise urged that every other country has already recognized Mexico, including the United States, which was, at first, rather shy, but which, since, has not only recognized the sister republic, but whose bankers have raised a loan to enable Mexico to discharge her indebtedness.

In this vast country, with its 16,000,000 inhabitants, and enormous natural wealth, there are extensive British holdings. It is estimated that Great Britain has £150,000,000 invested in Mexico. Of this sum, £10,000,000 is in oil; and £70,000,000 in Mexican railways.

Britain Feels Trade Loss.

While the absence of Mexican consults in Britain, and of British consuls in Mexico, and other effects of non-recognition, are hampering the trade relationships of the two countries, Britain's competitors are rushing exports and representatives to the rich markets of Mexico. This, naturally, has caused some alarm; and certain powerful industrial and commercial interests in Britain are now complaining loudly that it is absurd for Great Britain to be the only power not according recognition to Mexico, which recognition, by the way, has been withheld since 1917.

Canada, also, is badly handicapped by non-recognition, and has already entered a protest to the British foreign office against the continuance of the present policy.

Oil War Intensified.

It is evident, by the Daily Express article, and other similar signs, that British oil, and other industrial interests, are being forced to the adoption of a more militant attitude, in the Mexican field, against the encroachments of American capital. And, for this campaign, they must needs be on the correct diplomatic terms with the Mexican government. It but means the continuance of the duel which, during many years, was fought in Mexico between the United States and Great Britain, between Standard Oil and Shell, or the Cowdray interests. This duel was the basic cause of much upheaval of a political nature, in Mexico, the two contestants each backing his own party in the field. And, altho the pleas for recognition by Britain all adduce the argument that Mexico is now quite peaceable and "safe," who knows how long it will be before one or the other of these two conflicting forces will be stimulating new internecine warfare among the hapless people of the rich Mexican territory?

The workers and peasants of Mexico must soon realise that there is only one struggle for them, and that is the struggle against foreign imperialism of any and all origins, and also against the Mexican bourgeoisie which supports either side.

N. Y. SOCIALISTS DEBATE WHILE PARTY IS DYING

Candy Prizes Offered for New Members

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—The New York socialist party, badly bent if not broken from the severe blow delivered to its organization during the LaFollette campaign, has called a general membership meeting for December 10, at which the party policy to be followed in the December 12 meeting of the executive council of the C. P. P. A. will be discussed.

It is also reported that the desertion by thousands of socialist voters of the Reverend Dr. Norman Thomas for Al Smith will be brought up on the floor, despite opposition from Hillquit and others, connected in a financial way with the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union officialdom, who considered themselves under an obligation to Smith because of his arbitration of the wage conflict between the employers and the workers.

Prizes For New Recruits.

So demoralized has the S. P. organization become that prizes are now being offered to the members bringing in new recruits. These prizes vary from pink silk flags to boxes of candy, walking canes, wrist watches and radio sets.

The financial condition of the New Leader is also expected to come up for discussion. It is reported that the Jewish Daily Forward, which gave the Leader a year's subsidy when it was organized, has decided not to subsidize it any longer. Oneal and Figenbaum assured Cahan that the New Leader would be self-supporting within one year. But the facts prove otherwise.

Communist Baiting.

The paper has no paid subscription list to speak of and having no organization to back it up, no policy to attract the workers, it is obliged to fall back on its only function, a Communist baiting sheet, and the American expression of the Second International.

The third party in the minds of the socialists would be an out-and-out petty bourgeois party, a new socialist party with all the socialism left out. The opportunists of the Hillquit type intend to squeeze themselves into the progressive nest along with LaFollette and his petty bourgeois brood.

The Amalgamated Leaders.

The leaders of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers are playing the usual game of giving lip services to a farmer-labor party, but paving the way for their customary platonic relationship with political parties. They declare that a national farmer-labor party is just what they want, but if they don't get what they want, they will not participate at all. They will not actively work to bring about what they want.

The campaign of the Workers Party in New York under the Communist banner was a severe blow to the remains of the S. P. Tied up to the LaFollette chariot, undistinguishable to the masses from the bourgeois progressives, the socialist party lost the remains of its political organization while the young and virile Workers Party was left the undisputed leader of the radical workers. This was one of the advantages gained by the Workers Party in the election that counts more than votes.

THE New Leader, New York socialist organ, is subsidized by the Brooklyn Rapid Transit company. This may call for furious denial from the editors of that organ. But the facts speak for themselves. In the latest issue of that paper to come to hand, several large advertisements appear in it, boosting the virtues of the traction trust and its democratic management of the lines. Money is money, whether it is given in a back-room or for political advertising. We also note from postoffice figures that the New York Daily Forward owns more than 2 per cent of stock in the New England Leader. It looks as if Abe Cahan now owns whatever is left of the S. P.

LEO KORETZ is the gentleman who became famous when he amassed a fortune of several millions by selling fake stock in an imaginary oil project, and then took to his heels when he felt he had reached the end of his tether. Several ambitious citizens, just as mentally crooked as Koretz, turned over their cash to him, hoping to get rich at some other body's expense. They were left even without an oil claim. Now Korets, who, played the role of philanthropist in Nova Scotia, returns to face the wolves.

PREACHERS will use his career as a text for Sunday sermons. They will argue that honesty is the best policy and that God punished this wicked man for his sins. But it is more than likely that the most eloquent preacher, who orates most eloquently on this text, has the price of his preaching invested in some capitalist venture which sweats profits out of the bodies of workers. God, evidently, has no objection to this form of robbery. While holding no brief for Koretz, it is well to point out that what the capitalist's courts object to is not the amount of money Koretz got away with, but the manner in which he amassed it.

KORETZ, instead of working within the capitalist scheme of robbery, adopted a code of his own and put his more ancient competitors at a disadvantage. Charles G. Dawes played with Lorimer and the result of their act was that thousands of investors lost their savings. But Dawes played the game according to the code. Koretz is an outlaw.

cers who were playing "judge" and "deciding" whether the Communists were "trying to overthrow the government" of Esthonia or not.

One prisoner, who was a Communist member of parliament, made a speech attacking the court itself. He was seized, dragged from the court room and shot down without even the pretense of trial, other than the order of execution signed by his "judges." It is this cold-blooded murder which roused the Esthonian party to fighting pitch. When the "trial" was rushed thru in the most disgracefully illegal manner and 138 workers received heavy sentences from five years upwards, thirty-nine getting life the uprising occurred.

At 5 o'clock Monday morning the surprise attack began with the capture of the railroad station where a cabinet member, M. Karke, was killed. For an hour the fight raged around the cadet school where arms, desired by the Communists, were stored. The cadets surrendered the building and arms to the Communists, who commandeered two airplanes and pilots.

Many of the government buildings were taken and held for several hours, while the casualty list of army officers, cadets and police is known to be more than double the 13 dead and 40 wounded reported by the minister of war. The Communists who surrendered when their ammunition out, were executed at once wi trial.

Dinner Pail Epics by Bill Lloyd

Down in New Jersey, t'other day, a missionary rose to say the business end of the shebang had figured what it cost his gang to save a lost and wandering soul and anchor it in heaven's goal.

To put Americans in heaven it cost per soul four fifty-seven, while foreign heathen were set free for bucks two hundred sixty-three.

To put at ease my restless self I got Karl Marx from off the shelf, to see if I could figure why the heathen got so cheaply by, to see why it takes less of gold to get the alien in the fold, why home-folks cost so goddam much to free us from the devil's clutch.

And presently I come to see that I had hit the right idea. The foreign labor is so cheap that it don't cost a awful heap for missionaries living well in distant lands in which they dwell. I now remember someone sed in some book somewhere that I that in old India for examp preacher's income sure was amp that by spending but a dot he stock up with help a lot. ONE-SIXTH OF THE STRENGTH OF ONE-TENTH OF OUR PARTY

By WALT CARMON.

WHEN we first told a comrade about it he laughed at us. But we thought he had no vision and we told him so. And he told us we had a pipe-dream! If we had—we still have it.

Surely, it is possible to get a circulation of 50,000 for the DAILY WORKER within the next year. Why not? We made a gain of 5,000 in six weeks! Now just figure it out for yourself:

On Oct. 4, the average daily circulation of our paper for the week was 12,402. Six weeks later, for the week of November 8 it was 18,121—a gain of 5,719 and an average weekly increase of 953. That pace if maintained would give us in fifty-two weeks of one year a circulation of approximately 50,000. Surely, this is not impossible!

We will maintain, as we did the other day to our comrade, that he certainly has no vision. He argued (and it's true!) that we had a lot in our favor. We initiated a drive for sub scriptions during an election campaign, which is a most favorable period. That's true. But it is also true that this proved the workers will read the DAILY WORKER and enjoy it. It proves that the DAILY WORKER is a paper in which a worker finds his interests defended and fought for.

All we ask of our comrades is one-sixth of the energy they expended in six weeks, for every week in a period of just one year. That is but little to ask of a Communist—in view of what we can gain. And, we still hold our opinion in the argument with our comrade—that this is no pipe dream.

Have you ever thot of what a circulation of 50,000 for the DAILY WORKER would mean to our party—in the labor movement? That means three times the present circulation of the DAILY WORKER; three times the reach of our message to the workers; three times the power of our fight. Have you thought about it? Think it over!

And we can do it, as we did it with only one-sixth of the effort of about one-tenth of our party who participated in the drive of the Bricklayers to "Build the DAILY WORKER" a greater circulation by 5,000 in six short weeks. Just look at these figures of the circulation of our paper—here's a issues of action in them:

Week ending Oct. 4	12,401
Week ending Oct. 11	12,712
Week ending Oct. 18	14,276
Week ending Oct. 25	17,827
Week ending Nov. 1	19,613
Week ending Nov. 8	18,121

Can we make it 50,000 in one year? The answer lies entirely with you!

The DAILY WORKER is a most sensitive living thing. When you stop your efforts for it, it grows weaker. When you talk to your shop mate—your union brother—when you turn in your own renewal—it grows stronger and more powerful.

Today the DAILY WORKER is yet in its infancy. "The kid looks like a fighter," you say. Yes, but it can't be without constant attention. Feed it the subscriptions on which it will become a full grown fighting unit of a militant labor movement that must grow with it—and you will soon find it has helped to bring closer to reality your dream of working class power.

What do you say?—50,000 in one year? Ah—but you must remember—only you can do it!

COMMUNIST CHILDREN'S COLUMN

DEAR Children: At the last Chicago City Convention of the Junior Section we understand that some of you wanted to know why we don't use your letters. Shall we tell you why? Because you don't send any. We use everything you send us.

Now we are really glad to know that you brot up this matter at your meeting. For that tells us you are interested in the column. And since that is the case you will begin to send us some contributions after we talk this over a little. We want you to take a real interest in this part of the paper and help us make it bring joy to Communist children.

Let's do it this way. You write us everything that you think will interest other little children of the working class. Just think how interesting your letters about your school life, your conversations with other children, your discussions with your teacher would be to other children in countries like Russia, Germany and even right here in the United States. If every little junior will do his part we will all enjoy this column very much.

Now here is where our side of the bargain comes in. When your story comes in we'll go over it carefully and you'll see it right under your name all set up in type in your very own column.—Editor.

Discussion of Our Party's Immediate Tasks

THE MINORITY ATTITUDE TOWARD OUR ELECTION CAMPAIGN—A WARNING SIGNAL FOR THE PARTY

By JAMES P. CANNON.

Every Communist who can see straight, knows that our election campaign this year, under our own banner, was one of the greatest and most significant achievements in the history of the party. And every Communist who has the right attitude toward his party is proud of that achievement; he wants every worker to know about it and to understand its great significance; and he will not try to minimize it.

The party did right to enter the elections under its own name. Our election campaign was a victory for the party. It strengthened the revolutionary morale of our membership and established our party as the only working class political party in America. This is our position, clearly stated in our theses.

The theses of the minority does not speak in such clear and emphatic terms about our election campaign. It evaded the issue. It completely evades one of the most important questions which must be answered before we can decide our line for the immediate future.

That question is:

Was the Central Executive Committee correct when it decided last July against the opposition of Comrades Lovestone, Engdahl and Browder, to withdraw support from the Farmer-Labor Party and to enter the elections under its own banner with its own candidates?

Why the Minority Theses Fails to Endorse Our Election Policy.

The evasion of these questions by the Lovestone-Ruthenberg thesis is no accident. The question was repeatedly discussed in the meetings of the political committee prior to the consideration of theses and the minority is fully aware of its importance and of its indissoluble connection with our future policy. The omission is conscious and deliberate. "There's a reason" for it.

That reason is as follows: At least a part of the minority group represented by Comrade Lovestone, which has become the dominant part of the minority group—the part which determines the policy of the whole group—still maintains that the C. E. C. was wrong and that we should have conducted the campaign under the banner of the farmer-labor party. Comrade Browder has long since admitted his error, but in the meeting of the executive council of November 14, both Comrades Lovestone and Engdahl voted against the following resolution:

"In view of the discussion that has arisen in the C. E. C. over the results of the election and the results gained by the Workers Party participating in the election under its own name, the C. E. C. considers it necessary to reaffirm its opinion that the decision of the C. E. C. in its July meeting to withdraw its support of the national farmer-labor party ticket and to enter its own candidates in the campaign was correct and the proposal of Comrades Lovestone, Engdahl and Browder to continue the campaign under the banner of the farmer-labor party was wrong."

The Minority Ridicules and Minimizes Our Election Campaign.

Comrade Ruthenberg and Bedacht voted for the motion, but they must have done so with their tongues in their cheeks for their whole attitude on the question of our election campaign is the same as Comrade Lovestone's. That is, to persistently and systematically deride and belittle the achievements of the campaign in order to bolster up their theory that the Workers Party cannot do anything under its own name, but must find a substitute organization whenever there is practical agitational work to be carried on.

The arguments they now bring forward against the Workers Party attempting to lead united front struggles in its own name and in favor of assigning that role to a mythical "class farmer-labor party" are the same arguments used by Comrade Lovestone in the meeting on July 8 against the Workers Party raising its own banner in the election campaign. Their thesis is one long argument against our election policy. The attitude of the minority toward our election achievements and their attempt to belittle them is symptomatic of the falsity of their whole theory. It is a warning signal to the party.

The C. E. C. theses does not overstate the case when it says bluntly that the policy of the minority leads to the liquidation of the Workers Party. Of course, no one will say that this is the conscious purpose of the minority. We are sure that the comrades of the minority have no other object than to advance the cause of Communism. But in their over-zeal to find a short cut to the goal of a popular mass Communist Party, they have already put their feet on a path that leads backward and not forward. "In dealing with questions of policy," said Comrade Zinoviev at the Fifth Congress, "we have to consider objective effects and not subjective intentions." It is by this standard that we measure the policy of the minority and condemn it, and declare openly our firm intention to fight it to death.

We do not need to wait for the comrades of the minority to get control of the party and put their policy into effect in order to prove that it is a false policy. The minority has already proven it, not only in words, but in deed.

Seven Facts Which Prove the Liquidation Tendency of the Minority Policy.

On this point facts can speak for themselves. In order to bolster up their false and dangerous policy of demanding a farmer-labor party at all costs, right or wrong, "dead or alive," whether the workers are interested in it or not, the minority is forced to minimize and deprecate even the most. est achievements of the Workers Party and to invent the "class farmer-labor party" with virtues it does not and cannot possess—unless it is a genuine Communist Party. The minority has already started out on this course as the following facts bear witness:

1. In order to minimize before the C. I. the showing made by the party in the election campaign, the minority proposed in the C. E. C. meeting of Nov. 14 to answer the Communist International's inquiry about our vote in the following words: "Workers Party vote very small; will not exceed twenty thousand." They took this stand at a time when we already knew that over ten thousand votes had been counted for us in New York City and the state of Minnesota alone, and when we already had evidence of wholesale frauds against us.

2. In order to minimize our election achievements before the party, the minority opposed and ridiculed the C. E. C. estimate of 100,000 votes (including the votes stolen from us) and voted against our motion: "That we issue a statement claiming 100,000 votes and citing incidents in which votes were stolen from us."

3. Comrade Ruthenberg had such luke-warm interest in getting the facts about the size of our vote that it took two meetings of the political committee and more than a week's delay before we could get a letter sent to all party units asking for reports of votes counted for us and evidence of frauds against us in order that we could prove the contentions of our official statement. Ordinary office no use work was given the right of way over this important matter.

4. Comrades Minor and Krise, chief spokesmen of the minority in the recent Chicago membership meeting, ridiculed the showing made by the party in the elections, Comrade Minor sarcastically comparing it to the S. L. P.

5. Comrade Bedacht, at the same meeting, said, "Our party was less before the masses during the election campaign than at any time during the past two years."

6. Writing in the November Workers Monthly, Comrade Ruthenberg attributes qualities to a "labor" party that only a Communist Party can possess. He says: "A labor party speaks in the name of labor. It calls upon the workers for action. Or if it is a farmer-labor party it calls upon the workers and farmers and speaks in their name."

7. Writing in the December Workers Monthly, Comrade Ruthenberg associates the "class political action" exclusively with the farmer-labor party. We, who believe the Workers Party represents "class political action" are disdainfully swept aside in the following words: "A group in our party, under the leadership of Comrade Foster, is of the opinion that the movement towards class political action by labor is dead and that, therefore, the Workers Party must abandon the slogan 'For a Class Farmer-Labor Party!'"

The Struggle Against "Farmer-Labor-ism" Is Only Beginning.

The struggle between the Central Executive Committee and the minority over the question of future policy is only beginning. The party has not yet had time to study the two theses. But already the comrades of the minority have given us seven concrete examples of the objective effects of their good intentions to build a mass Communist party "quickly" by means of the magic formula of a "Class Farmer-Labor Party." And this is only the beginning.

So false is their policy and so far afield will they be compelled to go to defend it, that before the discussion period has come to a close, the whole party will be able to understand, on the basis of evidence which the comrades of the MINORITY will supply, that their policy would lead the party into the swamp.

The minority thesis fails to say the party did right to raise its own banner in the election campaign because the comrades of the minority have no enthusiasm over the great historical significance of the banner of Communism having been raised for the first time in a national election in America, and because it must belittle and deride the great achievements of our party in the campaign in order to convince the party and the Communist International that the Workers Party is a failure, that it cannot speak to the masses in its own name, and must, therefore, hide itself behind another organization and another name.

The comrades of the minority have started out on a false path, but the party will not follow them. When the party has studied and discussed the question and considered the objective effects of the false policy of the minority it will give such a decisive answer to "Farmer-Labor Communism" will never raise its head again in the Workers Party.

HAS LaFOLLETTE SWALLOWED THE FARMER-LABOR MOVEMENT?

By JAY LOVESTONE.

The opposition to the party continuing the use of the slogan of and campaign for a mass farmer-labor party divides itself into two main classes. First, are those who are opposed on principle to a farmer-labor party. Second, are those who contend that they are not opposed on principle to a farmer-labor party but that, within the last few months, the conditions have changed and that the time has come for the party to discard and throw overboard its farmer-labor united front activities.

Anti-Marxist and Pseudo-Marxist Opposition.

With the first school of opposition we will waste no time. This school is frankly anti-Marxist in method and purpose. The Communist International in its decisions on the American question, has dealt with this school effectively and at length.

The second school of opposition makes a pretence at being Marxian, at least in its method. This group of opponents of the Communists, utilizing and accelerating the movement towards independent working class political action thru a farmer-labor party, talks about "conditions having changed." This group contends that the political and economic conditions of the country have so changed as to require the Workers Party to make a sharp change of its united front tactics on the political field by cutting itself loose from the farmer-labor slogan agitationally and organizationally.

Five Contentions—Five Fallacies.

The contentions of the latter group of opponents to the farmer-labor policy laid down for the party by the Communist International in its last decision can be subdivided into five principal points:

1. They believe the LaFollette movement has swallowed the farmer-labor movement thru the fact that the various farmer-labor parties have lined up with the LaFollette outfit during the last election campaign. These comrades insist that the union of the farmer-labor party movement with the LaFollette movement during the elections has signed the death warrant and marked the doom of the farmer-labor movement as a distinct political movement.

2. They believe that the LaFollette election venture was such a great success as to ensure not only the complete destruction of whatever organizational strength the farmer-labor movement had attained up to June 17, but to have brought about even the total liquidation and utter extermination of the mass farmer-labor sentiment existing in the country before the LaFollette nomination. These comrades would have us believe that the movement for a political united front of the working and poor farmers now views the LaFollette conglomeration as the farmer-labor party. These comrades would have us believe that, therefore, the hundreds of thousands of farmer-laborites of yesterday don't want and are not interested now in another political movement.

3. Or they believe that the LaFollette movement has received such a crushing defeat in the election, campaign as to spread paralyzing pessimism, bitter disappointment, a shattering of hopes in the ranks of the farmer-labor masses; thus making it impossible for the Communists to rally these masses out of their supposed present sloth of depression. These comrades would have us believe that the set-back received by the LaFollette campaigners has extinguished the farmer-labor flames that many once hoped could be kindled into sweeping the country like a prairie fire.

4. They believe that within the last few months the economic conditions which served as the basis for what was once the peak of the farmer-labor united front movement have changed so fundamentally as to remove the grounds for such a farmer-labor united front and have destroyed the soil in which such a movement of the masses can grow and flourish.

5. They believe that since June 17 the process of the political radicalization of the masses in the United States has reached such a high state of development and that the Workers Party has won the political leadership over so many masses as to make it possible and practicable for the Communists to make a mass appeal to the workers and poor farmers to join the Workers Party directly, follow it politically or rally around it extensively in the everyday economic struggles. This contention translates itself into the conclusion that the Workers Party no longer needs a united front on the political field with the non-Communist organizations of the workers and poor farmers.

The writer proposes to examine each of these contentions and to show that not a single one of them holds water; that the conditions have not changed fundamentally; that insofar as recent months have seen a change in the politico-economic situation, the change has been distinctly in favor of the party extending and intensifying its farmer-labor united front campaign.

Why and Wherefore of Election Alliance.

Let us see first whether the mere election alliance of the farmer-laborites with the LaFollette movement means that the latter has swallowed the farmer-labor sentiment and demand as a political force.

It is true that in the election campaign the farmer-labor movement was swept along with the LaFollette tide. The farmer-labor party sentiment had for sundry reasons not yet been crystallized strongly enough organizationally to be able to beat back the alliance of the petty bourgeoisie and a large portion of the trade union bureaucracy. In a measure we, the Communists, were responsible for this organizational weakness of the farmer-labor movement thru our failure to pursue an aggressive campaign of organization over the heads and opposition of the Fitzpatricks, Nockels, and other so-called progressive labor leaders.

But perhaps the outstanding force of the causes impelling this turn of the farmer-labor sentiment into the channels of LaFollette's venture was the belief among a great section of the farmer-labor masses that by their lining up with the LaFollette combination in the election campaign they would hasten, if not actually achieve, the successful launching of a farmer-labor party.

Meaning of the Alliance.

The fact that, during the election campaign, the farmer-labor movement did not put forward national political standard bearers of its own does not mean that the LaFollette campaign organization has swallowed and digested the farmer-labor elements to such an extent as to enable one correctly to pronounce the farmer-labor movement dead, the farmer-labor sentiment extinguished beyond redemption. Only the politically purblind can maintain that an election alliance can swallow at once and paralyze for many years at least, all of the farmer-labor sentiment that it took many years to develop, a political mass sentiment that was developing uninterruptedly at an accelerating pace especially since 1918.

The fact that so many farmer-labor organizations lined up for LaFollette and allowed themselves to be submerged during the few months of the election campaign does not mean that they have totally read themselves out of the political life of the country. Marxists view all political situations as entities and not merely from the immediate superficial appearances at hand.

It may be true that such an event does not by itself tend to accelerate the swift crystallization of a farmer-labor movement on a nation-wide scale. Yet no one who makes the slightest pretense at the use of Marxian historical method in analyzing and evaluating the political and economic movements of classes will contend that a setback or a defeat now and then means the collapse of the upward working class movement. At most such setback may only delay and make more difficult the development of mass political consciousness, but they do not eradicate the inherent conditions of American capitalism making for the development of a powerful united front of the workers and poor farmers on the political field.

Skepticism—A Menshevist Disease.

Thus Lenin in his introduction to "Karl Marx, Letters to Kugelmann," said: "The Marxian doctrine has welded the theory and practice of the class struggle into an INDIVISIBLE WHOLE. He is no Marxist who, to justify existing conditions, distorts the theory which soberly confirms the objective situation, who goes so far as to adapt himself with the greatest possible speed to any temporary lull in the revolution (!), to throw quickly overboard his 'revolutionary illusions' and to set about collecting the realist shreds."

It is a truth long known to Bolsheviks that only the ordinary empiric does not look at developing class conflicts and movements "any further than the horizon of the then-given situation." Amongst menshevists skepticism and doubt rise in direct proportion to the "drawn-out and laborious character" the development of class movements tends to assume.

Farmer-Labor Strength.

The fact of the matter is that a mere election union does not by itself mean the organizational liquidation of a movement. Least of all, does it follow that such a campaign alliance means the uprooting of the idea and of sentiment for a farmer-labor party. In certain sections of the country many farmer-laborites maintained a hostile attitude thruout the campaign to the LaFollette encroachments on their organizations. For instance, in Minnesota, Magnus Johnson and Olson running on the farmer-labor party ticket polled a higher vote than LaFollette. The majority by which LaFollette, running on an independent ticket, was beaten by Coolidge was much larger than the majority on which those running on the farmer-labor party ticket were beaten.

Let us quote from the Minnesota Trade Union Advocate of Nov. 13, 1924: "In the states where a well-organized progressive movement existed, the LaFollette managers came in and sought to launch a new movement without regard to the effect it might have on the established farmer-labor organization. This resulted in misunderstanding and antagonism which was never successfully overcome. . . .

"The result of this unwise policy is now well-known. LaFollette not only ran behind the state ticket of Minnesota, but the confusion and antagonism created by it is held responsible for the failure to elect at least the candidates for senator and governor . . .

"Only a few counties of the state were carried by LaFollette and in these instances he ran behind the nominees of the farmer-labor party for United States senator and governor.

"Many theories are advanced in explanation of these differences. It is claimed by some that the vicious attack on LaFollette caused many to withhold support, while others maintained that the policies of the LaFollette movement in Minnesota repelled farmer-labor supporters.

"There is no doubt but what the LaFollette movement in the state had ambitions to displace the established farmer-labor party, and while this intention was disavowed towards the end of the campaign, the entire proceeding of the campaign committee from its inception was condemned by many who showed their opposition at the ballot box. Coolidge's vote over that of LaFollette will be twice as great as that of Christianson's over Olson."

In Washington, for example, the farmer-labor party maintained its distinct organization, ran its own state and congressional candidates and severely endorsed LaFollette and Wheeler. More than that, there is good reason to believe that the leaders of this farmer-labor party would likely never have sought to secure the endorsement of their organization for LaFollette, or be tempted to drive their followers into the LaFollette election camp if the Workers Party had not cut itself loose from the national farmer-labor party on July 10. The bungling manner in which we handled our change in policy then was especially harmful.

In Montana, the farmer-labor party also maintained its own organization and engaged in a sharp contest against LaFollette's senatorial candidate, United States Senator Thomas J. Walsh. In this conflict the farmer-labor party was able to appeal to a goodly portion of Montana organized labor, because of the declared hostility of the Montana State Federation of Labor to Senator Walsh as an enemy of the workers.

In Washington county, Pennsylvania, and in Denver, Colorado, the farmer-labor parties likewise maintained their own organizational independence.

Opposition to LaFollette Reviving.

It is clear that the strong opposition shown by the LaFollette machine during the election campaign to the existing farmer-labor organizations has only succeeded in sowing among the masses the seeds of strong opposition to LaFollette domination over them. Thus, we find again the Minnesota Trade Union Advocate of Nov. 20, 1924, declaring: "Just what attitude Senator LaFollette and his progressive colleagues who were engaged in the recent campaign will take in the formation of a new party remains to be seen. It were much better that they withdrew entirely from the movement if they insist on a mongrel organization of liberals without any definite economic principles upon which to build, and to guarantee permanency." The same Journal goes on to say: "The organized workers of Minnesota are committed absolutely to a political party of the wealth producers; and have a definite and determined course of action developed."

It is only a few weeks after election. But already there are multiplying signs of a strong revival of aggressive opposition to LaFollette domination in the ranks of the farmer-labor movement. It is only natural that the first tangible crystallization of disillusionment with LaFollettism should manifest itself in Minnesota where the farmer-labor movement had a strong substantial basis in the economic organizations of the workers. It is only a matter of time, when similar anti-LaFollette manifestations will be displayed in other sections of the farmer-labor movement.

LaFollette "Swallowed" Disintegrating.

And while the farmer-labor movement is already, only a few weeks after election, raising its head out of the LaFollette campaign debris, the LaFollette movement itself is showing increasing signs of disintegration. The Gompers right-about face, the hasty retreat of Wheeler into the democratic party, the unspeakable cowardice of William H. Johnston at the American Federation of Labor convention, and the degrading vacillation and hesitancy of the LaFollette congressional leaders only auger the probable discarding by the petty bourgeoisie of their plan to organize their own new party.

In the face of the multiplying signs of the decline of LaFollette's strength and the increasing signs of a farmer-labor revival, it is folly, utter folly to contend that the election alliance of the farmer-laborites with the LaFollette organization means that the latter has swallowed the mass farmer-labor sentiment and destroyed, for years, the farmer-labor movement—as a means of enabling the Communists to rally about their own political party, the Workers Party, masses of workers and poor farmers over whom it is seeking to establish its leadership.

RESOLUTION ON DISCUSSION ADOPTED BY N. E. C. OF Y. W. L.

To All Nuclei, Branches, City Central Committees, District Executive Committees and Other Units of the Young Workers League:

Dear Comrades: We are enclosing a resolution passed by the National Executive Committee of the Young Workers League, which outlines the basis for the discussion of the issues, problems and tasks that confront the Third National Convention of the Young Workers League of America. This resolution should serve as a guide in the discussion, which the National Executive Committee urgently desires to be thoro, unhampered and as widespread as possible. The resolution follows:

Resolution on Convention Discussion.

1. A special section of The Young Worker, up to the time of the convention, shall be set aside for discussion of the statement of the national executive committee.

2. No editorial comment or signed articles dealing with the statement shall be published in any other organ (local bulletins, papers, DAILY WORKER, Freiheit, Uj Elore, etc.); the written discussion to be limited to the columns of the official organ of the Y. W. L., the Young Worker.

3. The discussion of the statement issued by the national executive committee, printed in the Dec. 15 issue of The Young Worker, shall be given immediate preliminary discussion in the nuclei and branches of the league.

4. After a period of discussion of the statement in the branches and nuclei, as well as The Young Worker, general membership meetings shall be called, for the purpose of further discussion of the N. E. C. statement. No general membership meeting on this subject shall be held within two weeks' advance notification being sent to the national office.

5 In those cities where more than one branch exists, it shall be the duty of the city executive committee to set the dates of the nuclei and branch meetings where discussion of the N. E. C. statement on work and policy shall be discussed. Meetings held without the approval of the C. E. C. will be considered invalid. Where only one branch exists, it shall be the duty of the branch executive committee to set the date for discussion.

6. No unsigned articles will be accepted for the discussion columns of The Young Worker.

Young Workers' League of America, National Executive Committee,
John Williamson, Nat'l. Sec'y.

You Are a Communist!

YOU are most likely in the Workers (Communist) Party. But do you act like a Communist?

In Russia one of the conditions of membership is that the applicant must be a subscriber to the official party organ. You can't get in if you're not.

This is to insure the best presentation of the principles of Communism to every single member of the party—to clarify it—to cement it into a single unit.

In the future it may be a condition of membership in our party for every applicant joining a nucleus or English branch.

Today there is a great discussion in our party on our past and future policies. Are you—as a Communist—following every phase of this discussion in the DAILY WORKER? Are you a subscriber so you CAN follow it?

If you are not—your duty is clear. Send in your subscription to the official organ of YOUR Communist Party.

UPON ONE POLICY WE ARE ALL UNITED and that is to Insure The Daily Worker for 1925

A MOST complete discussion upon future party policy is possible today because we have the DAILY WORKER. Every party member who reads the DAILY WORKER, yes, and every one that does not because he cannot read English, will understand this to be an advantage of prime importance to the theoretical development of our members.

But the DAILY WORKER serves the party in many other ways. It is an all the year around weapon against the foe, it is an educator, it is a propagandist—and also, it is a bond, a chain, which ties member to member, city to city, district to district. It is the DAILY WORKER that helps to centralize our party into the effective machine it should be.

We must keep the DAILY WORKER and make it safe for 1925. To do this we must give of our dollars generously today. If we expect to win, then the DAILY WORKER must live and prosper. With the DAILY WORKER, forward to victory, or—nothing. It should be easy to choose.

INSURANCE POLICIES are in the hands of the branches. They are priced $10, $5 and $1. The Central Executive Committee has decided that every member shall buy. Every member should buy no less than a $5 POLICY.

And while the party seethe with discussion over our future policy and tasks, there is one POLICY upon which there must be unanimous agreement. That is the POLICY to BUY A POLICY to INSURE THE DAILY WORKER FOR 1925.

WILLIAM Z. FOSTER,
Chairman.
C. E. RUTHENBERG,
Executive Secretary.

BRICKLAYERS IN UNIONS PROVE BEST WORKERS

Do Better Work Than Non-Unionists

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

You get more bricks laid per hour and your work will cost you less if you demand a straight union job in Chicago.

This conclusion, which is a body blow to the pet argument of the open shoppers, is based on figures on labor productivity and costs in certain building trades gathered and published by the U. S. bureau of labor statistics.

In Chicago this investigation covered 24 jobs involving the laying of nearly 400,000 bricks in straight-away wall construction. Of these bricks 150,149 were laid under strict union conditions, 130,500 on nonunion jobs and 117,333 under Landis award which is treated by the bureau as mixed union and nonunion.

The number of bricks laid, the number of hours paid for and the rate per hour on the job are shown for each of the 24 jobs in the table:

Job	No. of Brick	Hours	Rate
Union	13,680	91	$1.50
"	12,960	104	1.50
"	4,320	32	1.50

From these figures it appears that in 1923, when the investigation was made, bricklayers on union jobs laid 150,149 bricks in 898 hours for a total wage of $1,416.97. They averaged 167 bricks per hour with a wage cost $8.92 per 1000.

In sharp contrast on nonunion jobs averaged 132 bricks per hour, laying 103,500 in 989 hours for a total of $1,526.33 in wages. The wage cost of nonunion jobs averaged $11.70 per 1000 brick or nearly $3 a 1000 more than union jobs. Similarly under the Landis committee bricklayers averaged 148 per hour at an average cost of $10.80 per 1,000.

TAX REPORT REVEALS TERRIFIC EXPLOITATION OF LABOR IN WILLIAM MORGAN BUTLER'S TEXTILE MILLS

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Who prospered under the brand of prosperity dispensed in the Harding-Coolidge regime?

Corporation income tax returns uncovered in Massachusetts show that William Morgan Butler, head of the republican national machine and Cal's political godfather, was among the chief beneficiaries.

Butler's New Bedford textile mills appear to have accumulated profits during 1923 at rates of $25.20 and $16.65 a share of common stock.

Publication of income tax returns has given the public a glimpse of the profits being made by a number of textile companies whose financial reports have been studiously withheld. These are companies owned by a few wealthy families who probably are not anxious to have the contrast between their christian professions and their cottonmill exploitation brought too glaringly to public notice.

Textile Company	Tax paid	1923 profits share	Par
American Felt	$104,415	$800,000	$16.25
Sagamore Mfg. Co.	100,482	750,000	25.00
Soule Mills	61,186	442,186	35.11
Kilmarnock Mills	50,317	352,219	16.65
Boston Mfg. Co.	54,321	350,247	36.98
New Bedford Cotton Mills Corp.	44,229	309,603	25.20
Neild Mfg. Co.	31,399	219,793	18.21
Booth Mfg. Co.	21,108	147,756	11.20

The two Butler enterprises in this list are the Quisset Mills and the New Bedford Cotton Mills corporation. Without running down the profits of other Butler concerns it is apparent that the new senator from Massachusetts was well supplied with cash with which to back his protective tariff candidate for president.

Women Supplant Men In Cigarmaking

NEW YORK.—Women are doing most of the work in the cigar and cigarette plants of the United States, the committee on regional planning of New York and its environs, declares. Fifty-eight percent of the cigar and cigarette workers are women and girls compared to 19.5 per cent in other industries—that is, proportionately, three times as many women and girls as in other industries. The drift of the industry, the report shows, is away from the big cities to the smaller industrial communities where men are employed at other work—as in the coal towns—and their wives and daughters can be bought cheaply by the tobacco concerns.

Ibanez Is Small Potatoes

NEW YORK.—Experts from Alfonso Unmasked, V. Blasco Ibanez' new book against the Spanish monarch, which are being made public here do not indicate any wide social consciousness in Ibanez' rebelliousness. He sets out to prove that Alfonso was partial to the Germans during the war, not that he is hostile to the workers and tillers of the soil. Radical Spanish groups in New York point to the criticism he has made of wage earner's revolts. What Ibanez wants is merely capitalist republicanism.

CLOTHING WORKERS IN CHICAGO COLLECT FUNDS FOR PATERSON STRIKERS

Hyman Schneid of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America turned in $22.50 for the benefit of the strikers in Paterson, New Jersey. He said the clothing workers of Chicago showed the feeling of solidarity when they willingly made donations to assist the silk strikers.

N. Botento turned in $13.30 for the strike fund and said that more would be coming next week.

Workers everywhere are urged to make contributions to the Paterson Silk Workers' strike. Send the money in to Room 303, 166 W. Washington St.

Brindell, Building Trades Czar, on Eve Of Leaving Prison

SING SING PRISON, New York, Dec. 1.—Robert P. Brindell, prize labor faker of the New York City building trades and one of the pillars of Tammany Hall, is not finding it so hard as political prisoners do to get out of the penitentiary. He will leave prison the day after Christmas "on parole."

Brindell was known as a "czar" in the building trades. The contractors did not mind having such crooks as Brindell controll the unions, as long as he controlled them for the contractors, but when he used his control to gouge graft from contractors for himself, they had him put away for three years as a lesson in deportment.

He is estimated to have cleaned up a million dollar fortune while in control of the building trades unions, and now that he has learned his lesson of how to treat contractors, the state has released him with the understanding that hereafter he graft off the unions and not from the contractors.

Labor Must Fight State Cossack Bill in Next Legislature

Another attempt of the employers to push thru "military police bills" in the Illinois house and senate, providing a constabulary which will be used as a strikebreaking agency in time of strikes is expected to be made at the next session of the Illinois state legislature.

Henry M. Dunlap, senator from Champaign who has already introduced three constabulary bills in the senate, all of which were defeated, and representative Howard P. Castle of Cook county, are expected to sponsor the bill in the senate and house respectively.

The previous bills introduced provide for a military police force entirely free of local responsibility, under the control of a "commanding officer" known as "superintendent of the Illinois state police," who is to be appointed for life. Members of the state constabulary, the proposed bill provides, are to have absolute power to make arrests, and to search, even without warrants.

COAL COMPANY HEADS IGNORE CONSTITUTION

Only Use It When It Suits Their Needs

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—If a private citizen is set upon in a closed company mining town and assaulted and thrown into jail he can claim no damages from the coal company which employs these thugs, a verdict in the Supreme Court of New York finds.

Even though the lawlessness of the assault were established by the conviction of the assailants in a court of law and the unwarranted character of the arrest of the thugs' victim proved by the local records showing that he had been promptly discharged it makes no difference to the New York Supreme Court. The coal company is exonerated from blame and payment of damages.

Absolves Coal Company

The decision in question absolves the Vinton Colleries company, incorporated in New York, for responsibility for the assault and arrest of Arthur Garfield Hays, prominent New York attorney, who made a test of the right of free speech in the gunman ruled town of Vintondale, Pennsylvania, May 27, 1922, during the big coal strike.

Hays went there representing the United Mine Workers that organizers were being unlawfully kept out of the town and union men beaten up.

Seized By Gunmen

Hays, other attorneys and newspapermen visited the town and narrowly escaped being ridden down by the dozen mounted coal and iron police there. On insisting on remaining in the town till a justice of the peace had been seen relative to the law relating to free speech Hays and the writer, who represented the Federated Press were seized by the gunmen at the direction of Lloyd I. Arbogast.

Coal Baron's Judge

After two and a half years Hays' suit for $35,000 damages came before Judge William Harmon Black of the New York Supreme Court. The judge would not allow records of the gunmen's conviction to be presented as evidence as to the barring of visitors from the closed town. Black ruled also that Hays could claim no damage for the indignity of the arrest.

The verdict means that this illegally closed town—one of many—can continue to fester as far as the court is concerned. The case may be appealed.

New York and London Bankers Extend Credit to German Railroads

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—Banking houses in New York and London are advancing credit amounting to 15 million dollars to the German state railway company, a private company organized in accordance with the Dawes plan to operate the railroads.

The money advanced is to be used for temporary working capital in order that the German railroads may be placed on a money-making basis. Three-quarters of the proceeds will go to the directors—that is, to the bankers of the Allied countries, in whose hands has been placed the complete control over this field of German industry. The remainder of the proceeds goes to the German government.

The financing of a private German railway company assures greater profits and speedier payment of reparations for the Allied bourgeoisie, which is now in a position to lengthen the workday and lower the wages of the workers on these railroads. Moreover, under the terms of the Dawes plan the directors of German industry have the right to maintain the proper order in the country—or, in other words, there must be no revolution of the working class since that might impair efficiency on the roads.

Basil Manly, the noted statistician, in his pamphlet, "Are Wages Too High?" sums up the present condition of the standard of living of the working masses in the United States as follows:

"With the exception of a few isolated occupations that were miserably underpaid in 1900, no class or group of workers has succeeded in maintaining unimpaired the real value of their wages as measured by the buying power which they possessed in 1900.

"With the exception of a few isolated and exceptionally skilled trades, the wages of American workers are insufficient, without supplement from other sources, to provide for the subsistence of a family consisting of husband, wife, and three minor children, much less maintain them in that condition of 'health and reasonable comfort' which every humane consideration demands."

We publish the following letter of an old French worker to the International Red Relief as a wonderful document of labor solidarity. The old worker regrets that he is too old and too poor to take a child of a German fellow worker, of an "enemy" as the bourgeois school and press would say.

He gives his last penny for the support of his German comrades who suffer behind prison walls. Nothing can deprive this old fighter of his belief in victory and future. Let him be a shining example of devotion and solidarity to all workers, men and women, and particularly to the working class youth!

Paris, Aug. 31, 1924.

My dear Comrades:—I want to say a few words to you to win your confidence. I am an old man of 68 years. During the war of 1870 I was 15 years old and since that time I live in France because I am an Elsacian. I have seen and experienced much in my youth and have learned and understood that all human beings are equal and that all poor people are oppressed whether they speak French, German or any other language.

Communist Sun Shines Everywhere

My confidence in the future is great. 50 years ago there was still a terrible darkness in the world and today the Communist sun shines everywhere and its beams reach the most remote countries. Everywhere is struggle—even in far off China. In England and France the Communist parties are growing.

In the factory where I work many workers join the Red Relief and collect money for the German children. On every pay day I take 50 to 60 francs to the Red Relief. The Red Relief is international. We want to support the oppressed and inspire them with hope.

The beginning of all things is difficult. But once the stone has fallen, it falls more and more quickly. Progress is slow in the beginning but gets quicker and quicker later on.

In the last war the eyes of many people have been opened. The immense slaughter has made clear to the oppressed what Karl Marx taught. Many poor devils cannot read, but the horrible war was an immense book which was understood by all poor people and which told them that the capitalists have deceived us all the time. Thus we have become brothers.

All states have so many debts that they cannot pay them. We will have still much to fight and to suffer, but whatever may come, we will be victorious. Moscow is the capital of the world. Recently the fifth world congress took place. The Communists of all countries have gathered there. Russia is very powerful, it is the heart of the world.

Thus, my dear comrades, be patience! Patience and good hope! We shall not abandon you! We have taken German children to France and the Red Relief gives money to your families. I would have been so glad to take a German child, but I am too poor and old. What we suffer in our struggle is for our dear children. Life will be better for them. A life in peace and for themselves and no more for the capitalists, no more war, but equality, liberty and fraternal love. This is our aim. For this future we suffer and die.

My comrades send you with me their best greetings.

Your good friend,
Joseph Mehl.

WANT AND STARVATION STALK THRU THE SOUTH AS JOBS FAIL WORKERS

CHARLESTON, S. C.—Want and starvation is stalking abroad in the south. Work is not to be had. Banks in many places have closed their doors. Several bankers in South Carolina are held by the courts for illegal banking. One banker, upon conviction, killed himself.

A headline in a Charleston paper reads: Family Here in Dire Need, Man Appeals for Work. Wife Ill—Children Hungry. The Associated Charities is making an earnest appeal for help for a young man who is very anxious to secure work. He is willing to do any kind of honest work. This man has a family in desperate need. A visit to the home revealed the fact that the family was without food. His wife is ill, and there are two little children, the charity worker reported. The case is typical.

CLEVELAND, Dec. 1.—"I'd rather be sheriff of Cuyahoga county than president of the United Trust Co.," a Cleveland politician remarked during the recent campaign.

Why the sheriff's office is such a tasty morsel in the politician's mouth is revealed by a suit brought by a taxpayer against Sheriff C. B. Stannard, asking that worthy to pay back to the county $33,000. That is the amount, according to the taxpayer, that Stannard has pladed in his own pocket by overcharging the county for feeding prisoners.

Hires Belly-Robber

The graft works this way: The county allows 75c a day for feeding each prisoner. The sheriff hires a cook (known in the prisoners' parlance as a belly-robber) who hammers down the cost per day to a few pennies. The rest goes into the sheriff's pocket.

The Ohio supreme court has decided that the taxpayer has a right to force Stannard to return his "profit" of $33,000, the result of one year's activities in starving county prisoners. The sheriff himself hurriedly paid a visit to his confederate, the county prosecutor, offering to return $5,000 to the county treasurer.

Sheriff's Job a Juicy Plum

Those innocents who have gazed in astonishment at the frenzied efforts made by aspiring politicians to grab the sheriff's job, and have wondered at the huge amounts spent by candidates to attain this plum, have the key in the prison food bill. The system is worked not only in Cleveland, but in nearly every city of the country and is considered legitimate graft for the sheriff's office.

N. Y. Herald-Tribune Is Sudden Convert to Freedom of Press

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK.—It all depends whose ox is gored. When hundreds of workingmen were jailed during the war for exercising their rights of free speech; when since the war workingmen were sent to Sing Sing for exercising their rights of free speech and free press the New York Tribune said Amen! It gave assent, too, to the persecution of papers which exercised the rights of free press.

But now the leading editorial of the Herald-Tribune Nov. 26 is The Freedom of the Press and the feature of the editorial is the text of the first amendment to the federal constitution:

Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech or of the press, or the right of the people peaceably to assemble, and to petition the government for a redress of grievances.

The Herald-Tribune is calling on the constitution of the United States to protect it from Attorney General Stone, who has had it indicted, charged with unlawful printing and publishing of income tax returns. Ogden Reid, president New York Tribune, Inc., which owns the Herald-Tribune said his defence will raise two contentions: (1) that the act of congress on which the indictments were based did not prohibit the publication of income taxes paid; (2) that that statute is unconstitutional, because it violates the freedom of the press clause of the constitution.

Scientists Inherit Church Position

NEW YORK.—"Why has the moral supremacy of the church passed to the scientist?" asked Dr. Stuart Tyson, of an audience at Grace church. "You know that it has. It is because the scientist seeks truth without prejudice. He changes his views on the acquisition of knowledge, while the Christian church defends old things."

Militarism in Excelsis

Secretary Weeks is an apt pupil of his predecessors.

When has a session of congress ever opened without the official spokesmen of the army and navy announcing that the nation is in grave danger? This is the usual prelude to a demand for generous appropriations for the flock of gold-braided parasites which is the inevitable accompaniment of a regime of plunder.

The nation that is in danger is not the United States, but the countries where the House of Morgan and its brood of financial chickens have made their nests. Little nations like Mexico, Cuba, Santo Domingo and Costa Rica, Chili, Peru and other republics of South America that have rich natural resources which marines and battleships can capture for the covetous rulers of the United States, big nations like Germany and France where the whole working class can be enslaved profitably, Great Britain whose imperialist ambitions run counter to those of the American plunderbund in all quarters of the globe, Japan who must be eliminated so that the Pacific can become a Morgan lake, China with its teeming millions, its fertile soil and its enormously valuable deposits of coal, copper and iron, these are the nations that are in danger and it is for offense against them that the alarm is raised.

There is no limit to the ambitions of the American ruling class and the servility of the officialdom of the American labor movement allows these ambitions to run riot. When the officers of the metal trades section of the American Federation of Labor ask for more battleships, and the whole convention endorses military training camps, as they did in El Paso, it is not surprising that real militarists feel that the sky is the limit.

Gold for the Soviets

There is considerable stir in certain London and New York financial circles over the ultimate destination of a recent shipment of two million dollars gold to England from the United States. The first belief that Germany was to be the recipient of this sum has vanished.

What agitates the financiers at this moment is the belief that the gold has found its way to Soviet Russia. The British and American financial wizards seem to feel that they were outmaneuvered by some mysterious Bolshevik banker. To them it is horror to think of good American capitalist gold finding its way into the realms of the Soviet Union.

Whether this suspicion is warranted by fact or not does not matter. Before long the imperialist governments will be compelled to extend huge gold credits to the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics. The capitalist groups of the various countries will be driven to do so by a multitude of reasons amongst which will be their love of profits and their desire to secure what they call "political stability on the continent." In the light of such transactions the probable round-about shipment of the paltry sum of two million dollars assumes insignificance.

It is not our task to delve into morals. It is not our aim to examine the so-called abstract ethics and morality of capitalist banking which is based on a foregoing anti-social foundation. But all this horror of a few million dollars gold finding its destination in Soviet Russia thru a commercial deal causes one to do a little recollecting. What about the huge sum of gold, running into several hundreds of millions of dollars, that the allied imperialists forced Germany to disgorge when they full well knew that it was the property of the Soviet government?

It is an act of consummate humanitarian diplomacy for the allies to steal outright hundreds of millions of dollars of gold belonging to the Soviet Republic, gold which it was temporarily compelled to give to Germany after the Brest-Litovsk treaty. However, consternation arises when perchance the Soviet Republic thru a commercial deal manages to receive in exchange a small quantity of gold from the American imperialist clique which has hoarded more than half the monetary gold of the world. The lesson in class morality is too simple to need emphasis.

The Bank of England is loaning the Greek government $55,000,000. This looks like another war on Turkey with the brave bankers furnishing the gold while the Greeks furnish the guts.

A Chicago bank cashier mistook a carload of policemen for bandits and shot three of them. The surprising thing is that this mistake is not made oftener.

The dollar today buys 65.2 per cent of what it did in 1913. If a worker gets $9 per day now he is no better off than he was in 1913 when he got $6.

Hail Owen the First!

Within a few days the leading lights of America's imperialist aristocracy will gather to tender a royal welcome to one of Germany's most recent monarchs, King Owen the First. We have in mind the gorgeous banquet that has been arranged for Owen D. Young, the first American receiver for Germany under the Dawes plan.

American imperialism has good reason to hail Owen D. Young. Despite the fact that the reparation scheme is generally called the Dawes plan, those most acquainted with the actual preliminaries and mechanism of recent European negotiations are aware of the fact that it was Owen D. Young who was the real author of the whole plan. This conclave in the Waldorf Astoria will be an expression of joy and satisfaction by our biggest exploiters and their allies over the contribution made by Mr. Young towards their extending financial domination. It is an indisputable fact that the Yankee banker Young and his present shoe-warmer, Mr. Gilbert, are endowed with more power over the lives and fortunes of the German masses than the Kaiser ever dreamt of attaining.

It is especially interesting to note the character of the personnel that has been chosen to dine and wine this oligarch of American imperialist prowess. Every section, every layer of the imperialist group is to be at hand to participate in the rejoicing. Big business is to be represented Elbert H. Gary, Herbert Hoover, Charles Schwab and John D. Rockefeller, Jr. Ivy L. Lee, the notorious open shop advocate, will be one of the leading entertainers. Seated right next to him will be the spokesman of the aristocracy of labor, an integral part of the imperialist machine, Matthew Woll and Peter J. Brady. The latter will pose as the representatives of the working class in an effort to misrepresent the opinion of the toiling masses of this country regarding the vicious Dawes scheme.

No worker or poor farmer will be permitted to participate in the celebration. This is proper. For the workers and poor farmers of the country the Young banquet is an occasion not for celebration but for preparation for vigorous battle against the exploiters and despoilers of the country.

"Moral Consciousness"

An interesting angle is being given the various employers' associations to the drive they have launched against the proposed insufficient child labor amendment before the country.

This new coloring is of a two-fold nature. First of all, the profiteers are howling that to give congress power over children up to the age of eighteen is repugnant to the "moral consciousness" of the country. We can understand this wail. To the employers "moral consciousness" and an unbroken flow of fabulous dividends, huge profits, are synonymous.

The second phase of this opposition is based on the promise that the United States government was organized on the principle of decentralization, on the principle of a diffusion of its powers among the various states. The New York chamber of commerce, for instance, is yelling about giving over too much power to congress. Here we are afforded an excellent treat, a splendid lesson, in the morality of the class struggle. It is always proper for the government to centralize its power when such centralization will enable it to function more effectively as a strikebreaking agency. It is always improper for the government to tend to assume more centralized power when such power is not directly and immediately beneficial to the enhancement of profits for the exploiters.

How many workers have ever heard of any employers' association protesting against the extension of governmental powers when the militia, when the army, when the courts, when the department of justice are mobilized to break strikes, to jail workers, to issue injunctions and to shoot down striking laborers? The answer is obvious. Not a single worker has ever heard of such a protest by the bosses because no such protest is ever issued. However, scratch the skin of a profiteer and you will be flooded by a stream of "moral consciousness" rebelling against the "tyranny" of their own open shop governmental clique operating in Washington.

Gompers Gets a Government

Samuel Gompers and the executive council of the American Federation of Labor have at last got a tame government that they can play around with and hold up as an example of what a labor government should be—the Calles government of Mexico.

Like the social-democratic government of Germany which accepts and enforces the Dawes plan of allied imperialism, like the late MacDonald government of England which put over the Dawes plan when the tories felt the task too hard for them, like the "liberal" Herriot government of France, the tax collecting agency for the House of Morgan, the Calles government is the Mexican apparatus of American imperialism.

This alone explains the fondness of Gompers for it. The Calles government marks the end of the present revolutionary period in Mexico and the alliance of the bureaucracies of the American and Mexican federations of labor is for the purpose of preventing a real social revolution toward which the Communist Party of Mexico leads the workers and peasants. This is made plain by the open unity of Gompers and Trevino—the Morones spokesman—against the Communists, the force that both American imperialism and its Mexican allies fear.

The new union is blessed by Rockefeller and Morgan.

COMMERCE IN HUMAN FLESH IN HEBRIDES

Outrages Are Committed by Planters

SYDNEY, New South Wales, Dec. 2.—Black slavery as well as the buying and selling of women for sex purposes, and abuses of the worst kind still take place in the New Hebrides islands (South Pacific ocean) in spite of the publicity given to the matter.

Decisions from the courts are never enforced and outrages continue despite official condemnation. The French planters seem able to do just what they liked with their slaves.

A recent case, typical of many, is that of a French planter who killed a native. He was merely put to the inconvenience of going down to the courthouse, stating that he had hit the native and that he died. He was acquitted by the court.

Charges are made, that slavery is rampant in certain parts of the islands. The position of the native women is, they said, intolerable. They are recruited in unspeakable ways, married and divorced at the will of the planters, and used simply to induce the native males to stay on the plantations. In a word, prostitution is enforced at the will of the planter. Regarding the male slaves it is stated that at least 40 out of every 100 die during the three years they are indentured to the plantation owners.

MAKE NEW DISCOVERIES ABOUT DIPTHERIA AND DIABETES REMEDIES

Medical circles here today were discussing the discovery of Dr. Arthur Locke, 26 year old chemist of St. Luke's hospital by which he claims to have isolated the active elements in insulin, diabetes remedy, and the diphtheria anti-toxin permitting their laboratory synthesis.

The discovery, physicians declared, would permit the inexpensive manufacture of the drugs and do away with the present necessity of obtaining them by laborious processes from animals. Dr. Locke's announcement states he had effected the isolation by electrodialysis.

Greeting from Our Comrades in Jail.

SOMETHING to be thankful for, and something in which more than one comrade in jail has shared in, was supplied by a generous gift of Comrade Linday of Evanston, Ill. His was a donation of $5.00 in answer to our plea to "send the DAILY WORKER to jail."

Here is a reply in appreciation, from a comrade in jail, who since Thanksgiving can "talk turkey" to any worker. His letter of necessity unsigned, reads as follows:

"COMRADES: Your letter informing me of the generous gift of Comrade Linday, which was supplemented by your office to cover the cost of a six month "sub" to the DAILY WORKER, WORKERS MONTHLY and COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL to my credit, duly received.

"Needless to say, I am very proud of this stroke of policy. It did much to strengthen my faith and moreover to supply a weapon for better polemics against my bourgeois associates. I am instinctively a revolutionist but lack much in the way of theoretical argument. Naturally the news of this gift comprising the cream of the revolutionary thought kindled high hopes in my ambition to be like you fellows. I have been mentally starved to such an extent hitherto that the rich nutriment from your pens had little trouble in dissolving my illusions.

"I have hoped for just such activity your party has undertaken to clarify and oppose the scheme of exploitation afflicting humanity. You have my heartfelt wishes and life long support in pushing this fight to its consummation. My acknowledgment to Comrade Linday has been posted. The comrades sharing this gift join me in greetings to you all.

NEGROES CHARGE YOUNG WOMEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION IS GUILTY OF SPIRIT OF THE KU KLUX KLAN

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—The Young Women's Christian Association is found guilty of a "Ku Klux spirit and program, without the hoods," by the African Methodists' Episcopal Preachers' Association of Greater New York, in a statement denouncing the Y. W. C. A. for barring Miss Lydia Gardine from its school of hygiene because of her color.

"These are some of the persecutions that are constantly asserting themselves against the race in this country, a Ku Klux spirit and program without the 'hoods,' yet no less dangerous and outrageous.

"Any institution bearing the name of Christ, calling itself christian, should be above such hypocrity, and when revealed, no terms are too strong for their denunciation."

The issue of discrimination against the young colored woman was first taken up by the national association for the advancement of colored people. The Y. W. C. A. stands pat on its jim crow policy.

RAID ON WINE PARTY AT WEDDING FEAST IS NOT SACRILEGIOUS

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—Jesus Christ raided at his wine party at the Cana of Galilee wedding feast; raided by William Jennings Bryan, Andrew J. Volstead and William H. Anderson, with Volstead's hand clapped arrestingly on Christ's shoulder. This audacious picture, hung in the Waldorf-Astoria at the society for independent artists' exhibition, roused the wrath of a right-eous policeman and led to a $100 fine of Abraham S. Baylinson, secretary of the artists' society. The higher courts have now returned the fine.

Got Something to Wear.

MT. VERNON, Ill., Dec. 2.—Shoes, men's clothing and other merchandise to the estimated value of $2,000 were hauled away in a truck by bandits who broke into Porter & Glenns, general store at Dahlgren, east of here early today.

RUHR OCCUPIED BY WALL STREET DOLLAR BRIGADE

Labor Fakers Are Now Morgan's Collectors

PARIS, Dec. 1.— The Ruhr is no longer occupied by a French army. It is now operated by the dollar army of Wall Street. The Dawes plan has taken the place of the French occupation.

The Belgian and French profits from the Ruhr occupation during that critical and stormy period was only $150,000,000. The Dawes plan removed the irritations caused by the Poincare method of making Germany pay, and substituted a system whereby the German workers are made to pay the reparations to the allies, with the sanction of the workers, the petty bourgeoisie and the big capitalists in the best American fashion. The labor leaders are now the Simon Legrees of the American bankers.

The Ruhr railways, considered the most perfect railway system in the world, were not turned over to their German owners with other industries. Instead they were turned over to the company organized under the provisions of the Dawes plan for their operation. The profit from this operation will go to the reparations fund.

Bankers Meet with Coolidge.

William E. Knox, president of the

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 2.—American Banker's Assn., announces that the winter meeting of the administrative committee of the bankers will take place in the national capital Dec. 11 and 12, and that "arrangements are being made" for the committee to call on President Coolidge, Secretary Mellon, the comptroller of the currency, the governor of the federal reserve board and the chairman of the banking and currency committees in the house and senate.

"In some cases," he confesses, "conferences will be held to discuss particular subjects in which the bankers are especially interested."

Sawdust Catches Fire.

ROCK ISLAND, Ill., Dec. 2.—Spontaneous combustion in the sawdust stack today was held responsible for the explosion in the boiler room of the Rock Island Sash and Door company which yesterday caused serious injuries to Osborne Bateman, engineer and Thomas Armstrong, watchman, and did damage estimated at $300,000. The plant is the largest of its kind in the world.

'Americanization' and the Open Shop

By SAMUEL SKLAROFF.

PUBLIC schools are popularly supposed to occupy a neutral ground in the disputes between labor and capital. Maintained as they are, so goes the legend, by taxation levied on all classes of the population, they represent no particular class interest. Their function, so we are told, is to offer equal opportunities for education to rich and poor alike.

Democracy is Delusion.

The trouble with our so-called democratic education, however, is that like all capitalist democracy it is, as far as the working class is concerned, only a delusion and a snare. Notwithstanding all professions of impartiality, the virus of capitalist propaganda is subtly and insidiously injected into the minds of the children of the working class.

It is common knowledge that no teacher suspected of "radical ideas," if only of a pale pink hue, can hold his or her position very long. The schools are honeycombed with spies and stoolpigeons whose business it is to ferret out and report the instructor whose highest crime may be an expression of sympathy for the struggles of organized labor. On the other hand, the teacher who fawns and cringes before men of great wealth and holds them up as shining examples of success for the worship and emulation of his class, is assured not only of a permanent position but of favor and advancement as well.

"Americanizing" the Immigrant.

Within recent years this capitalist propaganda has taken a bold and new departure. Looking upon the tide of immigration flowing into this country, it has occurred to some "educators" to utilize the need of the alien for the study of the new language for the purposes of "Americanization." Startling and incredible as it may seem to American trade unionists, there is, nevertheless, abundant evidence, some of which shall be presently submitted, that thousands of aliens in hundreds of public schools are being taught that the union shop is un-American and that the open shop represents the "American idea of freedom."

How Propaganda Is Put Over.

This training for prospective strike-breaking is carried out not only by word of mouth, but also by printed page, in primers and readers for foreigners. At the foot of each reading lesson there are word-exercises intended to drive home in the form of word study the vicious anti-labor contents of the preceding lesson.

Probably the most widely used reader of this kind is published by Charles Scribners' Sons' and bears the following caption: "Second Book in English for Coming Citizens"—by Henry H. Goldberger, principal of public school 18, New York City, instructor in methods of teaching English to foreigners, Columbia University.

This book deals in simple language with the supposed experiences of a foreigner arriving in this open country. In the course of his struggles Anton gets a job in a cigar factory. Here, we learn, conditions are ideal for the workers. To quote from chapter xxiii entitled "Trouble in the Factory," it is admitted that "they had not much to complain of; that the rates of pay were as high as anywhere in the country; that the working conditions in the factory were excellent." But union agitators penetrate this ideal workshop, the men organize and then go out on strike apparently for no reason whatever.

Here's Where Juniors Will Get Busy

The two succeeding chapters are entitled "The Test," and "The Strike," and give a typically employers' point of "labor trouble."

In chapter xxxiii, Anton's reactions at his first union meeting while listening to the various speakers are described as follows: "He felt, however, that there was something wrong with the proposition that workingmen should dictate to the employer; should tell him whom he may hire and whom he may not hire. He wondered if the union worked on the American principle of freedom. Why should the union allow the employer the same freedom of action that the worker asks for himself? These were difficult questions for him, and as yet he had thot little about them."

At the bottom of this lesson some of the questions are: "What is a closed shop? An open shop? Why did Anton join the union? Do you think he was right?" Should some bewildered Anton in one of these "Americanization" classes, beset with doubts, request the help of the teacher in answering these "difficult questions" the teacher will supply the "proper" answer, or lose his job.

The next chapter describes the fantastic generosity of the management of the Bravura Cigar company.

Why Does A. F. of L. Tolerate This?

The first two sentences in chapter xxv, "The Strike," are as follows: "The strike was on. Anton looked for employment in other cigar factories, but found nothing." And so he paid the penalty for joining the union and following his shop-mates in a strike.

The story of the strike is ridiculously absurd. Pickets are represented as stationing themselves at factory doors and preventing all and sundry from entering the building, for which offense the judge in the court-room magnanimously fines the arrested picket "one dollar!"

How long will organized labor tolerate this vicious propaganda conducted by the enemy in the guise of public education? There are many such text-books in thousands of schools all over the country by means of which the capitalist oligarchy which rules "our free country" are attempting to raise a generation of scabs and willing slaves.

THE PROLETARIAN STATE AND THE COMMUNIST PARTY

Editor's Note.—Every day until publication has been completed, the DAILY WORKER will publish a new chapter from the book, "Lenin: The Great Strategist of the Class War," by A. Losovsky, secretary of the Red International of Labor Unions. The fifteenth chapter is entitled, "The Proletarian State and the Communist Party."

LENIN had a perfect conception of the nature of democracy and of the state. He restated the Marxian position regarding the nature of the state and its role in the class struggle. As against the bourgeois democratic state, he placed the Soviet state as the concrete form of the proletarian dictatorship. And he also defined the position of the Soviet state in the development of the social revolution. Characterizing the Soviet state, he said: "The dictatorship of the class is one thing, while the dictatorship of the party is an entirely different proposition." To this Lenin replied: "The working class must realize its dictatorship thru its vanguard, and since the Communist Party of Russia is the vanguard of the working class it is quite natural that this party exercises the power of the proletarian rule." This theory Lenin had put into effect. And it is not an abstract theory, but a living reality, in the gigantic workshop called Soviet Russia were forged the new historic forms of working class power, and new methods of struggle for its liberation. Lenin always went ahead, clearing the path, casting aside all prejudices and throwing a mighty searchlight of Marxism upon the complex problems of the social and economic struggles.

WARN TERROR RULE IN ESTHONIA

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THE organ of the Farm-Labor Union of America, without saying so, takes the same position, politically, as the American Federation of Labor. It declares that the Farm-Labor Union is a "business and not a political organization" and should therefore steer clear of affiliating with any political party, whether it be farmer-labor, progressive, democratic or republican. Gompers' business is managing the members of the American Federation of Labor so that they may remain docile slaves of the capitalists. The fakers in charge of the farm organizations are also non-partisan, which means that they are with the capitalist parties.

MUSSOLINI'S friends are urging him to quit the government until public clamor calls him back again. It is more likely that when Benito drops the dagger, the masses will walk him to the gallows if their patience permits them. The dictator's position is getting slippier every day. His bourgeois opponents fear that the passing of Fascism will leave the way open for the coming of Communism. Their fears are well grounded.

WE are informed by an enthusiastic capitalist scribe that the president intends to make history. Naturally such an announcement arouses one's interest. We learn that Coolidge is to visit the bulls and other animals in the Chicago stockyards. This is the first time Calvin has been west of Washington for eighteen months. It is a testimony to his political acumen that he did not brave the breezy west until after he was safely elected, and that even then he is trying it on the cows.

A CHARITY BALL without a vaudeville program nowadays would be as reckless as potato water. Therefore the society ladies in Washington, who are always on the lookout for fresh notices have invited a female who styles herself the "Grand Duchess Cyril of Russia" to appear at the ball as an attraction. The ladies are sorry the grand duke could not appear, but perhaps his haberdashery is not up to scratch or perhaps that's the trouble. There may be too much of that kind of thing associated with it.

HOWEVER, these are delicate matters. The duchess will be ignored by the United States government, says a Washington dispatch, which is regrettable, declare the society ladies. To excuse Charlie Hughes for his involuntary inhospitality, the press agent says that Washington has little love for the Soviets but it does not want to go out of its way to hurt their feelings. Red armies have sharp bayonets and dried-up duchesses do not inspire Don Quixotes.

PICTURES are now being sent across three thousand miles of ocean by radio. This is truly remarkable but not more so than the feat accomplished by Messrs. Northcliffe and Bonar Law in sending messages from hell or wherever these two worthies are passing the time, in the theological sense, of course. The two British aristocrats are still true to their class. It would not surprise us if they began discovering "Red Plots," after the earthly liars have played themselves out.

DR. ROACH STRATTON, of New York, a fossilized fundamentalist, got quite peeved after he read John D. Rockefeller, Jr.'s, sermon on religion in the papers. Young John regretted that the development of the human mind outstripped religious development. The old king said that science did funny things to the scriptures, without hurting them much. When you boil a potato without the skin, the mineral salts which are next to the skin are thrown away, making the consumer a victim instead of a beneficiary of the appetizing "Murphy."

NOT so with the scriptures, according to John. Sciences knocks hell out of them, but hell still remains as hot as ever. Dr. Stratton, who looks on Rockefeller, Jr., as a dangerous radical, denounces such sermons as pernicious. He lays much of the blame for modernism in the church on the shoulders of the Rockefellers whose money, spent in scientific discoveries in order to improve their oil producing machinery ran foul of the christian god in several places, with damaging results to the latter. Perhaps John D., Jr., might secure Stratton's benevolent neutrality with a few thousand dollars. God is known to have often relented for much less.

Cal's Town In 'Daily' Drive

BOSTON IS 100 PER CENT BACK OF 'DAILY' DRIVE

Loeb Gets Big Response in Hub City

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BOSTON, Mass., Dec. 3.—Boston is determined to organize the Workers Party one hundred per cent for the DAILY WORKER drive to insure the DAILY WORKER for 1925.

The meeting of city central delegates, branch agents and branch secretaries was very well attended, eighteen out of the city's twenty-two branches being present on short notice.

Undoubtedly several thousand dollars will be raised by the Boston comrades for their daily paper. Eight hundred dollars is already in sight.

Those present greeted the campaign with enthusiasm, evincing particular interest regarding the DAILY WORKER Builders' organization.

A full time city agent will be in the field for Boston within the next few days.

FINNISH WORKERS PARTY MEMBERS PLEDGED TO RAISE $22,893 IN DRIVE TO INSURE DAILY WORKER

The campaign to hold fast to the DAILY WORKER and to build it shot forward with the speed of a bullet when the report reached us that the entire Finnish Federation of the Workers Party would lend the hands of its 7,631 hard-fisted militants to make our English daily safe for the coming year.

A decision by the Finnish federation to support the Communist press means action. In accepting the minimum quota of $22,893 which this federation has promised to raise for the DAILY WORKER, there goes an earnestness and a determination to gather every dollar of this large sum.

Acquainted With Press Problems.

"We know the trials and troubles the first two years of life brings to workers' revolutionary papers," said Fahle Burman, Finnish Federation national secretary, in explanation of the pledge given.

"The militant Finnish workers of the United States have established three dailies, the Eteenpain for the Atlantic coast, the Tyomies for the middle states, the Toveri for the Pacific coast. In each instance the going ahead was like trying to sleigh-ride on ashes. But we showed we were stronger than the encumberances and tribulations which faced us. No matter what the hardships, we fought it and won.

Know Need for DAILY WORKER.

"We Finnish comrades understand, to the last man and woman in the federation, that the DAILY WORKER is absolutely indispensable to our movement. We must struggle to keep it alive, to make it grow with more of an iron will than we would in the case of any language paper of the party.

"For the Finnish Federation you can say that there will be no let-up in this campaign until a receipt from the DAILY WORKER for the very last cent of the $22,893 is in my hands. As you say in your publicity, we'll meet this expectation, yes, beat it."

With loyal support such as this, the voice of our English party organ, The DAILY WORKER, will never be stilled. On the contrary, it will grow in volume until it reaches the ears of the proletarian masses and enlists them in the work of shoving the profitmongers overboard.

Make the DAILY WORKER safe! Help insure its future! The country has been painted red with the big BOOKS OF INSURANCE POLICIES. Make it your policy to buy a policy.

Buy a $5.00 policy as a minimum. Every member to this task of weathering the storm and building big so that future storms will be but gusts of wind, filling our sails sufficiently to plow thru every high sea that confronts us.

Note.—Read the statement of the allotment of quotas on page four.

MACHINIST HELPS INSURE THE DAILY WORKER FOR 1925

Joseph Freimann, of the German Local of the International Association fo Machinists, took out a five dollar insurance policy to build the DAILY WORKER for 1925, at the union's meeting Monday night. Freimann, who is a subscriber to the DAILY WORKER, has secured several subscriptions from the German machinists. The meeting was held at 1638 North Halsted street.

HAND OF MORGAN SEEN IN BRAZIL BLOW AT JAPAN

Loans and Coffee Control Country

(Special to The Daily Worker)

RIO DE JANIERO, Brazil, Dec. 3.—The hand of the American government is seen in the Brazilian government's notification of the Japanese government that the issuance of visas for immigrants from Japan has been suspended.

Monroe Doctrine Extended.

This slap at Japan by Brazil, marks an extension of the Monroe Doctrine to cover hostility toward Asiatic nations as well as those of Europe.

American and British imperialisms have been in hot competition in Brazil. Both nations have had "missions" in Brazil, advising the nation what it ought to do. The British counseled no extension of steel production—they owning all there was previously. Pat Judge Gary of the U. S. Steel Corporation visited Brazil last summer and a loan of $55,000,000 was arranged by Wall Street to the Brazilian government. It has used this money

EXPULSION OF RADICALS SCORED AT T. U. E. L. MEET

Dunne Tears the Labor Mask of El Paso Meet

The rank and file of the local 181 of the Carpenters' Union are outraged over the arbitrary action of the henchmen of Harry Jensen and General President Hutcheson, in expelling five active members of the local for signing a resolution protesting against the action of Jensen and Hutcheson in accepting a scab contract from the employers of Chicago, according to statements made last Tuesday night before a meeting of the local branch of the Trade Union Educational League by Arne Swabeck, Workers Party district organizer, and by one of the expelled members.

The trial was a farce. No attempt was made to bring out the facts in the case. The records were perverted and the report of the trial doctored to suit the designs of the persecutors of the militants.

Yesterday's issue of The DAILY WORKER contained a complete report of the action of the fakers in local 181, who carried out the orders of Jensen and the notorious Hutcheson, against the opposition of the membership.

Intend to Fight.

The expelled members and their supporters in the union have only begun to fight, however, and before the battle is over the fakers will learn that doctored reports and lies will not be sufficient to enable them to hold their power in the local.

The speakers at the T. U. E. L. meeting explained that the autocratic action of the fakers in local 181 was part of the struggle that is being waged on a national and even international scale by the yellow reactionaries against the radicls. The T. U. E. L. in American, the representative of the Red International of Labor Unions, is the directing head of the resistance to the bureaucrats in this country.

William F. Dunne, editor of The DAILY WORKER, who was expelled from the Portland convention of the American Federation fo Labor, last year, spoke on the significance of the El Paso convention of the A. F. of L.

Wall Street's Handmaiden.

This significance, Dunne explained, was not due to any breaking away from its historical attachment to the capitalist parties, but because for the first time it exposed itself as the

MANY DEATHS IN IRELAND AS CROPS FAIL

Repetition of 'Black 47' Is Feared

DUBLIN, Dec. 3.—Ireland is facing a winter of misery and some persons predict a repetition of the desolate "black '47." That was the year of the potato famine.

Crops this year largely have been failures, due to heavy rains. There is an extreme shortage of the peat used for fuel. Poverty has reached an acute stage and reports are coming to Dublin of deaths thru starvation.

Unemployed Meet in Church.

The council of the unemployed has taken possession of an old church in a Dublin district where suffering is keen and is attempting to feed approximately 1,500 persons weekly. The staple food is bread and butter with tea. When money can be obtained, boiled meat is served. Money to maintain the kitchen is collected in tin cans in the streets.

Many deaths from starvation in town and country are reported.

Industry in the free state has by no means yet grown to dimensions insuring jobs to anything like all who are willing and eager to work.

California Bosses Again Trying to Cook Up Conspiracy

SAN FRANCISCO.—Altho additional investigation shows that the damage to the non-union Joshua Henry Iron works at Sunnyvale, with injury of two workers, was caused by a steam explosion, the industrial association of San Francisco (the employers' union) continues to regard it as the result of a bomb thrown by "agitators," and has announced a reward of $2,500 for information leading to the arrest and conviction "of the person or persons guilty of causing the explosion." Members of the Molders' Union are out from all open shop jobs and the walkout threatens to spread.

BRITISH LABOR DELEGATES IN MOSCOW THREATEN REPRISALS ON ESTHONIAN WHITE GUARDS

LONDON, Dec. 3.—Consternation prevails in the British foreign office over the reports reaching here from Moscow that the delegation sent by the British Trade Union Congress to the Sixth Congress of the Russian Trade Unions at Moscow have protested energetically to the Esthonian minister in Moscow against the murderous persecution of Communists in Esthonia.

Sputtering with rage, the tory press which is responsible for the publication of the forged "Zinoviev letter" are accusing the leading figures of British unions, such as Purcell and Tillet, of being "Communists."

Esthonia Warned By British Labor.

That the British delegation has taken a manly stand on the Esthonian murders of Communists cannot be doubted. The whole delegation called at the Esthonian embassy in Moscow and warned the minister that if Esthonia did not cease its persecution of Communists it would be faced by grave consequences for Esthonia itself, as the workers of Great Britain would demand severance of relations politically and would possibly lay down a labor embargo upon all commerce with Esthonia.

That the British delegation to the Russian trade union congress is taking cognizance of the power of the Soviet trade unions and the Soviet state is evidenced by the signed statements appearing in "Trud," the official daily paper of the Russian unions.

Purcell Applauds Soviet Russia.

In the issue of Nov. 12 is the following:

"The Union of Socialist Soviet Republics is the first practical step toward the establishment of the united states of Europe by the revolutionary working class. It is making the arms which will achieve the freedom of the world's working class." This is signed by A. A. Purcell, who took the leading part in the Vienna congress of the Amsterdam international.

A. H. Findlay, another delegate says, "The workers' and peasants' republic means the birth of a new life. The workers of the whole world look with great and passionate hope upon the struggle of the Russian workers for their right to live and govern themselves."

Turner Speaks for Unity.

John Turner, another delegate from Britain writes, "At the present time it

MAHONEY JOINS IN DRIVE ON COMMUNISTS

Comes Out for "Non-Partisan" Policy

By C. A. HATHAWAY.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Dec. 3.—The Hennepin County central committee of the farmer-labor federation has taken another step backward in its betrayal of independent working class political action. This latest move is just a continuation of the trend towards non-partisanism started by the endorsement of LaFollette in the last presidential campaign. This time William Mahoney of St. Paul supported the non-partisans.

Two weeks ago, Gustav Drake a local attorney, introduced a resolution providing for the unseating of all delegates who were members of the Workers Party. This resolution came up for action at the last meeting with State Chairman William Mahoney and Silas Secretary Ralph Harmon present to bolster up the position of those supporting the resolution. I. O. Scott, chairman, ruled the motion out of order. An appeal was immediately made from the decision of the chair resulting in the chairman being sustained by a vote of 34 to 6. Robley D. Cramer then moved to unseat the delegate representing the City Central Committee of the Workers Party which carried by a vote of 26 to 14.

KARL RADEK WRITES ON AMERICAN PARTY FUTURE AS SHOWN BY ELECTIONS

MOSCOW, Nov. 13. (By Mail.)—In an article analysing the American situation as disclosed by the result of the elections, Karl Radek, in the Pravda of this date, draws the following conclusions:

"LaFollette received a large amount of votes but as far as we can judge these votes came from the city petty bourgeois. The LaFollette movement has not been able to grasp the wide masses of the farmers. The defeat of LaFollette does not decide the future of the so-called third party.

"If the economic conditions in the United States will grow worse, and it will surely happen so, as Comrade Varga correctly states in his last economic report, there is no proof that the LaFollette movement may yet become a broader movement.

"But the election proved undoubtedly one thing, that it is a purely petty bourgeois movement. The Comintern was absolutely correct when it did not sustain that tendency in the American Communist movement which was striving for an alliance with the LaFollettelites for the creation of a labor party. There is no basis as yet for such a party in the United States.

"Altho there are in America at present about 3,000,000 out of work, the capitalist system in the United States is still comparatively strong. In a country which owns half of the riches of the world, the wide masses of the workers still have confidence in the stability of capitalism.

"Under such conditions the Communist Party will have to conduct preparatory work toward uniting the proletarian center and stiffening it for the struggle. Our brother party received at the greatest about 50,000 votes in a country where there are millions of underpaid workers which have the franchise.

"This proves that the party will yet have to work long in the sense of agitation, propaganda and organization. There is nothing horrible in the fact that our party, which two years ago had only a few thousand workers driven underground, being torn by factional fights, a party which only last year was able to start the publication of a daily paper—was not able to poll a million votes. Only in the revolutionary periods do masses ripen quickly. There is no revolution in America. There is still more work necessary before the party becomes the magnet around which the workers may rally.

"Our American comrades during the elections worked self-sacrificingly and with great faith in Communism. They did not conceal their aims, but proudly defended them. This proves that they are capable of becoming the great party of the American proletariat. While they will continue their work with an unveiled face, the masses will have time to get rid of their illusions of LaFollettelism. And then will come the time for wide strategic maneuvers of our American party, for its growing into the masses, which will understand that petty bourgeois politics is not a way for struggle against capitalism.

"When the results of the elections became known, stocks on the American stock exchange began to rise, first of all, the prices on the Morgan stocks. This is the best illustration of the meaning of the American elections. They again turned over for a period of years to the American financial clique the apparatus of the greatest state in the world."

Protest Mass Meeting Against the Dawes Plan and Mass Arrests of Workers in Germany, Friday Eve. DEC. 5, at LABOR LYCEUM, 243 E. 84th St., New York City

"GOD TO BLAME FOR CAVE-IN," SAY MILFORD "INVESTIGATORS," "BUT WE CAN'T FIND HIM"

CROSBY, Minn., Dec. 3.—Smoldering indignation all up and down the Mesaba iron range is the reaction of the iron miners to the report of the white-washing "investigation" committee appointed by the reactionary governor of Minnesota, Preus, to report upon the mine disaster of Feb. 5, when 41 miners were killed by a cave-in of the Milford mine here.

The committee, of course, was expected to do little but whitewash, considering that it consisted of Bill McEwan of Duluth, Edward Smith of Eveleth, Dwight E. Woodbridge of Duluth, J. Wilbur Van Evera of Crosby, and R. R. Bailey of Virginia, Minnesota.

These are a choice lot of "good fellows" who were guaranteed to do the right thing by the company. Not one of the committee are working miners. Not one is a member of the Metal Mine Workers' Industrial Union.

Hold Company Blameless.

This accounts for the "report" of the committee which is the most brazen piece of evasion that ever saw print. Only by indirection does the committee imply that the disaster was chargeable to slack inspection and rank carelessness of the miners' lives by the mining company. This is evidenced by the four recommendations that there be better inspection hereafter.

Altho this implies that the disaster could have been avoided by better inspection and more care for safety, the report proceeds with the blatant statement that "No blame can be attached to the mining company." This is reiterated time and again thruout the report.

Committee Blames God.

Altho there are no "unknown" or "supernatural" factors in mining engineering, and ordinary engineering skill should have perceived both the danger and a way to forestall it, and in spite of the testimony that the company engineer, Captain Evan Crellin whose "war service" was supposed to fit him for any job, was incompetent the committee has the brass to insist and re-insist that "the company was not to blame."

Unable to blame the miners or the company, the committee in searching for an explanation that would account for the disaster, found that God did it. After asserting the rather remarkable fact that the cave-in did not occur before it did, the committee goes on to say that the "silent partner" of the company, God, was responsible.

"But some power," says the report "decreed that this arch should break thru in the middle of the afternoon when all of the men were peacefully working in their places."

Having fixed the liability upon God, who, like the federal government cannot be sued for damages without his consent, the committee makes all action by the miners dependent against God, impossible by saying that his whereabouts are unknown to the committee, in the following words:

"Your committee is unable to find any person or agency upon whose neglect or carelessness the responsibility for this accident can be placed."

In other words, God is to blame, but we cannot find him.

Speed Up Collection Of Funds for the Silk Strikers in Paterson

Twenty-seven dollars for the Paterson silk workers now on strike were turned in by Comrade Sonkin. This is the second collection he has taken in his shop. The other amounted to some $35.00.

Eight dollars and fifty-five cents were turned in for this purpose for a comrade from another shop.

Other shops and comrades should take up collections among their friends to assist the silk workers in their strike. Donation lists can be secured in Room 307, 164 W. Washington St. Contributions sent to this address will be immediately forwarded to the strike committee.

COHEN FAILS TO MAKE GOOD IN HIS ATTACK ON BOLSHEVIK RULE

OAKLAND, Cal., Dec. 3.— Challenged to debate the issue of Soviet Russia in public, and to prove to an audience that his constant attacks on the Bolshevik government have a basis of fact, A. Cohen, who tries to lead the I. W. W. into pacifism, got cold feet and failed to appear at a hall at which a debate had been arranged for him.

Cohen has appeared almost every week at the open forum of the Workers Party, and has attacked Soviet Russia from every angle. Finally a member of the Workers Party got the use of a hall, and Comrade Ella Reeve Bloor, who has been holding rousing street meeting in the city, offered to meet Cohen in debate. Cohen never showed up.

fact that the representative of the party was unseated but rather the trend of development of the movement. Mahoney in his speech after the motion was carried stated that the farmer-labor federation in Minnesota was essentially a non-partisan organization, that it was an organization having no goal aside from its immediate aim for social reform.

In conversation after the meeting he repudiated all the progressive ideas previously held and even went so far as to condemn the workers' and peasants' government of Russia. He further stated that at the state convention to be held in the near future that the federation would have to take steps to rid itself of the "troublesome" left wing. He had no word of criticism for LaFollette and his supporters who destroyed the unity of the farmer-labor movement in Minnesota, nor did he criticise the men of the type of Drake who openly defended the capitalist system in the farmer-labor movement. The federation was brot into existence in Minnesota by the left wing, its plan of organization was drafted by the Communists who were largely instrumental in building it up. Our party devoted months of effort and a considerable sum of money in popularizing the idea of farmer-labor unity on the basis of a class party.

Along came LaFollette with his program of destroying all class organizations, in Minnesota he first tried to destroy, he failed. He then tried a more successful move, he played on the desire of the leadership for respectability and influence, in this he won. They sent out a letter to all local unions lining up with Compers, Johnston, and Sprecklin in support of LaFollette. The farmer-labor federation was "a good child," it became a part of the LaFollette movement whose leaders cared nothing for the name as long as it became the Minnesota section of the C. P. P. A. in reality.

At the last meeting Mahoney, Cranier, Wiggins, Drake and their followers broke with what sentiment remained of a class movement. They laid the basis for a further retreat to the petty bourgeois group led nationally by the C. P. P. A.

PROSPECTIVE JURORS WILL BE QUESTIONED ON KLAN AFFILIATIONS

OKLAHOMA CITY, Nov. 24.—The conviction of Alex Johnson, Negro, on a charge of stealing livestock, was set aside by the appeals court today on the grounds that Johnson's attorney had not been permitted to question jurors relative to their klan affiliations.

The ruling sets a precedent allowing Jews, catholics and Negroes to determine the opinion prospective jurors trying them hold of the Ku Klux Klan. The case will be retried.

'OUTLAW' STRIKE LOSES CHARTERS FOR MINE UNIONS

Anthracite Diggers Are Betrayed

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SCRANTON, Pa., Dec. 2.—The charters have been revoked of the eleven U. M. W. of A. locals engaging in the strike called by the seven-man committee at Pittston, representing 11,000 anthracite miners who are now "outlaw" strikers because they insist on the Pennsylvania Coal company keeping its agreement to settle grievances as provided.

This treacherous blow to the miners and help to the company is an act of John L. Lewis, International President, acting thru the temporary district president, George Isaacs, now filling the place of Rinaldo Cappellini, who is in Mexico on a pleasure junket trip at the cost of the Mexican government and the anthracite miners.

Czar Lewis Sends a Wire.

On Saturday the grievance committee met at Pittston to discuss the situation, and while in session, listened to the telegram from Lewis to D. W. Davis, who was designated by Lewis to represent him in the district. The wire said that Lewis had instructed acting district president, George Isaacs, to revoke the charters of all locals which did not return to work by Monday, December 1. Davis himself was afraid to attend and the wire was read by Anthony Figlocks, international organizer.

"Please see that proper notification is given affected membership that forfeiture of charters will take place on Monday if strike is still on," was Lewis' telegram of Lewis. He did not give any "instructions" to the district officers to take action to enforce the agreement against the company on the matter of settlement of grievances.

Miners Threaten Their Officials.

The grievance committee responded by voting to ignore the district officials and Lewis as well, and to run all officials out of the committee's meetings if they dared show their faces there again. This action was taken Saturday, and adjournment was taken until Wednesday.

spearhead of American imperialism in Mexico and South America and its handmaiden in bringing the world under the rule of Wall Street.

"The Portland convention," declared Dunne, "demonstrated to the capitalists that the A. F. of L. was the deadly foe of radicalism, and the most loyal ally of capitalism against the Soviet government."

Dunne declared that the A. F. of L. officialdom had neither the driving force nor the inspiration to organize he American workers. The El Paso convention ignored the question of organization of the unorganized, unemployment and kindred subjects. It went out of its way to endorse a larger navy, the military training camps and proved itself the labor lieutenant of American capitalism in its world drive for profits and power.

Comrade Tom Bell, local secretary, of the T. U. E. L., who presided, spoke briefly on the campaign to insure The DAILY WORKER for 1925. Comrade Mrs. Bittelman and Kitty Harris went thru the audience with the neatly decorated policies which were turned out in the DAILY WORKER printing plant.

Plan Big Meeting For Max Salzman At Dowell, Illinois

Arrangements are being made for a well attended meeting in Dowell Ill., when Max Salzman, organizer of the Young Workers' League arrives. The meeting will be held in the Rex Theater, Dowell, Ill., at 2 p. m., Sunday, Dec. 7.

Salzman is an excellent speaker and is meeting with success in his tour wherever he goes. His subject will be, "Unemployment — and the Young Miner."

The chaotic condition of the mining industry has had its effect on the Young Workers' League in the south Illinois district and Salzman's visit will solidify the entire district of the young miners into the ranks of the league.

ACCIDENTS IN INDUSTRY ARE NOT RECORDED

Conflicting Figures Has Davis Up in the Air

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 3.—It is not known how many thousands of industrial workers in the United States were killed this year thru industrial accident, James J. Davis, secretary of labor, declared in his annual report made public this morning. "So far as I can find out," said Secretary Davis, "and I have spent some time in studying the matter, we do not know what we are doing or where we are going in the way of preventing industrial disease."

"Poor" Davis is So Puzzled.

"We do not realize that no human being on the face of the earth today can tell within thousands how man American workers were killed in industry last year," Davis added. "I have seen estimates by our very best authorities which fix the number of fatalities annually in industrial accidents at 12,500, 25,000 and 35,000—a range of more than 20,000.

"The experts of the bureau of labor statistics have estimated these fatalities at about 21,000. We say that such information as we have indicates that there are 2,453,418 industrial accidents annually. These figures are truly appalling. But in the end they are estimates based on limited statistical data. We want facts." The secretary of labor did not add the well-known fact that many of the large employers, such as the Standard Oil company and the United States steel corporation surpress the facts of the numerous accidents and fatalities to their employes, in many cases failing to even make public an accurate list of those killed.

Who's Prosperity?

"The American people are entitled to know exactly what price they pay in human life and limb for our industrial prosperity," Mr. Davis' conclusion.

Davis praises the strike breaking "conciliation commission" of his department. "First of all, the aim of the department of labor thru the conciliation service is to prevent strikes and lockouts," the secretary of labor asserts, "to stop trade disputes before they reach the point where an open break occurs."

Trade unionists know that the commissioners of conciliation of the department of labor work at all times on the side of the employers, settling strikes whenever possible by inducing strikers to go back to work at the employers' term." This was done in the Pullman strike, and attempted in the garment strike in Chicago by commissioner of conciliation Marshman, who has recently been trying to get the machinists of the Flow-Meters shop to go back to work on the bosses' terms.

Eighty-one "anarchists and violators of wartime legislation," were deported during the year ending June 30, 1924, according to Davis. Two "anarchists" were denied admission to the United States because of political beliefs in the same period.

in suppressing labor troubles and imprisoning the Communists.

An American Colony.

All told there are at least $200,000,000 of American capital invested in Brazil, mostly in the coffee producing industry, which is somewhat under control of Americans that they have nearly succeeded in getting complete autonomy for their coffee raising district in San Paulo.

American army officers are training the Brazilian army.

That the American secretary of labor, Davis, is now visiting Brazil with the American "mission," gives rise to the belief that he has commanded his affront to Japan, and that the Brazil government has granted the demand. From reports originating in Japan, it seems that Japanese imperialism is fully alive to the meaning of the Brazilian government's action, and has stated thru its foreign office that "it a presents itself in a decidedly serious aspect to the Japanese nation."

Capitalism Wastes Many Billions While "Economy Cal" Saves Few Nickels

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, Strikebreaker Coolidge is heralded as an apostle of "economy". Editorials are written, cartoons are drawn, news stories are turned out by the yard, paragraphers take up the refrain—the president is making his trip to Chicago in a "regular train," not a "special," at a saving of $1,750.

Presidents are supposed to travel in private cars on land. The president has a private yacht when he goes on the water. But we are told that Coolidge, on his Chicago trip, decided to dispense with the private car and special train habit "solely by considerations of economy."

Figure it out for yourself. Cal did it with his little pencil. A private car rents at $90 per day. In addition 25 fares must be purchased. That would make the Chicago trip cost $2,250. On a regular train the return trip would call for an expenditure of $500. Take the regular train and the nation is "saved" $1,750. The kept press slavers so much over this incident that it no doubt has hypnotized itself into hearing millions of unemployed already jingling loose change in their pockets.

* * * *

But it just happened that in the hours that "Cautious Cal" was preparing to leave Washington, the president's budget estimates were released for publication.

Nearly a billion dollars ($865,000,000) in interest alone is to be paid on the public debt during the coming year. This debt was piled up by the capitalist wars of American imperialism. The start that was made with the Spanish-American war in 1898 when American imperialism seized Cuba, Porto Rico and the Phillipines reached its greatest fruition in the participation of the United States in the recent world war.

The wastes of past wars are only equalled in the wastes to be found in the preparations for new capitalist wars. Two thirds of another million are to be spent next year for the army and navy; $347,153,594 for the war department, and $313,207,257 for the navy department. Thus the capitalist masters squander the wealth produced by the workers to perpetuate their own social system, while their little puppet at Washington saves a few hundred dollars on a trip to Chicago.

* * * *

This is "Economy" Coolidge, who was known as "The Principal" in the successful looting of the nation's oil reserves. The Teapot Dome scandal has been only equalled by the revelations now being brought out in the Chicago trial of Colonel Charles R. Forbes, recent head of the Veterans' Bureau. Forbes joined with big capitalists to burgle appropriations made for the care of disabled soldiers.

But the wastes in government, where Cal Coolidge's savings of $1,750 is but a fly speck in the whole ocean of capitalist political muck, find their counterpart on an even larger scale, in the wastes of industry.

Under the boasted capitalist system, engineers tell us, after thoro investigation, that the average manufacturing plant in the United States is only 50 percent efficient, compared with the best production units. They charge that in the building and textile manufacturing industries, the average is about 67 per cent efficient; in the printing trades and the men's clothing industry, 50 per cent; in the boot and shoe industry, 33 per cent; while in the metal industry the standard of efficiency drops to 25 per cent.

These engineers set forth that at least 10 hours per week per man are thrown away on energy-wasting and time-wasting work resulting from lack of shop methods, while an additional two or three hours per man per week are wasted in unnecessary work.

During the day that Coolidge saves his $1,750 the wastage under capitalist management in the clothing industry alone is estimated at three-quarters of a million dollars. But this wastage is not only for one day, but for every working day in the year.

But the forces of capitalism are not concerned so much about the $1,750 that Coolidge saves; altho Arthur Brisbane, one of the highest priced "ladies" of America's kept journalism, may gloat over it.

It costs more than that to fire one shot from the big gun of one of Morgan's warships at target practice.

The whole propoganda surrounding the alleged Coolidge "economy" is intended to increase the faith of the masses of workers and poor farmers in the capitalist dictatorship at Washington, the instrument of the biggest exploiters in oppressing them. The masses must be led to believe that Coolidge is watching over their pennies, day and night. Every time that a discontented worker or poor farmer looks at his last piece of silver money he must read the slogan, "In Coolidges We Trust" instead of "In God We Trust". Coolidge must appear as their benefactor. And Coolidge is held up as the custodian of all the ideals of American capitalism.

That sort of lying propaganda, carefully put over during the recent election campaign, helped win the victory at the polls for Wall Street. But the biggest capitalist criminals must feel uneasy on their thrones when they force their White House clown, in Washington, to continue his antics.

Once the faith of the masses in the capitalist state is lost, the whole capitalist social structure will tumble in a heap. When the workers and poor farmers discover the inefficiency and rottenness of the brutal system of oppression that is trying by every concivable means to keep them in submission, they will rise and destroy it. In that hour Coolidge will really be sent back to a Vermont farm to pitch hay; about the only useful service he will be able to render a social order where the workers and poor farmers are supreme.

* * * *

Only under Communism will there be real economy and real efficiency in the co-operative effort of all producers to build the world's first civilization worth while.

RUSSIAN LABOR CHEERS BRITISH PACT FOR UNITY

Tillett, Bromley, Purcell Meet Soviet Unions

MOSCOW (By Mail.)—The sixth All Russian Trades Union Congress was opened here today with a gala session. There were present 853 delegates, representing 6,500,000 workers.

Specially enthusiastic receptions were given to the speeches delivered by the British fraternal delegates, Messrs. Purcell, Bromley, and Ben Tillett.

In his speech Comrade Tomsky extended greetings to the British delegation, amid rounds of applause, and the singing of the "International" followed.

Comrade Tomsky emphasized the fact that there were great differences between the Soviet trade unions and the Amsterdam International. Nevertheless, the interests of the working class demanded a united front of the trade union movement, and the workers of the most important countries were moving towards this goal.

Zinoviev Cheered.

In the name of the Soviet Union, President Kalinin greeted the assembly, laying stress upon the vastly improved material conditions of the workers under the Soviets, and then Zinoviev rose, to speak on behalf of the Executive Committee of the Russian Communist Party.

He was received with immense enthusiasm. He spoke with vigor of the new era of reaction which was dawning upon the world.

"Our battle-cry," he declared, "must be: 'Workers! shoulder to shoulder against world-wide reaction!'"

There followed greetings from the French trade unions, and then Purcell, amid terrific applause, rose as the first of the British speakers.

Since he had visited Russia in 1920, said Purcell, wonderful changes and improvements in the conditions of the workers had taken place. Referring to the great achievements of Russian workers, he declared, "May we live to see changes like this in England!"

British Elections.

The British elections, said Purcell, proved that the eyes of the British workers were directed towards Soviet Russia. After the defeat at the polls, the British working class would be found welded more firmly together than before.

Unity must be achieved at an international conference, without unnecessary formula and without any preliminary conditions. The Soviet trade unions must not be allowed to remain outside the ranks of the trade union international.

Bromley followed. After describing the present state of the trade union and political labor movements in Britain, he declared: "We are striving for the same end as the Russian trade unions—namely, the control of the means of production."

Finally, Ben Tillet, who spoke of Lenin as the greatest leader of the working class, whose name was honored by the British workers. The workers of the world were watching with the greatest attention the fight of the working class in Russia, he declared, and finally called for union in the fight against capitalism.

Australian Female Jingoes Blame John Bull's Sins on French

(By The Federated Press)

MELBOURNE, Australia.—The outrageous treatment of native women in the New Hebrides islands (South Pacific Ocean) particulars of which have been told in Federated Press dispatches, was discussed at the annual conference of the national council of women of Australia.

Among the allegations made by speakers were that native women were bought and sold as slaves, that natives were being governed under conditions that no decent people would tolerate, that there was enforced prostitution, and that natives were tortured for minor offenses. It was asserted that as the government of the islands was under the jurisdiction of the French, the British were unable to do anything.

MONSTER MEETING TOMORROW IN NEW YORK TO PROTEST AGAINST WHOLESALE ARREST OF COMMUNISTS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—The Dawes plan and the wholesale arrests of Communists in Germany will be the subject of a joint mass meeting to be held by the Workers Party and the International Workers' Aid, Friday evening at the Labor Temple, 243 E. 84th street.

The wholesale arrests of the members of the Communist Party in Germany are taking place on the eve of the elections in order to intimidate the workers and to insure the success of the Dawes' plan.

Reichstag Deputies Arrested.

The reichstag government of Ebert and Seeckt have stopped at nothing to terrorize the workers. They have arrested reichstag deputies. The moment the reichstag was dissolved and the immunity granted to deputies lifted, the government immediately outlawed the Communist reichstag deputies in order to prevent their opposition to the Dawes' plan in the election campaign. The capitalists of Germany fear the rising tide of revolt against the new burdens which will be placed upon the workers by the imperialists. That is the reason for the raids, mass trials and wholesale arrests.

All Workers Must Protest.

The workers of European countries have come to the assistance of our German fellow workers. They realize that the Dawes' plan means not only long hours and lower wages for the German workers but for the workers of all countries

Amter to Speak.

In addition to Comrades Lore, Gitlow, Epstein, and Weinstone, Israel Amter, who has just returned from a two-year trip thru Europe and has first-hand knowledge of conditions in Germany, will also speak.

Discussion of Our Party's Immediate Tasks

WHAT OUR LABOR PARTY POLICY HAS ACCOMPLISHED

By WM. Z. FOSTER.

IN the Workers Party, as a hang over from our two-year labor party campaign, we have a tendency led by the C. E. C. minority by Comrades Lovestone and Ruthenberg, and made up of comrades who may be properly dubbed farmer-labor Communists. These comrades have developed a most extravagant evaluation of the farmer-labor party slogan. With them it has become a fetish. They are for the farmer-labor party dead or alive. Despite their loud protests to the contrary, they tend to look upon the farmer-labor party campaign as an end in itself, and not merely as a means (no longer useful) to build the Workers' Party into a mass Communist Party.

These farmer-labor Communists advance the most bizarre theories and make the wildest claims in order to justify their demand that the Workers Party continue to propagate the dead farmer-labor party slogan. They argue in effect that it constitutes the sole means of applying the united front on the political field. In the Workers' Monthly for December, Comrade Ruthenberg makes this astounding statement: "It (abandonment of the slogan) means the repudiation of the united front as a weapon of our party on the political field." These comrades conceive the farmer-labor party as THE united front, and not, as in truth it was, merely an application of the united front tactic. They ignore completely the many forms of the united front being used thruout the Comintern, and the many that have been used here—of which I shall speak further anon. For them the farmer-labor party was the be-all and end-all of the united front program. The essence of their argument is that if we have no farmer-labor party we can have no united front, which is ridiculous.

"Class Party" Confusion.

These comrades, continuing the confusion which was introduced into our party on this subject by Comrade Pepper, also consider the farmer-labor party to be a class party which carries on class political action. Hence, when we make the statement that the farmer-labor party has been amalgamated into the LaFollette movement, Comrade Ruthenberg accuses us (Workers Monthly, December) of saying that "the movement towards class political action by labor is dead." In his mind the farmer-labor party movement and class political action are synonymous. Apparently he does not conceive of a class party except thru his "class" farmer-labor party. Or, perhaps, when the difficulty is called to his attention, he will say there are two class political parties, the Workers Party and the "class" farmer-labor party? Is it not high time for all Communists to realize that in the United States there is only one labor party, the Workers Party, and that alone—not some semi-demi farmer-labor party—is carrying on class political action?

The Farmer-Labor Legend.

Hat the point I wish particularly to deal with in this article is the extravagant claim made by the farmer-labor party enthusiasts that the farmer-labor party campaign, as if by magic, built the Workers Party from an obscure sect into a great party. To hear them tell it, the Workers Party was insignificant until it picked up the farmer-labor party slogan, and it will fall back into insignificance again if it drops that slogan. Says Comrade Ruthenberg (Workers Monthly, December): "We shall abandon the slogan which in the past has enabled us to establish close contact with at least the left bloc of the labor movement and to return to our former status of sectarian propaganda."

This legend of the all-creative power of the farmer-labor party slogan has been carefully cultivated in our party by the farmer-labor Communists. It is time to prick the bubble. The fact is, the farmer-labor party campaign was only one of several united fronts, altho the major one, carried on by our party. All these have contributed most substantially to the growth and influence of the Workers Party. But the farmer-labor party slogan has hogged the credit. We must get the right perspective on all our united front work, and not simply accept the current notion that the farmer-labor party campaign alone lifted us from sectarianism and made us a real factor in the labor movement. Let us glance for a moment at some of our other united fronts.

Successful United Front Efforts.

An important movement was the united front campaign for the protection of the foreign-born workers. It was real political work. It gave us a measure of leadership over great masses of workers under very favorable auspices. It enables us to enlarge our circle of sympathizers considerably and to start many valuable proletarian elements on the way towards Communism. Unquestionably our party won very much prestige in this campaign.

Then there was the Friends of Soviet Russia movement. That was essentially a united front. Leaving aside the fact that it collected over $1,000,000 for famine-stricken Soviet Russia, it offered our party splendid opportunities for propaganda and for the development and winning over of sympathisers. Akin to the F. S. R., but not so extensive, were the other united front committees set up to work for famine relief and the recognition of Soviet Russia.

Another important united front was and is the Labor Defense Council. Our party has been able to utilize it to great advantage. The Michigan trials marked an epoch in our party history. Much of their effectiveness, both in the matter of finance ($130,000 has been raised to date) and of publicity, depended upon the Labor Defense Council united front. These trials enabled us to bring our Communist message most forcefully to tremendous circles of workers.

Finally, let me mention the amalgamation united front in the trade unions, altho to our C. E. C. minority everything connected directly to the mass trade unions smacks of syndicalism. The amalgamation campaign began when the W. P. was still what the minority calls a "sect;" that is before it had been saved by the magic labor party slogan. The campaign was slight but successful. Fully 2,000,000 union workers were won over to giving organized expression in support of our amalgamation slogan. Large circles of sympathizers were created. Many effective contacts in the unions were secured for our party. These later served as valuable bases for our farmer-labor party agitation. This successful amalgamation united front in the unions did very much to establish our party's prestige and control. Indeed, without it our farmer-labor party campaign would have been a fizzle.

United Front Policy a Success.

All these enumerated united fronts helped very substantially in building our party. But it is quite understandable why the C. E. C. minority, trying desperately to galvanize the dead farmer-labor party slogan into life again, should conveniently overlook them and claim all the credit for their pet slogan. By and large, the farmer-labor slogan was helpful to the W. P. so long as there was a mass movement existing in support of it. But most of the early gains made there by were destroyed by the collapse of the farmer-labor party movement. This debacle, which left the Workers Party in a serious crisis, cost us the loss of many valuable sympathizing elements in the unions and elsewhere among the workers. The farmer-labor party hosters, of course, say nothing about this. For them the farmer-labor campaign was all roses and victory. But even tho the farmer-labor slogan was most highly effective in the past, as its ardent advocates claim, still to attempt to use it now, as the C. E. C. minority proposes, when there is no mass movement to justify its use, would be to hamstring the Workers Party and do it real injury.

For a Real United Front Policy.

To maintain, as Comrade Ruthenberg does, that giving up the farmer-labor party slogan means abandoning the united front program is ridiculous. In the past, as we have seen, we have carried on several very successful united front campaigns, in addition to that for the farmer-labor party. And in the future we shall have many more united fronts upon the burning issues in the class struggle, and these will be far more successful than any we have had in the past. Conceivably, conditions may possibly so change in the time to come that with the growth of a mass farmer-labor party movement, we can again use the farmer-labor party slogan profitably, but in the absence of such a movement we cannot so use it now.

While the farmer-labor party slogan was alive the tendency was to concentrate on that and to neglect other essential party activities, especially the organization of united fronts around concrete issues in the workers' everyday life. The farmer-labor party was used too much as a sort of catch-all it was a too-ready answer to the workers' demands for organs of struggle and for the struggle itself. It is a very significant fact that only a few days ago the C. E. C. appointed a sub-committee whose function it is to organize, for the first time, our united front work. This committee is charged with constantly surveying the various phases of the class struggle and to initiate, wherever opportunity presents, local and national united front movements around concrete demands of the workers.

The charge of sectarianism against the W. P. C. in its earlier united front campaign will not be abandoned simply because we can no longer profitably use the slogan of a farmer-labor party. On the contrary, in its many manifestations, it must and will go ahead more systematically, determinedly, and effectively than ever. The united front is the great means to bring the Workers Party directly into the struggle of the toiling masses and to build it into a mass Communist Party.

Speech of Alexander Bittleman, C. E. C. Representative at the Convention of The German Federation of the Workers Party, New York City, Nov. 29.

COMRADES: Greetings and good luck wishes from the Central Executive Committee of the party.

The German Federation of the party, whom you comrades represent, is an important section of the Workers Party. First, because it is the oldest one. The first pioneers of an organized socialist labor movement in the United States were German-speaking workers. They were class conscious fighters in the cause of the proletariat, driven from their homeland by the capitalist junker reaction and compelled to look for a settlement in the United States. When they came here, they continued the struggle. At the cost of tremendous effort and heavy sacrifice, these German-speaking workers have laid the basis for a socialist movement in the United States. And your federation being the descendant of those socialist pioneers occupies indeed, an honorable place in the American class struggle. Thru your federation, the Workers Party as a whole, a comparatively young organization, becomes linked up in an organic manner with the first bolsheviks in the U. S. of a political party of the class conscious proletariat.

Your daily organ, the "Volkszeitung," is one of our oldest and best established papers. Thru years of struggle in the cause of the working class it has acquired influence among wide circles of workers. It has become an instrument of extreme value for the further development of our movement.

The Central Executive Committee fully realizes the importance of the German section and of our German organ, the Volkszeitung. The party is highly appreciative of the great services to our movement rendered by both our German section and our German organ, and is determined to do all in its power to further promote the Communist movement among the German-speaking workers of America.

At the same time, the Central Executive Committee is very much aware of the serious shortcomings in our factions in the line of the policy of the Communist International manifested by the Volkszeitung on a number of occasions. Later in my speech I shall discuss that at greater length. It is the wish of the Central Executive Committee, in accord with the Communist International, that everything be done by this convention to correct and straighten out the lines of deviation from the C. I. and to assure the German-speaking workers of America and our party movement as a whole, a real bolshevist, reliable section of the party and a real Bolshevist Volkszeitung.

Your convention meets prior to the party convention. This is somewhat irregular, since the established and correct practice of our movement is that conventions of language sections be held subsequent to the party convention. However, the C. E. C. permitted the exception for what it considered sufficient reasons. And now, since the German section of the party is in convention assembled and since the pre-convention period has been officially opened, you will no doubt contribute your share of experience and knowledge to the solution of the major problems that are confronting at present our party.

A Year of Quick Changes.

The past year will go down in the history of our party as the year of quick change in tactics. During this period our party was tested by events as never before in its history. In the face of the enemy and actually under the political fire of our opponents, the Workers Party found it necessary twice to change its tactics. This was no easy matter. And the fact that our party succeeded in carrying out these quick and sudden changes, in a disciplined and organized way, is proof that we are well on the road to become a real Leninist party.

What were these changes? You will recall, comrades, that at the time of the third party convention (January, 1924) we were in the midst of what I designate as our "northwestern orientation." We were then preparing the ground, politically, and organizationally, for a new national farmer-labor center, which resulted later in the formation of the organization committee for the St. Paul Convention. The proposition of the third-party alliance was a result of this orientation on the agrarian northwest and a basic part of our general strategy pursued in those days. It is now clear that had it been known to the farmer-labor parties of the northwest that the Workers Party will eventually be compelled to fight the LaFollette candidacy even after he was nominated, we would have never succeeded in bringing to life the organization committee for the St. Paul Convention.

The third party alliance was implied in every move we made between August, 1923, and May, 1924. Altho the matter was referred in January to the C. I. for advice and remained pending until May, the C. E. C. continued to base its everyday tactics on the policy of a third party alliance. And it could not have been otherwise. Events were moving. The C. E. C. had to act almost daily. And to act meant to apply policy, a policy which the C. E. C. believed in, which was the policy of a third party alliance.

Then came the change. It was in May. First came LaFollette's attack on the June 17th Convention, and then the advice of the C. I. A quick change in tactics was necessary. We were compelled to change positions under the enemies' fire, the worst situation imaginable.

I maintain, comrades, that under the leadership of the C. E. C. the party executed the maneuver in a most satisfactory manner. We retained the initiative and continued on the offensive against the LaFollette movement, until this very day. It was a critical situation such as our party has hardly ever experienced before. But we passed over it, in good trim and order, and emerged as we reached the Convention of June 17th.

When we got there, we already knew that the bulk of the farmer-labor movement in the northwest was with LaFollette and wanted him to be its standard bearer in the election campaign against it. We succeeded, without compromising anything of importance, in preventing an open split. But the tide outside of the convention was going against us. The then existing farmer-labor movement, erroneously considered by some of us a class movement, different in ideology from the LaFollette movement, was already crying for LaFollette. On July 4 he made known his decision to run as an independent candidate and thereby assumed charge over the farmer-labor movement.

Again a new situation calling for new tactics. Quick action was necessary, because the arrangements perfected at the June 17th convention (Committee and Candidates) were falling their foundation and were going to pieces. On July 8, the C. E. C. came to a decision." It withdrew its support from MacDonald and Bouck and nominated its own candidates.

Another quick change in tactics forced upon us by a change in the situation, and executed in a manner most satisfactory and successful from every point of view.

It is perfectly clear now that the decision of the Comintern was correct, not only because the third party alliance was wrong strategy but also because it was wrong tactics. The farmer-labor movement could not be saved from the LaFollette sweep even by the dangerous expedient of the third party alliance.

I would like to say in parenthesis that according to the Comintern the third party alliance was no good, not because it was a "maneuver" and that maneuvers are no good, but because this particular maneuver happened to be a bad one. We are Marxians, Leninists, and therefore, dialecticians. To us a maneuver is not an abstraction. A maneuver is nothing else than a political act, a concrete move in a definite direction, designed to weaken our enemies and strengthen the workers and their leader, the Communist Party. A maneuver is good if it tends to produce favorable results for the class struggle and for our party. A maneuver is bad if it fails to produce such results or if it tends to produce contrary results. The third party alliance, under the existing conditions, would have produced results contrary to the interests of the class struggle and of the Workers Party. Therefore, it was a bad maneuver.

I also want to say that the second change in tactics, the one made on July 8, by our party nominating its own candidates, proved to be correct from the point of great benefit to our movement We established our party as the only party of the class struggle. The 100,000 votes that were undoubtedly polled by our candidates, which indicates the strength of our party only among those workers that have the right to vote, is proof sufficient that there are in the United States many more hundreds of thousands of workers, particularly among the unorganized, unskilled and disfranchised, that are in sympathy with our movement and that are ready to follow our leadership. It is something that our party may very well be proud of.

In looking over the past ten months, we shall find that in addition to our gains as manifested in the election returns, our party has been making steady progress all around. True, we have no spectacular victories to register, no sensational successes based on sand or on inflamed imaginations which disappear in smoke and noise as the storm of reality, but steady, solid progress in every phase of our work.

Despite the critical situation in which our party found itself due to the LaFollette sweep and our third party entanglements, the following characterizes the development of our party.

(1) Constant increase in dues-paying membership.

(2) DAILY WORKER is making steady progress. The present campaign which is bound to bring in at least $40,000.00 and five thousand new subscribers will undoubtedly insure the existence of our "Daily" for the year 1925.

(3) The "Workers Monthly" altho only in the third month of its existence, is establishing for itself a solid basis financially and is becoming the ideological leader of every active working class militant on every field of the class struggle.

(4) The language press of our party has become ever stronger and more influential.

(5) Our activities for the development of the left wing in the trade unions is constantly moving ahead despite the difficulties created by the split of July 3 and the comparative isolation of our party that resulted from the LaFollette sweep. Our comrades and sympathizers in the unions had to withstand during the past year the most ferocious, at times bloody attacks, expulsions from the unions, denial of the right to work and many other forms of brutal persecutions. But in spite of all that, the left wing under the leadership of the T. U. E. L. continues to grow. The future will no doubt present us with many new and difficult problems on the trade union field, but there will be no cause for worry as long as we follow the Leninist policy and tactics and heed the main objectives of our movement clearly before our eyes.

(6) In the sphere of party education, we have made considerable progress.

(7) Thus we can safely state that our party today is a better party, a larger party, much more of a Bolshevist party than it was a year ago. We can hopefully look into the future for bigger conquests and greater victories.

The Immediate Tasks of Our Party.

In discussing the present situation and the immediate tasks of our party, the following points should be remembered:

(a) Altho the Workers Party is yet a small party, it is the only party in America that stands for the class struggle. This means that, as events will compel the workers to struggle against the capitalists, the working masses will progressively accept the slogans and leadership of our party. There is therefore no cause for weakening or getting disappointed in the slow growth of our party. Our great task is to make the W. P. a mass Communist Party.

(b) The Workers Party, altho a party of Communists, is not yet a real Bolshevist, Leninist Party. In the measure in which we succeed in Bolshevizing the Workers Party we shall be developing it into a mass Communist Party.

(c) There is no movement new in existence tending in the direction of a farmer-labor party, distinct from both the W. P. and the LaFollette movement, standing between these two. There is no such movement now in existence, nor is there any basis for the appearance of such a movement in the near future.

(d) There is no mass urge now towards the formation of any new political party, except a mild sentiment towards the formation of a third LaFollette party. The masses are at rest as far as the organization of a farmer-labor party (distinct from a LaFollette party) is concerned.

(e) But the masses are not restful at all as far as their immediate needs are concerned. They will struggle for whatever seems to offer immediate improvement of their conditions.

(f) Hence, the farmer-labor party slogan is dead. The slogans that will set the masses into motion for organized political struggles are precisely those slogans that are close and burning needs. Our tactics therefore must be the tactics of the united front from below on the basis of immediate elementary demands of the masses.

This is the position of the C. E. C. expressed first in its statement on the election results and now in the theses on the present situation and the immediate tasks of our party.

This policy calls for real struggle. Not negotiations with farmer-labor leaders around a conference table, as was the case in about one-half of our work for a farmer-labor party, but actual struggle in the unions and in the shops and among the unemployed directed against the capitalists and their servants, the reactionary labor bureaucrats.

An Unanimous Decision

A UNITED FRONT UPON THE POLICY TO

Insure The Daily Worker for 1925

AT the last full meeting of the C. E. C. of the Workers Party an important decision was made. It was decided that all party papers must proceed the discussion going on in their columns regarding the future policy of the party by a call to action, by a call for a united front upon the POLICY TO BUY A POLICY TO INSURE THE DAILY WORKER FOR 1925.

Nothing must interfere with the campaign now in progress to give the DAILY WORKER a helping hand over a bit of rough road it is at present compelled to travel. The assistance of every party member must be had. The C. E. C. voted that no other campaign shall be made by the party until the DAILY WORKER is made safe.

We understand that the attention of every party member will gravitate towards the interesting party discussion now going on. Every party member should take a vital interest in this discussion. But every party member must give equal attention to helping the DAILY WORKER. The C. E. C. in fact decided that every discussion meeting held must be preceded by a talk upon and sale of INSURANCE POLICIES, issued to INSURE THE DAILY WORKER FOR 1925.

Your branch secretary has received a BIG RED BOOK OF POLICIES. These INSURANCE POLICIES are priced $10, $5 and $1. Party members should buy no less than a $5 policy. The $1 policies can be sold to sympathizers.

While the party seeths with discussion over our future party policy and tasks, there is ONE POLICY upon which there must be unanimous agreement. That is the POLICY to buy a POLICY to INSURE OUR DAILY.

WORKERS PARTY OF AMERICA

COMMUNIST ACTION NEEDED ON THE POLITICAL FIELD AS WELL AS COMMUNIST FAITH

By KARL REEVE.

Altho the C. E. C. majority declares its supreme faith in the Workers Party, the C. E. C. majority thesis itself leads to just the opposite conclusion. A pessimism and an unwarranted feeling of hopelessness is manifested by the majority when confronted with the present political situation.

Comrade Bittelman, who has signed the C. E. C. majority thesis, declared in a former article on the party discussion, "We (the majority) still have faith in the Workers Party. We still believe in its ability to develop and grow and become the recognized leader of the American working class. We are not disappointed in the Workers Party." And Comrade Browder declares that the minority "betrays a complete lack of confidence in our party.

The C. E. C. majority thesis, however, declares, "The masses of the workers and poor farmers, inasmuch as they reject the leadership of the old capitalist parties, and are not yet ready to accept the leadership of and to give their support to the Workers Party, follow the lead of the LaFollette movement."

The C. E. C. majority thesis displays no faith, no thot of the possibility, in fact, that the Workers Party, by means of the united front slogans on the political field, can wrest leadership of the workers and poor farmers away from the petty bourgeois LaFollette leadership.

Yet, in my opinion, there is every reason to believe that the Workers Party can be successful in breaking the masses of industrial workers and poor farmers following LaFollette away from his petty bourgeois leadership. True, as the C. E. C. majority declares, "the masses of the workers and poor farmers are not yet ready to accept the leadership of and give their support to the Workers Party." But that is why we have united front slogans. The slogan of the class farmer-labor party will serve to bring these misguided workers that the LaFollette petty bourgeois leadership is against their working class interests.

The outlook is hopeless indeed if we accept the survey of the political field made by the C. E. C. majority. "The question of trying to build a mass farmer-labor party which shall base itself on the mass organizations of the workers and poorer sections of the farmers is definitely out of the range of practical politics for the immediate future," says the C. E. C. majority thesis.

The C. E. C. majority statement would lead us to believe that we must "have faith in the Workers Party" only on the industrial field. The present political situation presents a challenge to the Workers Party. Here we admittedly have large masses of workers and poor farmers who have broken away from the two old parties and are floundering under the leadership of the petty bourgeois LaFollette.

On the field of industrial work we are using the united front slogans. We are fighting the well organized Gompers machine as well as other well organized petty bourgeois machines. On the political field, on the other hand, the petty bourgeois have not yet effected, let alone completed, their organization of a "progressive" party, which the majority declares, "will be accepted by the laboring masses."

The C. E. C. majority thesis prophecies that the LaFollette movement will crystallize into a political party. But that party is not yet formed. It will be noted that the C. E. C. majority refers to the "future LaFollette party" and mentions its present "loose" form.

Here would seem to be fertile ground for our class farmer-labor party slogan. The masses are admittedly following this party. The form of organization is loose and the leaders have received a setback in the elections. Does it not seem more logical to use the farmer-labor party united front slogan on the political field as well as the industrial field than to use it exclusively on the industrial field?

As a political party what are we to do with regard to the united front on the political field? Apparently according to the majority we are to sit back and watch the petty bourgeois LaFollette group perfect their leadership over the masses. For the C. E. C. majority thesis, while declaring that the masses will follow LaFollette, and that they are not yet ready to follow the Workers Party, broaches no effort to win the leadership of these misguided workers and poor farmers thru the united front on the political field. It is the majority that has no faith in the leadership of the Workers Party, in so far as the political field is concerned.

What will the workers eventually say of the Communist movement of America if we desert the united front on the political field now. The collapse of capitalism is being accelerated the world over, making united fronts with the working class on the political field more and more necessary. If the class farmer labor party slogan was a good just before election what makes it bad now, when the petty bourgeois leadership is going thru a crisis? Must we tell the workers "There is no hope for you, go to the leadership of LaFollette and when you have learned your lesson come back to us. If the time is ripe, we will lead you"?

Is it not better Communism to fulfill our historic mission of quickening the decay of capitalism by practicing the united front on the political field—by challenging LaFollette's leadership and opposing it with the slogan of a class farmer labor party?

Because "the masses of the workers and poor farmers are not yet ready to accept the leadership of the Workers Party," must we desert them and turn them over to the LaFollette third party movement instead of putting against the petty bourgeois leadership of the "conservative" the slogan of a "class farmer labor party"? Rather than employ the united front on the political field must we merely "have faith in the Workers' Party"?

The majority emphasizes "the united front from below." We must have a united front to combat child labor exploitation, "the Dawes plan," for nationalization of mines, etc., we must have a special C. E. C. sub-committee to restate the old ways and to ferret out new ways of applying the united front. We must desert the united front on the political field. And we must not annoy LaFollette with our class farmer labor party slogan while he is inducting masses of industrial workers and poor farmers into his new petty bourgeois party.

We must, according to the majority, leave the workers and poor farmers entirely to LaFollette on the political field, and sit back and wait until the workers are ready to come to us, and say to us, "Because you showed us so clearly the fallacy of the LaFollette illusion we will now join the Communist Party."

COOLIDGE OPENS MOUTH AND OUT POPS 'OPEN SHOP'

In Speech to Congress Reassures Bosses

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 3.—President Coolidge again revealed himself as an anti-strike breaker and upholder of capital in advocating the suppression of strikes, and declaring in favor of the laws of private property, in his message to the second session of the sixty-eighth congress today.

Coolidge declared for the reduction of taxes on business corporations, and against making public the income tax lists. Coolidge insisted that the debts of foreign nations must be paid, praised the Dawes plan, and altho not mentioning Soviet Russia by name indirectly reiterated his opposition to recognition of the Soviet government.

Promises More Profits to Railroads.

Speaking of governmental aid to monopolies of railroads, Coolidge declared, "The principle of government control of rates and profits at once eliminates the need of competition by small units as a method of rate adjustment. The consolidation of the railways into larger units . . . . has been the logical conclusion of congress in its previous enactments. Such consolidation will afford a greater element of competition as to service, but it will afford economy of operation, greater stability in railway earnings, and more economical financing."

After assuring his aid to the railroads in securing more stable and higher profits, Coolidge declared against strikes, his statement recalling the days when he pushed himself into the graces of the employers, when, as governor of Massachusetts he broke the Boston police strike with the aid of state troops. "Such legislation (collective bargaining), will not meet the requirements of the situation," Coolidge said yesterday, "Unless it recognizes the principle that the public has the right to uninterrupted service of transportation, and therefore a right to be heard when there is danger that the nation may suffer great injury thru the interruption of operations because of labor disputes."

Taxes Must Go Down—For Rich.

In pleading for the elimination of excess profits taxes levied on large corporations and rich individuals, Coolidge stated, "It would be idle to expect any such results (stimulation to business) unless business can continue free from excess profits taxation and be accorded a system of surtaxes at rates which have for their object . . . . the production of the greatest amount of revenue from large incomes." Coolidge declared that the basis of taxation on larger incomes, should be "scientifically revised downward."

Coolidge advised more power be given the United States supreme court, "because the docket of the supreme court is becoming congested." He advised the supreme court be given power to expedite justice.

The wage earner and the Negro are in splendid shape, Coolidge told congress, in direct contradiction to the facts. In spite of the fact that reduction in the wages of steel workers and railway workers is imminent, and the trend of wages in the building trades is downward, Coolidge said, "It is gratifying to report that the progress of industry and the high rate of wages have all combined to furnish our people with an abundance of the necessaries and conveniences of life.'

It is a policy that will demand strategy and maneuvring such as the party has never known before. And we have no doubt that the party will accept the position of the C. E. C.

Support Without Reservations.

In asking support for the position of the C. E. C., I wish to state that what we request is conscious, wholehearted agreement with our position, that is, support without reservations. If there is a tendency in our party which does not fully agree with the position of either the C. E. C. or the minority, this tendency is in duty bound to submit its views to the party and have the party pass upon them.

The theses of the C. E. C. is what the C. E. C. stands for in all the major phases of our activities. One section of it is inseparable from the others. Consequently, agreement with one part of our theses and disagreement with another part of it is tantamount in our opinion to complete disagreement with the C. E. C.

Position of Minority.

The minority wants a Farmer-Labor party. And if they cannot have the party, give them at least the slogan. The minority stands for the advocacy of a Farmer-Labor Party.

What is the basis of their position? They have two great ideas—both wrong—upon which they base their proposed policy. One is that the only way the American working masses can participate as a class in the political struggle is thru a Farmer-Labor Party. This is the so-called theory of their thesis. The other idea is that there is actually such a movement on foot and it is our duty to step into it and assume leadership.

The first idea is monstrous, unheard of among Communists and is in diametrical opposition to every fundamental of Communism. To say that a farmer-labor party is the only medium thru which the American workers can participate as a class in political action is theoretically the same as saying that the Workers (Communist) Party cannot be the leader of the class struggle and practically it means to reduce the W. P. to a propaganda club for the final aims of Communism.

The second idea that there is now actually a mass movement for a farmer-labor party or that there is likely to arise such a movement for a new political party, in the near future, is without any basis or foundation.

The C. E. C. maintains that the coming months will see severe struggles, of the workers against the capitalists, but these struggles must not necessarily express themselves in a movement for a new party. In fact, the F.-L. P. idea is the most unlikely form that the coming struggles of the toiling masses will take.

We may expect a movement for shop committees as organs of direct struggle, we may expect a strong revival of the movement for amalgamation of the craft unions into industrial unions. We should expect and prepare ourselves to lead sporadic (outlaw) strikes and movements of the unemployed. In short, we should prepare our party and the workers for the creation in the coming fight of direct organs of rank and file struggle, and not bother our heads with dead slogans. The minority will say—in fact they do so—that all this is not political action, that only election campaigns thru a farmer-labor party is "real" political action. If they really mean it, then the party may at last begin to know who its real right wing is.

Bolshevize the Party.

The Bolshevization of our party is one of the great tasks of the C. E. C. In a sense, it is the only great task because the Bolshevization of the Workers Party will mean the making of it a mass Communist Party. It is a process of organization, political training and theoretical education all along the lines of the principles and tactics of Leninism.

I need not go here into detail of how the C. E. C. proposes to carry out the Bolshevization of the party. The theses of the C. E. C. treats the matter fully. I must say a few words upon one phase of the Bolshevization of the party, namely the struggle against opportunism and opportunist tendencies.

Of such we have in the Workers Party two varieties. One is the tendency which the C. I. characterized as the remnants of the ideology of the Second-and-a-Half International. The Communist International referred directly to Comrade Lore's view on a number of matters as expressed in certain editorials in the Volkszeitung. The other opportunist variety is the farmer-laboristic tendency in our party. I personally would find it difficult to say which of the two is more dangerous to the growth of the Workers Party into a mass Communist Party. One thing is certain, they are both dangerous and both must be relentlessly combatted.

I have already spoken of the characteristics of the farmer-laborites in our party. Now let's see what are the characteristics of the tendency which the C. I. designates as the remnants of the ideology of the Second-and-a-Half International. Let's enumerate them:

1. This tendency always sides with the right wing in the C. I. Examples: Levi, Serrati, Trotsky and the Russian opposition.

2. Loose conception of discipline. Free lancing.

3. Super-critical attitude to the C. I. and its leaders. Weak sense of loyalty and responsibility to the party and to the Comintern.

4. Opposition in principle to the tactics of maneuvering which in reality is opposition to participation in actual struggle.

The German organ of our party and its editor, Comrade Lore, have been guilty on many occasions of committing such offenses against our movement as are enumerated above. Such tendencies as these are totally incompatible with a Communist Leninist organization. You must recognize, comrades, that these are menacing tendencies for our party and the sooner we eradicate them the better.

Tasks of the Gergis Convention.

Permit me, in conclusion, to give you a brief outline of what the C. E. C. considers the most important tasks of this convention of the German Federation:

1. To provide for such a bureau and such responsible workers of the federation and its press as will loyally and effectively carry out the policies of the Communist International and of the C. E. C. of the party.

2. Carry on a systematic educational and ideological campaign to eradicate the remnants of the ideology of the Second-and-a-Half International and to instill into the membership the spirit of the teachings of Leninism.

3. Bolshevize the Volkszeitung. Elect a bureau of the best Bolsheviks in your ranks and place the Volkszeitung under the direct control, editorial, management and ownership, of the bureau and the party.

4. Educate your membership to the understanding of the necessity of shop nuclei organization and provide for co-operation with the general party units in carry out the reorganization.

The above we consider the fundamental tasks of your convention. Failure to carry out these tasks will mean failure for the German Federation to become a real, living part of our party and of the Communist International.

PATERSON SILK STRIKE NAILS UP MORE VICTORIES

Communist Aid Proved of Immense Value

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, Dec. 3.—Paterson broad silk weavers gained another victory when the Imperial Silk company settled with the Associated Silk Workers, granting wage increases of 15 per cent and upward to all of its seventy weavers and guaranteeing the two-loom system, as opposed to the three and four loom operation against which the strike was called. The Imperial had fought picketers hard for four months.

About two thousand are still on strike out of the eight to nine thousand originally striking out. The others are back under the two-loom system. Several small shops were recently struck for the second time after the manufacturers attempted to cut wages again.

Great success has been attained by the various strike relief agencies which have been ministering to the strikers. A total of $40,000 has been received, says the union. Of this $2,500 was raised at three tag days held after the weekend a week ago in New York City and neighboring towns in Connecticut and New Jersey. Seven thousand dollars was raised by the Workers Party relief committee. Thousands of dollars have come from sympathetic labor unions or ueen contributed direct by friends in and out of Paterson.

Allotment of Quotas In Daily Worker Drive

Districts and Federations of the Workers Party to Share Equally in Insuring the Daily Worker for 1925.

The goal is $50,000 and not one cent less. Of course, there would be great rejoicing in the DAILY WORKER office if the Workers Party members would take this campaign to make the DAILY WORKER safe so seriously and prosecute it so determinedly as to make returns register far above the minimum of $50,000 set.

The quota we give below are ABSOLUTE MINIMUM. For once we are not asking for twice as much as is needed in order to get half as much as is asked for. We are telling all party members very frankly that it will take exactly $50,000 to INSURE THE DAILY WORKER FOR 1925. We shall work with might and main until this $50,000 is forthcoming.

Every branch member must join in this task by insisting at every branch meeting that INSURANCE POLICIES receive consideration. Every branch secretary, every city central committee, every district organizer and federation secretary is conscripted, by decision, to assist to the limit.

DISTRICT QUOTAS.

Each district of the Workers Party is expected to meet the absolute minimum as quoted below. Full record of all remittances will be kept at campaign headquarters. District 2 (New York) has already pledged $10,000 as its minimum total contribution.

A city committee of 150 members must supervise the campaign until the branches belonging to it remit $450. City central committees must place upon their order of business reports from branches on sale of INSURANCE POLICIES.

Now to the task! Fill these quotas to the last dollar! Let's show a sincerity in this Communist work such as will give all to understand that we mean to win.

GREEK WORKERS IN NEW YORK CITY ASSAIL FASCISM

Resolution Against the Blackshirts Adopted

(Special to the Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Dec. 2.—Blackshirt tyranny in Greece and American imperialism were the target of the same shot at the meeting of the Greek branch of the Workers Party at Bryant Hall, 42nd St. and 6th Ave.

The Greek workers that crowded the hall enthusiastically listened and applauded the two Greek speakers, Comrades Socrates Georgantes and George Arvanitis, and Ben Gitlow, vice-presidential candidate on the Workers Party ticket in the recent elections, who spoke in English.

Denounce General Kondylis.

The meeting was called in protest of the persecutions of the Greek workers by the fascist General Kondylis, who only lately ordered his hordes to shoot at workers in the port of Cavalla, Greece, because the tobacco workers fought against the exportation of raw tobacco from Greece in order to save the industry and provide work for the workers who suffer from long periods of unemployment. The speakers assailed the Greek government, which is the tool of the American Tobacco Trust, because it cares more for the interests of the trust than for the preservation of the industry and the provision of work for the workers.

Comrade Arvanitis, himself a tobacco worker, in his inspiring talk described what the exportation of such raw tobaccos meant to the workers. He also aroused great enthusiasm when he told the audience about the reward that the workers get, when they come back from the battle front of the wars of the imperialists. He said that the workers are good and loyal as long as they give their lives and leave their limbs in the valleys of Macedonia and Asia Minor, where they were sent to "liberate our unredeemed christian brothers from the Turkish and Bulgarian tyranny," but they get bullets and bayonets when they get wise and have the "audacity" to ask for a few more crumbs of bread. He accused the Greek government for having asked the Bulgarian government about the "hereditary enemy," how the latter manages in combatting Communism within its boundaries.

Comrade Gitlow in his inspiring speech attacked the American Tobacco Trust, that as a gigantic octopus has under its influence the governments of the Balkan states, and thru its activities wants to totally subjugate the tobacco industry and, therefore, the workers that get their livelihood from it. He added that this policy is nothing else but part of a general program of American imperialist capitalism to enslave the peoples of the tobacco producing countries.

A resolution of protest against the Greek government and sympathy to the striking workers of Greece was adopted unanimously. The resolution follows:

Resolution.

"We, the Greek workers and toilers of New York and vicinity, at a meeting at Bryant Hall, after having heard the Greek and American speakers resolve:

"We protest vehemently against the fascist orgies of the capitalist government of Greece, and especially against the crimes committed by the arch-fascist General Kondylis, who spills the blood of our innocent brothers, persecutes, jails and deports the leaders of the Communist Party of Greece and request the immediate ceasing of these persecutions:

"We expose to the parties of the workers of the world the crimes committed against the Greek workers;

"We call upon the workers and peasants of Greece to close their ranks and organize themselves in the Communist Party of Greece, the only organization that is able successfully combat the tyranny, and to protect the suppressed rights of the working masses. We declare that the liberation of the working people of Greece, as well as of the working peoples of the Balkan states, where the ugly paws of fascism are shown to the toiling masses, lies only in the union and solidarity of the workers and peasants of the Balkans, and to this end declare ourselves in favor of the Balkan Workers' Federation;

"We stand by the Communist Party of Greece, the Communist (Workers) Party of Aemrica, and the Communist Parties of the world, because we are convinced that only Communism is able to put an end to capitalist exploitation and to bloody fascism, and to liberate the working class.

"We resolve that copies of this resolution be sent to the Greek Communist organ of America, the Empros, The DAILY WORKER, the Rizospastis, the daily Communist paper of Athens, and to the Communist Parties of Greece and America."

Views of Our Readers on Many Subjects

Police Lack Originality.

To the DAILY WORKER: The police of San Pedro and Los Angeles lack originality, but they have acquired a nation-wide notoriety, firstly as to their rawbone methods in dealing with the "reds" and secondly as to the microscopical proportions of their brain capacity. They certainly fill the bill as far as stout backs and weak heads are concerned.

During the past few weeks we have been engaged in sundry election activities here, doing our work as good members of the Workers' Party. In the grand finale to the campaign, distributing literature, we ran into the upholders of the law. Two comrades going from house to house were grabbed by two policemen who jumped out of a flivver, searched for guns or bombs, and dragged to the police station. There they were called "damned wobblies," and plain clothes men hurled obscene insults at them. Their bundles of literature were confiscated, but meanwhile other comrades were doing good work passing out leaflets and putting up posters and other campaign work.

The following night one of the same cops appeared at our open air meeting and ordered us to move 75 feet up the street. After we had complied, we were arrested, and finally fined $10, altho no witnesses appeared against us.

The kings of the past or present can do no wrong. Such a thing as rights for the proletariat do not exist in our "democracy." But we expect nothing less, and far from being a damper on our spirits, it serves on the contrary as an urge to carry on the work of those obnoxious to the master class, a work whose obnoxiousness to the master class in turn there henchmen will win for it the stamp of approval from the slaves in industry.—J. Stevenson.

Russian Comrade Speaks.

To the DAILY WORKER.— I don't claim this letter to be of very great importance (knowing full well your time is valuable), excepting the fact of its being a mark of gratitude to you for the splendid work being carried on by our great paper The DAILY WORKER.

Its activity is simply amazing in view of the fact of all the difficulties its has to surmount in disseminating and spreading Communistic ideas, and its urging upon us working "stiffs" to fight, to oppose the dark forces of reaction in this land of "dollar democracy," as well as to fight all other blood suckers the world over.

On certain occasions I have listened to remarkable speeches delivered by comrades, no I should rather call them Tovarishchi, Foster, Engdahl, Gitlow, and here lately to Tovarischa Dunne, who spoke here in honor of the 7th anniversary of the glorious existence of our star U. S. S. R.

Comrade Dunne was magnificant in his stirring appeal to Detroit's working class. I am no sentimentalist, for I have seen the real stuff over there, but I must say that it was a masterful cry to rise, to rebel, to fight for a better future.

I do wonder at times and forces that helped to bring forth such great characters as our above-mentioned comrades! How come in this land of "dollar grabbism" and sordidness?

What are barricades and onslaughts to a class conscious worker under such splendid generaship?

Yours for a better future,
Tovarischa.

To the DAILY WORKER: Some weeks ago I happened to read your article while in Los Angeles about the famous boss-master. I must say that at present I am out of luck, that is I have not a "boss" but am a soldier of the unemployed army of Call fornia. Now if it is agreeable to you I will send in occasionally my experiences in looking for one, yes looking for "a boss." But I must sate here that I am not a writer, and that at present living in "the city of knowledge" I have not had the chance to be inside of the University of California.

Besides I am not an Irishman who handles the English language as you do, but I am one of these foreigners—Russians who are not satisfied with just words but want something more and if they don't get it they kick like hell. I must many times look in the dictonary if I want to write a letter but I do hope that this letter will meet with your approval and you will not turn me down on account of my Russian accent.

Now then as soon as I get an answer from you I shall do my best to translate into words my experiences. I am a machinist by trade but God help those who are out of work now. In Los Angeles they are working as low as 45 cents per hour—the scale of the union is 85 cents and 90 cents; the scale in this district (bay district) is a little better, but there are not enough jobs. I am enclosing a clipping of the daily paper on the S. P. men voting for strike. I am yours for Communism. P. R. Ogle
Berkeley, Calif.

Disillusioned at Last.

To the DAILY WORKER.—This is the story of the disillusionment of one socialist and 3 LaFollettelsts. I work in a shop with the above mentioned and we had quite some arguments, the writer always taking the Communist position with the usual termination of disruptionists of the progressive. Yesterday (Friday) the socialist, who is a delegate to the Central Trades and Labor Council, came in fuming that he would never participate again in the labor movement as the Lefkowitz bunch of LaFollettelsts and any one else who took the opposition to the Holland-Sullivan faction were everything that he (the socialist) had been calling the Communists. The others don't say much. But I now have some material to work on.

Yours for Communism,
V., New York.

MINER HAD NO IDEA OF FAKERS' GREED FOR CASH

The More He Gets the More He Wants

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MARIANNA, Pa., Dec. 3.—Last night I attended what was advertised as a mass meeting to be held at the U. M. W. A. Hall. Not being at present a member of the organization I went in the character of one of the masses. That was all right, at least I was allowed to be present at the meeting at which speakers Pat Toohey of Cannonsburg and James Oates of Charleroi delivered addresses regarding the present conditions of the organization, particularly as to the official machine, the depleted financial condition of the order, and the proposed remedy.

According to the speaker this condition is due to the rule of a band of officials whose chief aim is to draw fat salaries, to acquire as much graft as possible, and to perpetuate themselves in office by any means whatsoever.

The remedy proposed naturally, is to oust these crooked and greedy officials and elect a set of honest, competent men in their places. One brother arose to point out that perhaps it was best to keep the present officials and let them continue stealing, on the ground that they were now well fixed financially and would let up a little, whereas a new set would ruin us completely.

A resolution was passed to look into the matter of sending delegates to interview Governor Morgan of West Virginia about getting a pardon or parole for some 20 imprisoned miners. The audience listened attentively to the speakers.

The miners here have been working at the rate of four days a week for about two months.

Huge Profits of Capitalist Press

By LELAND OLDS
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Huge profits made by the great propaganda consolidations of the employing class reveal how workers both in industry and on the farms support those that feed them with lies. The combined 1923 profits of 8 of the leading propaganda trusts are shown by income tax statistics to have reached a grand total of $31,916,630.

Compare this figure with the financial statement of the local paper representing the interests of the worker—or with the regular annual deficit of The Federated Press which is struggling to organize a news service to counteract this profitable flood of lies. The contrast will show that the workers are paying a high price for being fooled into thinking and voting as the bosses want while they allow the labor press to die for lack of funds.

Below are listed the 8 publishing organizations together with 1923 net income indicated by their tax returns.

	1923 Net Income
Curtis Pub. Co. (Sat. Eve. Post, etc)	$11,863,432
Hearst Publications, Inc.	6,474,133
Star Co. (Hearst eastern publications)	3,777,179
The Tribune Co. (Chicago)	3,285,703
New York Times Co.	2,886,030
Chicago Daily News	1,494,612
Funk & Wagnalls (Literary Digest, etc.)	1,415,890
Press Publishing Co. (N. Y. World)	619,645

The enormous influence wielded by these companies will be understood upon examination of the circulation statistics published in Ayers Newspaper Annual.

Among the Curtis publication are the Saturday Evening Post with a circulation of over 2,200,000; the Country Gentleman with over 900,000; the Philadelphia Ledger with 272,000 and the New York Evening Post with 55,000.

Hearst's combined morning circulation is 1,250,000, his evening circulation 2,275,000, his Sunday circulation 4,550,000, while his magazines circulate to a combined total of 2,900,000.

Funk & Wagnall's Literary Digest has a circulation of 1,200,000; the Chicago Tribune 517,000; the Chicago Daily News 397,000 and the New York Times 345,000.

In other words these eight companies issue practically over 15,000,000 of their publications probably reaching at least 3 times that number of people.

The consolidation of this propaganda industry which holds the opinions and standards of the entire people has been going steadily forward. Originally the control was rather loosely held by business interests through their ability to give or withold advertising. But within the last ten years the Curtis mergers in the United States have paralleled Lord Rothermere's mergers in England to create huge corporate power to sway public opinion.

Until labor gets behind a press with sufficient power to break this control of people's thought there is little hope that it will exercise any real control over government.

is especially important to unite the workers of all lands on the basis of common interests and lay the foundation of international unity." This is regarded as particularly important in view of the attempt by the American Federation of Labor under the reactionary control of Gompers to prevent Amsterdam admitting the Russian unions of uniting with the Profintern.

A Surprise from Tillett.

Ben Tillett in the same paper writes, after saying that Lenin was the greatest man that ever lived, as follows: "The Soviet government is the most prised possession of the world democracy. Let it be always dear to the heroic workers who achieved the victory over capitalism."

News from Reval states that the same general who sat upon the court martial over the Communist prisoners whose "trial" began on Nov. 10, led in the attack of the white guards who recaptured the railway station from the revolutionary workers in Monday's uprising. This is General Podder, who has announced in a brutal boast that the workers who surrendered could have their choice of punishment, they would either be shot or hung.

Uprising Followed Farcical "Trial."

The uprising, which grew out of the savage persecution of Communists, occurred at the end of the farcical "trial," and was fought heroically by something like 200 workers divided in small detachments. The shooting to death of defendants on trial and the life sentences to thirty-nine of the leading Communist Party members provoked the rising.

On the 10th of November there was commenced before the Reval military tribunal the trial of 149 workers, among them members of the Communist fraction of the national assembly, of the central committee of the Esthonian labor party, of the executive committee of the Reval and other Esthonian trade unions, as well as members of the united front group.

The accused demanded that they should be allowed to have defenders from the Soviet Union.

The military court decided to admit the defenders provided they complied with the regulations as regards criminal procedure.

Soviet Defenders Willing.

Upon the initiative of the international legal defense bureau in Moscow members of the barristers' organization of the Soviet Union expressed their readiness to undertake the defense of the accused, and the military court in Reval was informed by telegraph three times of this fact.

Altho the accused sent urgent telegrams requesting that the defenders should proceed to Reval, and althe the military court had agreed to admit the defenders, the Esthonian foreign ministry refused to grant the defenders the necessary visas to enter the country, as a result of which the accused were left without defenders.

The trial which has already lasted several days, has been accompanied by dramatic scenes. The court buildings are surrounded by police and military. Numerous arrests have taken place thruout the whole of Esthonia in order to prevent mass demonstrations of protest. Two workers who attempted to break thru the wall of the prison from outside in order to free the prisoners, were condemned to death and the sentence has already been carried out.

When the judges appeared in the court the prisoners stood up and sang the "International." Many spectators also joined in the singing; whereupon many arrests took place in the court room.

"I Am Your Class Enemy."

When it came to the question of formally identifying the prisoners many of them refused to reply to the question, giving the following reason: "It does not matter what my name is. I am your class enemy!" Others of the accused declared: "We do not recognize the bourgeois court, we are responsible to a proletarian court."

Shot for Contempt of Court.

The accused Kangru, a former member of the national assembly, was handed over to the military court on a charge of contempt of court, because he declared: "The judges will soon be in prison themselves!" He was taken out and shot without trial.

The military court handed over Jan Tomp, another former member of the national assembly, to a court martial on account of contempt of court. The court martial condemned Tomp to be shot. Sentence was continued two hours afterwards by minister of war, and the shooting carried out at once.

The reading of indictment, which quoted almost all the decisions of the congresses of the Comintern and of the R. I. L. U. in order to prove that membership of the Communist Party constitutes a crime against the safety of the state, lasted for three days. The chief item in the indictment which was brot against the accused was: Attempts to overthrow the existing order of society and to establish Soviet rule.

To the question whether they admitted their guilt, many of the accused proudly replied in the following manner: "We do not vouchsafe any answer to the class court of the bourgeoisie, we are only responsible to a proletarian tribunal." Others replied: "We feel ourselves to be guilty because we have done too little for the emancipation of the working class," or, "We are to blame because we have contributed too little towards the overthrow of the bourgeoisie."

Death sentences are pending. Only a courageous protest on the part of the international working class can save the lives of the proletarian fighters.

IF YOU HAVE EVER BEEN IN JAIL—

COMRADE BAKOSH of Newark, N. J., has probably never been in jail. But his class feeling is so strong it would not allow him to forget others who are—and it induced him to make a collection at a meeting for the first time in his life to get funds for subscriptions to our publications, for class war prisoners.

Thru the efforts of this comrade we have been able to send both the DAILY WORKER and the WORKERS MONTHLY to a comrade whose revolutionary spirit has not been dimmed in a prison cell. Obviously, we can't print his name nor the prison he is in but the letter may give us who are not in (as yet) more inspiration in our work—and a picture of what the DAILY WORKER means to the best fighters in our movement. The letter reads:

Dear Comrades:—I have received from you several communications, lists that should have gone back filled with donations, bricks that should have opened (not literally) the minds of some misguided workers—and all this remained unanswered because—look where I am!

I am in the clutches of the powers that be, one of those unfortunates whom the right even to be a wage slave is denied. But I shall not trouble you with personal grievances. Probably you know enough about prison already. Let me tell you of the hope and determination that fills my breast. I have been a wage worker before this imprisonment and will have to be one when it is over; but I am a wage slave with a will to power, with a determination to be free. In my heart burns a revolutionary fire, which shall burst in a flame once this forced suppression is removed.

But even now under adverse circumstances our (I am not the only Communist here) spirit is not broken. This is not a fit place for Communist activities, yet, thru individual conversations and the circulation of our literature the "Bolsheviks" are an issue or par with baseball and criminology. I am confident that we have neutralized many a would-be strike breaker; and we are recruiting the more promising material for future working class struggles.

In spite of the censor, I manage to get a few books, and, the most of my reading is inconsequential, I am learning to understand their "cluture" . . . their propaganda. Perhaps I may be able to use it for good purpose. You will hear from some of us; I am sure you will hear from me.

I have received your card notifying me that my subscription expires soon. Even before that I had written to a friend, who subscribed the paper for me the first time, to renew it. WE ONLY EARN A CENT AND A HALF A DAY. Continue to send the paper.

Fraternally yours, ...

Small Raises in Wages Are Given Rail Telegraphers

Telegraphers on three western railroads were given insignificant raises by the railroad labor board, at the same time that important changes were made in the working rules. Some of the telegraphers on the Santa Fe railroad were given an increase of three cents an hour. On the Denver and Rio Grande the increase was only one cent an hour. The Cincinnati, Indianapolis and Western railroad telegraphers were given a three cent an hour increase.

Telegraphers employed by the Southern Pacific and the Central railroad of New Jersey were refused pay increases.

Dr. Carver won the Spingarn medal for highest achievement by an American of African descent. The government used his sweet potato flour in the war for breadmaking.

VETERAN BUREAU OFFICIALS PLAY EASY MONEY GAME

Nearly $1,000,000 Involved in Crooked Deal

The name of Charles Cramer, general counsel for the veterans' bureau, was linked with Charles Forbes, former head of the bureau, now on trial here charged with conspiracy to defraud the government of a million dollars.

Cramer, it is charged, is a fellow conspirator with Mortimer, Forbes and J. W. Thompson, St. Louis contractor, in the stealing of governmental hospital funds which was checked by the congressional exposures. Forbes resigned as director of the veterans' bureau while being investigated by both houses of congress.

Telegrams read in court revealed that Cramer, Mortimer and Forbes were to split $100,000, if they could ease the Guthell boat case thru the department of justice with the aid of the late Jesse Smith. Mortimer charges that when Forbes went west he left the interests of the conspirators in Cramer's hands.

J. W. Thompson, the contractor who worked hand in hand with Forbes in the letting of contracts to him of hospital construction, had nearly a million dollars at stake in the Guthell boat case.

The Left Wing and Hutcheson

The Hutcheson machine of the Carpenters' Union upheld its reputation for warfare on the militants by expelling five of the most active members on Monday.

The workers who were expelled were members of the Workers (Communist) party and led the fight in Chicago against the Landis award open shoppers. Everyone of them has a long record of service to the union to his credit. They were expelled because they fought the Hutcheson machine and because at the recent convention of the union they aided in exposing the fact that Hutcheson, after the members in Chicago had won the fight, has signed an agreement with the bosses for less than the Landis award scale.

To put it plainly, they have been expelled in order to cow other members into keeping their mouth shut about other well-known acts of treachery pulled off by the machine.

There is a campaign on in the Carpenters' Union and Hutcheson is up for re-election. He is opposed by Morris Rosen who is supported by the left wing and the Workers Party members. Rosen has already carried Detroit. Here is another reason for the expulsions. Hutcheson wants to show that it is dangerous for the members of the union to differ with him on any policy—even that of selling out to the bosses.

The campaign of the left wing might have gathered less impetus if Hutcheson had not resorted to these tactics. As it is, every sincere member of the union will be able to understand exactly what the issue is, the left wing slate will get more publicity than it could have got without these expulsions and the Hutcheson machine will be badly shaken as a result of the wide exposure of its methods.

The fight for the reinstatement of the expelled militants began the moment their expulsions were ratified and it will go on until the left wing wins.

Mooney and the Molders' Strike

History is repeating itself in San Francisco.

The Molders' Union has pulled its members out of all "open shops," an explosion has occurred in one of them, two scabs have been injured and the employers' association has offered a reward of $2,500 for those responsible for what is at once called a "bomb outrage."

Tom Mooney is a member of the Molders' Union and it was because of his activity in strikes and organization work that he incurred the hatred of the open shoppers. It will be surprising if the $2,500 reward is not claimed soon by some vulture who has been able to frame, with the co-operation of the police department, sufficient evidence to hold some union man for the alleged crime.

There will be many more Mooneys among the workers of San Francisco before labor there sweeps out the treacherous gang of union misleaders that deserted Tom Mooney. It may even be that out of this little strike of molders there may come an awakening that will free both Tom Mooney and the San Francisco labor movement.

Hail the Esthonian Comrades!

No class conscious worker but will be thrilled by the story of the heroic struggle waged against that lackey of the British imperialism—the Esthonian fascist government. To members of the Workers (Communist) Party of America the brave attempt of our comrades in Esthonia to break the grip of the Esthonian militarists upon the masses of that nation is another glorious page in the history of the world revolution.

That it seems to have met with temporary defeat matters nothing. The workers of the world have been made to know that the Esthonian Communist workers are not afraid to die, and which is more important, that they know how to die—with faces to the capitalist enemy, with smoking weapons in their hands that dealt death a thousand times deserved to the murderers of the Esthonian working class.

Good news, too, is it that the delegation of the British trades unions in Moscow have voiced their protest against the terrorism of the Esthonian government, that precipitated the revolt, after they had pledged solidarity with the trade unionists of Soviet Russia in the name of the British labor movement.

This amounts to a direct challenge to British imperialism because without its financial aid the Esthonian government could not last twenty-four hours.

When a revolt in tiny Esthonia has repercussions in London, there is good evidence of the Gordian knot in which world capitalism has tied itself.

Hail the Esthonian comrades!

Long live the World Revolution!

Where Are the LaFolletteites?

In the appropriation bill called up in the senate there are some stupendous sums that need explanation and would get an airing if the so-called "progressive" bloc were more progressive and less block.

Two items in particular stand out as the measures of capitalist government against the interests of the workers. The first is an attempt to get docile foreign labor which will scab instead of joining a union or going on strike. The second provides funds for spying upon and trying to overthrow the workers' and peasants' government of Russia.

The state department of Charley Hughes wants no less than $500,000 to begin its "inspection of immigrants abroad." This means that American detectives will be given positions in all foreign ports of embarkation and under the guise of "inspection" of workers wishing to come to the United States, these workers will be made to prove that they never belonged to a union, engaged in a strike and have no "Bolshevik ideas" before they are allowed even to get aboard ship.

This is done to assure the American employing class a stream of workers who will be "strike-proof." When the unions in the steel mills or coal mines call a strike, these "inspected and passed" workers are supposed to be immune to such agitation. In spite of this vicious anti-labor provision, no sign has been made of opposition to it by either the Gompers labor bureaucracy or the so-called "progressive bloc" of LaFollette.

The second anti-labor provision of the appropriation bill is the sum of $450,000 for the state department's "foreign service." This money is used in posting spies inside the borders of Soviet Russia to provoke uprisings if possible and commit crimes against the Soviet government.

The "progressive bloc" of LaFollette is just as silent on this as on the first anti-labor provision for "inspecting" immigrants. LaFollette himself sits silent and lets these things go, so far, without protest. Wheeler openly says he will "go along" with the old gang on appropriations.

New York Speaks Again

All readers of the DAILY WORKER will be greatly encouraged by the news from New York City that the comrades of the nation's metropolis has pledged themselves for the sum of $10,000.00 to "Insure the DAILY WORKER for 1925."

This splendid showing was made at a gathering of delegates of the local Workers Party branches addressed by Moritz J. Loeb, business manager of the DAILY WORKER. It is only another indication that the New York comrades are determined to build our Communist daily press so strong that there will soon be a special New York edition of "Our Daily." The pledge of $10,000.00 to insure the DAILY WORKER for 1925 comes on the heels of the campaign that brought in 1,200 new "subs" for the Daily in New York City, followed by the placing of "Our Daily" on the news stands, so that New York's workers may purchase their paper on the streets as easily as the workers in Chicago.

New York City has again set the pace for DAILY WORKER supporters thruout the entire country. It is a fast pace. But workers in every city of the land, in proportion, can keep up with it. In the words of the manager of the campaign drive, Alfred Wagenknecht, "Let's Go!"

The Centralia Prisoners

New efforts are being made to free the eight members of the I. W. W. now in the Walla Walla penitentiary, Washington, because they killed four members of the American Legion while defending themselves and their hall from attack organized by the Centralia chamber of commerce, following an armistice day parade November 11, 1919.

Two overseas veterans have made affidavits recently giving further details of the plot, proving that it was a deliberately planned affair and exonerating the I. W. W. Seven jurors who, intimidated by the terrorism of the legionnaires, signed the verdict of murder in the second degree, have also made affidavits detailing the methods used to influence them and have asked freedom for the men they helped convict.

The raid on the Centralia hall, the torture and lynching of Wesley Everest, one of the defenders, the conviction of the other eight workers, constitutes one of the most dastardly crimes chargeable to the capitalists and their hangers-on. The members of the I. W. W. who faced the maddened and well-armed, white-collared mob, and did deadly execution, rendered a noble service to every labor organization in the United States. They stopped for a long time the raiding of halls and assaults upon the militant workers.

Now is the time to show the appreciation due these comrades. Every workers' organization should not only contribute to the campaign, but should send strongly worded demands for a complete pardon to Governor Hart of Washington.

This is the very least that should be done.

ELECTIONS TAKE PLACE IN REICH NEXT SUNDAY

Communist Leaders Are Thrown Into Jail

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Dec. 3.—The Reich elections take place next Sunday with practically the entire parliamentary group of the Communist Party in jail or "on the run." In addition hundreds of local Communist Party functionaries are imprisoned and wanted by the police.

The large vote polled by the Communists in the last national elections and recently in Hamburg has frightened the social democrats and the the government. They do not want a repetition of that vote. Not that they fear the overthrow of the capitalist dictatorship by Communist deputies in side the reichstag, but Germany's credit among the international bankers would be materially weakened by a heavy Communist vote.

The socialists, who are the strongest supporters of the Dawes plan, are not following the customary methods of appealing to the masses in this campaign. They are using the yellow trade union machinery to scare the workers into voting for them, the same policy that the republican party of America used in the elections there

Twenty-nine million votes were cast in the national elections. It is not expected that this election will bring out as many voters.

The Other Day

The other day the collapse of Soviet Russia was again predicted.

Every time the collapse of Soviet Russia is predicted the counter-revolutionary Russians in Reval, Riga, Paris, Berlin, London, Shanghai (there's quite a nest of them in the United States, too) form cabinets for the New Russia of their dreams.

At one time two or three such complete cabinets, from prime minister down to the king's fool were organized among the whites in Reval alone.

Generals without an army, today. But any day the imperialists may provide the forces for an attack upon Soviet Russia.

We will then need a POWERFUL DAILY to warn the masses, to arouse them against the whites and the yellows, to secure their support for the reds.

If we are to have the DAILY WORKER when this moment arrives we will have to INSURE IT NOW.

FRANCE STIRRED BY POLITICAL GRAFT SCANDAL

Compared with Teapot Dome, It's Innocent

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, Dec. 3.—There is lively political scandal running loose here, the compared to the Teapot Dome affair it is but puny. Nothing worse than accepting money from a capitalist concern for political purposes is charged against Herriot's minister of commerce, M. Raynaldy.

The minister first acknowledges receiving the money as a subsidy for a paper he was running. It appears that Raynaldy has an elastic political conscience and any scruples he may have can be salved by francs.

The catholic church is organizing a bitter opposition against the Herriot government, owing to the premier's stand on the religious question.

WAGES IN SOVIET RUSSIA

- By Israel Amter

The Chicago Tribune of Sunday, Nov. 16, contained an article on wages in Soviet Russia. In a scareline it stated that the maximum salary of doctors is $42. There was also a long list of wages paid to various categories of workers.

The purpose of this article was clear. The Chicago Tribune, sympathizing with the viewpoint of Emma Goldman, the "arch-revolutionist," tried to depict horrible conditions in Soviet Russia, in which even such essential parts of a social organization as physicians are supposedly suffering physical misery.

Confronted with Mighty Tasks.

The salaries of physicians have been low since the revolution. The Soviet government had several mighty tasks upon taking power. The first one was to resist the attacks of the capitalist governments, including that of the "arch-democrat" and advocate of "self-determination of peoples," Mr. Wilson. The second one was to fight the counter-revolution within the country, fostered and financed by the United States, British, and French governments, as admitted by Savinkov, one of the main conspirators, who was captured and in Moscow sentenced to prison in the month of August; and as declared by Nitti, the Italian statesman in a work entitled "The Tragedy of Europe—and America." The third one was to rebuild the industries destroyed by the war and counter-revolution. The fourth one was to secure the position of the working class. The fifth one was to adjust the relations between the working class and the peasants.

The editors of the Chicago Tribune might do well to study the history of the United States. Let them find out how the American colonies looked after the revolution in 1776: let them delve a little into the history of the reconstruction period after the civil war. Then let them begin to talk about conditions in Soviet Russia.

Enemies on All Sides.

Soviet Russia undertook the solution of the above tasks almost in the order given above. The Soviet government, beset on all sides by enemies, had to perform the most necessary tasks first. The defense of the revolution was the supreme task—and the workers and peasants sacrificed themselves as no other people have fought to preserve the fruits of the revolution. And what is more they saved them. Only one who has been in Soviet Russia and has talked with the workers would realize what they think about the revolution. They hate the bourgeoisie with all the hate that workers who have lived thru generations of oppression can feel. Perhaps the best indicator would be their attitude to American agricultural communes made up of American workers and farmers who have settled in Soviet Russia. The American workers were better dressed, they had a full equipment of machinery. The Russian peasants thot they were the bourgeoisie returning to the country. Hence they eyed them with suspicion, until convinced of their real nature.

Attack Domestic Problems with Zeal.

Having saved the revolution, the Soviet government—and before the government, the Russian Communist Party which is responsible for the activities of the government—turned to domestic problems with increased zeal. The situation of the proletariat was the first consideration. There was unemployment, housing conditions were poor owing to the destruction of the war period and the general deterioration of dwellings, which could not be combatted for lack of funds and time. Municipal soviets attacked these two problems, especially in 1923-4. As the industries were not able to install new machinery, owing to lack of capital, the existing machinery had to be reorganized and put in shape. The relation of the proletariat to the peasant had to be adjusted. The peasants, the overwhelming majority of the population, could not buy industrial products owing to the high cost of production. The new economic policy, the brilliant achievement of Comrade Lenin, a stroke that only a genius could dictate, took things along the right path. It was the strategy of the real revolutionary, who recognizes the forces at play not in his own country alone, but the world over.

New Economic Policy Was Correct.

The new economic policy was correct, a thousand times correct, and has made Soviet Russia a more powerful factor in the world revolution than before.

Factories increased their production. The light industry not needing such a large investment of capital progressed more rapidly. The textile industry, the cigarette and preserve industries moved with giant steps. During the last year, the workers in the two latter industries increased their wages. The essential element, however, is the heavy industry. The excellent discussion in the Russian Communist Party from last November to January, revolved in part about that point. Can the heavy industries be developed, or is Soviet Russia in no position at this time to strengthen them and therefore manufacture such products abroad? The decision was made that even at a great expense to the Soviet government, the heavy industries must be developed.

A Natural Outcome.

The decision of the central executive committee of the Russian Communist Party was correct. And as a consequence, the textile workers are earning 82 per cent, workers in the printing industry 73 per cent, food 113 per cent, leather 92 per cent, paper 100 per cent, wood industry 80 per cent. The average in Moscow is 93 per cent of pre-war wages.

It was obvious, therefore, that categories of workers such as physicians and teachers would suffer. A working class at war with foreign and domestic enemies cannot pay its major attention to these matters. Even the schools suffered, at one time, but before the new economic policy was adopted, they had to be taken over in main by the trade unions and the factories. But today things are on the upgrade.

Wages in Soviet Russia should not be interpreted in American terms. First of all, it must always be remembered that Soviet Russia inherited the Russia of the tsars—its corruption, disorganization and misery. Out of the chaos has come order—and out of order has come continuous progress and consolidation.

Buying Power Is What Counts.

Some workers get what might be considered a low wage in the United States. But their actual wages are far higher than those earned, for instance, by similar categories of German workers. A skilled German worker gets, on the average, less than $30 a month; an inexperienced worker as low as $15. But even this is not the sole criterion of wages. The real criterion is their buying power. Can a worker get as much for his wages in Soviet Russia, as for instance, in Germany? He gets far more. In the United States and Germany, a worker has to pay one-fourth or one-third of his wages for rent. A worker in Soviet Russia with a low wage pays either no rent at all, or only two or three rubles ($1.00 to $1.50) a month, this including light and heat. Every factory has a club. This club is the cultural center for all the workers It is the center for theatrical work classes, lectures; it contains a library with the daily papers, periodicals and the latest books on all subjects. It is the center of the sporting activities. Each worker contributes a few kopeks a month for its maintenance. Lecturers on all subjects visit the clubs in the cities, smaller towns and villages alike. Movies circulate thruout the workers' clubs.

Workers Trade at Co-operatives.

The Russian worker gets his food thru the co-operatives, one of which is attached to practically every factory. The campaign for taking the retail trade out of private hands (the nepmen) has resulted in an immense drive of the co-operatives, which now have their shops in the smallest village and sell at far lower prices than the nepmen. It is utterly untrue, that an ordinary suit of clothes costs $100 and a pair of shoes $20 in Soviet Russia as the Chicago Tribune claims. Shoes are still dear, but could be obtained for 12 rubles ($6); a suit of clothes cost from 40 rubles ($20) upwards. The Soviet government was not satisfied with these prices, for it prevented the workers and, above all, the peasants from purchasing manufactured goods. Hence prices dropped in 1923, and recently were again reduced 10 per cent. The consequence is that the textile and shoe factories cannot supply the demand.

The introduction of the co-operative in the villages has had an electric effect. The peasants are able to get a far larger selection of merchandise than ever before, for the co-operatives have a full stock, something that the private dealers could never boast.

Meals at Cost Price.

Finally, the workers get their noonday meal at the communal factory dining room, practically at cost price. Every factory has a nursery, where the working women leave their children; there is a kindergarten attached to every factory. There is a dispensary, a hospital, a recreation home in the mountains or country, a dentist's office.

The situation of the teachers and physicians—practically of all intellectuals—has been given the close attention of the Soviet government, which is settling it.

Won't Tolerate Bourgeoisie.

The correspondent of the Chicago Tribune might ask the physicians and teachers—and the workers and peasants—if they would like the bourgeoisie to return—if they would like a restoration of the beautiful capitalist system that the workers, farmers, teachers of the United States must endure and at the same time smile. Ask them as I have asked them, and the answer will be an emphatic no! The question the workers and peasants and the intellectuals of Soviet Russia constantly asked me was: When are the workers and poor farmers of the United States going to wake up and put an end to their capitalist government?

The question of wages must be considered economically. It must be weighed in its actual and relative terms. Wages are constantly increasing in Soviet Russia; Soviet Russia is getting back to normal times. It will not be long before she has touched the figure of pre-war times. Then she will go on to Communist economy. In the meantime, wages and conditions of the working class in every part of the capitalist world are deteriorating, because capitalism no longer forms a basis for world economy. The workers and poor peasants of Italy, Poland, Roumania, Mexico, the near and far east might answer this question. The textile and farm workers, and the millions of unskilled workers, the clerks and department store slaves in the United States, might answer this question best of all. The poor farmers have had a long taste of capitalist "prosperity." The working class as a whole will soon get another one.

POWER OF CONCENTRATION

Editor's Note.—Every day until publication has been completed, the DAILY WORKER will publish a new chapter from the book, "Lenin: The Great Strategist of the Class War," by A. Losovsky, secretary of the Red International of Labor Unions. The sixteenth chapter is entitled, "Power of Concentration."

As a foremost strategian Lenin understood how to direct the attention of the masses to itself, how to concentrate the fighting energies of the masses, directing them to some central point. He knew the secret of formulating slogans in a simple and universally understood manner. He also knew as nobody else did how to organize the masses and lead them into struggle, always in accordance with the fundamental principle of strategy which is, the offensive is the best defensive. Lenin never permitted the initiative to slip out of his hands. He knew that the moment the enemy seizes the initiative our battle is lost. He was always striving towards determining results, even if they were small. He pursued our class enemies to the point of their complete destruction. He knew neither sentimentalism nor vacillation, which was he result, not of his "blood-thirstiness" as our class enemies would have us believe, but of his deep understanding of the mechanism of the social struggle.

When the class struggle reaches a sharpened stage, indecision is much more costly to the working class than the utmost relentlessness towards the enemy. In moments of decision the least failure to adopt energetic measures results in the working class paying with thousands of lives. Such indecision enables the enemy to collect its forces and to assume the offensive. In the whole of Lenin's activities the following passes like a red thread: Initiative, determination, ruthlessness in the pursuit of the enemy until he is destroyed, quick action and the concentration of the proletarian forces at the weakest spot of the enemy's front.

At the same time Lenin understood how to diagnose the weaks spots in the armor of his own class. He would fight and exclude from the midst of the proletariat many elements and whole social groups that were steering against the course of the proletarian movement. He had a very fine sense of perception for all the complex processes that are going on within the masses, he sensed very quickly all the subterranean forces within the proletariat, and he always understood how to differentiate between the sound and unsound tendencies within the working class. We must not forget that the working class finds itself within the capitalist order of society, and that as a result of this, capitalism is exerting a great influence over the proletarian masses. Reformism, for instance, is the ideology of the bourgeoisie transplanted on working class soil. Lenin was in possession of an iron will to fight. He never permitted himself to be intimidated by defeats. He always intrenched himself in the positions to which the working class would be compelled to retreat and from there again assume the offensive.

UROPAN-AMERICAN LABOR UNITY

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

OWING to an error in a paragraph that appeared in this column on Wednesday last, dealing with the investments of "Abe" Cahan in what is left of the yellow socialist press in this country, the name of the New England Leader, long dead, was substituted for that of the Milwaukee Leader, edited and partly owned by Victor Berger. The paragraph should have read, "according to the statement of ownership made to the post office by the management of the Milwaukee Leader, the Jewish Daily Forward owns more than 2 per cent of the stock in Berger's paper." How much more, it does not say.

THE committee charged with the duty of awarding the Nobel peace prize could not locate anyone this year, considered worthy of the prize. The name of Ramsay MacDonald was mentioned by enthusiastic pacifists, but the committee probably read a little about his wars in India, Mesopotamia, Egypt and China, also his naval program, and decided to let the prize draw interest a little longer. The dove of peace must feel quite lonely these days.

J. H. THOMAS, colonial minister in the late MacDonald labor party government, scourged those elements among the workers who preached the class war and denounced the capitalists. He upheld the theory that the interests of labor and capitalists were identical. Sir Edward Manville, prominent plutocrat, rose to second Thomas' remarks, appealing to the more ferocious capitalists on his side to pull in their horns. The policy of J. H. Thomas was the policy of the labor party of Great Britain. They ended labor's struggle, "leading the battles of the workers" into parliament.

ARTHUR HENDERSON in an article in The Daily Herald of London, plays on the same key. He deprecates the tendency in the labor party to stress class divisions. Such irresponsible people must be kept in their place he declares. The labor party must prove to the "people" of Great Britain that it intends to accomplish reforms in society by parliamentary means, and not by the exercise of the mass power of the workers. This is the kind of language, the Hillquits, Mahoneys, Johnston's and other proponents of a fake farmer labor party, use in America.

CLARENCE DARROW, noted criminal lawyer does not believe life is worth living for. It is quite true that for millions of workers life is anything put pleasant. But Clarence and his kind are not so badly off. This philosophy of despair of which Darrow is an outstanding exponent is a deadly drug for the minds of the working class. It is just as pernicious as the dope injected into their minds by the clergy. Between the opium of the clergy and the opium peddled by the atheist Darrow, there is no choice for the workers. Both sets of parasites live comfortably at the workers' expense.

M. PASHITCH, former premier of Serbia, failing to make his way back to the public pap in the usual way decided to break into print by taking his cue from the British tories, and staging a "red" plot. He charged M. Raditch, Croatian leader, with carrying on a conspiracy against the Serbian government under the instructions of Moscow. The king of Serbia was convinced that Pashitch was telling the truth, so he asked that willing gentleman to take office. He did, and one of his first acts was to issue orders for the arrest of Raditch. The latter crossed over into Italy. The Pashitch party declares the gold of the Moscow plot and the cry of "Bolshevism" will suffice to win the elections. But there is a fly in the ointment. The Croatian being denied ballots may resort to bullets.

NOW that Charlie Chaplin has entered on his second matrimonial venture, thus quenching the curiosity of millions—the kind who believe Calvin Coolidge is an enemy of Wall Street—and Peggy Hopkins Joyce, has returned to pay the laundry bills of her Swedish count, and James A. Stillman, has decided to disavow the Indian guide, William Jennings Bryan should take advantage of the lull in public interest to stage a comeback with a lecture entitled: "Man has not descended from the monkey. If he has his pace is damnably slow."

PROGRESSIVE MINERS WAGE WAR ON FAKERS

Pittsburgh Militants in Hot Election

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 4.—On the eve of the elections in District 5, of the United Mine Workers of America, the progressives in the miners' union of that section have issued a statement setting forth the principles for which they stand and charging the reactionary officialdom with serious crimes against the interests of the union membership.

The administration of Pat Fagan, president of District 5, has surpassed in brazen disregard of the interests of the rank and file that of any previous incumbent, declares the statement. The $3,000,000 of the district defense fund is spent, without an accounting ever being made.

Large sums were paid to a stool-pigeon by the name of W. D. Reese, for services which were not specified, while the officers of the district draw fat salaries and high expense accounts.

The signing of the Cleveland agreement by Lewis resulted in 45,000 miners in the coke region being left out in the cold without any substantial relief, with 175,000 children to provide for.

Again the Jacksonville agreement which Lewis claimed would stabilize the coal industry threw hundreds of thousands of miners out of work and allowed the open shop operators to make heavy inroads on hitherto organized territory.

Contract Violations.

The operators are violating the "sacred contract" with impunity. "Most flagrant," states the manifesto, "is the violation of the provision that a loader shall have two rooms, working in one until it is cleaned up, so as not to interfere with the cutters. In this district in practically every mine, there are two men to every room, and their earnings are far to low to secure a comfortable living for a family."

The progressive miners charge the officers of the Pittsburgh district with trying to defend the stoolpigeon Robert W. Beattie, former secretary of the Pittsburgh Central Labor Union, and to save him from expulsion in face of unquestionable evidence that he was an industrial spy.

These fakers also deserted the miners convicted for participation in the Clitonville riots. Thirty eight of these men are rotting in Moundsville prison, and are completely ignored by the officers of the district.

Disqualifying Candidates

Fearing the growing power of the progressive opposition the last desperate act of this shaky officialdom was to disqualify candidates for office and frame charge against candidates Harminson, Toohey and Wekich.

The militants in District 5, endorse the platform of the progress miners and declare their intention of fighting for the following demands:

The election of organizers by the rank and file; investigation and itemized accounting of the $3,000,

PARIS WORKERS CHEER LEONID KRASSIN, FIRST SOVIET AMBASSADOR

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, Dec. 4.—Cheered by a great concourse of workers who had gathered to welcome the first ambassador from the Soviet republic of workers and peasants to the French government, Leonid Krassin, accounted one of the ablest of Bolshevik diplomats, arrived today at 11 a. m. to take over the Russian embassy.

Comrade Krassin was escorted from the station to the embassy by a delegation of the Communist Party of France, attended by enthusiastic crowds of workers, who were invited into the embassy's magnificent reception rooms, where speeches were made and all joined in singing the Internationale.

Trade Union Educational League Issues Appeal to Latin-American Workers

Urging the solidarity of all labor on the two American continents, the Trade Union Educational League has issued a manifesto to the workers of Latin-America on the occasion of the gathering of the Pan-American Federation of Labor at Mexico City. The manifesto in full is as follows:

Manifesto of the Trade Union Educational League.

TO THE WORKERS OF LATIN-AMERICA:

Greetings to the workers of Latin-America, to those in the trade unions and those as yet unorganized—warm and fraternal greetings from the revolutionary unionists of the United States and Canada, organized in the Trade Union Educational League.

Victims alike of the blood-thirsty greed of the same band of imperialist exploiters, with headquarters in Wall Street of which the White House in Washington is but a department, the workers of both American continents are faced with the necessity of uniting their forces for common struggle against their common enemy.

The workers of practically every Latin-American country have felt the iron heel of American imperialism. Mexico has had men, women, and children killed by the shelling of Vera Cruz by American warships, has been invaded by American armed forces, has had her institutions corrupted by American bribery, has had her national resources grabbed by American imperialist exploiters. American troops are in possession of Haiti, Santo Domingo, Nicaragua, and other countries. Cuba has her laws made to the order of Wall Street, U. S. army officers are in Brazil and Peru, and vast sums of money are being spent to foment war between Brazil and Argentine, and between Chile and Peru, in order that while Latin-American workers kill one another, the Wall Street bandits may come in and enslave them all. These are but a few instances of years of international banditry practiced against Latin-America by American imperialism.

Imperialism Crushes Labor.

American imperialism crushes labor both at home and abroad. After exploiting its workers at home, it uses its booty to enslave the workers of Latin-America. Wall Street is the universal oppressor of the American continent. And in Latin-America it is Wall Street that stands behind the native bourgeoisie in its exploitation of labor. American investors in Latin-American industries dictate the labor-crushing policies that prevail, and back them up with imperialist force. Witness the strikes in the most packing industry in Argentina (Swift-Armour interests); the strikes in the oil fields of Mexico (Standard Oil); the crushing of the copper miners in Chile (Copper Trust); etc. Witness the assistance given to counter-revolutionists and reactionary dictators. In all of these things, Wall Street has as one of its most obedient servants, the government of the United States in all its branches. Witness the breaking of the Cuban general strike by American battleships; the invasions of Mexico; the occupations of Santo Domingo, Haiti, Nicaragua, etc.; the universal diplomatic bulldozing; all of which is summed up in the modern version of the infamous "Monroe Doctrine."

Labor of All-America Must Unite!

Labor in the United States and Canada, struggling against the same power that oppresses the workers of Latin-America, feels the need of a union of all working class forces of both continents.

Workers to the South feel the same burning necessity. All workers understand that this Pan-American unity of labor is absolutely required for any successful struggle against the forces of Wall Street.

But unity in the struggle is not yet achieved between the workers of the different countries, because of the Treachery of Gompers-Morones Leadership.

The Pan-American Federation of Labor, now meeting in Mexico City, is being used, not as an organ of struggle for the working class to throw off the yoke of American imperialism, but as another one of the instruments of Wall Street to extend its power and further enslave Latin-America.

Samuel Gompers is the "boss" of the Pan-American Federation, with the assistance of Luis Morones. The toiling masses of the United States and of Latin-America, have no control whatever over it. A vast majority of the unions of both North and South are not even misrepresented by traitorous leaders. Yet this private organ of Gompers and Co. poses as the representative of "Labor."

And what does it do? All of its acts are dictated directly by the interests of American imperialism, of Wall Street.

As head of the Pan-American Federation of Labor, Gompers recommended that Latin-American workers in the Canal Zone should receive 25 per cent to 35 per cent less wages than labor from the United States.

Gompers, after being instructed at the last Pan-American Congress to protest against the occupation by U. S. troops of Haiti, instead sent a message of congratulation to the state department for that act of imperialist aggression.

With the past few months, Gompers sent a representative to Nicaragua to press the adoption of laws "written by a representative of the state department of the United States," with a threat of internal disorders to be organized if the law were not passed.

At the American Federation of Labor convention just closed in El Paso, Gompers endorsed the exclusion of Mexican workers from the United States. He has consistently refused at all times to take any action to organize and protect the Mexican workers in this country who suffer exceptional oppression.

Gompers is a part of the capitalist political machine, an agent of Wall Street, a betrayer of the working class, an instrument of imperialism. Gompers has turned the Pan-American Federation of Labor into an instrument of imperialism. Gompers is an enemy of socialism. He is an enemy of Soviet Russia. He is an enemy of labor solidarity the world over. Pan-American solidarity of labor is impossible so long as Gompers is able to pose as the leader of the Pan-American Federation of Labor. And what is true of Gompers is also true of his lieutenant, Luis Morones.

Organize Real Pan-American Solidarity!

There can be no real Pan-American Federation of Labor until it bases itself upon the common struggle of all workers against American imperialism. This cannot be done under treacherous leadership such as

CENTRAL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE OF WORKERS PARTY FORMS STANDING UNITED FRONT SUB-COMMITTEE

The Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party herewith issues for publication a resolution passed by that body instructing its political committee to appoint a sub-committee of three to canvass every possible avenue of employing the united front tactic, in harmony with the defination of that policy formulated by the Fifth Congress of the Communist International.

The resolution states that the farmer-labor party has ceased to be a central issue in the labor movement and no longer serves the purpose of

SOUTH-SLAVIC COMRADES GET BUSY IN DRIVE

Pledge Co-operation to Insure Daily Worker

"The South-Slavic Federation went over the top in the drive to establish the DAILY WORKER and we intend to exert every effort to reach the quota of $3,661 alloted to us in the drive to make the DAILY WORKER grow," Comrade T. Cuckovich, secretary of the South-Slavic Federation told the DAILY WORKER yesterday.

"We have already brot the presses of the South Slavic Federation to the aid of the nationwide drive to insure the DAILY WORKER for 1925." Comrade Cuckovich said. "We have already printed several articles in our Communist paper, Radnik and donations for the DAILY WORKER are expected to come in with sufficient volume to reach our quota."

In spite of the fact that a large proportion of the comrades in the South Slavic Federation are miners, many of whom have been unemployed for months, these comrades are expected to act to work with the determination and fighting spirit characteristic of the miners.

All party members are urged to concentrate on the five and ten dollar insurance policies in order to make the DAILY WORKER secure for the coming year. The one dollar insurance policies are to be sold to sympathizers.

Comrades everywhere are especially enthusiastic over the forthcoming DAILY WORKER "Tool Box." This will be of real value to the DAILY WORKER readers, as it will be a little booklet packed with information about the labor world.

The comrades have already made numerous requests for the "Tool Box." It will contain memo sheets, a calendar, and important dates of labor happenings. It will also contain subscription blanks for the DAILY WORKER, and the Workers Monthly, an dapplication blanks for membership in the Workers Party.

The "Tool Box" will be in the mails within a few days and every subscriber to the DAILY WORKER will be provided with one.

FUNERAL SATURDAY FOR COMRADE ROBERT FUNK AT DETROIT, MICHIGAN

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 4.—Communists of Detroit mourn the loss of their comrade, Robert Funk, who died here Monday night at the Grace hospital. The funeral will take place Saturday morning at 10 o'clock from 8288 Fordyce avenue, Hamtramck.

Comrade Funk was a tailor and very active in the Journeymen Tailors' Union. Known as a Communist and leader of the left wing, he succeeded thru his activities and the confidence his fellow workers placed in him in becoming a member of the union's executive board. He was associated with Comrade Sullinsky in his fight on the reactionaries who were deeply entrenched in his union and whom they both fought successfully. He was an ardent supporter of the Friends of Soviet Russia and never failed to set forth his views to the entire membership of his union.

In his death we lose a valuable and beloved comrade. The still in his early thirties he was a victim of tuberculosis, a disease which takes the lives of so many workers in his trade under profit rule.

COMPERS AND MORONES HISSED BY MEXICAN WORKERS AT PAN-AMERICAN FEDERATION MEETING

By J. W. JOHNSTONE.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 4.—While the workers in the gallery hissed the appearance on the platform of Samuel Compers and Luis Morones at the opening of the Pan-American Federation of Labor convention here, Morones, the "Compers of Mexico," attacked the Communist Party of Mexico and by open inference threatened violence and murder of Communists if they proceeded in their efforts to organize the Mexican workers and peasants.

Pretending that the efforts of the Communists were "destructive" of existing labor organizations, Morones said, "We will stop at nothing to protect our labor organization. And our labor organizations must defend the present socialist government."

By "protecting" the labor unions, Morones means to protect his control over them, just as by "defending the government" he means to defend himself, as he is a minister in the Calles cabinet.

A "Pan-American" Farce.

If ever there was a farce of a "Pan-American" gathering, this convention is it. It represents perfectly the Mathey Woll idea as he expressed it at El Paso, of the "Monroe Doctrine of labor." Only those countries are represented here which are not only imperialist dependencies of the "colossus of the north"—as the Latin-Americans refer to the United States—but which are practically under control of the American armed forces.

Only Panama, Guatemala and Nicaragua are "represented" at this so-called "Pan-American" convention of labor besides the A. F. of L. labor fakers and their kind of the Mexican Federation. And the "representatives" of these three Central American republics represent "labor" even less than does Sam Gompers. It is a hand-picked crowd. There are no organized movements in these countries to be represented.

A South American Boycott.

There are absent, in cold of the "Monroe Doctrine of Labor," any representatives from the really important countries, such as Argentina, Brazil, Uruguay, Paraguay, Chile, Peru, Ecuador, Bolivia, Santo Domingo, Hayti, Porto Rico or Cuba.

But regardless of this chilly reception to the Judas program of the Pan-American Federation fo Labor, Gompers and Morones are holding forth with the rankest kind of betrayal of the workers of both Mexico and the United States to class collaboration with Wall Street imperialism.

"Mutual Interests" of Enemies.

Says Gompers in his speech, "Radicalism is dead. Reconstruction alone can save the world from the terrible consequences of a future world war. Labor and capital must understand one another in mutual interests."

It is quite significant that the American capitalist in the so-called "socialist" government, gives out an interview saying that the invasion of Mexico by Gompers has killed socialism in Mexico. He added that, "Radical leaders who have created trouble have been either discredited or have been converted to an aggressive policy of reconstruction." From this it is quite clear that when Gompers mentions "reconstruction" he means class collaboration.

The threat of Morones against the Communists acquires strong significance in view of the fact that he is the heavy end of Calles' cabinet.

PERU REBELS HOLD TOWN FOR OVER ONE WEEK

BUNEOS AIRES, Dec. 4.—News of a revolt which taxed the ability of the Peruvian government in its suppression reached here from Lima. The movement started on Nov. 20.

The revolutionists captured the town of Chota on Nov. 20, and the government troops were not successful in retaking the place until Nov. 28.

The rebels swept down from the Andean mountains under the leadership of Colonel Alcazar and Lieutenants Barreda and others. The latter were executed by the government forces.

The reports do not give an estimate of the numerical strength of the revolutionaries, but say that the battle which resulted in a defeat for the rebels lasted two days.

COMMUNISTS IN ELECTION FIGHT FOR REICHSTAG

Results to Affect the Dawes Plan

By ARTHUR ROSENBERG.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Dec. 4.—The Communist party is preparing for the elections of next Sunday, Dec. 7, the penitentiary elections, as the popular saying rightly expresses it, under the most difficult conditions.

The situation recalls the Duma elections under czarism, or the elections which have taken place in recent times in the domain of the Polish "democracy," in Finland, Jugoslavia, or Mussolini's Italy.

Fear Communist Strength.

The fact that there were 62 Communist members of the Reichstag in Germany and that on the 4th of May, 3,700,000 votes were cast for the Communist Party, did not at all fit in to the system of the Dawes plan.

In the experts' plan the German government has been explicitly charged with the task of creating, in mutual agreement with the creditor countries, such conditions as would make Germany appear a trustworthy debtor in the eyes of other countries.

Four million Communists in Germany constitute, however, a factor which most seriously injures the credit of the German bourgeoisie. Every million less of Communist votes implies a cheapening by 2 per cent of the credit for the German state and private loans abroad. The weakening of Communism is a vital part of the policy of fulfilment of the German bourgeoisie and German social-democracy.

Revolutions Not Made in Parliament.

As a matter of fact these tactics are exceedingly dangerous. A revolutionary movement is not destroyed by excluding it from or reducing its

SADOUL, SOVIET CITIZEN, PLACED UNDER ARREST

French Seize Captain Who Became Red

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, Dec. 4.—Jacques Sadoul, one of the most prominent of French Communists, was arrested at his home here at noon yesterday. He is under sentence of death by a French military court which tried him for treason while he was absent in Soviet Russia.

Comrade Sadoul was a captain in the French army during the world war, and was assigned by the French army as military attache to the French mission to Russia during the Kerensky regime after serving actively on the western front.

Renounced Career for Bolshevism.

When the Bolsheviks overthrew Kerensky, Sadoul, already a convert to the social theories of Henri Barbusse, the initiator of the "Clarte" movement of intellectual radicalism, laid aside his captaincy in the French army, his position of military attache and cast in his lot with the ragged and starving workers of Russia in their fight for life and power.

Sadoul put aside his French citizenship, became a naturalized citizen of the Soviet republic, and later an official of the Soviet government. This angered the government of France, then under Clemenceau, which both then and since has been the bitterest enemy of the Soviet government on the continent.

Condemned to Death.

Captain Sadoul was cited, in his absence, for trial by court martial for treason. While he was still in Soviet Russia the army court in France condemned him to death for desertion on November 8, 1919.

One of the chief political slogans around which the French Communist Party is rallying the masses in a united front to expose the capitalist nature of the Herriot "radical socialist" party and government, is the demand for amnesty for political offenders. The arrest of Sadoul will stimulate this campaign to an immense degree as Sadoul has become a heroic figure before the French proletariat.

Growth of French Communism.

By the united front for amnesty and a similar fight against the high cost of living and, during the Ruhr invasion, against militarism and the occupation, the French Communist Party has won leadership over considerable numbers of workers and peasants. The united front on the political field with the socialist party under a slogan of "A workers' and peasants' bloc" added considerably to its prestige.

How frightened are the bourgeoisie by the growth of the Communist Party may be seen by the declaration of Cardinal Dubois appealing to French catholics to fight the Communist "danger." In the official catholic organ, the Semaine Religieuse, he writes:

Cardinal Gets Excited.

"The hour is grave. We must react today; tomorrow, perhaps, will be too late. God protect France!" He cites the 60,000 workers of Paris who turned out to commemorate the death of Lenin, and the demonstration attending the transfer to the Pantheon of the ashes of Jean Jaures, the anti-war socialist assassinated, presumably by the order of Poincare, at the outbreak of the world war. The excitable cardinal continued:

"There was a Communist army, compact and disciplined. They numbered 20,000, mobilized under the shadow of a multitude of red flags stamped with the hammer and the sickle of the Soviets. They advanced to the sound of the 'International,' shouting cries of disorder and violence. It was a fearful revelation."

It is reported that Leonid Krassin, the first ambassador of the Soviet government, who arrived only the day before Sadoul's arrest, is asking instructions from Moscow to prepare a protest against the imprisonment of Sadoul who is now a citizen of Soviet Russia.

Brazil's Jab at Tokio Echo of U. S. War Against Japanese

TOKYO, Dec. 4.—Threatened international complication between Japan and Brazil in which the death of a reported ban against Japanese citizens entering the South American republic was virtually dissipated today when the Tokyo foreign office was officially informed that the Brazilian restriction is temporary and that it applies to all nationalities alike—not discriminating against Japan in any way.

As a result of this explanation the Japanese government has abandoned its plan to send a vigorous protest to Rio De Janeiro, according to foreign office officials. Japan is investigating the ban measure, however, it was learned.

that of Gompers. The labor movement of Latin-America must establish connections with the revolutionary unionists of the United States and Canada, with those who are already fighting against the domination of Wall Street, with the left wing and jointly work out a program of common action.

The basis for such a common struggle, the necessary foundation for a real Pan-American Federation of Labor, will be found in such points as the following:

1.—Fight against capitalist exploitation and imperialism at home and abroad.

2.—Joint action on wage movements, to prevent strikebreaking, etc., with interchangeable union membership in all countries.

3.—Equal conditions for all workers in the Canal Zone.

4.—Withdrawal of American armed forces from Haiti, Santo Domingo, Nicaragua, etc.

5.—Abolition of Platt amendment forced into Cuban Constitution, which authorizes U. S. intervention in politics and finance.

6.—Demand the withdrawal of U. S. army and navy officers from Brazil and Peru; fight against and expose attempts to foment war between Brazil and Argentine, and between Chile and Peru.

7.—Oppose Gompers and his tool Morones, and others of their kind, and depose them from all positions of trust in the Pan-American Federation of Labor.

8.—United action against the white terror in Brazil, Guatemala, and Peru.

9.—Fight for the principles of the class struggle, and to overthrow the class collaborationist philosophy and leadership in the labor movement.

10.—Support the struggle initiated and led by the Red International of Labor Unions for world unity in the labor movement.

The Trade Union Educational League, acting in close accord with the Red International of Labor Unions, and speaking in the name of all revolutionary trade unionists in the United States and Canada, proposes joint action with the labor unions of Latin-America on the basis of the above program. Form your left-wing groups and centers in the Pan-American Federation of Labor, in the Confederacion Regional Obrera Mexicana and in every other labor union center which is dominated by the agents of Wall Street, in alliance with the labor unions that stand for the fight against American imperialism; launch a great campaign to arouse the working class of both Americas to throw off the shackles of their misleaders, and to engage in a general struggle, all along the line, against native and foreign capitalism and for the emancipation of the working class.

Down with American imperialism!
Down with capitalism!
Down with the Gompers-Morones traitors!
Long live the solidarity of the workers of Pan-America!
Long live the revolutionary working class!
Long live the rule of the proletariat!
Long live the united front of the world's workers!

AMOROUS RAJAH'S COGNOMEN NOW TOLD TO WORLD

Dusky Prince Caused Lots of Trouble

LONDON, Dec. 4.—The identity of the mysterious "Mr. A." who dramatically figured in the $750,000 Robinson blackmail plot has at last been revealed by the Indian office of the British government. Of course everybody in England knew his name by the time the veil of secrecy was lifted.

The Mysterious Rajah.

His name has been published in American and foreign papers but British journals were only able to hint at his identity for fear of being cited for contempt of court.

The full name and titles of the amourous gentleman are, Gen. His Highness Rajah Sir Hari Singh, K. C. I. E., K. C. V. O. The story of his entanglements in the wiles of Mrs. Robinson, are well known and no more interesting than thousands of such cases which pass thru the courts every year, except for the fact that the rajah was willing to pay a huge sum of money to keep the news from breaking into print.

Political Aspects of Case.

The interesting feature of the scandal is the part played by the Indian office of the British government in protecting the rajah's reputation for reasons of state. The rajah was already committed in a matrimonial entanglement with the daughter of a man of high standing in India, and it is reported that his life would not be worth a buffalo nickel if his legal wife's relatives get their fingers on him.

It Was Burning Question.

Another and more serious aspect of the affair so far as Great Britain was concerned was the fact that in the event of this particular rajah getting the can tied to him another potentate who has not yet felt the touch of British gold, might rise to the rajahship and make trouble for John Bull.

Therefore Inger Darling, who presided at the trial, ordered the papers not to make the rajah's name public, until other rajahs in India, became objects of suspicion and cabled London to offer Sir Hari Singh as a sacrifice to public curiosity, in order to save their own moral hides.

Jury Took Fifteen Minutes to Dispatch Skypilot to the Can

NOWATA, Okla., Dec. 4.—If ministers of religion were as numerous as prohibition agents, it would be a difficult matter to provide them with prison accommodation.

The way they are stepping out nowadays and showing a clean pair of heels to the fifth and seventh commandments of the church, must cause considerable envy among the underworld gangs of the large cities.

All this is an introduction to the story of Joseph E. Yeat's abduction of a fifteen year old choir girl. It took the jury only fifteen minutes to sentence the man of god to five years in prison.

strengthening the Workers (Communist Party or bringing masses of workers within the scope of our influence and propaganda.

The united front policy, however, is fertile in means of bringing the party in contact with the masses and the resolution specifies several fighting issues on which the workers will be ready to fight under our leadership.

The sub-committee which will have charge of surveying the possibilities for united front campaigns, intends to always keep to the fore the supreme importance of building up and strengthening the Workers Party, the only party that can lead the workers in their struggle for the overthrow of capitalism.

The resolution follows:

Permanent United Front Sub-Committee.

Whereas the United Front tactics are at present the main issues of mobilising the masses for struggle against capitalism and of building our party into a mass Communist Party, and

Wheres, the farmer-labor party has ceased to be a central issue in the labor movement and consequently can not be employed by our party advantageously for the mobilization of large masses for immediate struggle, and

Whereas, it becomes necessary and possible now to promote united front campaigns on the basis of concrete political and economic demands, therefore be it resolved,

1. That the political committee appoint a sub-committee of three, to be known as the united front sub-committee.

2. This commitee shall be charged with the special duty of surveying the political and economic situation for the purpose of developing local and national United Front campaigns, as conditions become ripe, upon the questions of combatting child-labor exploitation, wage reductions, unemployment, for nationalization of the mines and railroads, Pan-American action against American imperialism, against the Dawes' plan, amalgamation, anti-militarism, protection of the foreign-born, combat racial discrimination against Negroes and other colored peoples, the injunction, unity of the trade union movement, combat discrimination against women workers, defense of class-war prisoners, to organize the unorganized, and all other issues of burning interest to the workers and poor farmers.

3. This sub-committee, charged with outlining policies, slogans, strategy and organization for these United Front campaigns, shall keep constantly to the fore their main and central purpose, the building of the Workers Party into a mass Communist party.

BUSINESS GOES IN FOR YOUTH CONTAMINATION

Hold Meeting for United Front in 'Boys' Work'

Two hundred fat bellied business men who are "molding the minds of the youth of America" sat in the comfortable roof garden of the Sisson Hotel, along the south shore of Lake Michigan, and listened to William Butcher praise the business men "who are sustaining us in our boys' work."

Plea to Harness Youth Vision.

The conference, called by the International Rotary Clubs, was for the purpose of "co-ordinating all boys' work organizations into one council representing a united front." At each session of the conference the stellar place on the program was given to a captain of industry. William Butcher, in making the closing address, declared with astounding frankness that "the business men are in boys' work for the joy of service, and because it is good business."

Butcher chose as his text on boys' work, "Who serves her truly sometimes saves the state." He showed that the hangers-on of the capitalists, even if their job of doing the dirty work for big business is a hard one, keep down sentiments in our youth which are antagonistic to big business.

"Let us summon the business men with the hope that they will continue to counsel and sustain us," Butcher shouted. It was obvious that the Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs and other business organizations engineered the entire conference. The Y. M. C. A., Boys' Scouts, Y. M. H. A. Catholic and protestant religious boys' organizations represented served as the trimmings for the conference. They agreed with whatever the Rotarians suggested.

"Youth" Reasoning Must be Distorted.

"The destiny of the world is in the hands of those shaping the minds of the rising generation," Taylor Statten, of Toronto, told the conference. Statten told how in Toronto every boy in the city is "charted" by the Rotary club. It is known just what his political views are, his economic conditions, how much spare time he has, his salary, if employed, and the extent of his education. Statten put forward the recommendation that the conference take similar steps on a nation-wide scale.

William Edwin Hall, of New York City, made one of the principal addresses on "The Boy in Industry." Hall is president of the Land and Lake association, the Trojan Chemical company, Trojan Securities company, Trojan Powder company, director of the Portland and Northern railroad company, Independent Non-Freezing Powder company, Portland Lumber company, Kaul and Hall Lumber company, and twenty-three banks, railroads, public utility and ammunitions companies. He was a war profiteer, and is one of the principal financial supporters of the boys' work movement thruout the country, especially the military boys' organizations.

It was admitted by the conference leaders that the capitalists of industry made the boys' work conference possible financially.

BRITAIN FEARS U. S. WILL EASE UP ON FRANCE

Anglo-French Conflict Is Smouldering

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Dec. 4.—The treasury announced definitely today that Great Britain will expect revision of its debt funding terms if the United States grant any nation more favorable adjustment. The treasury intimated that Premier Baldwin had a tacit understanding with the debt funding commission to this effect.

England is Watching.

The foreign office denied that Austin Chamberlain will take up the debt question with President Herriot on his arrival in Paris tonight, but supports the treasury statement regarding debt funding revision.

Meantime, its stated England is merely watching as time has not come for action.

The chief point of interest for Great Britain in President Coolidge's message to congress was his statement regarding war debts. London newspapers commented quite freely today on the subject.

British Mind Disturbed.

The president's words are generally interpreted here to mean that France is going to get easier conditions than those accorded Great Britain in the matter of payment. Official comment is being withheld, but an official spokesman informed your correspondent that if the United States makes concessions to France the British state of mind will be considerably aroused, if not incensed.

Only Labor's United War Against Capitalism Can End Slavery of Children

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the Workers (Communist) Party calls on all toilers, in the cities and on the land, to join with it in a nation-wide war against the exploitation of children.

Every thinking worker and poor farmer must know that the evil of child labor cannot be solved until profiteering capitalism has given way to Communism.

But capitalism must be fought every inch of the way until it is completely destroyed. Its state legislatures must be compelled to ratify immediately the child labor amendment to the constitution. Capitalism's congress and state legislatures must be compelled to pass laws providing for full government maintenance of all school children of workers and poor farmers, without which, the Workers Party declares, a child labor law is useless. The fight is on.

* * * *

Take a peep into almost any school room in America today. You will hear the teacher telling the children about Cal Coolidge's saving on his Chicago trip, thru refusing the use of a special train. The teachers get that off the front pages of the yellow press and pass on the poison to the children under them.

The teacher will tell the children that Coolidge is setting an example in "economy" for the members of congress to follow.

But the teacher will not tell how the capitalist government of the United States economizes. Not in battleships, not in poison gas, not in any of the accoutrements of the imperialist wars it plans for the future. The place it economizes is in the governmental functions that would be of some little benefit to the mothers and the children of the working class. This is especially true of the working class mothers and children who have been forced into industry. The school teacher will not tell this to the children because she knows nothing about it. The subsidized sheets she reads do not tell her these facts:

First:—The niggardly appropriation of $8,676,346 for all the activities of the department of labor is to be cut $341,096.

Second:—Since immigrants coming to these shores are only workers, their wives and their children, the cost of taking care of them, providing for their comfort while being detained at Ellis Island, and elsewhere, has been cut $234,865.

Third:—Salaries in the children's bureau are to be cut and general expenses are to be slashed. The disappearing minimum of protection offered will thus be further crippled.

Fourth:—Promotion of the welfare and hygiene of maternity and infancy gets a stab in the back by having its appropriation sheared for the sum of $19,172.

Fifth:—Similar treatment is meted out to the Woman's Bureau, the bureau on labor statistics, and every other activity that might show the least tendency to ease the burden of labor.

* * * *

These are only some of the truths of Coolidge's "economy" program. It is the plan that has been carried out in the department of labor by the fake Secretary of Labor Davis, the Pittsburgh banker, right hand man of that other Pittsburgh millionaire, Andy Mellon, secretary of the treasury, who "saves" hundreds of millions for his tax dodging friends.

* * * *

"Economy Cal's" program shows that the greatest struggle must be waged in order to win even the slightest concession for America's children from America's capitalist government.

Coolidge's sponsors in New England, the textile millionaires, like Butler, are as energetically opposed to the liberation of children from industry, as are the cotton mill owners of the south. The child labor amendment was defeated in Massachusetts.

* * * *

Labor must fight for its own. It must throw all its battalions into a United Front in every state where this issue comes up for a decision. The Workers (Communist) Party calls for this United Front. It will work for it. It will inspire it with the working class struggle against capitalism. It will lead it forward to every possible victory that can be won under capitalism; forerunners of the great final triumph when labor sizes All Power and abolishes the barbarous exploitation of children, and the social system responsible for it, forever.

MORE OF FORBES' GRAFT SCHEMES BROT TO LIGHT

Elias H. Mortimer, continuing his testimony in the trial of Charles Forbes, former head of the U. S. veterans' bureau who is charged with conspiring to steal millions of dollars from the government, further exposed Forbes' grafting regime. Forbes, who resigned from the bureau after evidence that he had illegally let contracts for government hospitals was before both branches of congress, accepted the position of "consulting engineer" from J. W. Thompson, St. Louis contractor. Forbes received $100,000 for filling this "position," in return for which he gave large government contracts to Thompson and received an additional liberal rake-off.

Arthur Crump, of Philadelphia, testifying for the government against Forbes, told Judge Carpenter's court that Thompson dictated the terms of the contract for the Northampton, Mass., hospital, changed the time specifications twice, and then, just as the bid was being sent to the veterans' bureau declared, "the job is ours."

The award for the Northampton hospital was set at $3,500,000. Crump is former secretary of the Pontiac Construction company of Detroit which, the government charges, is also controlled by Thompson. It was shown that Thompson had made preparations for the construction of the hospital before the bids were decided.

One of the telegrams from Thompson to Forbes revealed that the former veterans' bureau head was connected with illegal liquor transactions as well as hospital contract frauds. The telegram read: "Be on the lookout for Scotch generals. General Haig among them." It was explained to the court that the "Scotch generals" were cases of Scotch whisky.

Forbes had a hard time dodging Mrs. Carolyn Votaw, sister of the late President Harding, according to Mortimer's testimony. Mrs. Votaw interested herself in Forbes' veterans bureau transactions as she "was then engaged in welfare work for the veterans." Forbes, however, kept off Mrs. Votaw's trail.

'PLEASE DON'T TEASE ALFONSO,' SAY YANKEE PARASITES IN SPAIN

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MADRID, Spain, Dec. 4.—The American society of Madrid, consisting of a bunch of businessmen who have discovered that they can make more profits with the few brains they have from Spanish workers than from those in the U. S. A., has issued a fervent defense of King Alfonso, requesting newspapers in foreign countries, especially in the United States, not to publish news articles reflecting on the military idolatorship or the venereal afflictions of His Majesty.

'WHERE IS MY BOY TONIGHT?' MAYBE AT OPEN FORUM!

'What Are Shop Nuclei' Sunday's Subject

Well, what about next Saturday night? Where were you last Sunday night? If you were not at the Open Forum when Wm. F. Dunne spoke on the events and issues of the Fifth Congress of the Communist International, you missed an intellectual square meal. This happened at the lodge room of the Asland Auditorium, Ashland boulevard and Van Buren street, the regular Open Forum hall of the Workers Party.

One of the issues which made the Fifth Congress of the Comintern a landmark in the development of the Communist parties of every nation on earth, was the resolution of the congress for the "Bolshevization" of the Communist parties.

What is the meaning of the "Bolshevization" of the parties? Of what does a real "Bolshevik" party consist, as distinguished from a party which is affiliated with the Communist International, yet which is not a "Bolshevik" party?

Next Sunday night, at 8 p. m. there is going to be a lecture on what the "Bolshevizing" of the Workers Party means. Martin Abern, secretary of the Chicago local of the Workers Party is going to explain how a new kind of political party—new to the United States—is being organized. It is something of an open secret that the Workers Party is being made over that it is in the transition period between a social-democratic form of organization and a really Communist form.

The sure-enough "Bolshevik" form of party organization makes itself distinguished by basing its organization a political party, in the shops and factories. How this is done, how it works and what it means will be told by Comrade Abern next Sunday night. Don't forget the place and time; the lodge room, Ashland Auditorium, Ashland and Van Buren streets, at 8 p. m.

Discussion of Our Party's Immediate Tasks

THE WORKERS PARTY IS THE ONLY CLASS PARTY

By WM. F. DUNNE.

The minority thesis states that the minority raises the slogan of "For a class farmer-labor party."

The Central Executive Committee thesis (majority) raises the slogan of "Against the LaFollette or progressive party, the Workers Party."

The use of the term "class farmer-labor party" by the minority in its thesis is concrete evidence of the utter confusion in its ideas, and of the general confusion that the farmer-labor movement created in the ranks of our party—a confusion that the Communist International noted and corrected.

What is a class party?

The only class party of the proletariat in the United States is the Workers (Communist) Party, because it alone complies with the requirements of a class party—it is composed of class-conscious workers, it recognises and leads the class struggle, and it has a class program with which it opposes the parties of all other social groups.

There cannot be two working class parties in existence at one and the same time—the Communist program for the only class program; all others, whether they make their appeal to workers and farmers or to the petty and big capitalists and their dupes and lackeys, are non-working class and therefore, opposed to the Communist program.

What is then, the real meaning of the term "class farmer-labor party" as used by the minority?

In essence it means that the Workers (Communist) Party shall take the lead in creating under this name a party that is not and cannot be a class party, but which shall enter into competition with the Workers Party for the leadership of the masses.

The manner in which this "class farmer-labor party" is to function is further proof that the minority has a non-Communist conception of the role of the Communist Party in the daily battles of the class struggle and also a false conception of the manner in which the Communist Party attains party of the social revolution, but that a mass movement necessary for victory shall be organized in a "class farmer-labor party."

A united front with organizations of workers and poor farmers for mass resistance to the tyrannies of capitalism and the capitalist state is one thing, but the creation of a reformist political party under the guise of a "class farmer-labor party" to do the work which a Communist Party must do if it is to become the party of the masses, is quite another. It is a conception of the united front tactic that is rejected by the Communist International and for which not one word of justification can be found in any of its theses or resolutions.

On the contrary, the Comintern expressly states that always and everywhere the Communist Parties must appear as the leader in the daily struggles of the working class and that "only in this way can a mass Communist Party be built."

It is one thing to take part in a mass movement of workers and poor farmers—of trade unions, of co-operatives, of working class organs of struggle—but it is quite another thing to attempt to call out of these organizations the class conscious workers and organize them in a "class farmer-labor party" which takes over the task of leading and inspiring the working class in its everyday battles.

Such a theory could spring only from discouragement and disappointment with the Workers (Communist) Party of America, and is an obvious admission that the minority believes that there can be other class parties in the United States than the Workers (Communist) Party—believes that there must be and believes it so strongly that they wish to be the leaders in a party whose sole function will be to rally the working class on the basis of daily demands and struggles growing out of these demands—a party that separates the Workers (Communist) Party from the masses and makes its task of becoming a mass party more difficult—a "class farmer-labor party" that must inevitably become a rival to the Workers (Communist) Party.

This is a danger that cannot be minimized by grandiloquent phrases about Communist leadership of the "class farmer-labor party"—a danger which the Comintern foresaw when it ordered the Workers Party to engage in the election campaign under its own name and with its own candidates and program.

The Workers Party of America is the only class labor party. Our task is to bring into its ranks, thru our activity in the daily struggles of the workers and, where necessary, thru united front struggles on specific demands, every class conscious worker in the United States—not to organize them outside of our own party.

CRITICISING OUR CRITICS.

By MAX BEDACHT.

Sophistries may help in scoring a point but they do not aid much in finding the truth. The lawyer in court is out for "points." His desire to score points grows greater as his confidence in his client's innocence decreases. Judging by this well-established maxim, Bittelman and his associates have a bad case to defend. But for the party, there is too much at stake. It cannot permit anyone to gain a reputation as a successful lawyer for an obviously bad case. The party must judge the facts.

There are facts of a two-fold nature, connected with the question under discussion: The ones pertaining directly to the point at issue—and the ones pertaining to the groups lined up on either of the two sides of the issue.

First as to the points at issue.

The minority maintains that if we abandon the slogan "for a farmer-labor party" we abandon the most effective possibility for a political united front.

Permit me, Comrade Bittelman, to call your attention to the fact that it was the present minority that initiated and organized this united front action for the protection of the foreign-born. Permit me further to show that the necessity of the workers to defend themselves against this particular attack was used by our party to attain the greater purpose; to awaken political consciousness among these workers; to show them that this defense of one immediate interest is only incidental to the necessity of a greater struggle—the class struggle as a whole. Therefore, again with your permission, Comrade Bittelman, we pointed out that the temporary battle formation of the workers for the protection of the foreign-born is not sufficient but that there must be a more fundamental political battle formation of the workers—a political party of the workers. But here Comrade Bittelman interrupts again: "Ha! There you are, liquidation. Why don't you want to suggest this permanent battle formation directly in the form of the Workers (Communist) Party?"

I might as well let Comrade Bittelman and his friends into a little secret of the minority. The minority has studied the literature of the Communist International. The United Front and with the Communist International it is of the opinion that the Communist Party is the best organization for the mobilization of convinced revolutionists, Communists, who support the direct leadership of the Comintern; while the united front on the other hand is one form or another of a battle line, which unites Communists and non-Communist workers in common action. That is our secret. And there is still more to it. These united front forms and slogans are not proposed by the Communist International because it has no confidence in the direct leadership of the Communists in the struggle. Oh, no! But its confidence in the ability of the Communist Parties to lead does not blind it to the fact that the masses yet lack that confidence. The united front maneuver is a method to mobilize such confidence. While the tactics of the majority either presuppose this confidence or abandon action for mere propaganda. The first is an un-Marxian illusion; the second a non-Communist tendency.

"But," says Comrade Bittelman, "why should we not confine ourselves to this kind of political action such as the 'protection of foreign-born, etc.?"

Yes, why?

May I whisper another secret of the minority into your ear, Comrade Bittelman? Here it is: The minority holds with the Communist International that all our activities in the class struggle are not an end in themselves, but are means to achieve certain ends. One of these ends is: to be instrumental in helping the masses to assimilate easier the experiences of the class struggle. It is these experiences that will revolutionize the struggle of the proletarian masses. The final experience out of all these partial struggles there and there teaches the masses the necessity of class action on the political battlefield.

To get this idea driven home to the workers in San Francisco whom we succeeded to unite in temporary common action to fight an injunction issued against striking waterfront workers; and to the workers in the New England states whom we united in temporary common action against the wage cuts of the textile mills; and to the workers in West Virginia whom we united in temporary common action against the open shop offensive of the mine operators, we suggest to the workers in San Francisco, to those in the New England states, and to those in West Virginia that outside of their immediate local problems there is still the great general problem which must unite the workers on the Pacific with those on the Atlantic and those on the Gulf of Mexico; the problem of united independent political action of all the workers everywhere. The minority maintains that the slogan of the farmer-labor party supplies the element which tends to unify the immediate local actions on a national scale and suggests preparation for future battles.

All the sophistries of Comrade Bittelman will not absolve him from the duty of answering the question: What is your proposal for the solution of this problem?

The minority maintains that the need of independent political action of the American proletariat can be best established in the minds of these masses if we Communists wind up all propaganda and all action in the field of political united fronts with a modern version of Cato's famous slogan: "As an end Carthage must be destroyed."—As for the rest, you need a political party of labor which will unite your West Virginian's struggle with that of the San Franciscoans and which will turn the fight against open shop mine operators into a struggle against the open shop government of the United States.

If Bittelman says that the minority claims that the American workers can exercise independent political action only thru a labor party, he merely constructs a straw man. And when he knocks it down, he knocks down if not his own image, at least his own creation.

Now, a few words about facts pertaining to the group lined up against the labor party slogan:

"Look here," says Bittelman, "we have a program for the unemployed."

So we have to be sure. But Comrade Bittelman, there is a history attached to that program, a history that may throw some light on the real issue in the present controversy.

It was the minority that pressed again and again the need of action on the problem of unemployment. To silence the persistent hammering of the minority, the majority finally adopted a program on unemployment. And that settled—not the unemployment, but the majority action on the question. Inquiries made by the Communist International as well as demands made by the minority were always answered with attempts to prove that there is no problem of unemployment at present.

The whole issue therefore, is not so much the question of a labor party but the question of action as against mere propaganda.

The minority desires to develop action out of all its slogans. The majority on the other hand, solves its problems with programs. We have programs on a thousand and one things from unemployment to the organization of the unorganized—programs and nothing but programs.

But it is action that a Communist Party is organized for. And it is action alone thru which the organization of the revolutionists, the Communists and also the revolution itself can be accomplished.

GOODBYE 'CLASS' FARMER-LABOR PARTY

By JOSEPH MANLEY

At this moment when some in our party are telling us that the slogan of a "class farmer-labor party" will, by some magic process, give us a united front, will lead us out of isolation and finally make of us a "mass Communist party," I must admit that I am filled with a sense of sour and sickly humor. I can well testify to the alleged political charm of the slogan: "class farmer-labor party," as I have had the not-to-be-envied reputation of being the executive secretary of one such political faction, and while serving in that capacity have made more speeches to masses of non-communists, especially appealing to them to organize a "class farmer-labor party," that anyone else in our party. Under these circumstances, therefore, it may be well for me to restate the conclusion we have from our experience and from the advice of the Comintern: That a party such as we were trying to organize is not and cannot be either—class, farmer, or labor. It is a typical American mulligan of several classes. The decision of the Communist International on the "third party alliance," fortunately, brought some of us up with a round turn. It saved our party from a serious mistake.

F. L. P. a LaFollette Movement.

It is a basic error to imagine that the farmer-labor movement was or is now fundamentally separate and apart from or opposed to the petty bourgeois "third party" movement headed by LaFollette. The farmer-labor movement as such developed from the labor party launched in Chicago by the Chicago Federation of Labor in 1919. This party branched out in the state taking in some small sections of industrial workers, and in early 1920 it established connections with some of the northwest farmers of the non-partisan league. Following which it changed its name to the farmer-labor party. It will be remembered that even then at its convention held in Chicago in 1920, it negotiated with LaFollette to become its presidential candidate. LaFollette was not ready then to break with his capitalist republican allies and the negotiations fell thru. Even in these early stages the movement showed its petty bourgeois, LaFollette, character.

My conclusion, gained from many trips to the northwest and southwest, the former the home of the farmer-labor movement, is that the so-called farmer-labor movement is an agrarian petty bourgeois descendent of the people's party of the 90's and the late non-partisan league of latter days. I found in the many farmer-labor conventions I attended thruout the western states, that the ideology of the delegates was essentially and typically petty bourgeois. They invariably used the term "third party" in conscious preference to a farmer-labor party. Not once in a single one of those conventions did I hear the phrase—class struggle. Always, everywhere the workers and farmers referred to themselves and their movement as "the people." By devious routes I had to secure the floor to address the conventions and after making a Communist criticism of the capitalist system, had to wind up by advising them to organize a "class farmer-labor party." While many showed interest in this form of organization, that interest was as nothing compared to the enthusiasm—almost bordering on hysteria—for the man, LaFollette, as their hoped-for presidential candidate.

My mission was to popularize Communism, help them to organize a farmer-labor party, and contest the influence of LaFollette. Never could I affect his influence in the minds of the petty bourgeois, agrarian workers and farmers whose belief in LaFollette was based upon his legislative petty bourgeois program. The very no conception of the time and energy not alone of the entire party but especially of some of its most valuable workers, whose efforts were devoted to the building of the farmer-labor party rather than of the Workers Party.

It will of course be argued by the minority that the money was raised on the strength of the existent farmer-labor mass movement and that the effort spent in building up the farmer-labor party increased the prestige of the Workers Party with the masses of workers and poor farmers in the farmer-labor movement. But this is sophistry. The same money could have been raised more easily for a direct campaign for the Workers Party, and the results would have been as good if not better.

A careful examination of not only the financial affairs of the federated farmer-labor party, but also of its affiliations will show that: Not alone was the overwhelming bulk of the finances furnished by the Workers Party but the membership was also provided.

The F. P. F.-L. P. membership was secured thru the affiliation of organizations, never thru individual members. The approximate number affiliated thru organizations was one hundred thousand. Of this hundred thousand, most were on paper only. The sole organization which paid the nominal per capita tax was the Workers Party. A bare 12½ per cent paid per capita tax in a desultory fashion.

The organizations affiliated other than the Workers Party were mostly fraternal in character and were hardly without exception under the influence of the Workers Party. They could just as readily have been affiliated to any united front committee set up by the Workers Party.

An Impossible Slogan.

As already pointed out, the farmer-labor movement was ideologically a LaFollette movement. All the northwest farmer-labor parties, the accepting affiliations from organizations, are essentially parties based upon individual membership. And it must be remembered that this membership was overwhelmingly LaFollette. Consequently to promote such a movement at present when no organizations of labor and scarcely any organizations of poor farmers are in favor of it, would mean the setting up of non-Communist political organizations based upon individual membership. Such organizations would inevitably tend to take the place of the Workers Party. To promote the slogan of a "class farmer-labor party" at this time would entail from us enormous expense, time, and energy and result in a direct liquidating effect upon the Workers Party.

F.-L. P. Liquidated by LaFollette.

The break-up of the farmer-labor movement as an independent movement began with the attack by LaFollette upon the St. Paul convention. Its final liquidation by LaFollette occurred at the C. P. P. A. convention on July 4, 1924, at Cleveland, Ohio.

Comrade Foster, Ruthenberg, and myself were present at the C. P. P. A. convention as spectators. Foster and I immediately agreed that the liquidation of the farmer-labor movement had taken place and we both sensed the danger to the Workers Party. Comrade Ruthenberg admitted the liquidation, but refused to draw the proper conclusion, which was suggested by Foster, namely, that we withdraw our support from the national farmer-labor party and put up our own candidates and have our party run under its own flag. Returning to Chicago, Foster presented the case to the C. E. C. for the Workers Party running its own campaign, and was supported by me. Ruthenberg made a lengthy argument for continuing with the farmer-labor party, but he eventually abandoned this position and voted for the present motion made by Foster that the Workers Party conduct its own election campaign. Lovestone was then most militant in his opposition to the Workers Party program. He never gave up that opposition and seems to have converted others of the present majority to his views. I was at that time a member of Lovestone's minority but split definitely and decisively on the issue of the Workers Party running an independent campaign. I was to be the new secretary of the national farmer-labor party, having been elected by the C. E. C., but I felt no ambition to be secretary of a fake organization living off the Workers Party. The farmer-labor movement that we had thought was the basis of a class party independent of LaFollette was at the Cleveland, July 4, meeting liquidated by and proven to be homogenous with the LaFollette movement.

Could the F. F.-L. P. Have Been Built?

It is argued by the minority that this liquidation was inevitable because of "neglect to organize the federated farmer-labor party." Having been the secretary of that party and having had to go weeks without wages in spite of the fact that it cost the Workers Party approximately $7,000.00 to operate it for a year, I would like to inquire of the minority where all the money was to come from with which to "organize the federated." Perhaps some few more valuable affiliations, such as I have cited with, could have been secured if the Workers Party had bled itself further and put up additional sums. But what of it? We would only have organized them for LaFollette anyway. Nothing could have saved the farmer-labor movement from liquidation into the LaFollette movement. The fact is, some of those who are shouting loudest now about "not having organized the federated," blew right out of Chicago back to New York the same day after adjournment of the July 3 convention, when the national committee of the federated met and elected me secretary. For three weeks I was left to my own resources. Nothing was done to take advantage of this post-convention period, the most valuable time, as every organizer knows. At the end of the three weeks Foster and myself went to New York to a C. E. C. meeting and there he moved the three cardinal motions on tactics which were adopted unanimously and which served as a basis from which the Federated was operated until the dissolution. Later, of course, the factional fight developed between Foster and Pepper. I joined the Pepper caucus and consistently followed the leadership of Pepper until the C. P. P. A. at Cleveland on July 4, 1924.

Build the Only Class Party.

With regard to the present situation. The farmer-labor movement that was, is no more. Last year it existed in the northwest as the descendent of the long line of American agrarian political movements. In the east it didn't exist at all as an organized movement. Whatever excuse we may have had for participating in it then, we have none whatsoever now. The minority thesis mentions the farmer-labor party of North Dakota as having preserved its independence from LaFollette. This is not the case. Our representative, the Workers Party organizer, Comrade Knutson, and myself organized the farmer-labor party of North Dakota. Had not Comrade Knutson kept it going by pumping oxygen gas into it, it would have died since ceased to exist even in the fond imagination of the minority. Today I challenge the minority to prove it to be any more than a paper organization.

The fact remains that nothing of the flimsy farmer-labor party structure has withstood the assaults of American capitalism and its most useful agent, LaFollette. We must recognize this fact and devote our whole attention to building up the Workers (Communist) Party. It is the "class party," which masses of workers are becoming dimly conscious of. All our money and energy spent on a dead farmer-labor slogan for a dead farmer-labor party, will never arouse the masses like our own party's participation directly in the everyday struggles of the worker and poor farmers. Goodbye farmer-labor party! Long Live the Workers (Communist) Party.

FIGHT FOR POLITICAL LEADERSHIP OF EXPLOITED MASSES!

By NAT KAPLAN.

In the last election campaign the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party promised the workers and exploited farmers of this country, in the party platform, that: "The Workers Party declares its purpose to continue the struggle to mobilize the workers and exploited farmers for independent political action thru a mass farmer-labor party."

At the time a political leader of the present majority of the central executive committee, Comrade Bittelman raises the question (Parties and Issues in the Election Campaign): "Shall the workers and poor farmers have a political party of their own, a farmer-labor party?" and then answers the question himself: "Yes, by all means. Without a party of their own, politics for the workers becomes a farce. It means helping other classes—big, medium and small capital—to fasten ever tighter their grip over the working masses. If the small capitalists and rich farmers want their own party, let them go to it. But the workers and poor farmers must have no business in such combination. They have their own interests to defend, which are antagonistic to the interests of all capitalist groups, big, medium and little. Therefore, let us have a farmer-labor party."

The elections referred to above took place on Nov. 4, 1924. Three days later, Nov. 7, 1924, the same central executive committee declares (DAILY WORKER—The Results of the Elections): "Our chief task in the immediate future is not the building of such a farmer-labor party but the strengthening and developing of the Workers Party itself as the practical leader of the masses and as the only party that represents the working class interests and fights for them."

The same Comrade Bittelman, who stated above: "Therefore, let us have a farmer-labor party," now declares: "We still have no farmer-labor policy because there is no farmer-labor movement. We shall also have no labor party slogan because such a slogan will have no dynamic appeal and will offer no basis of struggle to the masses of workers and poor farmers."

In reciting these facts we do not in the least question the correctness of the formula: "That those who cannot change their minds, have no minds to change." What we are particularly interested in at the moment is to determine whether the underlying causes which precipitated the issuance of the slogan: "For a mass farmer-labor party," have been so far liberated during the three days that elapsed between Nov. 4 and 7, as to warrant "the change of mind" on the part of the majority of the central executive committee.

Basis for Farmer-Labor United Front Remains.

The outstanding facts which influenced our party to adopt the slogan of "A Class Farmer-Labor Party" were as follows: (1) The necessity of applying the united front tactics of the Communist International to the existing conditions in the United States. (2) The fact that the workers in this country were still supporting the bourgeoisie political parties and therefore, the necessity for independent political action. (3) The fact that the world war has hastened the decline of capitalism, resulting in the intensification of the class struggle in the United States, thus developing a "revolutionary" movement. Capitalism in the United States has not been revived, but on the contrary is suffering an acute agrarian and industrial crisis. This together with the clean sweep of reaction in the elections means the intensification of the class struggle in this country.

Contradictions in the Change of Policy.

The very factors which our party formerly considered the incentive for the farmer-labor united front, is now utilized by the majority of the central executive committee, to prove the correctness of their theses that the farmer-labor united front must be discarded. Let us consider at least one of these facts. Our party formerly said that a basic factor which necessitated the application of the farmer-labor united front was that the workers and exploited farmers of this country were still supporting the bourgeois political parties. The present majority of the central executive committee now deduct just the opposite from this fact and say that because the LaFollette movement has been able to absorb the former-labor party movement "by the going over of the C. P. P. A. and the Gompers machine into the LaFollette camp carrying with them the great mass of organized workers" the farmer-labor united front has been defeated—and

PLATOONING OF SCHOOLS BEFORE BOARD NEXT WEEK

M'Andrew Wants Junior Highs Put Over First

Platooning the Chicago schools is a question that the board should permit to lay in abeyance for a time was the opinion expressed by Superintendent McAndrew when this matter came before a board committee meeting. However, he did not suggest its suspension. In fact, he regarded the platoon system of sufficient importance to recommend the appointing of a commission of school principals to study the platoon system. And then he submitted a list of names as a suggestion who should serve on this commission. This will be up for consideration at the next regular board meeting a week from today.

It is reported from sources close to the superintendent that he is leaving the matter of platooning the schools up to the board. McAndrew is concentrating on his junior high school scheme, the job he has brought to Chicago by big business to put over, and for which he has already secured the approval of the installation of 14 from the board.

the Communists must accept this defeat by dropping the farmer-labor united front campaign. Is this not in practice a capitulation to the political leadership of the petty bourgeoisie over the exploited masses?

The majority of the central executive committee answers this question in the negative. Their reasoning runs along the following lines: Of course we are not considering a capitulation to the petty bourgeoisie. All we say is that we will not enter into a definite struggle with them for the salvaging of the farmer-labor movement, because such a struggle "would not be profitable or successful." This is similar to the man who said "No!" and acted Yes!" And anyway, further reasons the majority of the central executive committee. Is not the "Exposure of the bourgeoisie nature of LaFollette the central problem of our agitation and propaganda." Since when has the Communist Party merely become an instrument of agitation and propaganda? Are we going to use bean shooters against the long range guns of the petty bourgeoisie or are we going to retain our integrity as a real Bolshevik party with the ability to so maneuver that we will be able to break away large sections of the workers and exploited farmers from the political leadership of the petty bourgeoisie "progressive" movement and the political parties of the big bourgeoisie, under the slogan: "For a Class Farmer-Labor Party," utilizing the sentiment which we have created to make the Workers Party a real mass Communist Party.

The Plot to Liquidate the Workers Party.

It seems that in the party discussion "polemical detectivism" reigns supreme. It was thus that the terrible plot to liquidate the Workers Party was unearthed. The majority of the central executive committee of the party also raises this cry fn their theses. They say: "Therefore, every attempt by the Workers Party to set up middle of the way political bodies to take the place of the Workers Party in the eyes of the masses is in direct violation of Communist principles and if carried to any length will spell the liquidation of the Workers (Communist) Party."

Is it possible that the majority of the central executive committee is implying by the above quotation that they were formerly, in our farmer-labor Party maneuvers, endeavoring to "set up middle of the way political bodies to take the place of the Workers Party" and that now, in order to avoid future recurrences of such decided deviations from the Communist position, they wish to discard the farmer-labor united front and clock the party in the garb of "purist sectarianism"? And further, is this in any way connected with the illusion of the Foster-Cannon group that "thru some magic the whole or a great part of the organized American labor movement would be organized into a broad mass farmer-labor party in which the Workers Party would assume the role of a relatively weak left wing and not the position of leadership and control"? Both of these suppositions are very likely.

Let us assume for a moment that the line of development tended towards the actual organization of a class farmer-labor party which would establish itself firmly and function over a period of time. Would such a class farmer-labor party be dual to the Workers Party? Not at all! And why? Simply because it would not be a "monolithic party hewn of one piece," with an individual, disciplined membership. It would be an organization of affiliated working class and exploited farmers' organizations, with each organization retaining its separate identity and right of criticism based on the principle of the united front conference. It would become the revolutionary duty of the Workers Party to strive for leadership in such an alliance and endeavor to utilize it for its own development into a mass Communist Party. It is just the failure to understand some of these elementary matters that characterizes the theses of the majority of the central executive committee.

"INSURGENTS" IN SENATE ARE MEEK AS COOING DOVES

They Get Theirs, So Cal May Have His Way

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—The senate safely passed its first insurgent crisis today when it formally approved without debate the republican committee awards agreed upon by a republican conference from which the LaFollette bloc had been barred.

The republican assignments, headed by the promotion of Senator William E. Borah, of Idaho, to chairmanship of the senate foreign relations committee were adopted without a record vote. The insurgents—represented on the floor by Senators Ladd of North Dakota, and Brookhart of Iowa—joined in the desultory chorus of ayes.

The administration's slate, while ignoring the insurgents in all promotions, did not affect their present committee assignments. As a result the insurgents made no effort to block confirmation of the appointments and passed up an opportunity for a renewal of their last session fight against Senator Cummins, republican, of Iowa, who was named chairman of the judiciary committee.

BRITISH RULE IN AUSTRALIA COMMITS UNSPEAKABLE CRIMES AGAINST NATIVE POPULATION

By W. FRANCIS AHERN.
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

SYDNEY, Australia, Nov. 4.—J. T. Beckett, former chief inspector of natives in the northern territory of Australia, makes public a revolting story of cruelty inflicted on the natives owing to the absence of protective laws.

Producing a photograph of a black named Mickey, Beckett said this native had stolen some tobacco. He was arrested, chains were fastened around him, and he was forced to walk and run alongside a fast-pacing horse ridden by a policeman, who had a neck-line on his black prisoner. Mickey traveled this way a distance of 450 miles.

Beth Feet Split.

When he arrived, both feet of the poor wretch were cracked wide open clear across both soles, and filled with sharp splinters, grass seed and dirt. His neck was raw and bleeding from the chains fastened around him. When the prisoner was placed in jail, the jailer Strath took pity on him and dressed his wounds. Beckett added that Mickey was a good kindhearted black who did not consider he was doing wrong in taking the tobacco.

Saved Policeman.

Another black named Neighbor was similarly chained and was on his way to jail when the policeman escorting him was washed off his horse in the Wilton river. Despite the fact that he was a prisoner and could have escaped, he plunged into the river, unchained as he was, and rescued the policeman. To do the policeman credit, he showed his gratitude to the prisoner by stripping him of his chains, putting him on a horse and allowing him to ride to the jail. The black was released, and given a medal for his bravery, but whites who resented honoring a black man took it from him.

Beckett produces a long list of black girls, all at Port Darwin, who while in the compound for protection (?) were raped and became mothers. He said that in every case, well known white men were responsible for this outrage. He urged a searching inquiry into this and other atrocities which he says are everyday happenings in the Northern Territory of Australia.

Cold Wave and Storms Hit West.

The west yesterday was in the grip of the first severe sleet storm of the season. Entire communities in the Dakotas, Nebraska, western Kansas and Colorado on which the storm swept down from the mountains were cut off from outside communication and fragmentary reports trickling into Chicago told of severely low temperatures and cities encrusted in the ice of frozen rain.

BIG TIME SURE AT CONCERT AND BALL SATURDAY

Brooklyn Comrades Will Celebrate New Quarters

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Dec. 4.—The Communist affair of the season is here. It is the grand international concert and ball arranged by the Workers' Party of Williamsburg for Saturday evening, Dec. 6. We are giving this momentous event to celebrate the opening of our new headquarters at 319 Grand street near Havermeyer street.

There will be artists of every description to entertain you. You have surely heard of that excellent violinist, Mr. Portnoy. He'll be there! To cater to your desires for singing, Miss Steger, the well known soprano, will render some of her greatest vocal successes. "Anarchist," a play of present day Soviet Russia will be offered. The best critics have praised this play to the skies.

Don't think you won't have any time to dance. The best orchestra obtainable will play the best dances. The only advice we can give you is to keep your feet in good condition for this affair. Don't forget that Mr. Botwinik, well known dancer, will execute some of his snappy steps for your aproval.

To be admitted to an affair of this kind under other circumstances would cost you $2.50, not including hat check. However, we don't want your money, we want you. Therefore a nominal admission fee of 35 cents will be charged. Don't forget time and place. Bring your friends.

Comrade! Reserve this date! T. U. E. L. New Year's Eve ball. The Trade Union Educational League, Local Chicago, will hold its annual ball and festival on New Year's Eve, Wednesday, Dec. 31, 1924, 8 p. m. at the west end Woman's Club, 37 So. Ashland Blvd. Admission will be fifty cents.

To the Readers of the Children's Column:

Dear Comrades: I am a member of the Young Workers League and have been trying to organize a nucleus in the high school that I attend. My efforts so far have not proven successful so I hit upon an idea to start the ball rolling. I succeeded in organizing a debate on the subject of recognition of Soviet Russia. It was held during Education Week, the best possible time for such a debate. Two teachers acted as judges and the decision was in favor of our side unanimously!

This should teach us that any comrade can do good work no matter how unsatisfactory the circumstances. There is no excuse whatsoever for not getting some propaganda across.

I hope that some of the league members and the Junior members will be inspired by our success in a capitalist controlled school and organize a debating team in their school.

I will be glad to furnish material for this debate to any comrade who will write for it. My address is 3551 W. Roosevelt Rd., Chicago.

Go to work, comrades!

FREIHEIT SINGING SOCIETY CONCERT SUNDAY TO RESOUND WITH REVOLUTIONARY SONGS

A concert at which will be sung all revolutionary songs and of which the audience will be an active part will be held on Sunday evening in Chicago. This is the concert given by the Freiheit Singing Society and Mandolin Orchestra to celebrate their tenth anniversary. It will be held at the 8th Street Theatre at Wabash and 8th street and every comrade is invited to attend.

They Sing for the Revolution.

The Freiheit Singing Society is a revolutionary workers' organization. For ten years, ever since its inauguration, it has taken its place with the revolutionary workers. Themselves working men and women who work in the shops every day, they spend their evenings in rehearsals and in performing at Communist functions.

Their leader, Jacob Schaffer, was a carpenter. He's now a well established musician and the composer of music to many revolutionary songs. It was he who composed the music to "The Famous Twelve" which was written by Alexander Block in Russia two years ago.

This a Double Celebration.

The singing society has taken its name after the Communist Jewish daily at the time of the split away by the revolutionary elements from the socialist party when it no longer represented the working class. With them is associated the Freiheit Mandolin Society which has come over from the socialist party just a year ago. This makes the anniversary a double celebration.

Besides the enjoyable entertainment of a program composed of selected music and revolutionary songs which in themselves will lure comrades and sympathizers to this concert they will be there in full force to show their appreciation of this group of 150 talented comrades who have given their ardent support to every fuction that was held by the party at any time during the year at which they have been asked to perform.

Detroit Vice King Is New Suspect in Gaenssler Murder

A sensational denunciation of Alex Gordon, alleged vice-king of Detroit, as the real murderer of Mrs. Bessie Gaenssler, the collapse of Mrs. William Lydon, mother of one of the defendants, and a charge that the youthful quartet had been questioned by police in violation of their constitutional rights were among the developments that tumbled over each other in the hectic closing hour of the case of Anna and Tony Valanis, Lucille Marshall and William Lydon, on trial for their lives for the Gaenssler murder in criminal court this afternoon.

CONDUCTED BY THE YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE

Y. W. L. DRIVE AT SEARS-ROEBUCK CONTINUES WITH RENEWED VIGOR

Branch No. 4 of the Chicago Young Workers League is carrying on its activities at the Sears-Roebuck mail order house with good results. This week, more than a hundred copies of the last issue of The Young Worker were sold outside the gates of the plant.

While this number is small compared to the amount sold at the launching of the drive, yet it has a very encouraging significance, for all those who bought the paper this time did so because they were genuinely interested in the campaign.

The comrades report that the young workers who bought the paper were inclined to stop and talk but that the fear of detection by the numerous stoolpigeons hanging around cut the conversations short. One comrade approached each purchaser of his paper with the question: "What do you think of our campaign?" Some of the young workers were afraid to reply but those that answered expressed their approval. In every such case the comrade endeavored to explain the purpose of the campaign and to obtain the address of the young worker.

One girl while buying her copy confided: "You know why I am buying this paper? Because my boss told us not to." This is the rebel spirit that makes good Y. W. L. members. Another young worker purchased two copies and volunteered encouragement with: "Keep up the good work its a damn shame more of them don't understand what you're trying to do." One young worker expressed his disappointment at having missed the first issue. He promised to come to one of the league meetings.

The members of Branch Four are confident that if they continue their efforts long enough they will draw every militant and class conscious worker in Sears-Roebuck into the league. Already a shop nucleus has been established and is functioning. A biweekly shop bulletin, The Sears-Roebuck News—For Young Workers, has been printed and will be distributed. This bulletin deals with special grievances of the young workers at Sears-Roebuck such as the high price of food in the company lunchroom, the overtime work without pay, the low wages, etc. The bulletin urges the young workers to send contributions and complaints to their fighting organ and to join the Young Workers League in its fight for higher pay and better working conditions.

BIG EXPLOITERS IGNORE SHERMAN ANTI-TRUST LAW

Atty.-General's Report Hits at Workers

(Special to the Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 4.—Many large corporations are violating the Sherman anti-trust laws, according to the report of Attorney-General Harlan F. Stone, issued today.

Those large trusts which were found guilty were released with the payment of small fines. Many of the legal proceedings have been in the courts for years.

Harvester Trust in Courts.

The International Harvester Trust company has managed to drag charges against it thru the courts for many years. The case, which was tried in St. Paul, is still awaiting decision, altho it is common knowledge that the International Harvester company has held a monopoly of agricultural machinery manufacturing for over twenty years.

Mentions Shop Strike Injunction.

Speaking of the injunction granted against the striking railway shopmen, Stone says, "This case arose out of the railroad strike of 1922. A temporary restraining order was issued Sept. 1, 1922. The defendants moved to dismiss. Briefs for each side were submitted, and the court on January 6, 1923, in a written opinion denied the motion to dismiss. On July 12, 1923 the court rendered its opinion sustaining the contentions of the government. On the same day a final decree was entered, making permanent

BRITISH SECURE MAJORITY IN INDIA BY PUTTING NATIONALIST MAJORITY BEHIND PRISON BARS

By CHAMAN LALL.
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

DELHI, India, Dec. 4.—The British rulers in India are determined to work the democracy game for what it is worth. When the Indians took self-government seriously and exercised the small rights granted by the imperial government the British found themselves in a minority not only in the national legislative assembly but also in a number of the provincial councils. They are setting out to convert the minority into a majority.

In the Bengal council the British proposals were cently defeated by two votes. So three Indian council members who had voted in opposition were put in prison without a warrant and without charges against them. They can be held indefinitely, without trial under rules approved by Ramsay MacDonald's recent labor government. In the forthcoming Bengal council the British will therefore have a majority of one, so long as they keep the three Indians locked up.

MacDonald's Acts Deplored.

MacDonald's defeat in the British elections of Oct. 29 surprised many Indians but greater disappointment arose from the reactionary measures MacDonald's government permitted in India. The Bengal government now has the power under MacDonald's permission to cripple any movement it desires while any Bengal policeman under British authority may work out a private grudge against a private citizen under the decree.

The excuse for the arrest-without-warrant decree is an anarchist conspiracy. But the persons really aimed at are evident from the 75 or more already arrested. Almost all of them are members of the Swaraj or independence party which has been living a legal existence under British Indian law. Two of the right hand men of C. R. Das, party leader, are in jail, three members of the Bengal council and many other party men. Protest meetings are numerous. Bengal declared a one day general strike. The newspapers are deeply stirred.

Crimes of Violence Rare.

Violent crimes have been very scarce in Bengal. Hundreds of lives have been lost in community riots between Hindus and Mohammedans (not improbably fanned by the British) but the new regulations of MacDonald do not cover these cases. During numerous searches of houses in Bengal no bombs have been discovered. Some bolshevik literature was found, including a copy of the new constitution of Russia.

The Socialist (a Communist paper—Ed.) appears every week with the title line followed by "Editor: S. A. Dange in prison."

LABOR PARTY OF AUSTRALIA WARS ON COMMUNISTS

"Labor" Premier Leads Fight Against Reds

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MELBOURNE, Australia.—The Australian labor party has definitely broken with the Communist Party. This was the decision reached at the All-Australian Labor conference, held at Melbourne, Oct. 28 and attended by representatives of all branches of the Australian labor party in the Australian states.

E. G. Theodore, labor premier of Queensland, launched the attack against the Communists. While many of them might be sincere in their actions, some of them were in the movement for what they could make out of it, he asserted. Other speakers supported Theodore.

Communist party speakers were not allowed to address the conference. The following motion was carried by a large majority: "That conference declares itself against the affiliation of Communists with the Australian labor party, and refuses the admission of Communists to the labor movement, also that this shall be a direction to the labor movement in the various Australian states."

Preparations are being made for convening another All-Australian Trade Union congress to consider among other things bringing about greater solidarity among working class parties in Australia. The council of action, composed of the militants of the rank and file, is arranging for calling the congress to fight against the Theodore gang of reformist politicians who are leading the Australian workers into the hands of the bosses.

COMMUNIST CAMPAIGN IN GERMANY

strength in parliament, since revolutions are, as is well-known, not made in parliament.

All great revolutions of modern times have been made by groups which were either not represented in parliament or were in the minority. Think of the Bolshevikl, the Jacobins, Cromwell's party. Even in Germany, legal parliamentary elections in Oct. or Nov. 1918 would never have produced a majority for the republic, for the overthrow of the Hohenzollerns, the workmen's and soldier's councils. Thus the German bourgeoisie will sleep no more quietly even if they succeed in forming a better Reichstag.

Like Russia in 1905.

In many respects the Germany of 1923 resembles the Russian empire of 1905. Just as the defeat of the revolution of 1905 in Russia gave rise to a period of wildest reaction, so the German bourgeoisie would like to take revenge for the fright suffered in 1923 by a Stolypin period.

The German miniature Stolipin has already been found in the person of Jarres, minister of the interior who, every few weeks states in his circulars that penal servitude has a very good effect on the Communists.

This little Stolipin has unfortunately not the faintest idea of what is actually going on among the German population. Were he to observe a country in which the persecutions are especially violent, for instance Wuertemberg, he would find that the Wuertemberg proletariat has at no time stood more firmly by the Communist Party of Germany than at the present moment, has never been more ready to fight nor more willing to sacrifice itself than today—in spite of the innumerable arrests and arbitrary acts of the Bazille-Bois government, that faithful disciple of Herr Jarres.

Jarres works hand in hand with Ebert, with the Chancellor Marx, with the internationally notorious examining magistrate Vogt and,—let us not forget—with the social-democratic police authorities. Severing and Richter. These social-democrats are using every possible means in the election campaign to weaken the Communists and strengthen the social-democratic party. In Berlin they are not contenting themselves with persecuting the Communist members of the Reichstag, but the lesser functionaries also are being arrested by masses. The press bureaus of the Police President Richter and the Minister of the Interior Severing publish every few days tales of horror about Communist bombs, the disintegration of the Communist Party of Germany, etc.

The Communist Party of Germany is carrying on this electoral campaign in a situation in which the well-known and effective speakers of the party cannot appear in public at all, and every other kind of election work is seriously paralyzed by police interference. At the same time a concentrated attack of all parties, from the German nationalists to the social-democratic party, is being organized against us. Under these extremely difficult conditions the election campaign will be a veritable ordeal for the Communist Party of Germany. It will have a significance which far exceeds that of other election contests.

Last winter, when the party was prohibited, the pressure against it in diet elections, as in Thuringia, or in municipal elections as in Saxony, was nevertheless nothing like so severe as now. If the party succeeds, in spite of this unexampled unfavorable situation, in obtaining millions of workers' votes on Dec. 7, it will prove that it is impossible to defeat the Communist Party of Germany in present day Gegnany.

Good Prelude in Hamburg.

The civic elections in Hamburg on Oct. 26 were a good prelude to the Reichstag elections. In spite of the extreme terror exercised against the Communist Party of Germany, they did not succeed in overthrowing us. In Hamburg especially many hundreds of Communist functionaries are detained in prison or are refugees. Nevertheless, in spite of extensive abstention from voting, due to the lack of interest on the part of the masses in the parliamentary farce, the Communist Party of Germany in Hamburg obtained 81,000 votes. The social-democrats did not succeed in gaining any increased vote in Hamburg. That which was demonstrated in Hamburg on Oct. 26, will be seen again in the whole of Germany on Dec. 7.

The party is carrying on this election campaign absolutely on principle. It is evident that in the present period of increased terror on the part of the bourgeoisie, there is not much likelihood of democratic illusions existing among the working class. The idea of opposing a Communist-social-democratic-labor bloc to the bourgeois bloc, i. e. an alliance with Severing against Jarres would indeed be stark madness. But in the election, the party naturally upholds the principle of a united front of all workers against the bourgeoisie and it extends from the workers to the employes, the officials, and particularly to the radical small peasants' organization. The Communist Party of Germany is using the election campaign as a means of rousing the whole party and the whole of the working class. The questions which are being put in the foreground are those of the everyday life of the proletariat: wages, hours of work, increased cost of living, and especially the amnesty. The 7th of December must demonstrate that the working masses of Germany will have nothing to do with the Dawes plan, that they refuse starvation wages and a 10-hour day and that they demand the liberation of the political prisoners. Besides this the Communist vote on Dec. 7 must be a demonstration for the taking over of power by the workers as against the rule of capital. The Communist vote on Dec. 7 will be a demonstration against the League of Nations fraud and in favor of an alliance between a proletarian Germany and Soviet Russia.

The chief enemy we have to deal with in this election is perhaps not the bourgeoisie, not the social-democrats, not the police, not the law, but the indifference and lack of interest of large circles of the working people to parliamentarism. The radically inclined German workman is so convinced of the futility of parliamentary procedure, that is becomes more and more difficult to drag him to the poll. The Communist Party of Germany is devoting special attention to the agitation for convincing these sections of the workers that every vote which is not recorded on Dec. 7 is a vote for the reduction of wages and against the amnesty. A defeat of the Communists on Dec. 7 would only increase the arrogance and the brutality of the bourgeoisie and thus worsen the situation of the proletariat.

In spite of persecution and hindrances, the Communist Party of Germany is carrying on the election campaign with all its force and with confidence, under the firm conviction that on Dec. 7 the party will succeed in uniting millions of German proletarians upon the fundamental Communistic standpoint and on the lines of the Fifth World Congress of the Comintern.

CENTRALIA RAID ON I. W. W. RESULT OF CAREFUL PLAN

Harding and Coolidge Honored Mobbers

(By The Federated Press)

CENTRALIA, Wash.—That the raid on the I. W. W. hall in Centralia which resulted in the killing of three American legion rioters Armistice day 1919 was planned long before is set forth in an affidavit made by an overseas veteran who was in Centralia that day and still lives here. He is Cecil Draper. Another veteran named Peter McCartin swears he was asked by a former army captain to go down to Centralia from Spokane and take part in the raid on the labor hall with all expenses paid and things fixed so he wouldn't have to worry for a long time." He refused.

To Counteract Capitalist Lies

These affidavits, with those of seven jurors who want freedom for the eight I. W. W. in prison as a result of defending themselves, are in the hands of Gov. Hart to counteract the original Associated Press story and theory of the prosecution, still believed in many quarters, that the legionnaires were fired on from a distance while they were peacefully parading.

the injunction theretofore granted."

This is one of the notorious cases in which the government of the United States has acted as a strike-breaking agency, bringing suit against the railway shopmen's union and lining up with the railroad owners.

Bricklayers' Case Pending.

One of the cases still pending is the United States vs. the Bricklayers, Plasterers' and Masons' International Union, which again demonstrates the government's vigilance in trying to prevent strikes. "The illegal practices include blacklisting, secondary boycotts and unlawful threats to strike," says the attorney general, not saying, however, what constitutes, "unlawful attempts to strike." This is one more attempt of the exploiters of labor to use their government to create the impression that it is "unlawful" to strike.

The case against the Bricklayers' and Plasterers' Union is an attempt to nullify an agreement of the union with the employers' association. "These agreements granted exclusive rights and unlawful preferences to members of the employers' associations, illegally and arbitrarily dictating the conditions under which the material should be fabricated and installed by members of the union, and enforcing boycotts and blacklists against owners, builders and general contractors."

It is apparently the opinion of the attorney general that any attempt of the workers to control the conditions under which they shall work is "illegal."

Standard Oil Co. Carelessness Caused Death of Workers

NEW YORK. — As Andrew F. McBride, state commissioner of labor of New Jersey, reports that "experience has demonstrated that workmen cannot be safeguarded against the effects of poisonous contact" with tetraethyl lead (looney gas material) the American Chemical society issues a statement, to the effect that tetraethyl lead is only dangerous if workers and chemists are careless.

McBride, however, finds that it was the Standard Oil Co. which was careless (and thus responsible for 5 deaths). He says the Standard failed to show that the gas masks which the company furnished were adapted to give protection against the lead fumes.

Their first conversation betrayed the fact that she was not fastidious

AT a distance she had appeared unusually neat, immaculate. But upon their first face-to-face meeting he discovered that her teeth were not clean. And he soon lost interest.

So many people overlook this one matter of fastidiousness. And do so in spite of the fact that in conversation the teeth are the one most noticeable thing about you.

Notice today how you, yourself, watch another person's mouth when he or she is talking. If the teeth are not well kept they at once become a liability.

Listerine Tooth Paste cleans teeth the way the dentist cleans them. It is a polishing ingredient that really cleans . . . without scratching the enamel . . . a difficult problem fully solved.

You will notice the improvement even in the first few days. And you know it is cleaning safely.

So the makers of Listerine, the safe antiseptic, have found for you also the really safe dentifrice.

Anthracite Miners Rebel

Confirming our prediction made a few days ago, John L. Lewis has revoked charters of eleven locals in the anthracite district.

We stated that charters would be revoked wherever there exists dissatisfaction with the boss-favoring agreements negotiated by Lewis in order that the rebellious coal diggers be prevented from voting against the Lewis machine. The facts speak for themselves.

Eleven thousand miners are on strike in the anthracite fields against the constant violation of the agreement, violation which is tacitly approved by Lewis and his henchman Cappellini. The miners get no support from the administration in these protests but are told to get back on the job and wait for a settlement that never comes.

It is reported that 22,000 more miners are preparing to leave the pits in a few days and this represents, with those already on strike, more than one-fifth of the entire membership in these districts.

Last year organizers of the Labor Defense Council and of the Progressive Miners' Committee were mobbed at the convention of District 2 after Lewis had organized a demostration against them. Cappellini had just been elected and had promised great things for the miners. The extent of his treachery was not known at the time.

Today, every word of criticism of officialdom of the district and international officialdom uttered by the Progressive Miners' Committee has been justified a thousand times over and the revoking of eleven charters is the best evidence that the sentiment of the miners has changed.

We venture to say that organizers for the left wing will be welcomed with open arms by the anthracite coal miners and that the person they feel like mobbing is one Cappellini—with John L. Lewis running him hard for first place.

The rebellious spirit of the anthracite miners must not be allowed to dissipate itself in fruitless grumbling against the bureaucracy. It must be organized, the miners must not leave their union but must force the Lewis clique to find some other means of making a living than selling out the workers who pay their exorbitant wages.

The Economy of Strikebreaking

Strikebreaker President Coolidge has made a special plea for economy in running the biggest and most powerful strikebreaking agency in the world—the United States government.

Since the outbreak of the world war the problem of the rapidly mounting costs of government has been disturbing the ruling class of every capitalist country. On the one hand, the capitalists are compelled to maintain a huge strikebreaking apparatus in order to crush the workers at home and in order to maintain their areas of exploitation abroad. On the other hand, the cost of upkeep in this labor-crushing affair is assuming staggering proportions. Politically, the ruling capitalist class must strengthen its governmental machinery in order to maintain its power. Economically, the deeply disturbed capitalist economy is less and less able to bear such huge burdens.

The Coolidge message proposes to make a reduction in the cost of the operation of the government. Under the guise of economy the lickspittles of the exploiters have time and again struck dangerous blows at the working masses. We recall how Coolidge, now yelling for economy, vetoed an increase in the pay of the miserably exploited postal employes.

The government never stops to talk of economy when the question of strikebreaking is involved. Even in this very message on economy that Coolidge has just proposed we find certain very interesting evidence about the real character of the much-heralded savings that are to be made. We notice, for instance, that the 1926 budget proposes an increase of ten per cent in the appropriations for the department of justice. Every workingman knows what the department of justice busies itself with. Every railway worker, miner, and textile worker well recalls the thousands of federal marshals sent against them during their 1922 strikes. The Daugherty and the hundreds of lesser injunctions are still vivid in the minds of millions of workers in the United States.

What Coolidge is after is to have as efficient and as deadly a strikebreaking machine as possible and to run it at the lowest cost to the exploiters, to the bosses whom it serves.

Coolidge and the Negroes

I firmly believe that it is better for all concerned that they (the Negroes) should be protected from all those impositions to which, from their position they naturally fall a prey, especially from the crime of lynching, and that they should receive every encouragement to become full partakers in all the blessings of our common American citizenship.

—From the Coolidge message.

If the above strikes you as a rather meager and conservative statement with which to dismiss 12,000,000 people and their problems, please remember that about 90 per cent of Negroes are workers and that Coolidge represents the blackest section of the American capitalism. Many Negroes voted for Coolidge and this is their reward—he thinks that they should not be lynched and calls it an "imposition." He is doubtless in favor Negroes who make trouble for white landowners and capitalists, being hung after a "fair" trial. This method is in accord with the best standards of New England civilization and is not subject to so much criticism from liberals.

As to how lynching is to be stopped he has nothing to say and the sadistic slayers of Negro workers and farmers can return to their degenerate pastime without any qualms, confident that President Coolidge will not move to interfere with what he doubtless believes is an inevitable accompaniment of the progress of the Negro race toward "becoming full partakers in all the blessings of our common American citizenship."

Coolidge will probably demonstrate his belief in this "common citizenship" by appointing a Negro postmaster in some stronghold of the southern aristocracy, and the southern aristocracy will demonstrate their belief in the president by lynching the new incumbent—as has happened more than once in the sunny south.

Then there will be hypocritical expressions of regret from the cool Calvin, but nothing will be done until, under the leadership of the Workers (Communist) Party, the Negroes recognize the class basis of their struggle, organize and, with the rest of the working class, abolish all class, national and racial distinctions.

American Fashions in Cuba

The National City Bank government of Cuba is deporting 28 "agitators" who are charged with activity in the strike movement which has tied up the sugar industry—the pet profit-making enterprise of American capitalists in the island.

The United States is the Paris of the western hemisphere in that it sets the fashion for the principalities over which its financiers and battleships have established control—not fashions of clothes, but fashions in methods of dealing with workers who by demanding better wages, better working conditions and more power in government, interfere with the golden stream of dividends that flows into the treasure vaults of the American ruling class.

The recent increase in wages to the engineers' and firemen's brotherhoods are an example of the use to which a portion of the colonial plunder is put—it is used to bribe the upper strata of the working class which occupies strategic points in industry—to keep them more or less satisfied and quiescent, separated from the larger lower paid section of the workers.

Imperialism, the acquisition of fields of exploitation where immense quantities of commodities are produced by low paid workers, is thus today a great bulwark of capitalism. It necessitates on the part of the working masses in imperialist nations like the United States a constant struggle against its every manifestation. No better method of combatting it has been devised that the alliance between the oppressed colonial masses and the American working class for which the Workers (Communist) Party of America stands.

To the deported victims of American imperialist reaction and to the striking sugar workers the DAILY WORKER extends revolutionary greetings and a pledge of solidarity in all their struggles.

Cheap Votes

The Coolidge economy concert, broadcast by every capitalist sheet, is a shining example of the bunk which is the basis of all such campaigns. We say very frankly that we are not interested in capitalist government economy. It matters not one tinkers' dam to us how the taxes are disbursed except that we like to see as much waste as possible as proof of the all-around inefficiency of the capitalist system.

We are seldom disappointed.

We are sure always that the great bulk of the appropriations will be spent for past and future wars and for special means of curbing the workers' march towards freedom.

But when a president makes an economy campaign one of the central planks of his platform, and the gullible middle class yelps approvingly, we like to look at the cold figures.

We did. This is what we found:

The 1925 estimates of the Coolidge administration call for approximately $59,000,000 less than last year.

This is just about 50 cents per year for every person in the United States. Truly a wonderful accomplishment.

This is a pretty cheap price for votes of "free born American citizens," but then "Coolidge stands for economy."

BRITAIN AND UNITED STATES FIGHT OVER LOOT

Wall Street Wants Its Share of War Spoils

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—Just when settlement of the acrimonious reparations problem was beginning to look rosiest thru the successful operation of the Dawes' plan, the postponement of the inter-allied financial conference, scheduled to be held on December 15, was viewed here today as a new and unexpected obstacle and a source of extreme diplomatic worry.

That the postponement of the conference, implying as it does that the British government is opposed to American participation in the reparations payments on an equal basis with the other allies, brings the United States face to face with what is one of the most important questions arising from the aftermath of the world war is not denied by state department officials, altho Secretary of State Hughes declines to express his views on the question.

Danger to Dawes' Plan.

Aside from the fact that between $500,000,000 and $600,000,000 due the United States is involved the settlement of the question on an amicable basis is highly important because of the manner in which it is entangled with the ultimate success of the Dawes' plan, the economic rehabilitation of Europe, and war debts owed the United States.

The British take the attitude that the United States, by its failure to be one of the signatories to the treaty of Versailles, forfeited any right to participate with the other allies in equal shares in the spoils of war.

Wants Share of Loot.

The American viewpoint, in direct contravention, is that the United States is entitled, by every legal and equitable right, to share in the reparations receipts paid under the Dawes' plan—an American contribution to the solving of Europe's jumbled finances—on an equal basis with great Britain, France and the other victors as the American treaty with Germany is to men's scrap of paper, but just as legal, binding and in force as the treaty of Versailles.

THREE DAYS OF HOLIDAYS MARK SEVENTH ANNIVERSARY OF SOVIET VICTORY IN WORKERS' REPUBLIC

By ANISE.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, Nov. 10 (By Mail.)—Three days of holidays in the beautiful first snow in Moscow, with the blues and greens and reds of the walls and the golden domes of churches showing softly thru the white powder.

It is an exquisite time. One feels in a sense completely out of the world. For the street cars stop, and the newspapers stop, and the restaurants stop, and everyday life of every variety stops, when Russians hold holiday.

Hungarians Are Lively.

On the first day was the big parade. From nine in the morning till seven at night they were thronging ten or twenty abreast thru the Red Square past the Lenin mausoleum.

Soldiers, children, factory workers young Communists and Pioneers, some 400,000 in all, or possibly more, went first to the square on a correspondent's ticket and stood on the high walk by the red wall watching the procession. After four hours of this I drifted out of the square.

There in Tverskaia were the immigrant groups, waiting their turn to enter the long procession. The Hungarians are a lively bunch; they were tossing favored members up in the air while waiting. And all along the street came the rising and falling of revolutionary chants. Then I caught sight of the American and English section. I recognized it by a big white banner and some words about "the Fictitious Zinoviev Letter." I joined the group and marched thru the Red Square with them. Trotsky, Kalenin, Rychkof and many others were in the receiving stand.

Home here in my room overlooking the Metropole Square, I heard the bands and tramp of feet all afternoon, till at six in the evening the contagion of music drove me out again to the Red Square, to see the last of the paraders entering with torch-lights. The flaring, primitive torches against the dull red wall, the moon rising behind the church of St. Basil, the chants, the sweeping paraders.

Saw 20,000 Banners.

And we were not out of the world at all, as we had seemed when that first complete hush of affairs struck the city. No procession in any land is so completely alive to world events. I watched the banners and placards as they passed; there must have been twenty thousand of them. I tried to imagine any American parade displaying such international interest. I couldn't imagine it.

Here was a "Hands Off China" placard. A worried looking Chinaman being torn to pieces by grasping hands of imperialists was shown on a mounted standard. It was cleverly drawn and painted; and a big red worker's hand was reaching over and clutching at the white hands of the imperialists to drag them away. This theme, with individual variations, was repeated perhaps twenty times in a single half hour.

Feature "Zinoviev Letter."

Here were large letters waving above the crowd. The alleged "Zinoviev letter" to the British Communists was featured in a dozen ways all with a comic intent. Follows a placard showing black prison bars against the open sky, with a pair of red hands stretched beseechingly thru them. The words say that this is an allusion to the tens of thousands of political prisoners now in the jails of Poland, Hungary, Germany and the rest of Europe.

The Dawes plan came in for frequent comment. Here also the "hand" motif came into play. This time it was the hands of American capitalists choking a European workingman. You could tell the capitalist hand by the gold links in the cuffs and by the grossness of it. I wonder if Americans dream how Europe regards them.

"Putting Europe on a ration" is what Trotsky calls Dawes' scheme. And a large part of Europe also sees it that way. The banks and railways and industries of Germany are to be put in pawn; and American bankers are to hold the strings.

Mixed with these international placards were also thousands of more local significance. Here comes a crowd of children bearing a quotation from Lenin, which he applied to the whole Communist movement, but which they have found especially significant for themselves: "Our job is first, to learn; second, to learn; third, to learn." Here are some: "Down With Illiteracy" placards, and some others about "Get Together of City and Country."

Show Productivity of Labor.

Productivity of labor comes in for a few thousand placards. Textile workers announcing that their revolutionary tasks is to produce more and cheaper cotton goods; workers from the Red Preania district with a placard: "Eight hours work, but not a single lazy hour." And here is a placard with a golden sun and the words: "Lenin, Sun of the Dawning Years." And many, many placards with the motto: "Long live the Worldwide October."

One remembers this last sign three days later, when at last the newspapers appear again on the streets announcing how the east and the west have celebrated Russia's revolutionary holiday. In Berlin there are a score of meetings, where they compare the condition of the Russian and the German workers. In the eastern lands, Peking, Angora, Teheran, the celebration took as a motto the solidarity of oppressed Asia with Soviet Russia. In Tokio student groups took resolutions in honor of October, saying: "We swear to revolt for freedom."

Alliance of Town and Country.

Such was October day, in Russia and in the world. And on the second day came in Moscow and thruout Russia the indoor celebrations. Children' homes putting on programs of speeches and dramatics; musical technicums and artist groups bringing out programs of new revolutionary songs; factories and workmens' clubs giving spectacles.

And again on the third day the streets were alive with auto trucks, taking groups of factory workers out to villages where the meetings in honor of the alliance of town and country were going on. I went that evening to the Grand Opera House, where in a special concert hall which used to be the czar's own private entrance to his guarded box in the opera, a concert was being given by a musical children's home. Boys and girls selected from the scores of children's homes around Moscow, because of musical and dramatic ability, and given special training by the artists of the Grand Opera. They themselves now were singing opera, with exquisite voices—children from the famine and the streets.

EFFORT TO MAKE SMALL DISGORGE DOUGH PROCEEDS

Len Blocks Every Move to Get His Cash

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Dec. 4. — The second reverse in two days was met by Governor Len Small's legal forces today when Circuit Judge Frank W. Burton denied their motion to set aside a previous decision in the state interest money suit against the governor.

The motion, denied without argument, asked that an order entered in the case nearly two years ago by Judge Norman L. Jones be vacated. The Jones order suppressed a part of the governor's answer to the original bill in the suit, which alleged the acquittal of the governor on criminal charges at Waukegan acted as a bar to civil proceedings against him.

Arguments were begun at once on the exceptions of the Small attorneys to the report of Master in Chancery, C. C. Briggle, which recommends that Small be required to account for interest on state funds in his hands while state treasurer. Werner Schroeder, chief of the governor's counsel, started the opening statement for the defense, which was expected to take up three days.

The governor met his first setback yesterday when Judge Burton overruled a motion asking the Briggle report be vacated because of alleged political prejudice.

Admiral Magaz Denies Charges.

MADRID, Dec. 4.—Admiral Magaz, acting president of the directory, strongly denied today that he had intimated that the French government contained Spanish employes directing a campaign against Spanish monarchy.

Fascisti Denounced in Parliament.

ROME, Dec. 4.—Senator Lussignoli came in for vigorous criticism from anti-fascist speakers in parliament today. Followers of Giolitti refused to pledge their confidence in the government.

Extracts From An Appeal that Caused MacDonald's Collapse

Here are the vital paragraphs of an appeal to the British soldiers, sailors and aviators that caused the fall of the MacDonald labor government. The appeal was circulated among the fighting men. The government at first prosecuted editor Campbell of the British Commuist Party, then dropped the case and refused to permit an inquiry by parliament. The fatal vote of censure followed and then Oct. 29 elections which returned the conservatives to power.

"Form committees in every barracks, aerdome and ship. Let this be the nucleus of an organization that will prepare the whole of the soldiers, sailors and airmen, not merely to refuse to go to war or to refuse to shoot workers during Industrial conflicts, but will make it possible for the workers, peasants, soldiers, sailors and airmen to go forward in a common attack upon the capitalists, smash capitalism forever and institute the rule of the whole working class.

LIBERALS GAG OVER ELECTION OF LLOYD GEORGE AS LEADER

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LONDON, Dec. 4.—The metropolis was interested today in the developments in the liberal party over the election of Lloyd George as house of commons floor leader, over former Premier Asquith.

Several liberal members voted their opposition to Lloyd George in this election as sessional chairman of the party which leaves the Welsh wizard only 25 followers on whom he can depend.

BUILDERS' ASSOCIATION TO FIGHT LABOR LEGISLATION

The Associated Building Contractors of Illinois, made up of the principal organizations of the building contractors of the state, is organizing a drive to fight labor legislation proposed to come before the Illinois state legislature this winter.

"One if not the most important functions of the Associated Building Contractors of Illinois this coming winter," says the official bulletin of the organization recently issued, "will be to watch out for measures inimical to employers generally that will be introduced in the coming session of the state legislature.

"It is now known that organized labor has a comprehensive program they are going to try to put over and it behooves every contractor to be on the alert and see that his interests are not jeopardized by the enactment of laws which are oftimes passed thru organized pressure on members of the house and senate.

"The contractors of Illinois are at all times unalterably opposed to any legislation which would be based in favor of any one class. The association is now well represented in all parts of the state and is in a splendid position to serve the building industry."

J. C. Wuellner, of Alton, chairman of the legislative committee of the contractors' organization, declares, "A study of the proposed legislation makes it apparent how constantly this association will have to be on the job at Springfield to aid in obstructing certain classes of legislation."

The labor bills which Wuellner declares the contractors' association of Illinois will fight, include: An anti-injunction bill in labor disputes; increased workmen's compensation bill; minimum wage legislation; old age pension acts; limiting freight trains to fifty cars; one day rest in seven bill.

AN ORGANIZER OF MASSES

Editor's Note.—Every day until publication has been completed, the DAILY WORKER will publish a new chapter from the book, "Lenin: The Great Strategist of the Class War," by A. Losovsky, secretary of the Red International of Labor Unins. The seventeenth chapter is entitled, "An Organizer of Masses."

LENIN was not only a foremost Marxian, a statesman and strategian of extraordinary foresightedness, he was also one of the greatest organizers and leaders of the masses. He knew how to unite around himself large masses of human beings, to draw them into a mass movement, and to lead them into struggles. He always stood at the central point of the class struggle. He was charged with energy, with faith, with absolute conviction, transmitting all this not only to those who stood close to him but also to hundreds of thousands and to millions. The international reformists speak of Lenin as the destroyer of socialism, a sectarian, an intolerant spirit, and so forth. Yes, we will admit that Lenin was the destroyer of bourgeois and petty-bourgeois parties. He couldn't tolerate reformism. He was a sectarian because he refused to deal with the betrayers of the labor movement.

The work of Lenin's life speaks for itself. This "spirit of destruction" stood, at the head of a mighty country. This "sectarian" has been the founder and leader of the greatest political party in the world. This "spirit of intolerance" left after him more love and loyalty than anyone else in the course of thousands of years. Lenin's organizing abilities have found their expression in thirty years of work, beginning with the creation of illegal political groups up to the point when he assumed the leadership of Soviet Russia. For him there was no struggle possible, no victory possible, without organization. Organization work was part and parcel of his life's activities. He had built his organization from the bottom up, he created a school of organization that is being followed by a generation which, from his theory and particularly from his action, will draw inspiration for years and years to come.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FL...

JOHN L. LEWIS, Ri... and other bureaucr... the United Mine Worke... are enjoying the sunshine of Mexico and being entertained by the Mexican government with Wall Street dollars. But Lewis is not too far away to render a service to his friends, the coal operators. For several months the miners in the Scranton, Pa., district were trying to have their officers take up certain grevviances with the coal barons. The leaders refused. Finally the men took matters into their own hands and shut down the mines.

THERE are twelve thousand of these miners locked in struggle with the bosses. When Lewis received word from the coal operators that their slaves were in rebellion, he did not inquire if the coal diggers had any rights on their side. He assumed they had not. His first action was to cancel the charters of ten locals. This relieves John of 12,000 hostile votes, and proves to the operators that his loyalty to them is unshaken.

THIS union smashing policy is carried out by Lewis thruout the union. He caused considerable damage in Nova Scotia, Kansas, West Va., Illinois and wherever the militants fought the bosses and refused to act as stoolpigeons for the autocrat who is paid a salary to direct the union's affairs for the benefit of the coal diggers but is in reality, using his power and position to reduce the miners to a state of peonage. All signs point out however that the rank and file of the organization are organizing their strength for a concerted attack on the reactionary forces.

BRITAIN'S hold on Egypt will not be relaxed, according to a statement made by Col. J. H. Patterson, who built the British railroad from Mombassa to Lake Victoria Nyanza, in Africa. The colonel is on a lecture tour in this country and like all British lecturers outside of the Communists, who are not welcome here, he is under the orders of the foreign office and loses no opportunity to boost the empire. He defends the present British reign of terror in Egypt. Col. Patterson, however, deserves praise for not indulging in the nauseating hypocrisy so typical of the British ruling class. He says bluntly that England must protect the Suez Canal which he calls the empire's jugular vein.

BRITAIN'S interests in Egypt and the Sudan entirely apart from the canal's strategical value in the scheme of imperial defense would impose the duty on the British ruling class of protecting their loot at all costs. A defeat of the British in Egypt and the Sudan would heighten the morale of England's colonial slaves and give them confidence in their own power to throw off the yoke. Patterson's frank admission proves that no oppressed subject race can ever accomplish their emancipation from slavery of any kind except by the exercise of their power. Those who want to be free must themselves strike the blow, and tyrants are convinced only by power.

JAPAN does not take kindly to the Coolidge suggestion of another naval conference for further reduction of armaments. Not that Japan is not just as anxious for relief from the burden of taxation imposed by the necessity for maintaining a large navy, but she knows that the proposed conference is only a ruse on the part of the United States and another calculated step in the well conceived plan to bring the world under the hegemony of Wall Street. The capitalist powers cannot disarm even if they honestly wanted to do so, which is in itself inconceivable. The tendency will be for armaments to increase and wars to become more fre-

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 5.—It is the subject of bitter comment by the Mexican workers that at the very hour yesterday when Luis N. Korobkoff says that satisfactory contracts have been obtained from the American banks.

ARMA, Kansas, Dec. 5.—Three thousand coal miners in mass meeting here demanded the calling of a special district convention to place the Lewis henchmen who are now running the district on trial for their unlawful action in striking off the ballot the name of every nominee who was considered to have a chance of winning the elections.

The anger of the Kansas miners is steadily mounting and the action of the fakers in removing the names of Howat and

JOHN L. LEWIS, THE TRAITOR, PLAYS GAME OF THE BOSSES

Revokes Charters to Disfranchise Miners in Union Election, and to Break Anthracite Strike!

(Statement by the Trade Union Educational League.)

NEWS from the anthracite coal fields that John L. Lewis, president of the United Mines Workers of America, has revoked the charters of ten local unions, in order to break the strike of 12,000 miners now going on and which threatens soon to include 20,000 more, is another demonstration of the fact that Lewis is an agent of the coal operators. Lewis got his hold upon the U. M. W. of A. with the help of the coal barons, he has consistently served the interests of the coal barons, and now he is openly entering the field as a strikebreaker in the anthracite field just a few days before the union election.

Lewis' action is dictated by two considerations: First, he must show the bosses that he is still their willing tool, in order to continue to receive their financial and moral support. Second, he must find some way to break up the sweep of the progressive sentiment in the election set for next week, and this way he finds in the wholesale expulsion of members.

This is but another action of the same kind as that in Kansas, District 14, where Lewis, in direct violation of the laws of the union, removed all the progressive candidates from the ballot by an arbitrary ruling, leaving no candidates to be voted for except his own hand-picked tools. And in Kansas, too, the 10,000 miners who will vote against Lewis and his gang are disfranchised.

The Trade Union Educational League calls attention to these latest betrayals of the mine workers by the traitor Lewis, and calls upon all militant and revolutionary miners to rally to the cause of the progressive miners. Fight against the expulsions and revocation of charters! Fight for the redress of the grievances of the strikers!

Vote for the progressive tickets, nationally and in every district, on Tuesday, Dec. 9, and see that your votes are counted!

LEWIS REVOKED UNION CHARTERS; FEARS ELECTION

Cappellini Reported to Be in Hiding

By THOMAS MYERSCOUGH.
(Special to the Daily Worker)

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Dec. 5.—The twelve thousand miners involved in the strike against the coal barons, who for months refused to pay any attention to their demands for a settlement of their grievances, are not frightened by threats of coercion from the bosses and by the action of John L. Lewis, international president of the union, in revoking the charters of ten locals.

It is strongly believed here that the main reason behind the revocation of the charters was the imminence of the election for district and international officers of the union.

Lewis feared the opposition among the locals affected would endanger his machine in this district and tell heavily against his own presidential vote.

Lewis' instructions to the district officers' charges strike leaders with saying that "charters cannot dig coal." The strike was not the result of a "conspiracy." It was caused by the accumulated effect of a long list of grevivances. Miners were refused work by the Pennsylvania Coal company and actually removed from the payroll without formal discharge.

Strike May Spread.

There are also eighteen hundred Lehigh Wilkesbarre company miners on strike. A meeting will be held today to decide whether the entire staff of that company shall be called out. Similar action confronts the Lehigh Valley and Hudson Coal companies. The miners say that they have sufficient grievances to strike regardless of any action they might feel like taking in behalf of their striking comrades.

The miners have demanded of Lewis that a specialif convention be held. Intense excitement prevails here. It is charged that Cappellini is in hiding, being too yellow to face the wrath of the coal diggers. Vice-president Isaacs, acting head during Cappellini's absence, was replaced by International Organizer Davis, on orders of Lewis. Isaacs failed to carry out Lewis' instructions.

CHICAGO QUOTA SET AT $5,000 FOR 'OUR DAILY'

Plan to Call City-Wide Conference Soon

Chicago's quota has been set at $5,000 in the campaign to insure the DAILY WORKER for 1925 and build it into a stronger force to fight American capitalism. The Chicago local has set the machinery in motion to bring each branch into the campaign.

A city conference on literature and DAILY WORKER matters will soon be called, at which the agent from every branch is expected to attend. Volunteer speakers are to be sent to each branch explaining to the entire membership the campaign to sell insurance policies to insure the DAILY WORKER for 1925.

Our Big Job.

Quotas are being set for every branch in the country. A letter has been sent to all Chicago branches giving each branch its quota and explaining the progress and purposes of the DAILY WORKER builders' campaign. The quotas of the English branches have been made larger because of the fact that the foreign branches must also support their own organs.

Points Way to Greater Efficiency.

"Each branch stands instructed to elect an agent, or if the branch be large a committee to take complete charge of the work of the DAILY WORKER campaign" says the letter sent to the branches by Comrade Alex and Comrade Turner Lewis, literature director. "It will be the duty of the agent or committee to push the sale of the policies both inside and outside the branch, to keep accounts to report to the city literature director and see that the matter gets a hearing before the branch at every meeting until the end of the campaign."

The machinery set up during the insurance campaign will be made permanent as the machinery to handle literature sales and perform the DAILY WORKER subscription work. The city conference soon to be called will map out an extensive program and elect an executive committee to assist the literature director in general work.

Loeb, business manager of the DAILY WORKER.

This is the last large membership meeting to be addressed by Comrade Loeb on his eastern trip. All party members and sympathizers are urged to attend this meeting, at which plans for building the paper during the coming year will be discussed.

Philadelphia Pledges $5,000.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Dec. 5.—Five thousand dollars was pledged for the campaign to insure the DAILY WORKER for 1925 as the minimum amount to be raised by Philadelphia. Comrade Moritz Loeb, business manager of the DAILY WORKER, spoke at the general membership meeting Thursday night. He received an enthusiastic greeting when he explained the campaign which will build the DAILY WORKER into a stronger working class paper in 1925.

Those present at the membership meeting gave individual pledges totaling hundreds of dollars. Comrade Loeb declared after the meeting, "Philadelphia intends to do more than insure the DAILY WORKER for 1925—the comrades here mean to build until we double our resources and circulation."

GOVERNMENT AGENTS HIRE MEN TO VIOLATE LAW; THEN NAB THEM

(Special to The Daily Worker)

INDIANAPOLIS, Dec. 5.—A sensation occurred in federal court here today when it developed that Orlando Horton, branded as "the lone wolf" of the narcotic trade between Chicago and Indianapolis had been hired by federal operatives to transport morphine to this city and then was arrested for doing it.

"Here is a case where a government deliberately hired a man criminally inclined to violate a law for the sole purpose of arresting him for doing it," declared Judge Albert B. Anderson.

The method used by federal operatives came to light thru the testimony of Dr. Ragabason, agent of the narcotic division, who testified that he and James Williams, an informer for the service, made a deal with Horton to go to Chicago and bring back fifteen ounces of morphine, which was to be disposed of thru Dr. Gibson, who posed as a dealer.

SOVIET RUSSIA INTERESTED IN BIG AERO PLAN

Trans-Arctic Flight Project Under Way

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, Dec. 5.—Russia is vitally interested in the project to bridge the arctic with an aerial transportation system with Rotterdam and San Francisco as its terminals, Professor Vorlinoff declared in an interview today. Vorilnoff is head of the Soviet Trans-Arctic flight commission.

The Soviet government, Professor Vorlinoff said, regards the project as a means to shorten Russia's immense distances and the surest way to educate the semi-savage tribes inhabiting the arctic circle.

To Civilize Big Region.

The government plans to conduct a campaign of civilization in a region as large as the United States where these tribes now live.

The foremost scientific authorities have been assembled by the government and will soon submit data on meteorological conditions along the proposed route. The next step will be the erection of radio stations along the course of the flight.

GERMAN POLICE AID DEGENERATE WHO KILLED 27 YOUTHFUL VICTIMS

HANOVER, Germany.—At least two Hanover police officials probably will be indicted charged with negligence of duty in connection with the Haarmann case. A sensational scandal is expected to grow out of the fact that the monster plied his gruesome trade two years and was employed at the same time as "stool pigeon" for the police.

Under this guise he lured 27 youthful victims to his abode, tortured and murdered them, although repeatedly arrested and examined, he was invariably released, supposedly through the protection of high police officials.

YOUNG COMMUNISTS LEAD STUDENTS IN JUGOSLAV STRIKE

(Special to The Daily Worker)

VIENNA, Austria, Dec. 5.—Over the discharge by retirement of three professors who stand for a republic Jugoslavia has a student's strike on her hands in three universities, the Ljubliana in Slovonia, Zabreb (Agram) in Croatia and Beograd (Belgrade) in Serbia.

The leaders in the strike movement are Communist youths, connected with the Young Communist International. In Belgrade they led their adherents to the rector's office with a resolution of protest. Here they were met with mounted police instead of with discussion. A free-for-all fight followed.

When the smoke had cleared away it was found that six policemen and ten students had been wounded. New clashes are feared by the authorities.

WHITE GUARDS BURIED AS ARMY RULES ESTHONIA

Soviet Red Flag Half-Mast for Workers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

REVAL, Esthonia, Dec. 5.—With the whole of Esthonia under martial law, with troops patrolling the streets and the army commander issuing orders that all retail stores and offices be closed from 11 a. m. to 4 p. m., the Esthonian white guard carried off the funeral ceremonies of the twenty-one white guardists killed in Monday's uprising, in the face of a sullen working class.

Rigid Suppression of Workers.

The workers were forbidden any ceremonies for their dead, even the bodies being denied to the families of the fallen, in most cases. All workers with any reputation at all of independence are under surveillance and General Podder has forbidden any workers' organization, political, economic, co-operative or athletic, to meet.

While the white guards gathered behind the bayonets of soldiers in the protestant lutheran and Greek catholic church, and the shop-keepers were ordered to close their doors, the factory workers were ordered to work as usual, as the white guards feel it unwise to give the workers a day off to think of their dead.

The red flag of the Soviet Republic which floats above the Russian embassy, has been at half-mast since the defeat of the uprising. It remained at half-mast today when the flags of other legations were lowered in mourning of the dead white guards, but it remained so in mourning only of the dead workers who had so heroically fought against odds and fell in action.

It is reported that the Moscow Isvestia has expressed regret at the defeat of the uprising.

WORKERS OF NATION RESPOND TO THE GROWING DRIVE TO INSURE THE DAILY WORKER FOR 1925

From all over the country the DAILY WORKER is receiving assurances from its readers of support in the campaign to build the DAILY WORKER for 1925. A letter just received from Lee Boyd, Portland, Oregon, declares:

"Sure, we shall build the DAILY WORKER for 1925. As soon as I receive another pay day, I shall apply for a $5.00 policy. I am one of the initial subscribers for stock in the DAILY WORKER as well as the paper itself, and you can count on me to do all in my power to keep the DAILY WORKER active and growing."

others from the ballot puts their patience to a severe test. As the resolution declares, practically every concession gained by the miners while their fighting leader, Howat, was president of the union have been given away by the cowardly lackeys of Lewis who now sit at the payroll.

Despite the fact that the demand for a special district convention was made in compliance with the provisions of the constitution, the officers failed to heed the demand. In accordance with the district constitution, when twenty locals demand a special district convention, the district officials are compelled to call it without delay..

More Than Fifty Locals.

More than fifty locals have made the demand, including all the large locals in the district. Yet they have given no indication that they will call it. In fact they have brazenly defied the will of the rank and file and said they would not call it.

But the membership of district 14 is determined to have a special convention and all the coal operators in Kansas will not prevent it. The locals that nominated Alex Howatt comprise 90 per cent of the membership of this district. These men will fight until the United Mine Workers of America is vindicated and taken out of the hands of the scurvy crew of payroll leeches and boss tools who are now ruining the district organization.

The resolutions unanimously adopted at the Arma miners' mass meeting read as follows:

Denounce Leaders.

Whereas, the workers of the entire country suffered for years under the autocratic rule of the large employers of labor, and

Whereas, no class of people suffered more than the coal miners in the great struggle for industrial freedom, and

Whereas, the miners of District 14 went thru a 4-year strike for recognition of our union, years ago, and

Whereas, after that great industrial struggle, we resolved that we would no longer be imposed on by the coal corporations, as we had in the years gone by, and

Whereas, after years of sacrifice on the part of the miners, we freed ourselves thru the power and strength of our organization from the iron rule of the coal corporations, and

With Iron Hand.

Whereas, today we find the officials of our own union assuming the role of the autocrat, and trying to rule the rank and file of the miners with an iron hand, and

Whereas, in the nominations that were just completed for officials of this district, we find our executive board has stricken from the ballot practically every man who was considered a dangerous contender for the positions now held by the district officials, and

Whereas, our district officials know just the same as we know that there is not one member of the district executive board who can be elected if the names of those who were nominated are placed on the ballot, and Knights of Payroll.

Whereas, it is plain to be seen that the chief concern of the present officials of our district is that they are kept on the pay roll. And the welfare of the miners is given no consideration, and

Whereas, all the conditions we fought to establish during the past twenty years have been given away in the past three years, since former President Howat and the other deposed officials were removed as officials of this district, and

Whereas, the time has come when the miners of District 14 must assert themselves and take a stand against the autocratic rule of our officials.

Therefore be it resolved,

That we, the miners of District 14 in mass meeting assembled condemn the action of the district officials in keeping the names of our members off the ballot in violation of the constitution. And be it further resolved,

That charges be preferred against the officials of our district in accordance with our constitution, and if found guilty they be immediately removed from office. And be it further resolved,

That we urge all locals in the district to unite in a call for a special district convention so that we may see that the laws of our union are complied with. And be it further resolved,

That we let the officials of this district know that they must respect the rights of every individual member of our union, and also the laws of the organization.

The second resolution demands the calling of a special district convention.

THE UNITED STATES is going to fight Japan one of these days, but there is no love wasted on John Bull by the American ruling class. It is true the Prince of Wales received a royal welcome here and it is also true that there exist several organizations whose object is, ostensibly at least to cement the alleged friendship existing between the two "Anglo-Saxon countries." But this is pitie and will be changed over night into rabid Anglophobia when the rulers of this country decide that the time is ripe to give the old empire a death blow.

THE average reader of the capitalist press undoubtedly came to the conclusion during the war that the Allies, who fought together to "crush German militarism" would be friends for evermore. But such is not the fact. Today England and France fear and hate each other and the United States is playing one off against the other. Sometimes Wall Street favors England, again France. Now is seems that Wall Street is catering to France. To present some kind of a promise the latter country more favorable concessions in refunding the war debt. This makes England hopping mad. Time will tell what the particular game of the United States is in this diplomatic play.

SOUTH SLAVIC WORKERS GIVE PLAY SUNDAY

Deals With Revolt of Sixteenth Century

The "Peasants Revolt" a sixteenth century drama depicting the life and revolutionary struggles of the poor peasants of Croatia under the yoke of the Austro-Hungarian feudalism, will be presented tomorrow afternoon, at 2:30 in C. S. P. S. Hall, 18th and May Streets.

The play is by August Shenoa, a well-known Croatian historian.

The affair will be run under the auspices of the South Slavic Branch of the Workers Party, and the proceeds are to be divided among Radnick, the South Slavic Communist organ, the DAILY WORKER and the Labor Defense Council.

The "Peasants Revolt" is a drama in five acts, with a cast of fifty persons. The most powerful scene of the drama is when the reactionary army of feudalism places a red hot iron crown on the head of "Gregan's King" Matija Gubec, who was the leader of the revolt. It is a play of workingclass struggle with the historical background of the sixteent century.

Every South Slavic worker is urged to attend the performance tomorrow in addition to the play a concert will be enjoyed, also music, singing, dancing and speaking.

The same drama will be played in South Chicago, on December 14 and in Gary on Dec. 21.

KEYMEN ROBBED OF WAGES BY THE SANTE FE ROAD

Member of Labor Board Spills the Beans

The Sante Fe railroad is receiving money in express compensation that should go to the railroad telegraphers employed on the road, it is disclosed in a separate opinion written by A. O. Wharton, a member of the railroad labor board.

Rail Barons Get Money.

"To those familiar with the fixing of compensation for employes in the telegraph department," said Wharton, writing on the recent decision granting a negligible increase to the Sante Fe telegraphers, "it is common knowledge that express commissions, as well as other special services, are taken into consideration and directly affect the rates of pay.

"The Sante Fe railroad receives the express commissions now instead of the employes, and evidently considers that, having changed the basis of pay the employes should be made to suffer the loss of the full amount of express commissons by having their rates fixed on the basis of the hourly rates paid by the carriers who, in addition to hourly rates, pay express commissions.

If any such principle should be adopted, it would result in a substantial reduction in the earnings of the employes in the telegraph department and in the transferring of the commissions from the pay envelope of the employes to the treasury of the carriers

Get Only Half.

"As a matter of fact the evidence indicates that the employes on the Sante Fe should have received approximately twice the amount of the increase granted by the board, in order to maintain the same relative former earnings, based on wage rates plus express commissions. As to the other increases granted, they are so meager and contribute so little toward establishing a just and reasonable wage, considering the training, responsibility and skill of this class as a whole, that no answer is deemed necessary.

"The statement as to the rates compiled by the board's statistical department is about as misleading as it could be, because these data do not reflect the amount paid in commissions by the Pullman, the Rock Island, the Union Pacific, or the Western Pacific railroads.

FARMERS FROM MIDDLEWEST TELL OF HARDSHIPS

Cattle and hog raisers of the middle west and west are practically bankrupt; the stockfeeding areas in the corn belt being especially hard hit, the cattlemen are steadily losing money, so farmers visiting the International Live Stock exposition declare.

The condition of the average farmer in Utah is bad, according to farmers from that state. Crops including the sugar beet, wheat and hay crops have all been light, and market conditions are bad. The cattlemen, thruout the west in spite of the low condition of the market, are being forced to sell. Bankruptcies are frequent thruout Utah, Nevada, and Idaho.

A shortage of cattle has resulted in Missouri because the cattle raisers have been forced to sell to keep their farms going, officials of the Missouri state agricultural college declare. Even the youngest of the stock is being shipped to market in larger quantities than ever before.

Iowa, in the corn belt, faces a ruined agriculture, with forty per cent of its crop destroyed in the face of the long continued agricultural depression.

The high price of corn and other grains is somewhat offset by the shortage of these crops in many states.

THE TENTH ANNIVERSARY OF THE FREIHEIT SINGING SOCIETY

Tomorrow the Freiheit Singing Society celebrates its tenth anniversary. The Freiheit Mandolin Orchestra, another cultural organization of the Jewish comrades, a mere baby in years compared with the singing society, takes part and will show itself a lusty infant.

The good wishes of every comrade in the party goes to the Freiheit Singing Society on its anniversary celebration.

The DAILY WORKER is especially desirous that its celebration be a happy and successful affair because the DAILY WORKER, in company with all Workers Party institutions, has no more loyal and self-scrificing supporters than the Freiheit Singing Society. Its inspiring music has been the feature of almost every affair held for the DAILY WORKER and the Freheit, and the Communist press of the United States owes a debt of gratitude to these comrades who have directed their artistic abilities into channels that build and sustain the revolutionary movement.

May the Freiheit Singing Society live to welcome, on the morning of the revolution, with one of its stirring choruses, the victory of the American proletariat. May Comrade Shaefer live to compose a dirge for the workers who fall in the final struggle, and a song of triumph for the dictatorship of the working class that their efforts brought into being.

FALLING OFF OF NEARLY 100,000,000 TONS IN COAL PRODUCTION

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 5.—Production of both bituminous and anthracite coal has decreased this year, and profits of the railroad companies are below the profits of 1923, according to the annual report of the Interstate Commerce Commission made public today.

"The bituminous coal production for the year ended October 31, 1924, totals 468,045,000 tons compared with 557,641,000 for the same period of 1923," says the Interstate Commerce Commission report.

"The anthracite production for the same period totals 91,508,000 tons for 1924 as against 97,436,000 for 1923."

SADOUL CASE PUTS HERRIOT IN AWFUL FIX

Says Sadoul Must Die But If He Does?

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, France, Dec. 5.—The government of Herriot has assumed grave responsibility by its statement of yesterday to the effect that Jacques Sadoul, altho a naturalized citizen of Soviet Russia and a member of the embassy of Leopld Krassin, the newly arrived ambassador to France, must be executed by order of a court martial hearing at which he was absent on November 8, 1919.

To Show Up Herriot.

The case of Sadoul promises to wreck the Herriot government either way it decides. If it keeps its announced decision to murder Sadoul—which is practically what it will amount to in the view of the French workers—it will disillusion beyond all question the workers who believe that the Herriot government is a "labor" or "socialist" government. On the other hand, if the government does not execute Sadoul, it will be viciously attacked and perhaps overthrown in the chamber of deputies by the right wing reactionaries.

A Recipe For Trouble.

The third factor to be considered is, that the execution of a citizen of Soviet Russia, one moreover who is an embassy attache, is an affront which is sure to bring reprisals from the powerful republic of Soviets, which still find a million allies behind the factory walls of France.

Still more is the pressure of economic necessity of trade with Russia, which is certain to be severed by the Soviet government the instant Sadoul is executed by this ancient order of the French army, which was made because Sadoul became a citizen of Soviet Russia and left the French army while on a mission to the Kerensky government from the French government.

Carlson Meeting Is Success in Spite of Police Intimidation

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WILMINGTON, Del.—Oliver Carlson, of the Young Workers League who recently returned from Russia spoke here to about fifty men and women, under police surveillance, on "Problems Confronting the American Labor Movement."

Mr. Carlson explained in detail the effect of the Dawes plan on the working class of America and pointed out how closely the interests of all workers are interlocked. He stated the only solution of the resultant unemployment was the establishment of a workers' and farmers' government.

He traced the growth of the Communist movement in Europe and told how in Czecho-Slovakia 40 per cent of the army vote was cast for Communism and how the French had to disband six regiments of soldiers in the Ruhr because of Communist propaganda. Workers who had never heard the Communist message were cheered to learn that their foreign brothers were doing something and expressed a desire that they might learn more of the Communist movement.

In addition to literature and DAILY WORKERS sold, a collection of $27.00 was taken to defray expenses in connection with the meeting.

Truth Overtakes Lies As Soviet Rule Advances With Its Giant Strides

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, a few paragraphs of Associated Press correspondence seeps thru into the columns of the capitalist press admitting the giant strides forward taken by Armenia under Soviet Rule.

It has taken this little item, confessing that Soviet Armenia "is now on its feet," a full month to reach this country. Thus the truth travels slowly in the hands of the big American capitalist news agency. The lies about Soviet Rule, or about Communist activity anywhere, are put hot on the cables, and flashed everywhere as most important news.

• • • • •

In this instance, however, the truth will overtake the lie. The news that Soviet Rule has brought "peace and prosperity" to Armenia will gradually counteract all the malicious poison spread during the years since the Russian Bolshevik Revolution.

• • • • •

Most American workers know Armenia only as the victim of the Turks. While capitalism ruled alike in Turkey and Armenia, the Armenians were the unhappy victims of their more powerful neighbors.

This condition is now changed. Capitalism still sits enthroned in Constantinople, but the Bolshevik Red Army stands back of the Soviet State in Armenia, and the Armenians are safe, even as the "A. P." admits, "to live their own lives unmolested."

• • • • •

Armenia has a population of 1,100,000. That is about the population of some of our own agricultural states, like Washington or Nebraska; or an industrial state, like Connecticut.

The Associated Press claims to get consolation out of its own figures that there are only 1,914 active Communist Party members in the country. That is a good percentage even accepting these prejudiced figures. It comes near to equalling the situation in Soviet Russia itself.

When the Workers (Communist) Party in this country establishes its strength, equal to that shown by Armenian Communists now, we will have 200,000 active, well disciplined American Communists in our ranks.

• • • • •

It is well, therefore, to present to non-Communists in this country some of the admitted facts coming even from the biased Associated Press about conditions in Armenia. Here they are:

"The people are better off today than they have been for many years. Officials of the government (Soviet) estimate that within three years the country will be self-supporting, and that within ten years it will be a prosperous community."

"Crops this year have been good and there is an abundant supply of food."

"The tens of thousands of orphan children which successive wars and massacres (under capitalist rule) left in their wake are especially well off."

"With its limited funds, the government (Soviet) is doing notable work in the way of reconstruction, irrigation, hydraulic and electrification projects, the removal of marshy malarial lands, the establishment of agricultural and industrial schools, and the cultivation of cotton, silk, tobacco and vineyards."

"The Armenian (Soviet) Government has established a splendid university at Erivan, employing 75 professors and accomodating 900 students."

"In 1922 Armenia had only 1,250 acres of cotton under cultivation. In 1923 it had 12,500, and in 1924 this number increased to 40,000 acres."

• • • • •

These are the developing conditions favorable to the Armenian masses that allied imperialism seeks to destroy in its attacks on Soviet Rule. It was in the neighboring state of Soviet Georgia, where, as in Soviet Armenia the workers and peasants are making big strides ahead; that not only the scattered remnants of the czarist regime but the agents of the Second (Socialist) International recently sought to carry out an abortive counter-revolution.

• • • • •

"Peace and tranquility," favorable to the transition period from capitalism to Communism, now prevails in Soviet Armenia, in Soviet Georgia, and in all the units of the Union of Soviet Republics. The fist of the workers and peasants under the Dictatorship of the Proletariat is all-powerful against all capitalist foes.

• • • • •

What a contrast to conditions in Germany, under the "Socialist" Ebert; or in England under the capitalist-supporting labor rule of MacDonald.

In these, and in other unhappy lands, the traitor social-democracy aids the big capitalists to hold the working masses in subjection. The triumphs already achieved by Workers' Rule thruout the Union of Soviet Republics must awaken oppressed labor in all capitalist lands to the struggle to sweep aside the capitalist state, establish their own dictatorship, and usher in their own Communist social order.

Forbes' Trial Shows How Thieves Cheated Each Other of Loot

Elias Mortimer told in court yesterday how Charles Forbes, former head of the veterans' bureau, had quarreled with him over the division of the spoils garnered from granting illegal contracts for ex-soldiers' hospitals, and from other forms of government graft.

John Black, formerly Thompson's partner, told Mortimer that Forbes was withholding Mortimer's share of the graft.

"I told Forbes, 'You got $15,000 to split fifty-fifty with me, and you only gave me $5,000,'" said Mortimer Forbes finally told Mortimer that he was going to Boston and would settle up when he returned. Later, Mortimer wired Forbes at Boston, "If you know what's best for you, you had better take the first-train back from Boston."

"Forbes followed my advise," said Mortimer. Forbes finally agreed to "come across."

Morones-Gompers Cabal Conquers Mexico

be subservient to the dictates of Washington, that banking circles in Mexico should announce that J. P. Morgan's banks are negotiating a large loan to the Calles government.

Guatemala Protests.

Even the hand-picked representatives of Central American labor chosen by the Gompers-Morones machine to sit in the so-called "Pan-American" Federation of Labor convention, cannot entirely stifle the cry of the oppressed Latin-American workers oppressed not only by their own capitalists, but literally crushed by the imperialism of Wall Street, and Washington.

The representative of Guatemala has introduced four resolutions which gave the labor lieutenants of American imperialism a few uncomfortable minutes while being read. They will go the same path to innocuous desuetude as did the protest against the occupation of Haiti by American troops passed thru the last Pan-American convention, as long as Gompers and Morones rules.

Free Speech for Labor.

The first resolution is one demanding that the United States not recognize any government of the Central-American republics, unless the workers in such republic are allowed free speech, free press and the right to organize and to strike.

The second resolution asks that the Pan-American Federation of Labor should send mixed groups of organizers, with those from the A. F. of L. to go together with native organizers, into every Central-American country to organize the workers there.

Labor Laws Violated.

The third resolution asks that the Pan-American Federation agitate and spread publicity for the enforcement of the eight-hour law and other labor laws which are formally on the statutes of Central-American countries but which are not enforced.

The fourth resolution of Guatemala asks that the Pan-American Federation of Labor demand that the execution of radicals and horrible tortures in prison of labor organizers be abolished in all Central-American republics. The resolution tells of radicals whose offense was merely that of organizing workers, being hung up by the thumbs in Guatemala.

Communist Party Driven Underground.

The Communist Party of Central America was formed in Guatemala in the summer of 1923, out of the group called "La Unificacion Obrera Socialista," and still is compelled to work illegally owing to the terrible persecution by the satraps of American imperialism.

The representatives of Panama have introduced a protest against the discrimination not only permitted but advocated by Gompers against the Latin-American workers in the Panama Canal Zone.

Gompers Calls Natives "Aliens."

The Canal Zone, it must be recalled, is land absolutely stolen by armed force from Colombia. It was a boast of President Roosevelt that he took the land without legal right by engineering a fake revolution and then sending in marines to "restore order" and seize the territory and never give it back.

Advocates Race Discrimination.

Gompers, in a report made in March, has the gall to term these natives of the canal zone "aliens" and he goes on to recommend that they be discriminated against, "all-American" workers to be hired for all good jobs, and if hired at all, these "aliens" should be paid from 25 to 35 per cent less than the "citizens of the United States" working at the same jobs. It is this discrimination at which the Panama resolution is aimed.

CROWE SILENT ON MURDER OF DEAN O'BANION

Nolle Prosses Cases Against Gangsters

State's Attorney Crowe, the strike-breaking ally of the Chicago Chamber of Commerce, has not wasted much time running down the murderers of Dean O'Banion. Members of the police force say that Crowe dare not push the quest for O'Banion's killers. They say the hunt for the murderers is a farce.

O'Banion, who according to Police Chief Collins, had twenty five notches on his gun, tore up the near north side on last election day for State's Attorney Crowe. O'Banion's pal, Louis Alterie, participated in the shooting at the Northern Lights Cafe, where a bootlegger was killed and a policeman wounded. The state attorney's office conveniently failed to present any witness against the gangsters.

Crowe Severe on Strikers

Fancy what would happen to a striking picket if a gun was caught on him. During the Ladies' Garment Workers strike, Crowe's thugs were busy every day while the strike lasted, loading strikers into police vans, dumping them into jail, and slugging them. And the gangsters that Crowe protects come in very handy during strikes. They slug the workers on the picket lines in return for protection from the manufacturers and their so-called law enforcing officers.

War Monger Throws Up Much Hokum on 'American Prosperity'

NEW YORK, Dec. 5. — Consistent with the war department's propaganda policy the Japanese bogy was held up to a New York audience by Rear Admiral William S. Rodgers, retired, in a debate with Dr. Frederick J. Libby, Executive Secretary of the National Council for the Prevention of War.

Rodgers talked gloomily of the navy which he said other nations had for American prosperity and voiced the fear that overcrowded countries would wish to force their surplus population on America. He stressed the animosity, which he insisted Japan had for America and attacked pacifists, limitation of armament advocates and the entire set of folks who are worrying the professional warriors.

CITY CENTRAL COMMITTEE, LOCAL CHICAGO, ACTS ON MANY IMPORTANT ISSUES

The city central committee, Workers Party, Local Chicago, at its meeting Wednesday, Dec. 3, acted on many important resolutions and matters. Industrial and trade union problems were important points and there was evidenced increased interest and activity in this field as was shown by the reports.

The T. U. E. L. groups are meeting more regularly and functioning better. Reports of progress were made on the needle industry and metal trades. The situation in the building trades dealing with the suspension of a number of militants was presented. (See DAILY WORKER for detailed report.)

The city organization is following up the attendances of every member of a union, T. U. E. L. and party group meetings, and branches are cooperating to the end that all comrades attend their union meetings and function effectively.

A resolution was adopted urging that the work be further driven and that every effort be made to get the branches to turn their efforts from internal branch activities towards external activity in the shops and factories. (Lists of meetings of industrial groups printed in other columns.)

The shop nuclei are functioning very well and demonstrating already their undoubted superiority over the branch form of organization and activity.

City Central Committee endorsed resolution of C. E. C. on party discussion.

The City Central Committee endorsed the resolutions of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party on the party discussion and on the organization and conduct of the party discussion. These resolutions of the C. E. C. were printed in recent issues of the DAILY WORKER.

Applications from the following branches were accepted:

In addition a number of transfers were granted.

The City Central Committee approved the attempt to organize a central library in Chicago. Pending the establishment of a permanent headquarters, comrades and branches are requested to send in their books for the library to the local office.

A resolution was also adopted urging all party members who can to become citizens and asking the federations to co-operate to this end.

Support Paterson Silk Strikers.

Collections have been made by party comrades in the needle trades to aid the Paterson strikers. About $150.00 has thus far been collected.

As wide a distribution as possible will be made on leaflets issued by the party dealing with the conference for progressive political action.

Steps are being taken to carry on an anti-child labor campaign on the basis outlined by the Central Executive Committee.

Young Workers League.

Making beginnings in trade union economic work, calling meetings of comrades working in various industries to get them mobilized for this work. Following up factory campaigns with recent issues of the Young Worker. Will have an affair on Dec 13 at the Northwest Hall and holding Karl Liebknecht memorial meeting on Jan. 11 at Northwest Hall. Other points, activities and meetings are mentioned in other columns of the DAILY WORKER.

The next meeting of the City Central Committee will be held on Dec 17 at 722 Blue Island avenue.

The last meeting was very well attended and comrades are taking increasing interest in party work, especially trade union, industrial-political activity.

The party discussion is on now. Every effort must be made at the same time to keep every department of the party functioning. Above all things, insure the DAILY WORKER for 1925. Every member buy a share!

The spirit for work is good—let every branch and every member make the best use of it, organizationally—BUILD THE PARTY FROM THE SHOPS.

Sacco and Vanzetti Are Innocent!

The evidence adduced in the latest effort of the Sacco-Vanzetti defense to secure a new trial for these worker victims sheds a great flood of light on the mental processes of capitalism's judges.

The defense brings an affidavit of an eyewitness of the payroll murder for which Sacco and Vanzetti have been sentenced to death—one Roy E. Gould who was within ten feet of the actual murderers and whose overcoat was pierced by one of their bullets. Gould says that Sacco was not one of the robbers. He had a good view of both of them and says that Sacco does not even resemble them slightly, altho the prosecution says he is the man who fired the fatal shot.

What does the noble judge say to this unequivocal exoneration of the defendants?

Simply that they were convicted on CIRCUMSTANTIAL evidence and not on that of eyewitnesses and therefore the testimony of Gould is without value in support of a motion for a new trial. This sounds like something out of "Alice in Wonderland," but it is the expression of the reaction of a capitalist judge to evidence that acquits two victims that the vultures have clutched and whom they are loath to relinquish.

If any worker has been hanging back from doing his level best for Sacco and Vanzetti because he had doubts as to their guilt, the evidence of Gould should make him ashamed of himself and bring him into the fight—a fight that is for the whole working class and every one of its martyrs.

The best answer to the vicious maundering of Judge Thayer is a substantial contribution to the Sacco-Vanzetti defense and aid in organizing the protest meetings that the Workers Party will soon begin to hold in conjunction with other working class organizations all over the United States.

Are the Workers Also Happy?

When employers begin to laud a union and its policies, as Cleveland garment bosses are doing, it is high time for the rank and file to take stock of the union and its officials.

The garment bosses point ont in a suspiciously enthusiastic manner that in Cleveland there has not been a strike for six years and compare the present peaceful scene with 1918 when one company spent $90,000 for gunmen. The bosses maintain that their agreement with the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union, and the harmony resulting therefrom, gives them a favorable position in the competitive fields of selling and credit.

When a union arouses this kind of a reaction in the ranks of the bosses it is no far-fetched conclusion to say that it is no longer a real union but a part of the organization of the employers, because the interests of unions and bosses are fundamentally opposed. Otherwise the class struggle is a figment of the imagination and unions, or any other form of working class organization, is unnecessary.

We are inclined to believe that many members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers in Cleveland will tell an entirely different story of the conditions there if the honeymooning of the bosses and union officials has not resulted in destroying completely the militancy of the members without which a union becomes a mere dues collecting and class-collaboration agency—glorifying officialdom at one meeeting and the bosses at the next.

It will take more than the testimony of the bosses to convince us that the millenium has arrived for the Cleveland garment workers.

WANTED—Laborers; none but first class excavators need apply; wages, 40c per hour.

WANTED—Man, strong and industious, to drive ash wagon; $2.75 per day.

WANTED—Experienced shipping clerk, not afraid of hard work; salary, $75 a month.

The above advertisements appeared in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch of November 20.

Any worker who is tempted to become heated over the low wages offered for the hard labor demanded should remember that he is supposed to "Keep Cool with Coolidge."

The Coolidge message expresses the "earnest hope for increased prosperity" of the Latin-American republics. This contains some elements of humor inasmuch as American capitalists grab whatever surplus prosperity puts in the pockets of the Latin-Americans.

Just 11½ lines in the president's message are devoted to honesty in government. This slogan always loses its appeal a soon as the advocates there of are in reaching distance of the treasury once more.

The Cotton Industry and Asia

Comrade Varga in his report on the economic situation for the third quarter of 1924 gives some interesting information concerning the effect on industry in capitalist nations of industrial development in the colonial countries.

He shows that in the cotton industry, for instance long hours, cheap labor and continuous labor in Asiatic countries discount the improved technical processes in European nations. England has 100,000,000 cotton spindles and consumed for the first three-quarters of the year not quite 4,000,000 bales of cotton. Asia with only 16,000,000 spindles—one-sixth of the English equipment—consumed almost 3,000,000 bales—three-quarters of the English production with one-sixth the machine capacity.

America with its 41,000,000 spindles consumed only as much cotton, measured in bales, as Asia altho America has two and one-half times the machine capacity.

There is a crisis in the European cotton industry and the unstable condition of the entire textile industry in the United States is a matter of record.

The above figures show the reason and show also that in a short space of time the Asiatic cotton industry is bound to drive its western competitors to the wall.

The figures show further the tremendously rich field for the investment of western capital in low wage enterprises in Asia and the reason underlying the bitter rivalry of the western capitalist powers for the power to exploit these peoples.

Immigration laws may fool the workers of this country into believing for a time that the bosses want to keep up their living standards. But the constant flow of American capital to China and other low cost countries is proof that American workers are forced to compete with lower paid labor in a much more vicious manner than if unrestricted immigration was allowed.

Wall Street's Useful Citizens

We take this occasion to express heartfelt thanks to the Wall Street Journal for its latest decree as to who is a useful citizen and who is not.

In a leading editorial discussing freedom and politics, this high-priced mouthpiece of American financedom declared: "LaFollette and Gompers—and apologes are due to the latter for linking his name with that of the Wisconsin quack, because he is an incomparably better and more useful citizen—have talked of tyranny so much that they believe it to be a sort of round game." This is an enlightening gem.

It is not our task to defend LaFollette. We certainly have done more than our bit, and will continue to do so, in presenting to the working masses the true picture of LaFollette and the real meaning of LaFolletteism. But what interests us in this instance is the comparison. It certainly is instructive as an index to the great services rendered by the labor bureaucracy to the employing class that biggest business can look upon the head of the American Federation of Labor as a useful citizen while it frowns upon the petty bourgeois politician showing the faintest tendency towards protest.

Wall Street has every good reason to call Gompers a useful citizen. Wall Street measures the usefulness of American citizenry by the yardstick of the dollar and the bank check. Mr. Gompers has done more than his share for scores of years to keep the American labor movement in a bankrupt, defenseless condition. In this fashion, Wall Street has profited tremendously thru the services of Mr. Gompers. Wall Street is fully justified in looking upon Mr. Gompers as one of its most useful citizens.

And as to who is more useful to Wall Street between Gompers and LaFollette we will let the financial solons themselves decide. All we can say is that the sooner the working masses of this country rid themselves of the influence of both Gompers and LaFollette, the better off those who have to toil will be.

A Crisis in Ireland

The spectral hand of famine hovers over Ireland. Food and even fuel are scarce. Soup kitchens operate in Dublin. Misery walks thru the land.

One of the richest little nations of the world in fertile soil, blessed with a mild climate, the sea that surrounds teeming with food fish, Ireland's masses suffer because the country does not belong to them but to a small class of native and foreign robbers who plunder them.

The Free State government has changed nothing unless it be to have broken the fighting spirit of large groups of the masses and strengthen the elements which want an entente between Irish and English capitalists.

There is a great potential force in the Irish labor movement and upon the revolutionary elements rests the responsibility of bringing unity in its ranks. The program of the Red International of Labor Unions must be energetically put forward by the left wing and the present terrible conditions used to drive home the need for unity to the Irish industrial workers and farm laborers.

The Irish working class, that has fought so many brave battles against British imperialism, must not be allowed to become so discouraged and hopeless that it becomes a prey to the fascist elements of international reaction.

A fighting program and unity are the first necessities in the present Irish situation.

If there is any doubt in the minds of our readers as to just whose government this is, let them compare the appropriations for the department of labor and the department of commerce.

LITTLE JUNIORS ORGANIZE BIG ENTERTAINMENT

Detroit Juniors Show "They Are Ready!"

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 5.—The members of the junior section of the L. W. L., Detroit, Mich., will present a spectacular program at the House of the Masses, 2646 St. Aubin Ste., Dec. 12, at 8 p. m. The feature numbers of the program will be three plays: "The Children's Auction," scene from Andreyev's "King Hunger" and a two-act play, "Schooldays." Solo selections by the children will complete the program, which promises to be one of the most interesting presentations ever given to a working class audience in Detroit.

The junior section of the Y. W. L. in Detroit has been organized for two months and now has one hundred members, every one of whom will participate in this program. From the very start the juniors have been marked for their activity. They contributed to the success of the seventh anniversary celebration in Detroit. They have made meetings of both the party and the league more enthusiastic by their singing. The only fight in Detroit against American educational week was waged by the juniors. This program, their latest effort, is a glorious demonstration of what the freed energies of childhood can achieve.

RAILROAD LABOR BOARD DECISION ROBS ENGINEERS AND FIREMEN OF CONCESSIONS WON IN BITTER FIGHTS

By LELAND OLDS.
(Federated Press Industrial Editor)

Long standing rules won by engineers and firemen on western railroads thru years of organized efforts have been eliminated in a railroad labor board decision rushed thru in face of a strike vote on the Southern Pacific. The board grants the men a compensating 5 per cent increase in rates of pay. The carriers themselves were willing to grant the 5 to secure abolition of working conditions which they felt expensive.

Refused Proposed Changes.

The controversy began in January when the two brotherhoods asked western carriers for the wage increase granted by the New York Central.

The break in negotiations came when the western carriers demanded as the price for the 5 per cent increase the modification of important working conditions not touched in the New York Central settlement. The brotherhoods refused to consider such changes in long standing conditions and the managers' committee promptly asked the intervention of the board, which hastened to assume jurisdiction.

Legal summonses issued by the board failed to force the attendance of representatives of the brotherhoods at hearings which they contended were illegal. The board, they claimed, was exceeding its jurisdiction. So the board went into the courts to resuscitate its waning authority and in the present decision it retains jurisdiction over enuf points to afford grounds for again subpoenaing the organization chiefs if its authority to do this is sustained by the supreme court.

Strings to Increase.

The decision grants the increases in pay contingent upon acceptance by the men of the conditions demanded by management. These changes in rules will mean money in the pockets of the roads thru reductions in overtime or other special wage payments and thru some reductions in force. The net increase in wage payments as a result of the decisions will probably not exceed 2½ per cent to 3 per cent.

The important changes in rules which are somewhat technical in character include (1) substitution of a 20 mile per hour speed basis for rules providing overtime payment on a higher speed basis; (2) substitution of the 8-within-10-hour rule for rules providing for computation of overtime in passenger service on any other basis; (3) trips classed for pay purposes as short or turnaround trips not to be limited to those where turning point is 25 miles from terminal; (4) elimination of certain rules providing more than single time pay, in miles or hours for emergency, side or lapback trips and other short or turn-around trips; (5) elimination of rules restricting tonnage handled in trains.

That this decision was rushed out in face of the Southern Pacific strike vote recalls the assertion of Vice-pres. Walber of the New York Central that his railroad granted the wage increase which started the movement because its hands were forced by a strike threat. Evidently threat or direct action gets results whether favorable or not.

WITH THE YOUNG WORKERS

CONDUCTED BY THE YOUNG WORKERS LEAGUE

STATEMENT BY THE N. E. C. Y. W. L. IN REFERENCE TO THE RESOLUTION ON DISCUSSION

In the resolutions sent to the Y. W. L. units and printed in the DAILY WORKER of Dec. 3 issue, governing the discussion of the statement issued by the N. E. C., there inadvertently appeared a section, No. 2, which might have been construed to limit the discussion to the official organ of the league, The Young Worker, altho this, of course, was not the intention.

In order to clarify the matter, the N. E. C. has redrafted this clause to read as follows:

2. Discussion may be carried on in the language press of the party under the following rules:

(a) The statement of the N. E. C. and the resolution on discussion must be printed in full before any articles are printed.

(b) Absolutely no articles can be printed in any party language paper until an English translation together with the original has been sent to the National Executive Committee of the Y. W. L. for approval.

(c) The discussion in the party press shall be under the direct and sole supervision of the National Executive Committee of the Young Workers League.

It is the desire of the National Executive Committee to give the widest and fullest discussion possible to the membership. The previous clause might have been construed as disqualifying a few language comrades who are not yet sufficiently familiar with the English language from a thoro and complete understanding of the discussion.

YOUNG WORKER LEAGUE,
John Williamson, National Secretary.

SALZMAN TOUR MEETING WITH FINE RESPONSE

Brings the Y. W. L. Program to Mining Section

Preparations are being made for a mass meeting for Salzman in Christopher, Ill., on December 8 and 8. The meeting will be held at the French Club, near Eastman. Local members of the United Mine Workers of America are making preparations for Salzman to speak before the local union of the U. M. W. of A.

This meeting is only one of the series being arranged by the Young Workers League thruout the entire Southern Illinois territory in its coal mining campaign. The Young Workers League is rallying the young miners on the basis of specific demands and slogans such as:

No contract shall be drawn up by the union containing discriminating clauses against the young miners, such as boys' wages clauses, etc.

No initiation fee for miners under 21 years of age.

The enforcement of the objective of the union which calls for the abolition of all employment for children under 16 years of age.

Abolition of all employment for the youth in dangerous occupation in and around the mine.

Immediate establishment of day and night school under the supervision and control of the miners themselves.

The six hour day and five day week.

Utilizing these demands as a basis of rallying the young miners around our organization to lead them in struggle and develop these into broader political channels the league will arouse the young miners of Illinois and organize them into the Young Workers League, the only organization capable of representing the interests of the American young workers both on the political and economic field.

Freiheit Singing Society---Tenth Year

By M. B.—N.

SUNDAY, Dec. 7, (tomorrow) our Communist Singing Society, "Freiheit" is celebrating its Tenth Anniversary with a public concert).

THIS event is of special interest to our proletarian revolutionary movement, to the organizations and members of the Workers Party. It is necessary to acquaint our English speaking comrades and federations with this organization, for in our everyday work for the revolutionary movement, in our propaganda and appeal to reason and class-interest of the workers, we forget or almost neglect one important factor—to stir not only his class consciousness, but also his emotions, his innermost feelings which are a part of the human intellect.

SOMETIMES a song, a revolutionary song, reaches depths of the worker's soul, that no amount of oratorical exuberance will do. This elementary factor is perfectly understood by our comrades in Soviet Russia where the revolutionary song is made great use of. This was also understood by our Jewish comrades who had the experience of their revolutionary activity in the old countries. Ten years ago, in December, 1914, a few comrades decided to supply the movement with revolutionary song, and in a few weeks an organization was formed with about ninety members.

THE founders and the most active members of the organization(who, by the way, are all, with the exception of three or four, now members of the Workers Party) are still active. They were: Comrades Shaefer, Bailin, Kochansky (about him later), Aspis, M. Dobrow, J. Karish, the Steinbergs, especially Mrs. L. Steinberg, L. and A. Simons and others whose names space does not allow to mention. All, without exception, proletarians, workers of shops and factories.

THEIR first public appearance, in April, 1915, was greeted by the Chicago Jewish workers with enthusiasm. It was felt by every one that a great cultural void was filled, a great need in our movement was satisfied. The following years of existence and development of the organization showed that the utility of the chorus for the movement is inestimable, not only because their song (all their song) urges to action, calls for struggles, supplies the stimulus and wakes enthusiasm, but also because they became the center around which proletarian culture began to develop, even a symphony orchestra was organized (existed two years).

WE have before us most of the programs of their ten years' activity. A large number of songs, oratorios, cantatas, etc.—and not a single song that does not urge to action in the class struggle, that is not of proletarian-revolutionary contents and character, beginning with their first song, in 1915, the Internationali, and ending with their last cantata, "The Twelve," depicting the revolution of November, 1917!

THERE is plenty of proletarian and revolutionary poetry in the Yiddish, or translated literature, but music has been written for a very few of them. Where do they get the music? They pick out a piece of poetry that answers their revolutionary purpose. . . it has the music. Comrade Shaefer arranges it for the chorus or for an orchestra and you will get a conception of the amount of work and drudgery required. None of the comrades of the chorus, except Comrade Shaefer, had any musical education, a very few of them can read music, the song has to be learned by heart, bar by bar, sentence by sentence, phrase by phrase, first with the sopranos their part, then altos, then tenors, baritones, basses. It rains a cacophonia of meaningless sounds; and this drudgery lasts weeks until the different parts are learned, and only then, when they are assembled, the singers themselves hear the song, enjoy the music and are repaid for their hard labors.

FOR a stranger at a rehearsal the question arises: What brings these working people here? What compels them, after a hard day's work in the shops and factories, to spend here their few spare moments that are so needed for rest in order to be able to slave the next day? The answer is—the instinctive call of the song, which cannot be satisfied in the shop or factory nor at home where he is crowded by other people who will not allow him to disturb their rest by vocal expression of his accumulated feelings and emotions. Hence—in the region of song the worker is compelled or instinctively strives to action en masse, in company. He works in industry in company, he struggles and fights in battles in company—he wants to sing in company—i. e., choruses.

BUT a chorus is an organization and requires incessant work: executives, organizers, etc., and money. But our singing comrades are so knitted together, so devoted to their organization that no sacrifice is too great for them, with some of them even their very lives is not too great a price for their organization.

WE will mention here one who will seems to be one of several and probably, of many of this unique organization, the deceased Comrade Abraham Kochansky. He was one of the creators and nurses of the singing society, he nourished it literally with his blood. He was a typical product of the Russian revolutionary movement entering it while a youngster and living thru the whole gamut of a revolutionist: privation, illegal existence, prison, Siberia, escape, etc. Here in the United States, he, being an irremediable walking protest incorporate, could not adjust himself to the slowness of the milk-and-watery socialist party movement and he devoted himself to the building up of an organization that can give "pep" and enthusiasm to the working people.

BEING a proletarian, he could learn enough to keep alive, but then he would be compelled to give only his evenings or nights to his pet which, according to him, was not enough; for work there was a plenty! And he cheerfully gave his days in addition to his nights. If he did work in the shop his earnings were spent not for himself . . . Due to this he was always in a state of semi-starvation and seldom with a roof over his head. Only a very few comrades knew it. Help was always offered but never accepted by him tho money for the organization he always sternly demanded. His health and resistance were gone, and in the winter of 1921, while preparing a public appearance for his singers and at the same time helping to organize a bazaar, he overworked himself in exposure—he never was clothed sufficiently—caught "a cold" and died a martyr for Communist culture.

THE labors and sacrifices of the Kochanskys (there are a number of them still at work in the Freiheit Singing Society) were not in vain. Sparks and rays of the Chicago Freiheit Singing Society have been thrown over to New York, Philadelphia and a great number of other cities where Jewish workers and comrades are organized in our movement, and new Freiheit Singing Societies have been organized. There are now sixteen or eighteen cities with Communist Freiheit Singing Societies, with a provisional national secretary, Comrade Saroff of New York.

THEY now contemplate calling a national conference of all the Freiheit Singing Societies with the aim to establish different "national" institutions, as a directorate, a publishing house for proletarian music, etc., even a Communist conservatory.

The Lessons of MacDonaldism

Speech of Comrade Zinoviev at the Opening of the Course of Instuction for Party Functionaries.

(Concluded from last Saturday)

The Coming Together of the English and Russian Proletariat.

It would have seemed as if the situation for us was most unfavorable. At the head of the English government the bourgeoisie had placed one of the most cunning leaders of the Second International and a hater of the Soviet Union. Before he came to be the head of the government, MacDonald had written in one of his articles on the international policy of the labor party that when he succeeded to power he would not permit any monkey tricks on the part of Soviet diplomats. In the same article he wrote that only through the firm and well-grounded position of the Second International, which had taken up the whole weight of the struggle against bolshevism in the period of its greatest strength, would it be possible to get rid of these injurious elements.

Regarded from this standpoint we were placed in a very unfavorable position. A furious campaign was conducted against us in which use was made of every possible "fact" in order to slander us. But a few months passed and what has been the result? In spite of everything there has been an approachment of the working class of our country with the working class of England. It is true that this was only a substitute for what could have been if we had an alliance of two real governments. But the workers of both countries understand one another. However moderate the trade unions may have been, however much they may have been bound by tradition, this approachment has undoubtedly taken place. When the politicians attempted at the last moment to wreck the treaty between Great Britain and the Soviet Union the English working class, as everyone knows, exerted pressure and compelled MacDonald to sign it.

It is well known that the adherents of MacDonald hate our trade unions. When, however, the representatives of the Russian trade unions appeared, the representatives of the English trade union movement, even the leaders, welcomed our delegates with unexampled enthusiasm. We have heard of touching scenes, how old workers have accompanied our delegates to the station and given over to them various simple gifts as keepsakes. There were genuine and sincere scenes of fraternisation.

The English Working Class Has Grown Politically.

So moderate, so much inclined to opportunism as the English workers may be, they have nevertheless, after their manner, understood the fact that the labor party has become a governing party. They understand that if a labor government came into power, they would be able to exert pressure upon the rich, to compel them to disgorge some of their wealth in order to help the unemployment, that they will be able to proceed to nationalize the mines and railways, etc. They have retained their class instinct.

The English workers began to consider that they really must begin to take power into their own hands. However much MacDonald tried to twist and turn and to serve the bourgeoisie, the working class began to understand our workers. The present "labor" government is the government of his majesty, but the bourgeoisie has been called to recognize us, that means therefore that we constitute a force. And the workers instinctively look round for allies, and they find them. Where? Of course in our country, in the Soviet Union. They are beginning seriously to think how it would be if they had a genuine workers' government.

This process has developed in the course of nine months. The Comintern had predicted it. However the heads might be inclined, whatever parliamentary combinations they played, there went on the objective process of the revolutionizing of the working class of England, of course only slowly up to now. And now when Lloyd George and Curzon perceive that the masses are beginning to speak of a real power of the workers, they decide that it is time to put an end to this game. MacDonald has been squeezed out by them like a lemon and the continuation of this game has become dangerous on account of the left tendencies of the masses.

The bourgeoisie said: enough of this fooling. They are not inclined to jest over the question of who is to rule and who is to be ruled. They have a very keen class instinct and are prepared to make every sacrifice for it.

MacDonald in the Unaccustomed Role of an Impartial Witness on the Position of Affairs in the Soviet Union.

What will be the result of the struggle of the parties in the election campaign? What will be the attitude of the labor party? As we have said, MacDonald has no particular sympathy for us. He had his hand in the Georgian affair; as a leader of the Second International he considered it his chief task to prejudice the ideas of Communism in the eyes of the workers. In spite of that, in the present election campaign the leaders of the MacDonald labor party will be compelled to tell the truth regarding the Soviet Union, in other words, to make propaganda for the Soviet Union. They have no other course open to them. The relation of forces is such that the worst leaders of the Second International will tell at least some truths regarding the Soviet Union, the home of the Third International. Even the English bourgeois press makes pretty clear allusions to MacDonald's ambiguous position.

Something similar has occurred to our Russian mensheviki. Abramovitch and Zereteli recently gave a report at a sitting of the national administrative council of the independent labor party upon the "cruelties" in Georgia. At the end the question was put to them: Shall the treaty between the Soviet Union and Great Britain be confirmed or not? And the honorable Messrs Abramovitch and Zereteli replied: of course it must be confirmed. The Russian mensheviki are in every respect dependent upon the leaders of the English labor party. They know that the latter cannot do otherwise than confirm the treaty because the masses so will it. Thus it is that we witness an interesting historical paradox, as the chief section of the Second International is compelled by the whole course of history to conduct the election campaign for the greater part in favor of signing the treaty. The events which are now developing confirm this.

Campbell Has Also to be Defended.

I will now deal with the Campbell affair, which was the occasion for the dissolution of parliament. This comrade, as editor of the weekly party paper, some time ago published an appeal to the English soldiers calling on them to refuse to fire upon striking workers. For this he was arrested. In the meantime the English workers found it was only right that soldiers should not fire on striking workers. The MacDonald government was compelled to have him released, and withdraw the charge brough against him. This was the thing over which MacDonald tripped. The liberals and conservatives accused him of withdrawing the prosecution as a result of pressure. It now appears that MacDonald and Co. must prove to the working class that it was impossible to hold Campbell under arrest and bring him before the court.

MacDonald has been commanded by the bourgeoisie to persecute the Communists. He persecuts them. The day before his defeat he carried through a resolution for the expulsion of the Communists from the labor party. It is true it was only carried through by an insignificant majority, with 1,800,000 against 1,500,000 votes. MacDonald at the last moment performed this service for the bourgeoisie. But it was already too late. The English bourgeoisie said: it is not enough that you are prepared to persecute the Communists if the workers are not prepared to do so. Thus the Times in its issue of Oct. 8 declared:

"The difference in the size of the last from the preceeding majorities is striking. The explanation is no doubt to be found in the fact that the Communists have strength in the trade unions, where they are exceedingly active and where they are entitled, by the payment of their trade union subscriptions, to all the rights and privileges of membership. They are more prominent in some unions than in others and have seats on the executive committees of several. The miners recently elected one who had been identified with Communism to fill the office of general secretary of their federation. It is evident from the figures that there was on the part of a large section of the conference an unwillingness to proscribe the Communists altogether. But the majority is large enough to settle the party's policy on the matter, and if yesterday's resolutions are observed there can be no Communists in next year's conference, no Communists posing as official labor candidates, and no Communists whatever in the local labor parties. But the resolutions make no difference to the status of Communists in the trade unions."

How the Elections Will Turn Out.

It is of course difficult to be a prophet, especially when dealing with a foreign country. As far as can be judged at present, I believe that MacDonald will hardly be returned to power, but this does not exclude the possibility that his party will be in a position to furnish ministers and for a long time to be a factor in government combinations. The English bourgeoisie has not driven out MacDonald in order immediately to let him return to power. We must not expect that in one form or another there will be a bloc of the conservative with the liberals. MacDonald will not obtain an absolute majority in parliament. He may perhaps obtain the relative majority. The workers of England are still behind him. He has not yet compromised himself with the workers as he has with the colonial peoples. According to English parliamentary procedure the party which possesses the relative majority forms the cabinet. But if the working class is raising its head, if the class danger arises, then of course all parliamentary usage will be laid aside. On the other hand the English bourgeoisie fear the workers. If the workers were to obtain a great election victory, they would perhaps not venture to overthrow their government and would be compelled to recall MacDonald to power. What is more likely, however, is that the liberal party will be ground between the millstones of the conservative and labor party. We must expect an increase of votes by the conservatives and by the labor party. A portion of the liberals will go to the conservatives, a portion to the labor party. A section of the liberals have already gone to the labor party because they see that the labor party is carrying on their policy. It is possible that there will be set up a conservative government with the support of a certain wing of the liberals, or a labor party government, likewise with the support of the liberals. In either case the revolutionizing of the working class will proceed slowly but steadily forwards.

If MacDonald is defeated in the elections and Curzon is returned to power, there is no doubt that a movement will set in in the ranks of the English working class, for they will not put up with the conservatives so easily as they have before. For the desire for power has already been awakened and the self-confidence of the workers hs been increased. For the first time in their history, the English working class have believed that their people are in power. A conservative government means the danger of a new war, increase of unemployment, a policy of blood and adventure and a capitalist offensive against the workers. But this will be a dangerous game, which will stir up the masses, revolutionize the workers, and prove the correctness of Communism.

If, however, MacDonald comes again into power, there will no longer be the same "labor government" as before. MacDonald himself will remain the same and will kow tow even more before the bourgeoisie. But the workers will not be the same. They will be stronger, more resolute, because they will have seen that by an election victory they will have once more placed a labor government in office. In either case the revolutionizing of the workers will proceeded slowly, but surely forwards.

It must not be supposed that in England there is a serious political crisis, and that the ground is giving way beneath the bourgeoisie. This is not the case. The English bourgeoisie is experienced, is rich, is still firmly rooted in the home country; and in addition possesses a great number of colonies, in which the national revolutionary emancipation movement is not yet strongly developed. In spite of this the first blows are falling, and in this respect the English mensheviki are working for us, as Vladimir Ilyitch predicted at a time when there was no prospect of a "labor government." Our English brother party is advancing with the slogan: A real labor government with a fighting class program.

History is Working on Our Behalf.

One of the chief slogans of the labor party will obviously be the following: The whole treaty between the Soviet Union and Great Britain must be confirmed without alterations and deletions. Over a year ago Curzon sent us an ultimatum in which he threatened to crush us if we did not give back a fishing boat which was confiscated

Position and Prospects of Soviet Industry

(A speech by P. Bogdanov, chairman U. S. S. R. Supreme Economic Council, delivered end of August.)

THE industries of the U. S. S. R. have long since passed thru the period when the fear could be entertained that some economic disturbances, some particular shortcoming in one direction or another could bring about their collapse, partially or as a whole. So firm indeed is the foothold which has been gained, that it has become impossible to speak of the possibility of any sort of catastrophe. The sales crisis of a year ago proved a crucial test, which showed that, in a crisis, Soviet industry could exert a decisive influence by appropriate use of the resources which were acquired during the previous period of accumulation of working capital.

Our light industry has obtained an increasingly tenacious command of the market in proportion to the extent that it has adopted a correct policy for the reduction of prices. Depression exists now only in the realm of heavy industry, but even here the day is long since past when we were obliged to tremble at the threat of ruin in the Donetz coal fields, or the oil fields. Now all that we have to consider is simply the adoption of proper plans and methods whereby the results secured can be strengthened and consolidated. The movement of the market in general confirms the fact that our industry is becoming established in a very favorable position.

Results During 1923-1924.

During the last half-year, apart from slight market fluctuations, continued progress has been achieved in every branch of it. This movement has not been checked even by the prospect of unfavorable harvest in some parts of the union. Evidently this industrial progress is deeply rooted in the possible development of our market. June and July are months when factories stop working, when repairs are done, when workers are on leave, but even these months register an increased production in every branch, naturally not a large increase, but amounting to 3.5 per cent to 10 per cent. In some cases there is even a fall by 5 per cent., but on the whole, the output for June exceeds to some extent that of May, in which the latter month the position was better than that of April and the foregoing months.

Effect of the Harvest on Industrial Sales.

If we turn to the problem of selling our industrial products we have first of all to note these factors which obviously serve to mitigate the effect of the partial crop failure. The quantity of grain which will be thrown on the market in the course of the present year will not be above that of last year, but prices of corn at the present time are twice as high as they were in August, September, or October of last year. The extra value of the grain will enable our peasants to increase their purchase of manufactured goods. On the other hand, the bad harvest this year is concentrated in definite localities, and in the remaining parts of the union the rise of prices has not been as great as mentioned above.

Further, it should be noted that cooperative activity has definitely increased thruout the present year, and that many syndicates and trusts have been extending their branches to cover the whole of the union. This means that new sale areas have been created, especially in Siberia and a host of other places which hitherto have not been reached by our trading machinery.

Increased Sales in 1923-24.

I am not now dealing with the fact that our fundamental policy of an all-around reduction of prices and the approximation of the cost of commodities to the purchasing power of the peasants is an essential factor which will create new markets for us, and will make it possible for our industry to develop its manufacturing activity in spite of the partial failure of the crops. The figures of increased production for June and July fluctuate by some 5 to 10 per cent., but sales in [illegible] branches show always an absolute increase. It is true that the [illegible] sales of the chief industrial association give a rise approximately of not more than 10 per cent., still with regard to the commodities of state industry most in demand the rise is considerably larger. The increased demand for textiles deserves special attention. Sales in this branch of industry have risen by 16 per cent. Some departments of the textile syndicate have increased their sales one and a half times, others have doubled their sales.

A considerable increase in sales is shown also by the food industry. The sugar industry, for example, has increased its June sales one and a half times, as compared with May, and the vegetable oil industry by 30 per cent. A particularly marked rise in sales is noticeable in the tobacco industry—the increase amounting to 105 per cent. Those who control this industry say that sales would have been even greater if a greater quantity of goods had been at their disposal.

It is only in regard to building materials that there is a definite hold up of prices. Lack of capital prevents big repair work from being undertaken. Things are quiet as regards building timber, corrugated iron, colors, cement, etc.

Thus, summarizing the position with regard to sales, we may say that as far as the essential branches of light industry are concerned, we have a perfectly steady state of things based on the definite demands of the market. In heavy industry, on the other hand, we are passing thru a rather critical situation in the nature of over-production

The Heavy Industries.

The steps which the special commission has taken to increase the sales of general fuel have led to certain improvements. Definite progress has been made in the direction of running railways and industry on the use of mineral fuel, and already the stocks of coal in the Donetz region have been reduced. Stocks of oil are still very large, and in so far as oil competes with coal, the way out should be found in the foreign market

The Metal Industry.

As regards the metallurgical industry, the question of increasing sales is a matter of considerable importance While our light industry has advanced to 40 per cent of the pre-war level, while the textile industry, in accordance with the plan of development adopted by the supreme economical council, is reaching a figure of 50 to 60 per cent of pre-war production of cotton fabrics, the metal industry has remained backward, and still shows less than 20 per cent of the pre-war output.

The disproportion in industry is due to the high cost of our metal The enlargement of the metallurgical market is bound up with the problem of price reduction. The calculation worked out by the special Dzherzhinsky committee announces that a price of 80 to 90 kopeks per pood of metal should be adopted. This is a big reduction in comparison with prevailing prices, and with its adoption we can expect that there will be a great move forward in the sale of metal. While the general market does not consume more than 20 per cent of the metal output, leaving all the rest to transport and building industry—yet experience shows that the demands of the peasantry for articles of agricultural and domestic utility are very large. Every instance of cheapening metal should mean a larger metal market, which in turn should permit the starting of extra blast furnaces which in turn should lead to a further reduction of the price for metal.

The Organization of Industry.

Apart from the general estimate of the industrial situation here given, it is necessary to raise a few questions which play an essential part in our industry. With an industry, firmly based on a correct economic policy, it is necessary also to improve its organization, so that by the output of a cheap and good quality article it may solve the fundamental problem of capturing the market. T. E. Dzherzhinsky, president of the supreme economic council of the U. S. S. R., has stated the problem in its widest scope, viz.: "the reduction of the cost of production by rationalizing methods of manufacture, by lessening overhead charges, and by increasing the productivity of labor."

The rationalization of manufacturing methods is proceeding along two lines. On the one hand, we are introducing a number of organizational measures, we are improving accounting, we are improving the internal organization of separate workshops and of concerns as a whole. On the other hand, more complete workshop equipment and plant is being set up. It is obvious immediate results cannot be expected. The introduction of the scientific organization of labor in a workshop employing 1,000 workers requires a period of not less than two years for fully putting it into operation.

Conclusion.

We can conclude, therefore, that our industry is on the up-grade in spite of some adverse features. In regard to the supply of the market we can record a number of achievements, tho much, of course, remains to be done. Our fundamental problem now, is not that of how to increase production, but how to strengthen the basis of our organization by adopting the most scientific methods of manufacture, by decreasing production costs and overhead charges and by increasing productivity.

Two Poems

Come out, workers of the world, to fight,
But not to fight nations!
Come out in a heavy, stamping, proletarian army;
Get out your last bayonets.
The phrases about peace are an empty Utopia
As long as the capitalists are not dealt with.
If not today, then tomorrow,
Death to the guilty—and doubly to the innocent.
Knock down the fat—dozens and scores of them.
Peace to peace, but War to war!

—Vladimir Maiakovski.

* * * *

. . . Thirty millions were shot,
Hundreds of millions groan and weep;
But all this will seem a trifle
Next to the future war . . .
All the spines, flogged in prison camps,
All the limbs left upon operating tables,
All the wounds that ache in the fall,
All the clattering crutches,
All the screams of the gassed,
Let them all unite to-day in a shout:
Down with the war!
It shall not be! We don't want! We shall not permit!
Nations are not enemies of nations.
Nations are invented by the enemy of all.

—Vladimir Maiakovski.

THE RED SOLDIER'S MANUAL

By L. TROTSKY.

IV.

Courage. Duty. Truthfulness.

31. War is always a dangerous enterprise. The antidote of fear is courage, which means a readiness to meet in a manly way any danger whenever necessary. Only he is a true warrior who possesses fearlessness, courage, audacity, who does not hesitate to fight even a numerically superior enemy and who is ready to die for the common cause.

32. People are brave not only by birth. They can also learn to be brave. Courage can be developed thru education, thru examples of older, tried warriors and thru a clear understanding of the great tasks of the Red Army.

33. There should be developed in each military unit a sympathetic attitude towards the young, as yet undeveloped soldier, so as to give him encouragement, strengthen him and educate him. At the same time public opinion must treat with contempt the deliberate coward, egotist and rascal.

The coward deserves double contempt. Blinded by fear, the coward is unable to take wise measures of precaution during battle and perishes sooner than the brave soldier; at the same time he brings disorganization into the ranks and weakens them. The coward causes harm to the common cause, as well as to himself. His sufferings are valueless and his death is honorless.

34. Individual courage must always combine with the feeling of duty. Upon your personal conduct may depend the fate of your company, and upon the fate of your company may depend the fate of your regiment. Let your courage be in harmony with the courage of your comrades. The common success should be the highest motive!

35. A slave works out of fear, but he free, enlightened soldier acts from a feeling of duty. The honest Red soldier will carry out the orders of the commanders and commissars without their watching him just as conciously and accurately, as if he were in sight of them.

36. Truthfulness is inseparable from courage, and the two virtues together are the distinctive characteristics of the conscientious soldier. Do not invent stories, do not exaggerate, do not lie. Tell exactly what happened. The high commander judges the military situation from the reports from below and gives his military orders accordingly. If the reports are false, the orders are wrong, and a wrong order will bring defeat. You are encouraged and even urged to deceive only the enemy. But whoever deceives his own comrades, thereby helps the enemy. Traitors must be weeded out! The truthfulness of the soldier will insure success to the army.

37. An invaluable means of educating the soldiers is a study of the past struggles of the Red Army and Red Navy, of their difficulties and dangers, of their heroism, defeats, and victories. The commanders and commissars must know horoly the history of their regiments and make use of that living historic material for the education of the young Red Army soldiers.

The Discussion on Party Tasks

VARIOUS FORMS OF THE UNITED FRONT

By EARL R. BROWDER.

What is the united front? Strange and weird ideas are finding expression on this subject, and they do not all come from the ignorant and uninformed. For example, consider this gem from the thesis offered to the party by the minority of the C. E. C.:

"If we abandon the united front policy politically by abandoning the slogan 'For a Class Farmer-Labor Party. . . .' "

What does this mean? It means that our minority is revising the conception of the Communist International on the united front. We always thought, and the Comintern said, that the "farmer-labor party" slogan was one phase of the united front tactic; the minority says No!, the united front slogan is but a phase of the farmer-labor party. It would be easy to understand the statement if it said, "If we abandon the united front policy then we must abandon the farmer-labor slogan." That is a truism. But to say that by dropping one passing phase of the united front campaign we thereby abandon the united front idea itself, is to betray a fundamental misconception of the united front. There is infinite variety in the application of the united front; it is not, most certainly, confined in the straight-jacket of farmer-laborism.

How is the United Front Applied Elsewhere?

Perhaps we have something to learn about the united front from other countries. What are the tactics of Communists in other countries? Do Communists everywhere stand for farmer-labor parties?

Only to ask the question is to expose the absurdity of it. Nowhere in the world do Communists make the united front mean "labor party" and nothing else. And only where the Communists are faced with established labor parties has the united front any connection at all with the term of "labor party." But the united front tactic in Germany, in France, and in Europe generally, seems to be quite effective without this "magic" slogan. They do not seem to miss the "labor party" in Germany.

How is the united front tactic applied? How is it crystallized into organized struggle? An example is seen at the Frankfort conference called to resist the Ruhr invasion, a conference called by the German shop councils under the inspiration and leadership of the Communists, and uniting the workers from below for struggle on a specific and burning issue. Another example of an attempt of this nature, one which failed in its organizational phase but brought great gains of an educational nature, was the united front of the transport workers against war, against Fascism, and against the white terror, at the Berlin conference of 1923, between the Russian transport unions and the Amsterdam transport workers federation headed by Fimmen. Another application of the united front was the councils of action in England, to prevent the threatened war against Russia. Still another application of the united front is now being extensively applied thruout Europe and Asia, in the "Hands Off China" movement. Will our minority tell the Communists across the seas that, because they have no slogans of "For a Farmer-Labor Party" they have therefore "abandoned the united front"?

Our Own United Front Experience.

But it is not necessary to go across the ocean to see various forms of the united front without a trace of farmer-labor party. In our own experience we have them. Our great defense campaign after the Michigan raids was a very successful application of the united front tactic, it was a political united front, and it was not only successful in its immediate aims but it also brought great political advantages to our party. Our campaign for relief of the Russian famine was another united front that mobilized great masses under our leadership, accomplished specific aims, and brought unmeasured political gains, with a success that was almost spectacular. Our campaign for the protection of the foreign-born workers was another very successful united front effort, adding greatly to the prestige of our party, widening our contacts, and bringing new circles of workers under our influence. In all of these, the most successful of our efforts in the line of the united front, there was nothing of a farmer-labor party, yet all were political in nature.

The campaigns above mentioned were successful. They achieved some measure of practical success, and all the gains that came out of them were gains for the working class and for the Workers Party. Our farmer-labor campaign, however, altho we succeeded by great effort in drawing political gains from it, was not such an unqualified success. The farmer-labor parties that we were instrumental in building, so we soon found in July, 1924, we had been building for LaFollette and not for the class struggle.

Why should that particular application of the united front, the labor party phase of it, which was the least successful in its practical and organizational aspects, be taken by the minority as the only form of the united front on the political field? Why do they ignore and belittle our other experiences in applying the political united front? It is because their case is so weak, their effort to breathe life into a dead slogan is so hopeless, they are so completely without concrete evidence of actual conditions that justify their slogan of "For a Farmer-Labor Party," that they are forced to muster as their only weapons the general arguments and authority for the united front and then, arbitrarily, assert that every argument for the united front is an argument for the labor party.

The minority is wrong. Their attempts to revise the theory of the united front are doomed to failure. The labor party movement as distinct from both the W. P. on the one hand and the LaFollette movement on the other, is dead, but the united front tactic lives in all its multitude and variety of forms, all of them rich in political opportunity for the Communists of America once we have welded our party into a firm, homogeneous, monolithic party, realistically appraising the actual conditions of the class struggle, and participating in every battle of the workers on the basis of their immediate burning issues.

Now, however, the fact is obvious that the farmer-labor party Jonah has been swallowed up by the LaFollette whale, and the Workers Party can hardly afford to be swallowed up in the process of becoming an emetic. The existent farmer-labor parties, all of them more or less LaFollettelst in ideology in their best days, have now become part and parcel of the Wisconsin Messiah's baggage. They have followed the siren call of the bourgeois leadership which seems to be headed in the direction of a third "progressive" party.

There is no mass demand at this time for a "class farmer-labor party"! But the comrades of the minority, who have committed the amazing mistake of elevating the tactic of the farmer-labor party to a Communist principle, and give everyone the impression that the united front manifests itself in America only in the form of the farmer-labor party, maintain that whether or not there is a mass demand for it, we, the Workers (Communist) Party want one, we need one, we cannot do without one—and by God, we're going to form one even if there is no one in it but ourselves! This is no exaggeration, since a prominent member of the minority plainly stated in the national committee of the Young Workers' League, that he was in favor of forming a farmer-labor party even if it contained only 5,000 workers.

And so this is what these comrades propose to do. We, the Communist Party, are to step out of our own garb, dress our sleeves with a red (or will it be a pink ?) bandana, call ourselves a mass-class-farmer-labor party, unite with each other, and shout to the world that we have achieved the united front. We will then be able to hang out our shingle, and invite the masses of workers into our new ballroom so that they can get a dancing partner. "Come on in," we will say, "and you will not have to dance with us. You can dance with that 'mass farmer-labor party' over there. She is not so rough as we are; her step is gentler, her dancing program holds no difficulties in the way, and she is far more mild and innocuous than you think we are. We know that you think we cannot dance, that we want to lead you in new-fangled steps, but surely there is no danger in dancing with that harmless 'mass farmer-labor party' sitting there and looking at you so invitingly. Just walk over; she's quite lonesome . . ."

Talk about your improper political dancing! Why, we would be running a political brothel!

These comrades are, if only objectively, disappointed Communists. They have no faith in the charms of the Communist Party, to continue the analogy. They think we are too uncouth to attract the masses; that we, as a Communist Party, are unable to assume the leadership of the working masses without the medium of a half-way-house (to mix the metaphor), a disguise, a piece of political mummery. They are disappointed with the failure of the Workers Party to maintain its leadership over those beautiful—altho, unfortunately, non-existent—600,000 workers who were supposed to have been so cleverly maneuvered into the good old Federated. They bemoan the loss of the workers who were supposed to flock to St. Paul, but instead ran to Cleveland.

And they, who are so anxious to belittle the vote polled by our own candidate, and perhaps secretly envy the juicy 4,000,000 polled by LaFollette, probably wonder if we can't beat LaFollette at his own game. Instead of labelling capitalist politics "progressive politics, they want to label the Communist Party 'the mass farmer-labor party'."

The writer has faith in the ability of the Communist Party of America, the Workers Party, to lead the masses of workers and poor farmers into struggles against the capitalist class on the basis of real, concrete, burning issues that confront them every day. I have confidence in the correctness of our program, in its ability to rally the masses to the banner of struggle at the call of the united front on the basis of daily demands. I believe that the comrades of the Central Executive Committee majority—and in turn, the overwhelming majority of the party—do not propose to tie red bandanas around our sleeves and call ourselves another party that will appear prettier to the workers, that will serve as a substitute for the Workers Party, or as a medium for seducing them into our movement.

And I do not think that the rank and file of our party is as yet composed of tired radicals—or disappointed Communists.

ON DISAPPOINTED COMMUNISTS

By MAX SHACHTMAN.

When the wide west was still young, towns used to spring up overnight, due to some sudden "strike" in gold or oil. These towns were called "he-towns" because of the absence of women. Now, the men were rather a hard lot, and liked their whiskey, song, and women. The first two were there a-plenty; the last, not at all. But they were not to be halted by such a trifle. At the dance hall, certain men were chosen, for one reason or another, red bandana handkerchiefs wound around their sleeves, and they were thus transformed into "lady partners." Of course, the men still remained men, but the not-quite-satisfactory illusion was created by the unhandkerchiefed men that they were dancing with women.

"Today" (as Comrade Engdahl would say), we are confronted with a somewhat similar situation in our own party. In their anxiety to establish a united front with the workers and poor farmers of this country, the comrades of the minority seem to have forgotten that the tactic of the farmer-labor party is merely a tactic, and not a principle for the Communist Party. A glance backward at the origin of our farmer-labor party tactic shows us that we initiated it only on the basis of the fact that there existed a mass movement among the workers and poor farmers, a movement in which it was our duty to participate, to drive constantly towards a clearer class position, to seek to establish leadership over it. We did not develop this tactic in the form of a principle that it is the fundamental task of a Communist Party to create non-Communist Parties—and this must be clearly remembered.

LESSONS OF THE McDONALD MEETING

By MARTIN ABERN.

July 2nd! The farmer-labor party campaign is on! The first big gun after the June 17 convention in St. Paul nominated McDonald and Bouck is being fired at the first mass meeting in Chicago. The hall is packed, many standing. There is cheering and shouting; horns blowing; whistles screaming. For what? Presumably in support of the farmer-labor campaign. Very good, so far as that goes.

Workers Party Members Compose Farmer-Labor Audience.

But—the hall is packed with whom? By Workers Party members and a few close sympathizers. The meeting is held under the auspices of the farmer-labor campaign committee—but every member of the committee is also a member of the Workers Party because no one else would serve. And this huge demonstration, staged very effectively like a good theatrical performance or a circus, by the Workers Party and supported only by the Workers Party and its close sympathiezrs—had the result of promoting, not Communist principles, but farmer-laborism. Speeches! Speeches by farmer-labor candidates and by members of the Workers Party. Speeches, most of them weak, flabby, inane, filled with reformist-capitalist ideas; sickening stuff for Communists to listen to in the name of a movement for independent political action by the workers. Speeches by Workers Party members—hardly distinguishable from the farmer-laborites. The real Communist guts and spirit were not there. All thru the evening the thousands of Communists, as a matter of discipline, made great applause—but there was no real enthusiasm for the mockery of class political action by the workers.

Covering the Lion with a Lamb's Cloak.

I am sure that every comrade in that meeting must have been appalled at the idea of continuing this stuff thru the period of a parliamentary campaign. It was not struggle and progress that was represented at this meeting; it was weakness. And this very first meeting was a concrete and singularly outstanding example, typical of the national situation, of what the movement for a farmer-labor party had, in fact, become—the Workers Party in disguise, kidding itself that it was outside of its skin. Worse than that, it was itself falling into the slough of confusion of the farmer-labor movement. "We attempted to save a farmer-labor soul which didn't exist and in the process we nearly lost our own Communist soul."

And meanwhile, where were the

The Discussion on Party Tasks

wide masses, swinging toward independent political action? They were attending meetings which, to them, were realizing their desires. They were at the LaFollette meetings. It is now as plain as daylight. Farmer-laborism and the mass sentiment, such as it was, for independent political action had disappeared as snowflakes in the sun, had been absorbed even at that hour by the petty-bourgeois, middle class movement led by LaFollette.

The thot is sickening that we might have gone on, deluding ourselves and poisoning our movement, after the masses of workers and poor farmers had gone, some sections to LaFollette and others to that apostle of "independent class political action," Cal Coolidge.

Already the facts were pressing for a change in policy by the Workers Party; the Chicago meeting indicated not life for the young farmer-labor movement but only a few stray sparks and flareups of a dying fire. It required only the additional experience of the Cleveland C. P. P. A. conference on July 4. After that it was plain to all who would see, that the sentiment and movement for a farmer-labor party had been almost entirely smothered or absorbed into the LaFollette movement. What remained of that movement was already organized in the Workers Party or closely allied with it.

United Front in Daily Struggles Led by the Workers Party.

The Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party, acting in accordance with the changed political conditions, on July 8 correctly declared that we must enter the campaign under the banner of the Workers Party in order to carry on a truly working-class independent political movement. Since the campaign was over, the C. E. C. has, in the election statement and the political thesis now before the party, further developed the new political situation and logically and correctly, according to Communist principles, charted the course for our Workers Party. Both the campaign for organization and propaganda for a farmer-labor party must be left behind. Other forms of the united front, based upon the daily struggles —strikes, unemployment, shop committee agitation, general labor councils—must be found and employed. For the labor party is not a fetish; it was not for us a principle of organization or of the class struggle; it was merely a form of the united front which for the present is dead. We want no fake labor parties; no delusory united fronts; nothing which breaks down the morale and discipline of our own party; no united front with ourselves; no substitutes for the Workers Party. Instead, unity from below; unity with the workers thru participation in their everyday struggles, with the Workers Party as the center and leader of these struggles.

The Chicago farmer-labor meeting showed us quite early, in a startling and concrete form, two political facts of supreme importance: First, that the LaFollette blast had swept what ever sentiment there was (aside from the Workers Party) for a farmer-labor party into the hopeless middle class marsh. Second, that the malaria germs of that swamp were already beginning to work inside our own party, supplanting Communist principle with farmer-laborist opportunism. The healthy instinct of our party its sound Communist character at bottom, showed itself. We threw off this diseased disguise, emerged erect, and made a campaign that established our Communist integrity and strength. We can now be proud of the revolutionary banner of the Workers Party. And we can be glad that the farmer-labor meeting in Chicago on July 2, along with many other experiences, taught us some lessons.

WHO ARE THE FARMER-LABOR COMMUNISTS?

By C. E. RUTHENBERG.

IT seems that we have come quickly to that stage in the party discussion in which epithets and name-calling is to be substituted for arguments on the basis of principles and facts. In two articles, one by Comrade Foster and one by Comrade Cannon, the Marxian group in our party, which wishes to continue to base the policies and tactics of our party upon an application of Marxism to the economic and political life of this country—in which we made our beginning under the influence of Comrade Pepper—is branded as "Farmer-Labor Communists."

Throwing stones, when one is living in a glass house, has always been regarded as a dangerous business, and in this instance it is the glass house of the Foster-Cannon group which their stone thrown at the minority of the central executive committee is bringing about their ears. If there is any "Farmer-Labor Communism" in our party it has its lodging in the minds of the members of the Foster-Cannon group. It has not only remained in the minds of this group, but it has manifested itself again and again in concrete proposals and in refusal to adopt other proposals.

The minority of the central executive committee in this discussion does not have to resort to epithets and name-callings. There is so much material at hand to show the lack of Communist clarity, their hesitations and vacillations in relation to the pursuit of truly Bolshevik policy, that name-callings and epithets would only weaken the damning evidence in a recitation of the facts.

Attitude Toward the Farmer-Labor Campaign.

The first fact which shows the hypocrisy of the epithet "Farmer-Labor Communism" is the division over the question of our attitude toward the farmer-labor party. This first appeared in the central executive committee in Augst, 1923. The Foster-Cannon group was opposed to the organization of the federated farmer-labor party. It was against the Workers Party following up the victory which it had won at the July 3, 1923, farmer-labor convention. It was for an all-embracing, all-inclusive farmer-labor party and against the organization of the left wing which had come under the influence of our party. This attitude, which was based on the conception that the organization of an all-embracing farmer-labor party, was a goal in itself and repudiated the viewpoint that the farmer-labor campaign was a maneuver for building, strengthening and establishing the leadership of the Workers Party. In contrast to this the Pepper-Ruthenberg group declared in the August, 1923, thesis that when the interest of the Workers Party come in conflict with the goal of organizing the all-embracing farmer-labor party of Foster-Cannon dreams, that we must unhesitatingly sacrifice the farmer-labor party. It is not hard to decide which of these two viewpoints expressed what is included in the new epithet, "Farmer-Labor Communism." It was certainly not that of the present minority of the central executive committee, which in effect declared: If we can thru this situation build the Workers Party into a mass Communist party of a hundred thousand workers, we will follow the policy which will bring that result and say "to hell with your all-embracing farmer-labor party."

The Candidacy of LaFollette.

Fact number two, which the central executive committee minority submits in answer to the epithet, "Farmer-Labor Communism," has to do with the attitude of the central executive committee of our party toward the candidacy of LaFollette. This question first arose in connection with the farmer-labor conference held in St. Paul, Nov. 15, 1923. It was this conference which was to issue the call for what later became the June 17 convention. On Nov. 13, 1923, there was a meeting of executive council of the central executive committee to outline the policy which was to guide our delegates to the Nov. 15 conference.

I quote the following from the minutes of that meeting:

St. Paul Farmer-Labor Conference.

Comrade Foster submitted the following motion:

"That if the conference takes up the question of candidates we shall support the nomination of LaFollette."

Comrade Ruthenberg submitted the following proposals: (There follow seven proposals to guide our representatives, among which is point 4): "That we propose that nominations be left to the convention (we are not for LaFollette, but if the convention nominates him we will not split on that account)."

The Foster motion was defeated by a vote two in favor and nine against and the Ruthenberg motion adopted.

I quote now from the miputes of the executive council of Nov. 20:

"Motion by Foster: That an effort be made to see that negotiations with LaFollette in regard to his candidacy be carried on by the labor party group in place of being left to the committee of 48 group."

Comrade Foster explained, in relation to his motion, that in 1920, when he was a member of the Fitzpatrick farmer-labor party, Fitzpatrick had made the mistake of permitting the committee of 48 to bring forward LaFollette as a candidate, in place of the labor group making him their candidate, and this error should not be repeated.

I admit, that with Comrade Foster, I made the error, corrected by the Communist International, of being ready to make the third party alliance thru the farmer-labor party and if compelled to, accept the candidacy of LaFollette, but I submit that there is a difference between the acceptance of such a candidacy after a fight against it had been lost in order not to separate ourselves from the farmer-labor masses and the proposal of Comrade Foster that "we shall support the nomination of LaFollette" in the former-labor conference.

It is certainly unnecessary to ask the question which attitude represented "Farmer-Labor Communism!"

Loreism.

Fact number three has to do with Loreism. The theses of the majority of the central executive committee is very aggressive in its attack or Loreism and the Two and a Half International tendency. One might wish that the same central executive committee majority has been as aggressive in its action against Loreism in our party. Unfortunately for our party its agressiveness had developed merely a pre-party convention demonstration before the membership. In practice it has been the protector of Lore against the efforts of the minority to bring the Lore tendency into the light of day and root it out of our party. The question of Loreism was before the central executive committee at its meeting on March 18, 1924. Comrade Lore had written his editorial on the Fifth Anniversary of the Communist International, in which the policies of the Communist International were misrepresented. I moved at that meeting: "That the central executive committee issue a statement correcting Comrade Lore's editorial on the Communist International and his statements regarding Zinoviev." Comrade Pepper amended: "That we censure Comrade Lore and issue a statement."

A sub-committee consisting of Foster, Bittelman and Ruthenberg was elected to bring in a statement on the question. The sub-committee was unable to agree, Comrades Foster and Bittelman bringing in a proposal to the effect "That the central executive committee objects to the erroneous statements in regard to the Communist International and instructs Comrade Lore to write an editorial correcting them." I stood on my original proposal that the central executive committee issue a statement against Comrade Lore's editorial. My motion and that of Comrade Pepper were defeated by the central executive committee majority and the Foster-Bittelman proposal adopted, the minority voting against it.

Thus the central executive committee saved Comrade Lore from censure and from denunciation by the central executive committee of the Two-and-Half International tendency expressed in his editorial before the whole party. The story of other efforts made by the minority to compel the central executive committee to fight against Loreism make more emphatic the above evidence that the central executive committee majority, which for election purposes thunders against Loreism, has been the protector of Loreism in our party.

The Controversy in the R. C. P.

The attitude of the Foster-Cannon group toward the controversy in the Russian Communist party last year is fact number four throwing some light on the question in which group in our party this tendency called "Farmer-Labor Communism" has its breeding place.

The issue in the Russian Communist Party was whether the party should retain its Old Guard Bolshevik leadership which had won the revolutionary struggle and maintained the victory of the proletarian revolution against all its enemies. In February, 1924, Comrade Pepper proposed that he write an article for the March Liberator endorsing the stand of the Old Guard Bolsheviks. Comrade Cannon objected. In the central executive committee meeting on March 18 Comrade Pepper moved: "That we endorse the Old Guard in the Russian Communist party." Comrade Foster submitted the following amendment: "In view of the fact that the controversy in the Russian Communist party has been decided by a conference the central executive committee is of the opinion that it is not called upon at this time to take a position on the merits of the controversy. The central executive committee will print in the party papers all the documents bearing on the debate and will encourage the members to study them and to discuss the question in the party papers. The central executive committee will condemn any attempt to make a factional issue of the matter in the American party."

Some weeks later, in reply to an appeal from the representative of our party in Moscow, that we send a cablegram to the convention of the Russian Communist party endorsing the position of the Old Guard Bolsheviks, I sent such a cable on my own responsibility, there being no opportunity to consult the central executive committee. It was not until Comrade Foster's return from Moscow that the majority of the central executive committee consented to the adoption of a resolution officially putting the party on record for the Old Guard Bolsheviks. Evidently Comrade Foster had learned while there that the Communist International did not look with favor on parties which refused to take a position on such a vital question as the controversy in the Russian Communist party.

Who Are the Farmer-Labor Communists?

On the basis of this record we hurl back into the teeth of the Foster-Cannon group the epithet, "Farmer-Labor Communist." Let the Foster-Cannon group stand up before the party and try to explain this consistent refusal to follow a Bolshevik policy as shown by this record of fact. Epithets directed against the group in the party which has consistently fought against their vacillations and comprimises when faced with a question of following a Bolshevik line, will not cover up these facts from the record.

The Discussion on Party Tasks

SUFFERING FROM ELECTION SHOCK!

By J. POWELL

FROM numerous articles and statements, published in the DAILY WORKER during the last few weeks, it is evident that our leadership, that directed the recent party campaigns so splendidly, is beginning to break down. The first signs of weakening were displayed by Comrade Bittelman in his article: "Preparing for the Coming Struggles" (Oct. 25).

Regarding of the promising headline, the article betrays a marked tendency to prepare us for nothing else but for abandonment of our United Front policy on the political field. Here are a few lines to illustrate how ridiculously simple the class struggle appears to be to our Comrade Bittelman:

"The masses will be driven to fight . . . . They will create, if necessary, their own organs of struggle and will proceed to defend themselves . . . . What will be the tasks of the Workers Party?—To assume leadership of these struggles . . . . ."

In other words: let the masses start to fight and create their own organs of struggle. Then we, of course, of course, will assume the leadership.

The trouble with this formula is that the one who waits for somebody else to start something has a poor chance to become the leader of the affair . . . . What part we will be able to play in the struggles of the masses tomorrow depends a great deal on what we are doing today.

Giving up the Leadership

On Nov. 7 the C. E. C. published a statement on election results. From this it was not quite clear whether discontinuation of our farmer-labor party policy was merely suggested or definitely ordered. A few days later a statement issued by the National Committee of the Trade Union Educational League completely dispersed the uncertainty and went even to the most extreme limit. A complete silence was maintained on one of the biggest problems that faces all labor unions and all labor conventions: the question of political action.

This question has been settled at El Paso according to Gompers's wishes, but this does not mean that it will not come up before the local unions again and again. What shall the "Left Wing" do? The N. C. of T. U. E. L. finds it convenient to ignore this question. This means but one thing: They are giving up the leadership.

The new T. U. E. L. program has plenty of demands all the way down from amalgamation and nationalization to abolition of the Ku Klux Klan. Yet, it entirely overlooks the greatest need of the working class of this country: the necessity of a political party.

The C. E. C. election statement at least says that the Workers Party itself must be built up. The T. U. E. L. declaration gives up even this point, and does not even mention the Communist movement, as if this was of no concern at all to the "Left Wing of the Labor Movement!"

It certainly must have been some altogether immaginary syndicalistic left wing that those who are responsible for the abortive T. U. E. L. statement have had in their minds!

A Bolshevik Method—Only Up-Side Down

On Nov. 16th the C. E. C. announced that preconvention discussions on party problems in the party press will be permitted after Nov. 22nd. Yet, Comrade Bittelman was allowed to disregard the party program on Oct. 25th, and again misrepresent and knock it on Nov. 15th. The discussions on changes in the party program are open only since Nov. 22nd, yet, an important section of the program has already been discarded since Nov. 7th. This constitutes a direct violation of our constitution and the methods of procedure prescribed by the theses of the Third Congress of the Communist International. Even our C. E. C. members must abide by the following Bolshevik rules:

1. When a discussion is not open in the party press, it is not open for all members.
2. Discussions shall precede decisions.
3. A controversial question of policy, directly or indirectly settled by the convention, shall remain in effect until the next convention (unless otherwise ruled by the C. I. or a special permission to make a change is obtained from the C. I.)
4. Just because a discussion period is open (or about to be opened) that does not give the C. E. C. or any member a right to disregard or annul any section of our program or constitution. During a discussion period, new policies only may be proposed, but not already forced into effect.

Disregard of these rules can only diminish the prestige of those who do it, cause undue friction everywhere, break down leadership and discipline, and bring the party a great harm.

Bolshevization Needed

I have before me the minutes of a D. C. meeting. These indicate in what confusion the party has been thrown thru the latest illconsidered declarations. The members see that our program is being hastily discarded before the Convention meets. They protest. At the same time it is evident that they are not sure which policy is really in effect now: the one prescribed by the last convention and incorporated in our program, or the one initiated by the C. E. C. thru its "statements."

The C. E. C. is our supreme body between the party conventions. But it cannot disregard or overrule any decisions of the conventions. All attempts to the contrary are bound to break down the discipline of the party.

A strict discipline can be maintained only if our leading bodies strive to establish unconditional confidence of the membership. And no leading body can establish such confidence by abusing their authority.

Yes, let us Bolshevize the party. And let us not overlook the unfortunate fact that Bolshevization is needed at the top as well as on the bottom.

A Clean-Cut Declaration, Versus a Miserable Muddle

The party program gives the following reasons why we should make every effort to hasten the formation of a labor party:

"The mighty centralization of power of the government of the United States, which was brought about by the war, the offensive of the capitalist class, which resulted from the economic crises, make it necessary for the workers to defend themselves politically. The change in the wages of the skilled and unskilled workers have brought them nearer to the same conditions of life, the taking away of the privileges of the "aristocracy" of labor by the capitalist power, the assimilation of the foreign born, the organization of the alien workers as militant trade unionists, have for the first time in the history of the American labor movement produced a uniformity of the working class which makes possible the organization of a labor party."

And the C. E. C. in the election statement gives the following reasons why we should ighore the farmer-labor party movement:

"The demonstrated weakness of the LaFollette movement, as compared to the pre-election estimates of all sides, not only seriously retards the development of the so-called 'third party,' but also completely eliminates the immediate possibility of the growth of a mass farmer-labor party of industrial workers and poor farmers, distinct from the Workers Party. A general agitation campaign by the Workers Party under the slogan of 'For a Mass Farmer-Labor Party,' would not be profitable or successful. The policy of applying the united front tactic by attempting to form a mass farmer-labor party of which the Workers Party would be a part, is not adaptable to the present period."

Now, let us compare and analyze the two declarations:

The C. E. C. does not say that they oppose a formation of a farmer-labor party. They only declare that such attempts are "not adaptable to the present period." It follows that they are for it in principle, but aginst it in practice. And this is a sign of opportunism.

Our program declares that the formation of a labor party is being made possible because of a complete centralization of power of government into the hands of capitalist class, and the relentless use of that power against the working class, on one side, and because of the growing uniformity of the working class (their wages, conditions of living, miseries, opportunities and interests), on the other side.

The C. E. C., on the contrary, does not touch the fundamental conditions (which by the way, elections cannot destroy). They tell us that the demonstrated weakness of the LaFollette movement makes a general agitation campaign for a farmer-labor party unprofitable. They talk as if the party had or was ready to base its policies on changing sentiments of middle class, instead of on solid economic and political foundations. Besides, they completely overlook the fact that our campaign for a farmer-labor party, and our election campaign (the piles of leaflets, the thousands of meetings) destroyed the LaFollette illusion in the minds of masses of voters and they stayed away from the polls. This is indicated by the election figures. In spite of the fact that all capitalist press made the greatest possible drive for a big vote, only 30 million of 60 million voters (Census Bureau estimate) took a part in the elections, while in 1916 more than 70 per cent voted.

The election statement says that the demonstrated weakness of the LaFollette movement completely eliminates the immediate possibility of the growth of a mass farmer-labor party. Suppose LaFollette movement was up to all "pre-election estimates."—Would that be a sure barometer for finding that there is enough pressure behind the "immediate possibility of the growth" of the kind of a farmer-labor party that our program stand for?

The Party Program Misrepresented

Besides absurdities, the paragraph quoted from the election statement also contains a condemnable misrepresentation of the party program. Our program entertains no illusions about an "immediate possibility" of the growth of a mass farmer-labor party. What the program says is absolutely beyond any possibility of such an opportunistic interpretation. The program says that we shall not ignore the already evident and oncoming trend for a formation of a farmer-labor party, and that it is our duty to see that a class farmer-labor party, of which we are a part, results from the farmer-labor movement. The program declares that:

"A real labor party cannot be formed without the labor unions and organizations of exploited farmers, tenant farmers and farm laborers must be included. The Workers Party will direct its propaganda and educational work to the end of arousing a mass sentiment of the labor party in the labor unions to secure the formation of such a party."

This paragraph ought to convince even the most suspective opponents that no immediate formation of a mass farmer-labor party is neither expected nor recommended. How and by whom the mess about an immediate possibility of a mass farmer-labor party has been invented, our program is not responsible.

Facts About Our Farmer-Labor Party Policy

Whoever wants our policies to be changed, must prove that they have been detrimental to the Communist movement or at least have had no value at all. Even those that want to discard our farmer-labor policy have continually claimed that the policy is most successful. Just before the election campaign the C. E. C. issued a program on "Our immediate Work." The following is quoted form this excellent pamphlet:

"We have during this campaign advanced the cause of independent working class action and made the farmer-labor party an issue in the American labor movement. We can also say, without danger of the statement being challenged, that our party had made the greatest gains for itself through this campaign for the labor party. It is thru this farmer-labor party campaign that our party has established itself as a political force in the United States. It is thru this campaign that it has established its prestige and its leadership among the masses of workers and farmers. Nothing has contributed so much to develop our party from a sectarian group to a recognized political force in the life of the labor movement of this country than our maneuvers in relation to the farmer-labor party."

There can be no doubt that the above is absolutely true. But in view of this statement it is impossible to explain the secret twist of mind that has caused the majority of the C. E. C. now to insinuate to the contrary. Are they suffering from election shock?

A Promise of a Real Leader

In the same pamphlet the C. E. C. unanimously declares as follows:

"The campaign for a farmer-labor party was a correct estimation of the situation in the United States. It declares further that the campaign for the farmer-labor party must be continued and will be a major campaign of the party in the future."

This declaration in direct conformity with our program, inspired comrades everywhere for undivided support of the party work. Now its beneficial effect is being marred by the very comrades who volunteered to make the worthy declaration only two months ago. I do not want to be mean, but the question presses itself: Do they really base their declaration and promise on the illusion that all "pre-election estimates" of the strength of LaFollette will turn out to be correct?

Conclusions

The change of our farmer-labor policy has been has been initiated extremely untactfully, and such methods shall never again be repeated by any responsible party body or member.

Occasional C. E. C. statements cannot do away with any party policy, expressly defined and adopted by a convention. Any attempt to the contrary is bound to throw the party in a confusion. We shall strive to avoid a repetition of any such attempt in the future.

The changes so far suggested are based on a complete ignorance or a wild misunderstanding of the party program. Comrade Bittelman and the majority members of the C. E. C. may do a valuable service to the party acquainting themselves more carefully with our program and constitution, and the Thesis of the Communist International.

There can be no talk of building up of the Workers Party if we will refuse to be with the masses on the political as well as on the economic field. Our program meets the requirements and shall, in general, remain in effect for the next year.

"It is easy, but not fruitful, to keep on preaching on the general principles of Communism, and then fall into the negative attitude of common place syndicalism when faced with concrete questions. Such practices only play into the hands of the yellow Amsterdam International."

Lore and the Comintern

By Moissaye J. Olgin

FIRST ARTICLE.

The Moscow Decision—Accusations Against Comrade Lore—The Serrati Case—Serrati and Paul Levi.

In the theses of the Comintern on the American situation and the tasks of the Communist Party in America, there is contained the following paragraph:

"The Executive Committee of the Communist International calls the attention of the C. E. C. also to the dangerous tendencies signalized by the articles of Comrade Lore and some of his followers who, in their estimation of the problems of the Communist International, in their estimation of the labor government of England and of the events in Germany, are manifesting remnants of views of the Two-and-a-Half International. The C. E. C. must carry on an ideological campaign against such a tendency."

As one of those present at the discussions of the Executive Committee of the C. I. on the American question, the writer deems it his duty to give an account of the circumstances wherein the decision concerning Comrade Lore was adopted and of the meaning of that decision.

At the meetings of the E. C. C. I., where the American problem was discussed, there were three delegates from the U. S. representing three different points of view on the American situation. The members of the Executive Committee also held varying shades of opinion concerning the American party. But while the discussion was extended and very animated, while the clash of tendencies was at times quite sharp, especially among the American delegates, there was unnanimity in the attitude towards the tendency which makes itself manifest in the writings of Comrade Lore. After more than three weeks' discussion, the American commission appointed by the Executive Committee of the Communist International adopted as a general basis for its decisions the memorandum on the American situation and the outline of the party's activities in the future, which were presented by Comrade Foster. (There was only one section in Comrade Foster's memorandum with which the commission disagreed).

Paragraph 18 of Comrade Foster's outline read:

"The right wing and opportunist tendencies of the Lore-Volkszeitung group shall be censured and corrected by the Comintern."

One of the other two delegates practically withdrew his own memorandum in favor of Comrade Foster's (with the above exception), and as to the third delegate who was fundamentally opposed to Comrade Foster's memorandum and outline of activities he was pleased by the paragraph which proposed the censuring of Comrade Lore.

After mature deliberation, the American commission framed, and the Executive Committee of the Communist International adopted, a policy and a plan of work for our party. The theses on the American situation were adopted by the Executive Committee unanimously. The censuring of Comrade Lore and the declaration of the necessity to carry on an ideological campaign against the tendency represented by Comrade Lore is, thus, a unanimous decision of the Executive Committee of the Communist International. The decision was adopted before the Fifth Congress of the Communist International, but having been present at the sessions of the congress and believing I understood the spirit of the overwhelming majority of the congress delegates, the writer is quite certain that, as far as Comrade Lore is concerned, the congress the highest governing body of the Communist International, would have fully agreed with the Executive Committee.

What, then, were the points of accusation against Comrade Lore? Let it be understood from the very start that the E. C. C. I. did not under estimate Comrade Lore as a Communist worker, as a man devoted to the class struggle of the proletariat and as a comrade of long standing in the labor movement. Had the E. C. doubted his Communism, he would not have been tolerated in the International. But the Executive Committee said, there is a certain brand of Communism, a certain tendency in the Communist movement which is known as opportunist or centrist, a tendency which, while accepting the program and the tactical line of the Communist International, has not yet relinquished from its mind the image of another organization where discipline is less exacting, the revolutionary lines are less tightly drawn and the fight against the socialist reformers is less severe. This tendency is in a constant covert or overt opposition to the Communist International; it is suspicious of the decisions and policies of the Communist International; it chafes under the rule of international discipline, and it expects evil from what it terms the "lack of responsibility" on the part of "Moscow." To put it in brief: This tendency is against the Bolshevik character of the C. I. Such tendency, the Executive Committee said, is expressed:

a. In Comrade Lore's support of Serrati against the Comintern;

b. In Comrade Lore's support of Paul Levi against the Comintern;

c. In Comrade Lore's siding with what he understood to be the Trotsky policy against the majority of the Russian Communist Party in the discussion of last year;

d. In Comrade Lore's attitude towards the German revolution in the fall of 1923;

e. In Comrade Lore's estimation of what the Communist International was and what, in his opinion, it should not have been in the first five years of its existence.

The Executive Committee of the Communist International took the position that if the same general tendency manifests itself in the writings of the same comrade in the course of four or more years under varying circumstances, if the comrade only seems to be waiting for an opportunity to express his opinion in opposition to the stand of the Communist International and if he persists in his opinions, never repudiating what he had erroneously defended before, then this comrade must certainly be termed a centrist. The Executive Committee, further maintains that the writings of a comrade form a good basis for judging his basic position. "Why should we not judge on the basis of articles, quotations and resolutions?"

Comrade Zinoviev said in his concluding speech at the Fifth Congress, "Theses, quotations and articles exist just for the purpose that on their basis —of course, not on this alone—we may judge." As nearly everyone of the comrades in the Executive Committee reads German fluently, it was possible for the Executive Committee to get first-hand information on the nature of Comrade Lore's writings and on the general character of the Volkszeitung, so that the decision cannot be attributed to "lack of information" on the part of Moscow, as is often claimed by C. I. opponents.

In order that those American comrades who do not remember the cases of Serrati, Paul Levi, etc., may clearly understood the Lore issue, it will be well to recall those startling moments in the history of our Communist International.

The keynote to Comrade Lore's attitude was struck as early as September 29, 1920, in a Volkszeitung editorial entitled: "Let us not allow nonessentials to make us forget the basic problem." In this article which is directed against Hillquit, Comrade Lore writes:

"We also think (like Hillquit) that Comrade Zinoviev should here and there be more careful (grossere Diskretion ausuben) especially in his instructions to foreign sister parties. And we also agree with Hillquit that it does not belong to the prime necessities to designate everyone who differ from us in opinions as a traitor."

In these casual remarks is contained the nucleus, or, rather, two nuclei, of what the C. I. considers centrism: a dissatisfaction with the iron-clad discipline of the C. I., and a lenient attitude towards social-reformists. This nucleus developed into a consistent Volkszeitung policy in relation to Serrati.

Serrati was a leader of the Italian socialist party which had joined the Communist International at its very inception. The Italian socialist party consisted of three wings: (1) the Turati-Modigliani group of a purely social-democratic nature (against "Maximalism," against "destructive policies," for work in parliaments, local communal bodies and economic organization in order to organize socialist society); (2) the Bordiga-Bombacci-Terracini-Graziadei group of Communists who unequivocally accepted the 21 points (i. e. conditions on which a party may join the C. I. as adopted at the Second Congress), who stood for straight revolutionary work, illegal if need be illegally, also among the army and navy, and who demanded a clear split with the Turatti-Modigliani mensheviki; (3) the Serrati-Baratono group which, while ostensibly accepting the program of the C. I. and its policies, refused to split with Turati and his followers.

Serrati had been a delegate to the Second Congress of the Communist International and a member of its praesidium. The Second Congress had passed a resolution requesting the Italian socialist party to convene an extraordinary congress to split with the reformists, in order that the Italian party might become a real Communist Party, that is to say, capable of leading the workers in a revolutionary struggle.

Serrati refused to comply with the express wish of the Communist Internation Congress. Serrati committed a flagrant breach of Communist discipline, the more conspicous by virtue of the prominent position he occupied in the party as leader and editor of the Avanti.

The International and the Italian situation must be remembered as the back ground of the Serrati crisis. The world in general was full of explosives. The revolutionary tide was running high all over Europe. The Communist International had just come into existence as a leader of the world revolutionary movement. The Second Congress was practically the first real international congress of Communist Parties. The Second Congress had to draw not only ideological but also organizational lines between Communists and reformists. Only with the adoption of the 21 points could the revolutionary wing of the working class be organized as Communist parties.

The urgent historic necessity of Communist leadership became glaringly evident with the treason of the Italian reformists in the September, 1920, revolutionary movement of the Italian workers. This great movement practically paralyzed the capitalist state. Prime Minister Giolitti afterwards confessed that the country had been at the mercy of the striking working masses who had occupied many hundreds of factories, mines, landed estates. The movement was frustrated and a reign of fascism made possible by the treason of the reformist leaders of the General Confederation of Labor, who did everything in their power to prevent the proletariat from seizing power ("The General Confederation of Labor in which I had full confidence," said later the capitalist premier, "showed that it deserved it.") The masses were betrayed to capitalist hangmen by the reformists of the Turati-Modigliani faction.

Even after this betrayal, Serrati refused to part ways with Turati and his comrades.

The Executive Committee of the Communist International repeatedly urged Serrati to purge the party of reformists. Serrati was adamant. While, he said at the Florence conference of his faction, "we are for the Third International and accept the 21 points of party centralism, we cannot sacrifice party unity," in other words, while nominally accepting the C. I. discipline, he openly broke it in practice.

Things came to a break at the Livorno congress, which opened on Dec. 29, 1920. Two days previous, a letter was sent by the E. C. C. I. to the Italian socialist party. The letter read in part: "Once more we deem it necessary to remind you, dear comrades, that the C. I. will have nothing to do with men belonging to the reformist group. We categorically declare to you that you have to choose between Serrati, D'Aragona and the Third International." At the Livorno congress, Serrati split the Italian socialist party, i. e. he split away from the Communists who were loyal to the C. I.

The Communist International was in an open conflict with Serrati over the elementary problem of Communist discipline. The Communists were agitated the world over. At that time Comrade Lore came out in defense of Serrati against the Communist International. An editorial in the Volkszeitung January 25, 1921, named "After Leverno," quotes the above letter of the Executive Committee, then proceeds:

"In this last letter to the Italian party, the Executive Committee of the Third International demands, as we see, the expulsion also of Serrati who played a leading role at the Second Congress of the Third International. If the Executive Committee was right in declaring that collaboration with members affiliated to the Amsterdam Trades Union International—which resolutely condemned the Bolsheviki at its London congress in September—was impossible; if it was perfectly justified in demanding the expulsion of Turati and D'Aragona, it put itself into the wrong by demanding the expulsion of Serrati. Serrati may be a hothead and a bonehead, but nobody can dispute the fact that he is an honest revolutionary. Just as little can be disputed that he did enormous things for the labor movement. By throwing Serrati into one heap with Turati and Co. . . . . one has injured the revolutionary movement needlessly and, without ground."

Comrade Lore thus declared that the C. I. was wrong, that Serrati was right and that his merits in the revolutionary movement were his justification.

It may not be out of place to recall what Lenin had to say about Serrati. In an article, "False Speeches on Freedom," published in the "Communist International," December, 1920, he wrote: "Serrati, Baratono, Zanaroni, Bacci, Jaccomo, have already proven with absolute clearness and beyond any dispute that they are fundamently wrong, that their political line (refusing to part ways with the reformists. M. J. O.) is basically wrong." "In such circumstances and at such a moment the (Italian) party will become a hundred times stronger, not weaker, if the mensheviki will leave it."

"Such a propaganda as is now being conducted by the Milano edition of the Avanti under Serrati's editorship, does not educate the workers for the revolution, on the contrary, it brings demoralization into their ranks."

"Do not speak of freedom and equality in general, Comrade Nobs (a Swiss left socialist, editor of the Zurich "Volksrecht." M. Q. J.) and Comrade Serrati! Speak of freedom not to carry out the decisions of the Comintern concerning the unconditional duty to break with the opportunists and 'centrists' (who do not fail to undermine, do not fail to sabotage the proletarian dictatorship). Speak of equality of opportunists and centrists with Communists. Such freedom and such equality we cannot recognize for the Communist International."

At the Third Congress of the Communist International, in his speech on the Italian problem, July 28, 1921, Lenin was even more outspoken. Turning to Lazzari, Lenin said: "By such speeches as you and Serrati held here, the revolution is not being prepared, it is being disorganized." Later: "Serrati's policy was a misfortune for Italy."

All other leaders of the Comintern condemned the action of Serrati as destructive. The only international-

LIFE ON A NIPPON ISLAND

By Nishimura Yoshio

WHERE the beautiful Mt. Fuji Yama dips her clear snow-clad outline in the blue of the Pacific ocean, there rises an island covered with lavish green foliage surrounded by untiring ocean waves.

The islanders call it Mikura Jima, or the Treasure Island, and the island is worthy of its name. You can walk from one end of the island to the other in less than one hour; about four miles in diameter, it is situated at the farthest south of the Izu, the seven island group, which belongs to the jurisdiction of the province of Tokyo.

When modern industry invaded Treasure Island, the islanders were able to respond to its call without destroying primitive Communism and thereby enjoying its beauty and happiness from the vague past to this era of capitalistic anarchy which prevails thruout the civilized nations. About 600 years ago, they were told that they have one more treasure in addition to fish, fruits, and roots of plants. The Mikura boxwood with plenty moisture and good athletic exercise against tropical tempest, has fine grain for comb material, from which Japanese girls contrive hair ornaments.

The people do not have to pay taxes to the village community. Instead, they receive what they need and today each family of the island population would own well over 20,000 yen if the properties of the boxwood industry were divided among the villagers.

Sometime ago Baron Iwasaki, one of the richest men in Japan, proposed to pay 500,000 yen for the boxwood, and in reply, he was ridiculed in the native way by a flat denial. Buy off our treasure? Never! You may propose that nonsense stuff the day before yesterday (the day which will never come).

During the Tokugawa clan government, the island was visited only twice in a year—spring and fall. The day the ship arrives was fixed as a holiday, and the old custom still prevails.

When people hear that boys and girls above 15 years of age are bound to work in the Mikura Jima, it is certain one who dislikes Communism will express disapproval of this custom. But go easy with it. The boys only have to work 40 days in a year. Do you think if you were told to play, study or do whatever you prefer thruout the year, except for 40 days, that this would be bad? The boys in the Treasure Island engage in fishing industry only. This is a custom adopted from the remote past, and 40 days of fishing season in the summer time, is more than enough to supply the whole population of the land. That is so because they do not have any people called capitalists who swallow more than they can produce.

The boxwood industry being comparatively new to the island, girls are entrusted to take care of the forest health service—picking off undesirable plants which may happen to grow by the boxwood. The wood is cut once in a year.

Youth has all it's freedom of romance in the Treasure Island. When tropical night steals in and spreads tender shadows over the field, you will find the triumph of youth in the home where good-natured parents smile at the paper screen which keeps all privacy beyond.

When the group of youths head their fishing boat toward the volcanic island in the setting sun, the brave ocean riders with immense joy, sing:

"One glance from rolling waves,
You look like devil shaped;
Oh, the Mikura! The Treasure Island,
Your real treasure is love."

Also the girls, spining cotton in the warm rainy day with the primitive tools, which sounds like B-e-e-e sings:

"Who is knocking?
That sounds like his way;
Ta-ta-ta-tan (sounds)
Oh you aren't."
"You are mischievous westerly wind,
But B-e-e-e—
How lonely I am
That sound is tormenting my youth,
B-e-e-e—."

There is no prostitution, no robbery, no capitalists and there is no poor men thruout the island.

THE SOVIET TRADE UNIONS AT THE SIXTH ALL-RUSSIAN TRADE UNION CONGRESS

The report made by Comrade Dogadov, secretary of the All-Russian Central Council of Trade Unions, at the Sixth Trade Union Congress on November 12, gives the following picture of the present status and work of the trade unions of the U. S. S. R.

The first notable thing is the increase of the trade union membership. Two years ago, at the time of the Fifth Congress, the All-Russian Central Council of Trade Unions had an affiliated membership of 4,547,000; now at the Sixth Congress, the membership has reached 6,060,000. This membership comprises 62 per cent of manual workers and 38 per cent of brain and office workers. The per cent of women members has decreased since the Fifth Congress from 28 to 24 per cent, the number of young workers has been lowered from 3.7 per cent to 3.1 per cent. However, this was not due to an actual decrease of women and young members, but to the greater rate of increase of male members. There are only 391,000 workers who are not members of the trade unions, thus making up 8 per cent of unorganized workers in Soviet Russia. The unorganized belong chiefly to trades in which the work is largely seasonal.

There are 35,000 shop committees thruout the U. S. S. R. The shop and local committees have 120,000 elected members, of whom about 50,000 are free to devote their entire time to trade union activities.

The financial situation of the trade unions has greatly improved since the Fifth Congress. Beginning with October 1, 1924, the All-Russian Central Council of Trade Unions has been managing its affairs without deficit. While during the Fifth Congress only 11 out of the 23 Central Committees had a stable financial basis, now practically all of them, with the exception of two or three balance their budget without a deficit, while a number of them have quite substantial savings.

As regards wages, two periods have been noted since the Fifth Congress. The first lasting up to the beginning of 1923, was a period of an intensive growth of wages. The second period which is still continuing, was a period of retarded growth of wages. On the whole, wages thruout industry have increased since the Fifth Congress by an average of 63 per cent. Taking individual industries, we now have the following wage level: 56.6 per cent of pre-war, in the metal industry, 91.7 per cent in the textiles, 52.2 per cent in mining, 89.2 per cent in the chemical industry; the average wages thruout the U. S. S. R. are equal to 75 per cent of the pre-war wages.

An Interview With Saklatvala

By Carl Brannin

THE recent election of S. Saklatvala, member of the British Communist Party and also of the British labor party to parliament by the voters of the Battersea (London) district is a smashing answer to the charge of labor party officials that Communists cannot function constructively in the labor party and trade union movement, and should be denied membership in the British labor party.

AS a member of the Clerks' and Administrative Workers' Union, and their delegate to the labor party branch of St. Pancras (London), Saklatvala has for many years taken an active part in the labor movement as an educational propagandist. Before joining the Communist Party he was a member of the independent labor party. In the parliament preceding that of the MacDonald government, he was the lone Communist member. After one term's absence he now comes back as the lone Communist member.

HE comes back to parliament now because 15,000 working men and women in Battersea believe in his integrity, in his ability as a fighter, and in the principles of workingclass government for which he stands. These 15,000 workers—not more than 30 of whom are members of the Communist Party (his own figures) have confidence in Saklatvala in spite of the deluge of prejudice and abuse which is levelled against Communists by national labor party officials and the tory press. He was the overwhelming choice of the Battersea labor party branch as their parliamentary candidate, and the national labor party conference had to accept him. His constructive ability in the labor movement is further attested by the invitations which come to him every week to address branch labor party gatherings in different parts of England.

IN an interview with Saklatvala a short time after the election I had an opportunity to learn something of his attitude toward the problems confronting the British workers under the new tory government.

"MY attitude in parliament toward the labor party," he said, "will depend very largely upon the position of the labor party group toward the big domestic and imperialist problems now facing the country. If such men as George Lansbury, Maxton and others like them are to be kept in the back benches instead of being placed in the front as leaders, I shall certainly raise my voice as the opposition. This can only mean that the labor party has completely recanted its former position as to reparations, Egypt, India, military and naval expenditures and imperialism generally. If the labor party begins to follow in the footsteps of its past eight months in office with men like MacDonald in the lead, a vigorous effort must be made to arouse the rank and file against this. It cannot continue this reactionary course and live as a strong instrument of working class expression."

I had heard Saklatvala on several occasions during the elections and knew him as a convincing dynamic speaker taking his stand on the basis of the class struggle and meeting such questions as the Russian treaty, unemployment, and British imperialism as a revolutionary internationalist. As he outlined his position in our talk the same vehemence of gesture and facial expression came forth to give emphasis to his intense feeling on the subject. He continued:

"EVER since the Bolshevik revolution the British workers have found inspiration in the progress of their Russian comrades in the building of a new society. The labor party officials have never reflected the real depth of this sentiment in their attitude toward Russia. They proposed the Russian treaty as a commercial matter all the time declaring their abhorence of the Bolshevik government and Communism. There was no real working class appeal for international solidarity. Naturally this was bound to create a psychology among many British workers which allowed them to be stampeded by the false Zinoviev letter. MacDonald bungled his end of the matter and it cost the labor party working class votes. While labor polled a million more votes this time than at the previous election, it must be remembered that there were 55 more parliamentary candidates in the field, which gave many an opportunity to vote labor who had never had it before. I am convinced that had MacDonald and the leaders acted with decision and courage on the vital issues of the campaign, even with their bad record in office, we would not have lost the seats we did and probably would have gained."

THAT labor's participation in parliamentary action must lead to the acceptance of the Communist position was a point which Saklatvala said should be emphasized repeatedly. The policy of the labor party in fishing for middle-class and liberal votes—refusing to discuss the capital levy in one district—the Russian treaty in a second—prohibition in a third, etc., could only make for confusion and defeat of the real purpose of working class political action. Already the lure of place and preferment in government and public life was making itself felt and the political wing of labor was being over-emphasized to the weakening of the industrial wing. The workers were being told they must get along amicably with their employers—there were no real differences which could not be settled between them without strikes and disruption. There were men in the labor party—high up in its counsels—preaching this doctrine of class-collaboration in their desire for recognition by business people as "constructive labor leaders" worthy of high office.

SAKLATVALA'S parting word was, "Labor must learn to be absolutely honest with itself. It blames its reactionary officialdom for lack of progress and applauds a radical program but when the issue is drawn and the choice lies between the old crowd and a new militant leadership too often it hangs back and refuses to make the break. There is no half-way ground. You are either right or left. Labor must be honest and choose the left."

A HINDU by birth, Saklatvala is married to an Englishwoman and has a family of five children. He is about 45 years of age.

in our waters, if we would not pay indemnity for two spies whom we had put into prison. Over a year has passed and England, that powerful country, has passed thru a political crisis. The elections will follow and the labor party, which is the governing party, goes into the fight with the slogan: The whole treaty with the Soviet Union without deletions. You see how history is working for us.

Our comrades sometimes say that the world revolution is proceeding too slowly and question whether the Comintern is not responsible for the slow rate of advance. I am ready to admit that the revolutionizing of the West could proceed more rapidly. In fact the Comintern could and ought to work more energetically. But comrades, one can say without hesitation that if you take the period of nine months which has just elapsed, we can hardly complain of slowness. In these nine months we have witnessed how the Second International has succeeded to the government in a number of countries and, under symptoms of the revolutionizing of the workers, have been turned out again.

The Democratic-Pacifist Era is Only a Hostorical Episode.

It has been said of late that an epoch or era of democratic pacifism had arrived: in England a menshevist government; in France a government of the "left bloc," actively supported by socialists; in Denmark a social democratic government; in Belgium a labor government is expected any day; in Jugo-Slavia the Davidovic cabinet, etc. In one word, an epoch of democratic pacifism.. Some comrades jumped to the conclusion that this will retard the proletarian world revolution for years; that a prolonged peaceful period of capitalism has set in and that therefore a change of tactics is necessary. If we faithfully describe the events which are proceeding in Europe we must say, and the Fifth World Congress has said, that the bourgeoisie is attempting by means of the menshevists to introduce a new sort of government because they can no longer govern with the old methods of terror and brutality. They were compelled to don the mask of pacifism and of democracy, and for the second time after the war to invite representatives of the Second International to take the reigns of government. The Fifth Congress of the Comintern had, as a result of an analysis of the situation which had arisen, come to the conclusion that this epoch will not last long, that it is a masquerade of the bourgeoisie and is not a sign of its strength but of its weakness.

Every change of epoch—from fascism to pacifism, from democracy to white dictatorship and vice versa—shakes the foundation of the bourgeois world. The democratic pacifist era will pass by and the revolution will come. And it is our task to expose those who disguise themselves; to tear off the masks and to remain uncompromising Bolsheviki to the end. Hence the slogan: Bolshevizing our parties!

What do we see now? If MacDonald has to go and Lloyd and Curzon take his place, where then will the notorious democratic-pacifist era be? There will be nothing left of it.

The Position of Herriot is No Better.

In the France of Herriot, pacifism is likewise fading away before it has reached full bloom. We have just had a visit from Marty. He has told us of the feeling prevailing in France. There is no longer any magic in the idea of the left bloc, which a few months ago quite turned the heads of the population. During the election campaign Herriot, in order to gain the votes of the civil servants, promised them an increase of salary of 150 francs a month. Now he is at the head of the government and the position of the civil servants has not improved. The electors remember this promise and say: Now you are in the government, therefore pay up this 1,800 francs. This figure of 1,800 francs is now the most popular slogan. Just imagine how a mere trifle such as an increase of salaries to 1,800 francs can shake the whole left bloc, with Herriot, and the whole democratic-pacifist era.

This is an interesting historical episode. The underlying class antagonisms are growing more acute. The bourgeoisie and the proletariat are facing one another in sharply divided fronts.

We Have No Cause to Be Despondent.

The course of events is not so tardy as it seems. If you consider the events before the war; there did not occur in the course of 10 years so many important events as now occur in the course of 10 days. In England in the man stronghold of capitalism, the most important party of the Second International, in response to the pressure of their own worers, will "shed blood" for us the Bolsheviki. How has this unexpected circumstance arisen? In the last resort the course of events is not determined by our clever "diplomacy," but by such simple facts as the course of the class struggle, upon which is based Marxism, Leninism and the Comintern. The course of history determines that the working class of England, with a rich upper strata, with a strong labor aristocracy, regardless of the prejudices against Bolshevism, perceives and feels the correctness of our standpoint and cannot be deceived by Georgian fairy tales.

A differentiation has set in in the English working class, and this is a world-historical event. Marx once said that a revolution without England would only be a storm in a tea cup. For the world power of England rests upon India, Egypt, etc.

What shall we wish as a result of the approaching elections? We desire from the bottom of our hearts a victory for MacDonald. MacDonald recently announced before the whole world that he is no Communist. Love's labor lost! Who could charge MacDonald with having anything in common with Communism? We know this quite well, and in spite of it we wholeheartedly wish MacDonald a victory in the elections and desire that he will enjoy his victory not only for nine months, but for eighteen or more months. But we confess that we will not weep if he suffers a defeat. In either case the English labor movement will go forward.

The Popularity of the Soviet Union Among the Workers of the West is Growing.

Never before were our Soviets so popular in the eyes of the working masses—even of the reformist workers—as at present. In the years 1920-22, the years of hunger and disaster, the idea of the Soviet power was not so attractive among this section of the workers. But now all workers know, even the reformist workers, that our cause is advancing. They say: Even if wages with you are lower we see that things with you are on the up-grade, but with us in Europe they are on the down-grade. It is now perfectly clear that in one or two years the question of workers' efficiency, say for instance, in the Kolomna factory, will be of international importance. The workers of the whole world will pass judgment upon us. Comrade Fimmen when he was in Moscow related the following interesting episode: He had received a letter from the chairman of the reformist seamen's union of a certain country. This individual was a hopeless reformist and a hater of Moscow. And this trade union leader had received a pamphlet published by our seamen's union, which contained particulars as to the conditions of work and terms of engagement of seamen in the Soviet Union. He read this brochure and now writes to Fimmen: I have read the particulars regarding the conditions of work of the seamen in the Soviet Union; if these are true, it means that we have been shamefully deceived.

You see what enormous propagandist importance is possessed by such a minor thing as the working day in the socialist republic. Workers always remain workers, even if they are reformists. When they were told that with us starvation, and cannibalism prevails, and that the workers are living in slavery, etc., these reformist workers did not understand the Russian revolution. But now when they see the reverse side of the medal—that the workers are free, that the efficiency of labor is increasing, that the situation is improving—then the Soviet power and its ideas become the greatest propagandist force in the whole world, and begin to sound like a tocsin as they never sounded before.

We have every reason to be satisfied with the experience of the last nine months. We will, of course, follow the election campaign in England with the greatest interest. It is said of us that we are sending Communist agitators there. "Wise" bourgeois gentry of the type of Hughes claim that I have a hundred agitators up my sleeve whom I can dispatch to any desired country. I am sorry to say I am not endowed with such a capacity. We hope that even the leaders of the labor party, while agitating for themselves, will be compelled to tell the truth regarding the Soviet Union. And the working class of England will see that our Soviet Union will point out the way to the whole world, for the truth is on our side. For thruout the whole world it is not the ideas of petty bourgeois, menshevist, "constructive" pseudo-socialism which are proceeding to victory, but the ideas of Leninism.

MUSIC -:- By Alfred V. Frankenstein

"Madame Butterfly," a masquerade party in three acts, set to music by Giacomo Puccini, was given by the Chicago Civic opera company last Monday night. It was a bit more than just a performance of the opera. It was a sort of memorial ceremony, for the composer had been scarcely forty-eight hours dead when the curtain went up on this opera, which is, next to "La Boheme," his most popular work.

A criticism of "Butterfly" is a criticism of Puccini, for obvious reasons. Altho "Tosca" is probably a greater opera, "Butterfly" represents a norm of Puccini's achievement. Fully a third of it padding, obvious, trite, simply thrown in. The rest is some of the most inspired and lovely lyrical melody in musical literature. There is always a wiping of eyes in the audience at the conslusion of the aria, "One Day He'll Come," at the beginning of the second act, there is generally a commingling of tears and applause at the final curtain. Most of them have heard the opera time and again, and yet there is always the same effect. Which means, Puccini was a success, both artistically and financially. He never startles us, he never makes wonder at his novelty of invention, but he can make us weep.

As to the performance of Monday night, the best work was done by a tiny little lady whose name was not on the program. At any rate she played the part of Madame Butterfly's baby, and she was the first child I have ever seen take the part without looking something like a kewpie doll.

Edith Mason was very fine in the name part. She did not look her role, at least not as aptly as other singers look the part, which is not her fault, but in her acting and singing she was the deluded little Japanese girl.

Charles Hackett, as Pinkerton, had one of the queerest roles in opera. Pinkerton is a dissolute and reprehensible sort of cuss, but his part in the opera makes him a highly idealized villain. Hackett sang the party adequately, but Pinkerton is not a very great tenor role.

The smaller parts, such as the servant Suzuki, played by Flora Perini, the American consul Sharpless, which Giacomo Rimini sang, and the marriage broker, as Ludovico Oliviero portrayed him, were all excellent, and contributed to the making of the frame and background for Miss Mason's lead.

Costumes and scenery suggested a would-be Japanese tea house on Sheridan road rather than real Japan. The main reason for that is that even tho you give a man a William Z. Foster haircut (I've got to retaliate somehow for his referring to the LaFollette movement as a "Frankenstein") and dress him up in a kimono, he won't look very Japanese if his features and build are those of Rome.

ly known Communist who supported Serrati was Paul Levi of shameful memory, the man who later found a resting place in the arms of the German social-democrats. Comrade Lore called Paul Levi to witness the correctness of his (Lore's) attitude towards Serrati. On February 19, 1921, the Volkszeitung reprinted from the "Rote Fahne" an article by Paul Levi, praising the Serrati group beyond words and expressing hope that the Communist International would keep them. A footnote of the editor to the article reads:

"It gives us vivid satisfaction that Comrade Dr. Paul Levi, author of this article, takes a position towards the Italian congress and particularly, towards the Serrati group which is perfectly identical with the position of the Volkszeitung as expressed in our editorial three weeks ago."

Comrade Lore thus links himself with Paul Levi. We shall see that this relationship was destined to become more pronounced later.

(Second article will be published in next issue of this supplement.)

SUFFERING FROM ELECTION SHOCK!

International fits our case to the point. This very negative attitude can be clearly seen in the latest statements of the C. E. C., T. U. E. L. and Y. W. L., and Comrade Bittelman's articles. By refusing to recognize the crying need for a political unity of proletarians, who are slowly, but surely forced to look for political weapons, and as yet are far from being able to understand a necessity for a Communist Party, we will only play into the hands of our yellows. And, if the T. U. E. L. statement reflects the new C. E. C. policy correctly, then they are already on "common place syndicalist" grounds. But they shall not remain there!

MORGAN LIFTS HIS FIST IN EUROPE

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

J. E. THOMAS, former colonial secretary in the MacDonald government and secretary of the National Union of Railwaymen, apparently has not gained in popularity among the members of the union since he became the manager of John Bull's colonies. When Thomas lost his job as colonial minister, he returned to the union's payroll and at the earliest possible moment arranged a mass meeting for himself in London. The London council of the N. U. R. however refused to have anything to do with the faker Thomas' meeting and that worthy gentleman therefore called off his talkfest. Things are moving in England.

MUCH indignation is running riot in the capitalist press over the enthusiasm for the Soviet regime shown by the British labor leaders who visited the recent Congress of the All-Russian Trade Unions. The yellow socialist guardians of the Amsterdam International issue warnings that British labor will repudiate Purcell, Till and the other visitors, when they return. There will be a fight of course. All British labor is not ever as far advanced as Purcell, Tillet and Bromley, but the revolutionary leaven is working, and the Communist Party of Britain, small tho it is, gives the revolutionary movement leadership.

ANOTHER desperate effort to kill the Communist government of Russia, is the secret of the present international campaign led by the tory government of England against the Soviet power. The strongest reason for the present campaign is the great inroads Communist propaganda is making in the colonial possessions of the robber powers. The growing influence of Soviet Russia in China, the inspiration given by the workers' republic to the exploited peoples of India, Egypt, Morocco and other countries has created terror among the ruling classes of the world who maintain their power by exploiting their own proletariat at home and by the double exploitation of the poor natives in the colonies.

THE specter of Communism hovers over Europe today much more visibly than when Karl Marx wrote the famous manifesto. The frenzied efforts of the capitalists to destroy this menace by executions and jails will only arouse the working class to more determined action against their enemies. That Herriot, the so-called socialist premier of France should become the lieutenant of the British tory government in leading the anti-Communist fight in Europe, again proves the Communist contention that there is only one party in every country; that is a class party of labor and that is the Communist Party. All other parties are fundamentally anti-labor. Herriot in France, MacDonald in England and LaFollette in America fight for capitalism when it is in danger just as vigorously as the Baldwins, Poincares and Coolidges.

GREAT BRITAIN has dropped the league of nations and old fashioned diplomacy is no longer on the offensive. Austen Chamberlain is touring Europe making secret treaties in the good old style. The British ruling class will not allow the United States capitalists to snatch world leadership from them without a struggle. Watch the tory government. England has signed commercial treaties with Germany. What this does to the Dawes plan may not appear on the surface, but the D. P. will not run as smoothly as Wall Street would wish. The advantages "civilization" gained by the late war appear so slight that it is even doubtful if Sam Gompers would have the impudence to sing its praises before an audience of mental defectives or—labor fakers.

EVEN little Cuba is in the business of deporting labor organizers. Cuba was freed from the tyranical rule of the Spanish by the troops of the American sugar and tobacco interests. The Cuban wage slaves did not seem to appreciate their liberty. Spanish labor organizers are deported to Spain and another "foreigner" is deported to America.

PRESIDENT CALLES of Mexico is giving supreme satisfaction to the American bankers. This is not surprising. Did not the socialist party of New York hold a torchlight parade

FIGHT PLOT TO STEAL VICTORY OF COMMUNIST

Start Recount of Vote for Youngdahl

(Special to the Daily Worker)

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Dec. 7.—The election machinery of capitalist democracy is under fire in the 35th Minnesota legislative district by the recount starting now.

Emil S. Youngdahl, Communist candidate in the recent election was declared defeated on the official count after his election to the state legislature had been conceded by the daily papers which gave him a majority of approximately 500 votes. In the official returns he was declared defeated by 150 votes.

Show How Results Vary.

A careful check was made by party comrades on the night of the election and in a half dozen election districts the figures reported by them was at great variance from those contained in the official count.

In one district the report showed that Comrade Youngdahl received 43 more votes than the official count gives him. In one precinct he received but 30 votes in the primary election. In the general election a comrade was detailed to watch this precinct and the result was that his vote jumped to 216 in this precinct.

The capitalist tactics was to make any sort of combination against Comrade Youngdahl. Two fake labor tickets were circulated in the district, both of them carrying the name of Gallagher, who was also the candidate of the reactionary red-baiting Minneapolis Journal, and cutting off Comrade Youngdahl, who carried the organized labor's endorsement.

The night before election the agent for the Jewish Daily Forward was presiding at a farmer-labor mass meeting in the Jewish part of the district and made vigorous attempts to stop Comrade Youngdahl from speaking to the assemblage but he failed miserably. Comrade Youngdahl carried the Jewish district by a large majority.

The opposition to Comrade Youngdahl was not confined to the capitalist class and their able allies, the American Legion and the Ku Klux Klan. R. D. Cramer, editor of the Labor Review, and who had been accused of being a Communist sympathizer, took up the battle against the election of Youngdahl and in an editorial withdrew the support of his publication from Youngdahl's candidacy because of Youngdahl's support of the national Workers Party ticket.

Knew Youngdahl as Communist.

Despite all of these concentrated attacks on the part of the capitalists and the fake labor leaders, Youngdahl polled a vote of 7,885 on the official count. This vote is greater by 600 than the highest vote polled in the legislative contest two years ago in this district. On account of his Communist activities in the labor movement and as a member of the Minneapolis park board, coupled with bitter denunciation directed against him both in the capitalist daily press and fake labor papers, there were very few in the district but knew that Comrade Youngdahl is a Communist. The large vote becomes therefore the more significant.

On the first day's recount Comrade Youngdahl gained 26 votes in five precincts counted. There are 36 precincts yet to be counted. Every one of the precincts counted showed errors at the expense of his vote. This indicates that even in the matter of counting the votes the capitalist enemies were busy.

Comrade C. A. Hathaway, district organizer of district 9, Workers Party, is inspector of the recount for Comrade Youngdahl. The recount is being watched with keen interest thruout the city and the daily press is being forced to give it daily publicity.

IN CHICAGO FINANCIAL CROOKS' ROW

GENERAL DAWES TO LEO KORETZ: "Hell and Maria, Leo, SOME of us have got to do time!"

GERMAN RULING CLASS INSURING THE ELECTIONS

Arrest and Imprison All Leading Communists

(Special to the Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Dec. 7.—The German election campaign is over, and voting is taking place today. The capitalist and socialist press gleefully predicts losses for the Communist Party in the next Reichstag.

It is only fair to the capitalist to admit that they have taken all precautions to make their predictions air tight.

Many Communists in Jail.

Practically every Communist leader who came within reach of the government is in jail. The entire Communist representation in the reichstag, is either in prison or declared "illegal." The loss of sixty-two prominent leaders, the Communist strength in the last reichstag, is a serious handicap to the party. But that is not all. Every trade union leader who is either a member of the Communist Party or a sympathizer is arrested or threatened with arrest, so that while the official ban of illegality has been lifted from the Communist Party, it is outlawed in this election.

Two Kinds of Terror.

In addition to the campaign of terror carried on by the capitalist government against the Communists, the reactionary trade union leaders are also threatening the workers with starvation and unemployment unless they vote for the Dawes' plan. They point out that the Communists are against the Dawes' plan and if they are given a large vote, the American bankers will lose confidence in Germany and will withdraw its financial support.

The social democrats are vieing with the other capitalists parties in praising Wall Street for its aid to German industry. The extreme nationalists are divided, some of them being patriotic reasons and some favoring it for the same reason. The Communists alone oppose it on the ground that it means a further enslavement of the working class.

THREE COMMUNISTS, SOLDIERS OF CLASS WAR, KILLED BY SPAIN

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PAMPLONA, Spain, Dec. 7.—The military dictatorship has murdered three more Communists. Juan Santillan and Sanchez Gil were shot in the prison here at dawn yesterday. Pablo Martin took is own life on the way to the execution.

They were given no trial, other than a farcical hearing of a few minutes before a court martial, which would allow no testimony in their behalf or even a legal representative.

Pablo Martin took his own life, when, on the way to the place of execution he broke away from his captors and leaped to his death from a gallery of the prison.

LOGAN COUNTY SHERIFF GIVEN ANOTHER BLOW

Valuable Graft Taken Away from Him

(Special to The Daily Worker)

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Dec. 7.—That the coal companies of Logan County were the law and the government in this stronghold of the open shop is definitely proven thru an admission from the attorney general of West Virginia, when an injunction was granted prohibiting the "mine guard" system. Judge A. P. Hudson of the Kanawha County circuit court issued the injunction.

The injunction is directed against circuit court judge, Robert Bland, of Logan; prosecuting attorney, John Chafin, of Logan; W. F. Farley, Johnson Queen and P. M. Toney, the Logan county commissioners; C. L. Estep, assistant prosecuting attorney; approximately 250 deputy sheriffs and about 50 Logan county coal companies.

Restrains County Officials.

The order restrains the sheriff, county court and other officials from appointing deputies to act as watchmen for private individuals or corporations, restrains the deputies from further acting or performing any duties in the capacity of guards or watchmen for any private individual, firm or corporation, and restraint the coal company from paying money directly or indirectly to the deputies for services or to Sheriff Chafin for appointing deputies to act for any individual, firm or corporation.

Chafin is charged by the attorney general with illegally appointing nine guards, that the deputies are paid by the coal companies and not by the county and that Don Chafin is paid for making the appointments.

Beats Up on Witness.

Sheriff Chafin recently inflicted injury on a witness who testified against him. The sheriff was arrested and released on bail. The notorious thug and murderer was also convicted of violation of a federal statute and sentenced to the Atlanta penitentiary. But he has sufficient influence to keep him out of jail.

It is reported that a struggle for power between democratic and republican politicians is largely responsible for the present injunction.

GOVERNMENTS OF FRANCE AND ENGLAND START WHITE TERROR TO FORCE DAWES PLAN ON LABOR

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, France, Dec. 7.—The government of Herriot, the so-called "radical socialist," has arrested 300 Communist workingmen and has announced thru Minister of the Interior Chautemps, who is commander of the national police, that it has the movement under control.

These workers were taken in raids upon Communist headquarters both in Paris and thruout France. This is the result of an international conspiracy to crush working class resistance to the Dawes plan.

Twenty police commissioners and 700 men of the political police were engaged in searches for rumored "stores of arms" and the Communist army of 29,000 men" which a catholic cardinal warned against the other day. They got 300 workers but no arms.

Not One Russian—Ain't That Hell?

Only 70 of these workers are foreigners, and not a single Russian was taken, which was quite a disappointment as Herriot had only yesterday declared of the chamber of deputies: "There are to many foreign Communists in France. They are indulging in political demonstrations and we will not tolerate it; we will not let them meddle in our political life. If we meet resistance we will break it; and we will deport as many as necessary."

That the whole affair is part of the plan by European capitalist governments to attempt to break the resistance of labor to the enslaving Dawes plan, is seen by the statement of Herriot, who frankly admits a conspiracy with the English government against the working class. He says:

Admits Conspiracy Against Workers.

"Mr. Chamberlain and I readily agreed to the necessity of putting down the Bolsherik activities." This was openly told press reporters following the conversations between Herriot and Austin Chamberlain, secretary for foreign affairs in the new tory cabinet of England.

The declaration of war on the working class issued by Herriot following the visit of Chamberlain, was made in the chamber of deputies when the 26 members of the Communist parliamentary fraction made a combined attack on the government's suspension of Mayor LaFlanche of the village of Douarenez, because he had led and aided strikers in the sardine canneries. Fist fights took place in many parts of the chamber and had to be quelled by the sergeants-at-arms.

The Herriot government has followed up its war upon the Communists with an open drive against a series of strikes in the province of Finistere, by dispatching a punitive expedition of 200 mounted police to crush the strikers.

Fight for Amnesty Spreads.

The famous French Communist, Jacques Sadoul, now a citizen of Soviet Russia, has been transferred from the military prison at Paris to a prison at Orleans. Meanwhile, the Communist newspaper, L'Humanite, is rousing the workers in the great fight for amnesty. It says:

"Our password today is the same as yesterday—wrench Sadoul away from the military judges, open the frontiers and jail doors to all victims of class sentences, whom the senate is keeping in penal settlements or exile."

HERE'S PROGRESSIVE SLATE IN ELECTIONS OF MINERS, TUESDAY

The slate of the Progressive coal miners in the referendum elections to be held Tuesday, Dec. 9, is as follows:

FOR INTERNATIONAL OFFICERS.

For international president, Geo. Voyzey, Verona, Illinois.

For international vice-president, Arley Staples, Christopher, Illinois.

For international secretary-treasurer, Joe Nearing, Nova Scotia, Canada.

FRENCH COMMUNIST PARTY SHOWS WHY IT IS PERSECUTED—STATES RIGHT WING IN PARTY MUST GO

That the raids on the Communist Party of France, as carried out by the order of Premier Herriot, and the general persecution of French workers on strike, have a clear and direct connection with the domination over France of the banking interests of J. P. Morgan and company, is seen by the analysis of the international political situation given by the Communist Party of France in its latest thesis, a part of which the DAILY WORKER gives below.

It is to be particularly pointed out that the French Communist Party takes the view that the shifting of class alignments in the wake of American imperialism's conquest of Europe, makes necessary a hard fight against social-democratic deviations, in whatever form they appear, in the Communist Party and relentless warfare against French imperialism as part of the fight against world capitalism.

Thesis on the International Situation and Tasks of French Communist Party

VI.

The conditions imposed on France by the American capitalists (Hurley-Mellon plan) make her dependent on finance capital, and primarily on American capital. A considerable portion of the reparations payments (more than half of the 52 per cent which goes to France) will go to England and to America for the payment of foreign debts. The investment of American capital in French industries, as well as the control of the French and Belgian railways, will little by little make of France and Belgium spheres of influence of American capital. The connections between the Morgan trust and the financiers of Europe are the same as those which existed between the trust of Schneider, of Creusot, and the Stinnes trust, during the war of the Ruhr. In other words, these understandings are based on the interest which European financiers have in exploiting with their American colleagues, the mass of the population for a profit, the greater part of the surprofit being reserved for American capital.

Parallel with the monopoly of industry which they are trying to get, the United States is seeking to limit European armaments and to exploit the

TOILERS ATTACK FASCISTI RULE; REVOLT SPREADS

Italian Communists Take Lead in Struggle

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROME, Dec. 7.—A tense revolutionary atmosphere prevails thruout Italy. Clashes are breaking out in many points between the workers, led by Communists, and the Fascisti.

The workers of Turin have revolted against the Fascisti. Many were killed in the fighting and many others wounded. A strict censorship has been set up by the Fascisti, making it impossible to determine the extent of the revolutionary spirit.

In Chiasso, at the Italo-Swiss frontier, fighting is taking place.

General De Bono, formerly head of the Fascisti militia, has been accused of being the major instigator of the assassination of Matteotti. Finzi, formerly secretary of the interior, has also been implicated in the murder.

In his speech before the senate, Mussolini was enabled to keep his power only by telling the senators that if he was not kept in power, the Communists would set up a dictatorship.

The Communists are the strongest and the best organized revolutionary party in Italy, Mussolini declared.

Crooked Labor Faker Will Be Freed by Al Smith After Xmas

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.— News that Robert P. Brindell, former president of the Building Trades Council of New York, would be paroled from Great Meadows prison the day after Christmas is not arousing any opposition from Samuel Untermeyer, who conducted the Lockwood Committee investigations that led to the charge of extortion against Brindell.

Untermeyer says he does not understand why there should be such a hullabaloo against Brindell "if," says Untermeyer, "the criminal rich and respectable thieves and grafters in high places who are with immunity stealing the public's money every day of the week; of the stock swindlers, stock washers and manipulators who, under cover of the machinery of the stock exchange, are robbing the people day in day out; of Big Business, through the truest and illegal trade combinations is at liberty to continue without interruption rendering the cost of living almost prohibitive to the poor, and if the war fraud conspirators of crimes of cunning who habitually go unwhipped of justice," if these, says Untermeyer, were exposed and punished there would be less outcry against the Brindells.

Brindell has served nearly three years and nine months of his five to ten years sentence.

for him on Second avenue? Calles promises to give capital, labor and the "public" a square deal. He promises to be nice to the oil companies. In view of these promises why should not Wall Street agree to loan enough money to Mexico to pay all its obligations and leave a little over to entertain Gompers and the other labor lackeys of Wall Street?

FRENCH COMMUNIST MAYOR HAS TOWN IN UPROAR AS HE LEADS STRIKERS AND TENANTS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, France, Dec. 7.—The troubles of Premier Herriot increase hourly. Besides the dilemma of the government over the case of Jaques Sadoul, Herriot has a new problem in the shape of a town on the Brittany cost which has raised the red flag over the city hall and told the central government of France to go to the devil.

One of the complications is the fact that in the debate in the French chamber of deputies over the Communist demonstration at the removal of the ashes of Jaures to their new resting place, Herriot argued that the red flag of the Communists had as much right in the streets of Paris as the fleur de lys of the royalists.

Mayor Raises Hobb and the Red Flag.

The red town of Douarnenez, a fishing village, is giving a test case. The crux of the trouble is that the mayor, F. La Flanchec, is the leader of the whole town, and he is a Communist.

For many months La Flanchec has been making things miserable for the bourgeoisie in the village, which is a fishing and sardine packing center. A few months ago some of the fisher folk were ejected from their houses by landlords who seemed quite incensed at the failure of their tenants ever to pay rent.

As mayor of the city La Flanchec halted the ejections, opened the doors of the houses himself and ordered the police to replace the disturbed furniture. Some of those police were amusing spectacles as they aided the housewives to tack down the carpets and put up the dislocated stoves.

Then He Leads a Strike.

But this was only a beginning. Now La Flanchec is really doing something. Under the mayor's leadership a strike was begun in all the sardine packing houses. La Flanchec himself led the parade of strikers through the village with a red flag tied around his waist instead of the French tricolor. He saw to it that city funds were used to finance the needy strikers families. Firstly, only the sardine packers were involved, then the strike spread to the workers who make the sardine boxes. The whole town is in an uproar.

The police prefect of the province drafted special officers and sent them to Douarnenez, but nobody pays any attention to them. La Flanchec has invited Communist speakers of Paris to come to the village and in public speeches declared, "We didn't care a hoot for the police of the Bloc National and we care even less for the police of the present government."

Puts Herriot in a Hole.

La Flanchec has such a strong popularity that his arrest would provoke trouble all over France as the Communists would surely take up the fight to show that by Herriot's suppression of a mayor who takes the side of strikers he disproves before the masses the claim that he is a "radical-socialist"—which is the name of his party.

FRENCH COMMUNISTS IN DECLARATION

financial burdens of France, as well as the disintegration of the British empire, in order to enforce their pacifist propaganda in Europe—propaganda which, after the world war, they considder the best ideological method to assure a new imperialist partition of the world.

VII.

The extension of certain industries which assure exceptional profits, as well as the investment of American capital in Europe, bring the United States face to face with the very acute question of markets and colonies. The colonization of Europe and the monopolization of the markets are directly connected with one another. That is the reason why the following events may be considered inevitable:

a. A new fight for the colonies.

b. Considerable importance of the role of American imperialism in the fight against the U. S. S. R., in alliance with the finance groups of Europe.

c. Constant pressure on China and the exploitation of the internal fights of that country.

d. The economic weakening of Japan caused by the recent catastrophe allows America to develop her productive powers. The economic crisis has made more acute for Japan the emigration problem, accentuating the antagonism of the two imperialist powers (another important factor in the weakening of Japanese imperialism is the break with England).

e. The fight of England for her colonies, a fight in which America will play a two-faced part.

f. An economic and political fight against the proletarian masses by the combined forces of capital—a fight which will be organized and led in more co-ordinated fashion than it has formerly been.

g. The proletarianization of the peasant masses and of the petty-bourgeoisie and the semi-proletarianization of the middle bourgeoisie will assume broader proportions and a more marked character.

VIII.

The international conflicts and the conflicts between the classes will assume, as a result of the modification of forces, new and very different forms.

The league of nations, the ante chamber of imperialist diplomacy, is trying to hide, under the cloak of liberalism, the antagonisms which are going on—and in this they are aided by the socialists of the Second International. Together they are preparing for the establishment of fascism against the revolutionary proletariat.

As a result, it is necessary:

a. To show the imperialist nature of "pacifism," of monopoly, finance and banking capital.

b. To shed light on the nature of the present conflicts caused by a drift in the direction of a new partition of the world, as well as the attempt of America to put off as far as possible the conflicts in Europe.

c. To call attention to the inevitable revolutionization of Japan and the development of the struggle between finance capital and all the colonies.

d. To call attention to the role of the league of nations, organ of the imperialism of the United States.

e. To call attention to the necessity of making the fight of the colonized German workers and of the Chinese proletariat the fight of the workers of all countries.

IX.

a. The changes in the tactics and the maneuvers of the dominating bourgeoisie inevitably brings fluctuations in the ranks of the petty-bourgeoisie outside of the Communist Party, but on its very outskirts. From this arises the necessity of a hard fight against reformism, pacifism and the social-democratic deviations, in whatever form they appear, in the Communist Party, as well as against "radical" phrasseology and pseudo-revolutionarism, which result from lack of faith in the revolution and in the proletariat.

b. Re-enforcement of the ranks of the conscious proletariat and the Bolshevization of the party as a result of the necessity of alliance with the masses of peasants, of petty-bourgeois recently proletarianized, and of oppressed colonies.

c. Internationalization of propaganda, of the organization of the economic and political struggle of the Communist Party.

d. To the solution of finance capital of international questions by means of colonization, of war, and of organized economic crises, we must oppose the proletarian solution of international economic questions (examples, the solution of these questions in the U. S. S. R., program of the proletarian experts of the Communist Party of Germany, reiteration of colonial independence.)

e. It is necessary to develop the fight for the eight-hour day, against the reduction of wages, for aid to the unemployed, on the broadest possible international basis.

X.

Thanks to the improvements in its economic status, to the strengthening of its international position (Anglo-Russian treaty, drawn up under the pressure exerted by the English proletariat, the Russo-German treaty, and the treaty between China and Russia) the U. S. S. R. is becoming the only country independent of America and applying the principle of the right of self-determination, the only strong hold of all the oppressed people and classes.

The attempts of finance capital to impose on the U. S. S. R. conditions comparable to those of the Dawes and the Mellon-Hurley plan are inevitable. The following things are also inevitable:

a. Attempts to isolate the U. S. S. R. by means of the imperialist league of nations, representing the imperialists and the financiers of the United States.

b. Attempts at making war against certain parts of the U. S. S. R. in order to sap the vitality of its economic life under the disguise of slogans of liberation, as well as open warfare on the Asiatic frontiers of the U. S. S. R. (attempts at counter-revolutionary menshevik insurrections in Georgia and Afganistan).

c. Economic boycott.

The struggle for alliance with Soviet Russia against the colonization of Europe, for the independence of peoples and for the liberation of colonies, are becoming even more important than they have been. This situation brings with it a number of political and practical results, particularly:

(a) The creation of an international union of delegates from the big factories and mines, to defend the Russian revolution and elementary economic interests of the workers against the offensive of finance capital.

(b) The struggle for unity in the trade union movement is assuming, under prevailing conditions, exceptional importance. Never has the reformist ideology of the trade union bureaucrats and of the socialist parties been in opposition to the extent that it is now placing itself in opposition, to the inevitable fight of the broad masses for the raising of their standard of living. The strikes in Austria, in Belgium, as well as the mass movements in England for recognition of the Soviets and against the Dawes plan, characterise better than anything else this opposition. In this international organization of the economic fight, the resistance of the chief reformist defenders of the bourgeoisie to the policy and to the class struggle of the proletariat will be quickly broken.

The transformation of socialist parties, the left wing of bourgeois Fascism, into parties of the dominant bourgeoisie, supporting the offensive against the proletariat, will create anti-socialist sentiment among the broad masses. The Communist Party must approach carefully and attentively these masses who, in a practical situation, wake up and engage in the class struggle.

XII.

The realignment for forces and the role of American finance capital have resulted in gaining time for the European bourgeoisie; but the truce which they have succeeded in getting will be of very short duration.

Preparation for decisive battles should be made on as broad a scale as possible, for the capitalist offensive will be carried out on a vast scale indeed. The last act of the last stage of capitalist government is about to begin. The task of the Communist parties in the preparation of the fight for power becomes very much greater. The Communist parties should use the greatest possible determination and show their ability to direct large masses.

The Bolshevization of the Communist parties, their direct connection with the masses—these are conditions necessary to enable them to take part in decisive battles.

COLORED COPPER GETS NANNIES OF SOUTHERN LADIES

Females Riot But Get Nutty When Cop Comes

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—A row in the annual meeting of the district chapters of the united daughters of the confederacy which resulted in some hysterical daughters putting in a call for the police—and having it answered by the person of a colored policeman—threatened today to have still further ramifications.

On the desk of Major Daniel Sullivan, chief of the police in the capitol, reposed today a letter from an indignant congressman Representative Dasque of Louisiana, who termed the whole affair an "outrage" and denounced the police department for daring "to send a Negro policeman to preserve order among a group of southern ladies. I want to know who is responsible for this and why it was done."

The fight in the organization was staged over the election of officers. Stinging epithets and near physical encounters between the rival factions featured the session which finally ended after midnight with the election of Mrs. Alden Tuck. But only seventy votes out of more than 100 were cast.

Build Junior Highs; Elementary Schools Remain Very Crowded

The board of education is going ahead with plans for installing junior high schools for which Superintendent McAndrew was imported, so charges by big business which is waging a campaign so persistently to reduce the cost of education of the masses. Nine new schools are to be built at once to house the junior highs which will turn working class children into experienced craftsmen ready to pile up profits without waste.

The buildings will be built on land owned by the board of education located at the following places: West 114th street and Stewart avenue, west 52nd and south Rockwell streets, Lemoyne and LeClaire avenues, Henderson and Keeler avenues, east 84th street and Philips avenue, west 52nd street and Linden avenue, Byron and New England avenues, east 50th street and Chappel avenues and Granville and Fairfield avenues.

No move is being made by the board of education to build elementary schools to relieve the congestion that is crowding children into one class room and even at that rate only accommodate pupils on part-time basis.

Indict Newmark as Counterfeiter.

Ben Newmark, assistant state fire marshal under Governor Small, has been indicted by the grand jury for counterfeiting and selling $5,000,000 worth of war savings stamps. Eleven other men were indicted together with Small's marshal.

Now They Put It Up to Voters.

Chairman Schwartz of the transportation committee announced in a public statement that they have it all fixed to pass the buck to the voters. The voters, he said, will be asked to decide on a city ordinance providing for the building of the subways when the aldermanic elections take place in February.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7. — The christmas recess of congress will run from Saturday, December 20, to Monday, December 29, under a resolution passed unanimously by the house today. The senate will concur.

Czarism Must Be Rooted Up, Both Plant and Seed, By Workers of America

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, while it is being announced that Communists will be driven out of the capitalist nations of Western Europe by the hundreds of thousands, the American plutocracy receives to its bosom, the "grand duchess" Victoria Feodorovna, wife of the "grand duke" Cyril Vladimirovitch, who recently proclaimed himself Cyril I, "czar" of all the Russians.

Thus the American colony of czarist emigres with the glad consent of the American imperialist government, finds its ranks increased by the sister of Queen Marie, of Roumania, where the lives of workers and peasants have been blotted out by the thousands under one of the most fiendish white terrors Europe has yet seen.

* * * *

It is well known that the "grand duke" is an extreme eccentric. Under ordinary circumstances he would be confined as a lunatic. Even his own family frowns on its pretensions. It has some other candidate for the job. But harboring this ambition is just as insane as the grandiose announcements of the "duke" himself.

All these titles so grandiloquently proclaimed are "the bunk"; since Russia under Soviet Rule, recognizes no dukes or duchesses. If there are any left in Russia, they have lost their titles and been put to work.

But the American subsidized press recognizes them, the social circles of the parasites bow before them, and the American capitalist dictatorship gives them what standing they can.

When the would-be "czarina" arrived in New York, she was met by a special force of police and detectives, just like any other capitalist "somebody," and the royal suite at the Waldorf-Astoria was turned over to her free of charge. She was even honored with "threatening letters," that the efficient reportorial staffs of the yellow press always furnish the illustrious manikins that they parade thru their columns.

The visit of the fake "duchess" should do much to unmask the fraudulent character of American democracy in this capitalist republic.

With the "admirals," the "generals" and the what-nots, from among the Russian czarist emigres that waited on the "duchess," there appeared Mrs. Henry P. Loomis, president of the Colonial Dames of America, an aggregation of snobs claiming ancestry among those who made victory possible against Great Britain in the revolutionary war of 1776. It is into this atmosphere that LaFollette would have the American workers and poor farmers plunge with his "Back to '76" slogan.

* * * *

But the workers and poor farmers, if they wish to find the counterparts of the Russian czarists in this country, need only look over the list of hosts to the wandering "duchess," whose family in Russia oppressed the great masses of workers and poor peasants for centuries.

Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, the widow of the American railroad czar, heads the list, with Mrs. Joseph Pulitzer, of the newly rich family that owns the New York World, court organ of the democratic wing of Wall Street's bi-partisan politics. She will enter the official political family in Washington as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lansing. This is the Lansing who was secretary of state under Wilson. He did his part in plunging this country into the European blood bath in 1917. The "duchess" will also be received by Mrs. John Hays Hammond, wife of one of the unofficial family of the republican party. Hammond, the multi-millionaire mine owner, has been active as an open-shopper, at the same time lending himself to the class-collaboration schemes of the National Civic Federation, that claims the whole Gompers' regime in the American Federation of Labor as one of its greatest mainstays.

The "duchess" will thus have good democratic and republican connections in Washington. In Philadelphia she will enter the circles of the most exclusive American aristocracy, that stood by Coolidge with its millions in the recent campaign, under the direction of Mrs. Alexander Van Rensselaer and Mrs. Gardner Cassett.

The strike-breaking, union-crushing vice-president of the Pennsylvania Railroad, William Wallace Atterbury, has decided to give the "duchess" a free ride on his railroad, thru turning over to her one of the road's best private cars.

The "duchess" will get some comfort in the fact that she will find her memories of czarist rule in Russia, mirrored in the brutal conditions inflicted upon workers and poor farmers in this country.

Perhaps Mr. Atterbury will let her take a run thru the anthracite coal fields, owned by Pennsylvania's railroads, where the labor hating coal and mine barons join with the labor bureaucracy to keep the workers in submission.

Perhaps the "duchess" will shake hands with John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers' Union, as a reward for revoking the charters of miners' locals in the hard coal fields, and breaking up their resistance to the mine owners. Perhaps she will give a smile to Lewis' agent in the anthracite fields, President Rinaldo Cappellini, of District One.

Czarist rule has fallen in Russia. But it has deep roots in the United States in American capitalism's fertile soil. Workers and poor farmers here must unite under the same Communist leadership that made Soviet Rule in Russia victorious, to root out and destroy it, plant and seed.

IRISH FAMINE RAVAGES CITY AND COUNTRY

Government Refuses to Take Action

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DUBLIN, Dec. 7.—The spectre of a terrible famine looms over Ireland. In the western part of the country, the failure of the crops presents a situation as threatening as any since the black days of '47. And while deaths from hunger are reported the Free State government does nothing but twiddle its thumbs.

Trade Unions Split.

The crisis is caused by a crop failure and also a heavy slump in trade.

The extent of the crisis can be gathered from the fact that there are 100,000 industrial workers listed at the unemployment exchanges, while the entire membership of the trade unions at best never exceeded 250,000 and the population of the county is only about 4,000,000. But the distress is not confined to the industrial population, and the figures for the agricultural regions are not easily available as they do not register with the unemployment exchanges.

Food Prices High.

Food prices are already higher than in England and are 80 per cent higher than before the war. Instead of doing something to help the famine stricken people, the government has created a commission to inquire into the cause of the crop failure.

When the great famine broke in Russia, the Irish priests attributed the disaster to a visitation of the christian God because the Russian people permitted Bolshevism to find root among them. Ireland is the most catholic and loyal to Rome of any country in the world, yet the western part of the country is a fertile ground for famine and the prayers of the clergy seem to have no influence in increasing the food supply.

AL SMITH AND HILLQUIST UNITE AGAINST STRIKES

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—Governor Al Smith pledged his aid in preventing strikes in New York state at the annual industrial conference of the state department of labor. Morris Hillquit spoke at the same session. Hillquit declared the "most effective method of minimizing industrial friction thus far has been the system of collective bargaining."

"I cannot think of a more senseless waste than a strike" said Governor Smith. Smith deplored the "waste of time" in a strike and said the "public" is the innocent victim.

Other speakers in addition to Morris Hillquit and Al Smith, were Charles M. Ripley of the general electric company, Lester M. Jones of the publishers' association of New York, Don Seitz of the New York World, and Hugh Frayne, general organizer of the American Federation of Labor in New York.

Chicago Federation of Labor Gets Pleas for Organization Work

At the meeting of the Chicago Federation of Labor yesterday, the organization committee reported that three local unions, the Retail Clerks, the Bank Clerks and the Leather Workers, have appealed to the federation for assistance in organizing.

It was voted that the banks be circularized with requests that they permit their clerks to join the Bank Clerks' union. On behalf of the retail clerks the organization committee is to intervene with the employers who do not recognize the union and pursue negotiations, while recommending the patronage of members of affiliated bodies be given to retail stores which recognize the union.

The executive committee of the federation was instructed to take up the building program of the board of education with the school committee of the board, concerning the platoon system of schools.

Discussion of Our Party's Immediate Tasks

Lovestone Quotes Mahoney

By JAMES P. CANNON.

The more the party controversy is brought out into the open, and the more the minority is compelled to defend its position, the more does the shallow opportunism of both the minority position and of its advocates become revealed. In my previous article, I showed how the false policy of the minority had already led them, in seven concrete instances, to a non-Communist attitude toward our election campaign.

I can now add another example, more clear, more obvious, and more damning than the others. The latest and worst example is given to the party by Comrade Lovestone in his article in the DAILY WORKER of Dec. 3. This is only natural, since the policy of the minority is the policy of Lovestone, and is the logical outcome of his opposition to the Workers Party entering the election campaign under its own name in the July meeting of the C. E. C.

"If you give a finger to opportunism," said Zinoviev, in speaking of Serrati, "you will soon have to give your whole hand." Comrade Lovestone has not given his whole hand as yet. But, in his article in the DAILY WORKER of Dec. 3, he adds another finger to the one he gave last July. At the rate he is traveling to the right, and if the more stable elements of the minority do not call him to order, we may expect that he will soon give his whole hand—and his head, too.

From the very beginning of the discussion, the C. E. C., placing itself on the ground of real issues, put the insistent question to the advocates of "an intensified campaign for a class farmer-labor party." That question is: Where is the sentiment amongst the working masses for this so-called "class" party? Time and again we have begged them to tell us in what trade unions, in what cities, states or localities this sentiment exists and how it is manifesting itself.

Up till Dec. 3, the minority made no answer. Oh, yes, Comrade Ruthenberg answered. His answer was a formula. He told us in effect: "The contradictions of capitalism will intensify the class antagonisms. The capitalist state power will be used against the workers and the latter will be driven to independent political action. Therefore, we must build a 'class farmer-labor party.' This is a fundamental of Marxism. Please do not press the question any further."

But it soon became evident that the sophmoric essays of Comrade Ruthenberg were not satisfying the party. The party wanted facts, and not merely formulas. In the ranks of the minority itself voices began to be raised: "Give us some facts about the sentimental sentiment for a 'class farmer-labor party' so that we can at least answer the merciless attacks of those comrades who say there is no mass sentiment for it."

Comrade Lovestone Takes the Stand and Introduces Mahoney's Editorial as "Exhibit A."

At this juncture Comrade Lovestone stepped into the breach. The question of facts was no problem for him, for is he not an expert "research worker" and "fact-finder" as well as an expert and experienced witness? He took the witness stand, so to speak, in his article of Dec. 3, to "give evidence." He had "run down" the elusive sentiment for a "class farmer-labor party," captured it, and brought it into court with him.

What is this evidence? First and foremost, it is a quotation from the Minnesota Trade Union Advocate, edited by William Mahoney.

Think of It!

After all our experience with this renegade and faker, after his treacherous performances at the St. Paul convention and since, Comrade Lovestone still wants us to have faith in him and rely on him as an ally in the fight for a "class" movement.

Basing his conclusions solely on the quotations from Mahoney, Comrade Lovestone says: "It is only natural that the first tangible crystallization of disillusionment with LaFolletteism should manifest itself in Minnesota . . . It is only a matter of time when similar manifestations will be displayed in other sections of the farmer-labor movement."

Let us examine the black record of this "ally" whom Comrade Lovestone has found. Let us see how much the party can depend on this "first tangible disillusionment with LaFollettelism."

The whole story cannot be told here. Mahoney's treachery multiples daily and only a resident of St. Paul can keep track of it. But we all—including Comrade Lovestone—know enough facts to take his measure and estimate him properly. Let me set down here a few outstanding facts about Mahoney which are known to us:

1. On the very day that Comrade Lovestone's article appeared in the DAILY WORKER, and on the day following, a news story from Minneapolis also appeared containing the information that the Hennepin County central committee of the farmer-labor federation, with the full support of Mahoney, had expelled the delegates of the Workers Party.

The news story in the DAILY WORKER of Dec. 4, signed by Comrade C. A. Hathaway, our district organizer, says:

"Mahoney, in his speech after the motion was carried, stated that the farmer-labor federation of Minnesota was essentially a non-partisan organization having no goal aside from its immediate aims for social reform.

"In conversation after the meeting he repudiated all the progressive ideas previously held and even went so far as to condemn the workers and peasants' governmen of Russia. He further stated that at the state convention to be held in the near future that the federation would have to take steps to rid itself of the 'troublesome' left wing."

Lovestone's Quotation From Mahoney Throws a Searchlight on His Opportunistic Policy.

2. This present attitude of Mahoney is no temporary aberration. It is the logical outcome of a long and consistent series of betrayals which are known to us, and known to Comrade Lovestone. Here are a few of them:

(a) Mahoney fought for LaFollette before, during, and after the St. Paul convention.

(b) Mahoney fought in the arrangements committee which met on the eve of the St. Paul convention for a resolution excluding the delegates of the Workers Party.

(c) At the Cleveland conference of the C. P. P. A. Mahoney swore allegiance to LaFollette and repudiated the St. Paul convention.

(d) Mahoney supported Keller, the republican candidate for congress in St. Paul, and fought against Comrade Emme, the candidate of the farmer-labor party.

More evidence can be cited by our Minnesota comrades to prove the systematic treachery of this faker and renegade. But the facts set forth above are more than enough to show that he is no friend of a "class farmer-labor party," no friend of the Communists, and no ally for us.

Mahoney serves one good purpose, however. His introduction into the party controversy as "Exhibit A" for Comrade Lovestone's policy is sufficient to prove that Comrade Lovestone's policy is no good, that it is built in quicksand, that it is opportunistic in the worst and most dangerous sense of the term, and that it would lead the party to the "united front from the top only," to "maneuvers" around the conference table with "farmer-labor" fakers, and, consequently, to the degeneration of the Workers Party.

Lovestone Finds Sentiment for the "Class Farmer-Labor Party" Even in the Camp of Coolidge.

Another word about Minnesota before we pass over to "Exhibit B"—the farmer-labor leaders of Washington.

Comrade Lovestone found sentiment for his "class farmer-labor party" in the most strange and unexpected places. He found it in the camp of LaFollette especially in the person of William Mahoney. Next he found it in the camp of Coolidge!

The fact that the farmer-labor party of Minnesota jumped down LaFollette's throat and insisted upon being swallowed, digested, and excremented does not mean, according to Com. Lovestone, that it suffered any serious injury. It was a "mere election union" and it emerged from the bowels of LaFollette in better shape than ever, strong enough to go to Coolidge and repeat the process. Read this piece of evidence for the "class farmer-labor party" submitted by Comrade Lovestone:

"Least of all does it follow that such a casual political alliance (Comrade Lovestone still has that 'election alliance' in his head, as I shall prove in another article. J. P. C.) means the uprooting of the idea and sentiment for a farmer-labor party . . . For instance, in Minnesota, Governor Johnson and Olson, running on the farmer-labor party ticket polled a higher vote than LaFollette. The majority by which LaFollette, running on an independent ticket was beaten by Coolidge was much larger than the majority by which those running on the farmer-labor party ticket were beaten."

This is telling evidence indeed!

Do you comprehend the situation? There were, it appears, some tens of thousands of workers in Minnesota who were hot-foot for a "class" party. Therefore, they couldn't bring themselves to vote for LaFollette. Comrade Foster, the candidate of the Workers Party, was on the ballot, but he wouldn't do for them. They, like the minority, wanted "independent class political action." They, like the minority, wanted a "class party that would fight the battles of the workers and farmers." This, of course, eliminated the Workers Party.

What were these desperate supporters of the "class party" to do? They couldn't vote for LaFollette since he represented no class party. Foster was out of the question since the Workers Party has no class at all when it appears under its own name. Then something truly remarkable happened. These workers and farmers of Minnesota executed a stroke of grand strategy. They showed such proficiency in the difficult art of going North by running South that they deserve to have their names appended as honorary signatories to the minority theses.

These dauntless proletarians of the plains voted for Coolidge! By this master-stroke they accomplished three things: First, they proved that "the LaFollette movement is disintegrating"; second, they got their "class" party; and third, they provided the minority with an argument in favor of their thesis. It is as good as any argument the minority have.

Lovestone Condones the Treachery of the Farmer-Labor Leaders of Washington.

One more quotation from Comrade Lovestone's article will complete the proof that his conception of "an intensified campaign for a class farmer-labor party" is an opportunistic conception of the "the united front from the top only" by means of negotiations and conferences with reformist leaders of reformist organizations. Moreover, it will show that he condemns our Communist action in entering the Workers Party in the election campaign under its own banner because it alienated some of these reformist leaders.

Comrade Lovestone's "Exhibit B" is the farmer-labor party of Washington, a reformist party, predominantly agrarian and based on individual membership. Comrade Lovestone is very indulgent towards this so-called party. He says, it "merely endorsed LaFollette and Wheeler."

The leaders of this party attacked and denounced the Workers Party thruout the campaign, but Comrade Lovestone does not seem to hold that against them. It was all our fault!

Read what he says in his article in the DAILY WORKER, the official organ of the Workers (Communist) Party of America, on Dec. 3:

"More than that. There is good reason to believe that the leaders of this farmer-labor party would likely never have sought to secure the endorsement of their organization for LaFollette or be tempted to drive their followers into the LaFollette election camp if the Workers Party had not cut itself loose from the national farmer-labor party on July 10. The bungling manner in which we handled our change in policy then was especially harmful."

Here in plain words we have the real policy of Comrade Lovestone which is the policy of the minority. The evasive, double-meaning language of the minority thesis is put aside. The mask of Marxian phraseology is torn off and the party has an opportunity to see the ugly face of opportunism that hid behind it.

The minority thesis speaks very vaguely and evasively about the means to be employed to form the "political united front" by organizing a "class farmer-labor party." Comrade Lovestone makes the matter clear.

We will "handle" the reformist leaders of reformist organizations more carefully. We will not make again the stupid blunder of raising our own party's banner in the elections. We will see what the "leaders" want us to do and do it. Then these leaders will not "be tempted to drive their followers into the LaFollette election camp"; and they maligned and denounced our party and its candidates. But why did they make these trifling "errors"? Because "the Workers Party cut itself loose from the farmer-labor party on July 10."

Comrade Ruthenberg complains because we are not observing the amenities of parliamentary debate, and he raises a special "point of order" against the term "farmer-labor Communism." But he is criticising us from the wrong side. We believe that when the party considers all the implications of Comrade Lovestone's article, it will say that the word "Communism" should be eliminated entirely from the definition of his policy.

The party and the C. I. will say this policy is "farmer-laborism." And they will kill it, too!

UPON ONE POLICY WE ARE ALL UNITED and that is to Insure The Daily Worker for 1925

A MOST complete discussion upon future party policy is possible today because we have the DAILY WORKER. Every party member who reads the DAILY WORKER, yes, and every one that does not because he cannot read English, will understand this to be an advantage of prime importance to the theoretical development of our members.

But the DAILY WORKER serves the party in many other ways. It is an all the year around weapon against the foe, it is an educator, it is a propagandist—and also, it is a bond, a chain, which ties member to member, city to city, district to district. It is the DAILY WORKER that helps to centralize our party into the effective machine it should be.

We must keep the DAILY WORKER and make it safe for 1925. To do this we must give our dollars generously today. If we expect to win, then the DAILY WORKER must live and prosper. With the DAILY WORKER, forward to victory, or—nothing. It should be easy to choose.

INSURANCE POLICIES are in the hands of the branches. They are priced $10, $5 and $1. The Central Executive Committee has decided that every member shall buy. Every member should buy no less than a $5 POLICY.

And while the party seeths with discussion over our future policy and tasks, there is one Policy upon which there must be unanimous agreement. That is the POLICY to BUY A POLICY to INSURE THE DAILY WORKER FOR 1925.

William Z. Foster, Chairman.
C. E. Ruthenberg, Executive Secretary.

A FARMER-LABOR IDEA OF WORKING CLASS POLITICAL ACTION

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

Whether the Workers Party shall follow the policy mapped out for it by the central executive committee, that is, the policy of building itself into a powerful mass Communist party, or whether it shall dissipate its energies in juggling with a fake farmer-labor party, a thing without any visible means of support and to which the Workers Party must play the role of wet nurse, is the big question that the next party convention must decide. The object of the present discussion initiated by the central executive committee is to clarify the minds of the membership so that they shall be able to decide intelligently which policy to adopt and elect delegates to the next convention on the basis of that decision.

The central executive committee, led by Foster, has formulated a policy in accordance with the basic tactic of the Communist International, i. e., the united front from below.

The central executive committee in its theses offers proof that the political and industrial battlefields of America are not so lacking in fertility that they cannot support the growth of one slogan, "For a Class Farmer-Labor Party"—which is constantly trimmed by the Ruthenberg minority faction in accordance with the financial and commercial statistics gleaned from the columns of the New York Times, the Wall Street Journal and the Annalist, organs of big capital, but by no means as infallible.

Like the captain of a gas balloon, who drops ballast when atmospheric pressure weighs heavily on his ship, Comrade Ruthenberg drops his farmer cargo when he learns from the New York Times that there is a rise in the price of alfalfa or turnips. And again, when "Bob" Minor draws a delightful cartoon showing the farmer with his furniture on his back and his family bringing up the rear on their way to the city, he brings out his farmer, throws a fistful of dirt on him and gives him the trading position in his farmer-labor act.

Amazing Confusion.

As Ruthenberg is the accepted leader of the farmer-labor wing of the Workers Party, it is only fair that his position should be subjected to analysis at the viewpoint of his faction. Therefore his article in the December issue the The Workers Monthly, entitled: "Is the Movement Towards Class Political Action Dead?" has added importance in that it does not represent merely the views of the author but of a definitely organized group, on the central executive committee and thruout the party.

The very title of this article is nothing short of amazing as it puts the x-ray on Comrade Ruthenberg's political mind. If he had posed the question "Is the Movement Towards the Organization of a Mass Farmer-Labor Party Dead?" one might dispute his analysis of the present situation; one might dispute his facts, but such a title would not leave him open to the suspicion that he does not consider the Workers Party a party of class political action. This is a serious frame of mind for the executive secretary of a section of the Communist International to find himself in.

Where is "the Class Party?"

Comrade Ruthenberg charges Foster with the heresy of claiming that "the movement for class political action is dead," and that therefore the Workers Party must abandon the farmer-labor party slogan. This is a gross misinterpretation of the position of the central executive committee, which does not state that the movement towards class political action is dead, not so long as the Workers Party continues as a Communist Party. It states that the movement towards the organization of a "mass farmer-labor party" was successfully killed by LaFollette and that the latter is the ideological leader of those masses who once groped around for an easy way out of their misery and are now satisfied that the Wisconsin senator is their one and only Moses.

The proof of the pudding is in the eating and the proof of the truth of the Foster contention is in the fact, that the pied piper of Hamlin never blew on his flute with more effect than did LaFollette when he sounded the siren call that alienated the affections of farmer-labor leaders from their former political love, and inveigled them into the more seductive love palace of the C. P. P. A. and its bourgeois affinities.

Today, a fine-toothed comb could not scrape up a trade unionist willing to be seen walking the street with a farmer-labor enthusiast, whereas two years ago the woods were full of them. Sentiment for a farmer-labor party took the big international unions two years ago; today this sentiment is confined to what is left of the socialist party and the right wing of the Workers Party.

Class Struggle Still with Us.

Ruthenberg in his article, writes. "The policy of the united front was and is that Communist parties shall take up the immediate issues growing out of the class struggle . . ." Quite true. But the organization of a mass farmer-labor party is no longer an immediate issue. It is so far in the future that it is an open question whether it shall ever again arouse the masses.

But the class struggle still lives and it is a prolific source of slogans. There will be strikes, unemployment, open shop drives, injunctions, attacks on the foreign-born workers, wars and threats of war etc. "Ah," Ruthenberg may exclaim, "but these are industrial and not political issues." But we have not traveled so far from 1919 that we do not remember how we insisted that every struggle of the working class against the capitalists, whether it be in an election campaign or in a strike, is a political struggle. The great majority of our party still holds to that healthy point of view.

Ruthenberg seems to think that the reason the C. E. C. decided to adopt the slogan of a farmer-labor party was because no such party already existed, and not because of the fact that such party mass sentiment for such a party, which it was our duty to impregnate with Communist propaganda. It is certainly a new and interesting deviation from Communist tactics that we must organize the workers whose ideology still is petty-bourgeois into farmer-labor parties, solely because such parties don't exist. This is a novel conception of the function of a Communist Party.

Barren Conception of Party Role.

In the entire article Ruthenberg never once hints that the Workers Party has any other function on the political field than to set up a fake farmer-labor party, into which we could inveigle "the most conscious and radical workers in the labor movement." This is amusing. It seems to me that the place for "the most conscious and radical workers" is the Workers Party. The best probationary school for members of the Workers (Communist) Party is in the workshops and in the trade unions and not in a half-way house such as Ruthenberg proposes to set up. A donkey may be led to water by his ears, by dangling a carrot before his nose, but the workers are not donkeys. Communism is not moonshine and our role is not that of political bootleggers.

It is a fundamental fallacy to assign to the party the role of a Communist Party to build a political corral for those workers who are not yet ripe for the Workers Party. We might then use the second party to build an other corral for those not ripe enough to feel comfortable inside its walls And so on ad infinitum. And our members would be kept quite busy caucusing to maintain control of those political man-traps. The secretaries of these fake parties would be Communists. So would the members of the executive committees. The membership of the Workers Party would supply the funds and Comrade Ruthenberg would have a jolly old time writing the manifestos. The Workers Party would be all dressed up with no place to go.

No Exaggeration.

This is no exaggeration of Ruthenberg's position. The formation of another federated farmer-labor party would lead to the liquidation of the Workers Party. Parties no more than human organisms grow unless they have a function to perform. The minority wants the "class farmer-labor party" to take over the daily tasks of the W. P.

Dropping Dead Slogans.

The policy of the Central Executive Committee is a realistic Communist policy. It drops a dead slogan with as little compunction as one would drop a dead cat into a sewer. It proposes to go to the masses with slogans that arise out of their daily struggles, the only slogans that amount to a tinker's damn. It proposes to recruit the ranks of the party from the militants in the trade unions and the workshops. Instead of diplomatic intrigues with Hillmans and Mahoneys it proposes open dealing with the masses whose class interests lead them into conflict with the Hillmans and the other labor fakers, who are but the labor lieutenants of the capitalists.

In this way our party will popularize itself with the exploited masses. It will win their confidence. It cannot be charged with deceit or trickery. Our party will not be in the position of asking the workers to join a yellow farmer-labor party instead of a revolutionary working class political party.

Sneaking Up on the Workers.

Against this policy what has Ruthenberg to offer? To quote from his famous article, "Its aim (the aim of the W. P.) in conducting the agitation for the slogan 'For a Class Labor Party' (note the farmer is ditched) must be the ultimate mobilization of the left wing radical block in the labor movement under the leadership of the Workers Party." This group he would inoculate with his brand of Communism in homeopathic doses until its personnel could be finally "absorbed into the Workers Party." What a kettle of mush!

Then Ruthenberg hurls his brimstone at the head of the heretic Foster who has the audacity to suggest that the Workers Party is good enough for the radical workers in the labor movement. He says "The Foster group proposes as a substitute for this policy, the direct attempt to draw into the Workers Party the workers whose capitalism teaches the necessity of labor fighting as a class on the political field." This kind of thing, what the Communists of every country in the world are doing, is branded as "sectarian propaganda." It is branded as a repudiation of the united front, which only proves that it is Comrade Ruthenberg who is very much "up in the air" about the united front and not the Central Executive Committee.

The duty of the membership of the Workers Party in this struggle within the party is to deliver such a severe defeat to farmer-laborism that it will never raised its head again in our ranks.

The policy of the Central Executive Committee will lead to the destruction of our party into a mass Communist Party. Ruthenberg's policy will lead to its liquidation.

SHALL WE DROP THE SLOGAN OF THE POLITICAL UNITED FRONT?

By ROBERT MINOR.

In the competing theses of the majority and minority groups of the Central Executive Committee there are many differences, some of which are very profound. For the purpose of this article we will take only one point—the question as to whether we should continue to use the united front tactic on the political field, thru the use of the slogan "For a mass farmer-labor party."

I support the minority view: that we must continue to use the united front farmer-labor party tactic, more energetically now than ever before, and with a fundamental correction of our conception of what the united front tactic is.

I believe that a profound misconception of the Bolshevik tactic of the united front underlies the whole political line of the majority of the C. E. C. as carried out in the past eleven months, and that only their mistaken application of it has brought them to the pass where now they wish to discard it as far as the political field is concerned. I will indicate what I think are these misconceptions of the majority:

1. Majority group thinks success of a farmer-labor party movement depends upon its not being Communist and not being led by Communists.

That the Foster-Cannon group conceived of the farmer-labor united front tactic as one in which the Communists would be as inconspicuous as possible, while quietly trying to "promote" the formation of a farmer-labor party, has been expressed in many ways, but perhaps best in Comrade Foster's speech at the 3rd. St. Paul convention, when he said:

"In answer to the statement which was made by Brother Mahoney, I want to state in behalf of the Workers Party that we have not come here for the purpose of capturing this convention.

"We realize that in order for a farmer-labor party to be a success it cannot be a Communist Party.

"We do not expect to see a Communist program come out of this convention, a Communist form of organization, or Communist candidates nominated.

"We expect to see a platform which will rally the great mass of farmers and workers. We expect that type of organization and that type of candidates."

It is a curious coincidence that Comrade Foster's speech was almost a perfect paraphrase of a statement issued by the non-Communist Minnesota farmer-labor convention arrangements committee some weeks earlier:

"There will no doubt be Communists as there will be other schools of thought represented at the convention, but they will represent such a small fraction that even if they so desired, they would make no impression on the great mass of farmers and workers who are interested in practical legislative measures and not 'in visionary doctrines.'"

This passage from the farmer-labor arrangements committee's statement had been sharply called to the C. E. C.'s attention, because of the fact that it had appeared in newspapers as signed by a member of the Communist Party, Comrade Hathaway, secretary of the arrangements committee, as well as by the non-Communist chairman of the same committee. Comrade Foster had in his pocket at the moment he arose to make his speech, a communication from the Communist International Executive Committee declaring the apparent signing of the statement by Comrade Hathaway as "conduct inadmissible for a member of the Communist Party," and expressing its surprise that the C. E. C. "did not answer this statement by removing such a member from his post, and did not show the party as a whole that the Communist Party and the Communists, when forming a bloc with the petty-bourgeois elements, must so much the more sharply underscore their views instead of disavowing them." (It appears now that Comrade Hathaway did not actually sign the statement, and that its appearing in the capitalist press over his signature was due to its being accompanied by a mimeographed form letter bearing Comrade Hathaway's signature requesting its publication. Comrade Hathaway explained that it passed thru his hands merely as a matter of routine and that had he noticed the passage above quoted he would have objected to it.)

Yet Comrade Foster, confronted with the accusation that the "reds" were capturing the leadership of the convention, could not refrain from retiring into the shell of the spirit of the statement, idea for idea, paraphrase for phrase, from beginning to end.

Later, at a meeting of the party editors and district organizers called by the C. E. C. in session on July 10, Comrade Foster responded to questioning by admitting that he should not have made such a statement to the St. Paul convention, but explained that this was a typical example of the kind of errors we are bound to make as the inevitable result of the anomalous position we were in at St. Paul; the anomaly being that we found a majority of the convention with us, whereas our "natural" position in such an action was to be in the minority. Because we found ourselves in possession of a majority and therefore responsible for the convention, he said, we were forced into a position of denying our principles—a position which we must be careful never to be forced into again.

This idea of the Communist role in the labor-party united front is very definitely continued in the majority theses of the Foster-Cannon group now before the party.

2. Majority thinks a Communist-led left wing farmer-labor party would be "dual unionism on the political field."

When in 1923, in the "August theses" of the C. E. C., we who were then a majority spoke of the possibility that we might see a party developed into a mass Communist Party as one alternative that might arise, the Foster group violently objected to the idea of the left wing of the labor movement crystallizing into a labor party, and demanded its repudiation as "dual unionism on the political field" and as the "split theory." The idea of the possibility of using the labor party slogan with a view possibly to develop a left wing labor party organization into a mass Communist Party, was most bitterly attacked by the Foster group, who denounced it as criminal folly and as the absolute negation of the basic purpose of the labor party tactic which was to get a labor party.

For us, on the contrary, this united front labor party action like all other present actions, had and continues to have only the unchangeable purpose of building the Workers Party into a mass Communist party. Any other purpose being subordinate, tentative and subject to change to conform to the one supreme purpose. As declared in our August thesis, the development of a mass Communist Party of some hundreds of thousands of members would be a far greater attainment, and far more advantageous to the masses of the exploited, than to get a farmer-labor party of three millions based upon what is called the "bona fide" trade unions and led by the leaders of those unions. It is true that we unhesitatingly formulated the slogan, "a great mass organization formed by organized labor." Confronted with the fact that there already existed several embryonic frameworks claiming to be "labor parties"—abortive movements of trade union reformists

NEW LABOR BOARD DECISION ENDS EIGHT-HOUR DAY

No Extra Overtime for 9th and 10th Hour

The eight-hour day for maintenance of way men except those working around shops and roundhouses, has been abolished by the railroad labor board, and petitions of the unions for better working conditions have been denied. Twenty-two railroads, including the large transcontinental systems, are affected by the change.

"Except for the classes enumerated, the ninth and tenth hours, when worked continuously with regular work periods, shall be paid for at pro-rata hourly rate," says the decision of the U. S. railroad labor board, to take effect from December 1. "Beyond the tenth hour shall be paid for at the rate of time and one-half."

Sundays and Holidays Regular.

"A rule providing for the payment of double time after sixteen hours' service is denied," says the railroad board curtly. The railroad labor board again ruled that overtime pay will not be given for Sunday work. "Those regularly assigned to work on Sundays and holidays or those who work in place of those regularly assigned, will be compensated on the same basis as on week days," says the labor board decision.

The petition of the employes for one day rest in seven, and for overtime pay for work on Sunday, was denied by the board, which states, "The positions have always been considered monthly positions and work no hardship on the men. Service necessary for the continuous operation of the railroad should be paid for at the regular pro-rata rate regardless of who performs the service."

A. O. Wharton was the lone member of the board who dissented to the opinion.

RUSSIAN MOVIE ADDS ZEST TO 4-DAY BAZAAR

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Dec. 7.—Russia and Germany, an eight reel picture furnished by the International Worker's Aid Committee drew a very large crowd in Milwaukee and proved a great help in insuring the success of a four days' bazaar organized by the Workers Party.

The picture was shown twice on Thursday, Nov. 27, and at both performances in the afternoon and evening the hall was packed, accomodating approximately 1,000 people.

On Friday the Russian night a splendid program was arranged which included among other things singing by the Russian Choir and dancing by Russian children. The West Allis junior group presented a dialogue between the preacher and the worker.

Saturday night witnessed a splendid program arranged by the Hungarian and South Slavic branches. An interesting play from the history of proletarian revolution in Hungary was staged under the direction of Comrade Kline. The program also included the South Slavic Orchestra and South Slavic Choir and a solo by Comrade Kovach.

Sunday night over seventy five people enjoyed a very fine banquet with Comrade T. J. O'Flaherty as the principal speaker. Representatives of the various branches and the Young Workers League and junior groups delivered excellent speeches on the progress of the movement in the state.

The growth of the influence of our party is demonstrated by the hearty support it receives from the workers in all of its affairs and meetings. At the last election Workers (Communist) Party of America received over 4,000 votes notwithstanding the fact that work during the campaign was greatly handicapped by lack of funds.

Elizabeth, N. J. General Membership Meeting.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Dec. 7.—On Monday, Dec. 8, the general membership meeting of the Workers Party of Elizabeth will be held at Ukrainian Hall, 69 South Park street at 8 p. m. Comrade Charles Krumbein of District No. 2 will address the meeting. Election of officers for 1925 will also take place.

SHALL WE DROP THE SLOGAN OF A POLITICAL UNITED FRONT?

and yellow socialists which claimed to pre-empt the field—we demanded that there be "no renaming of bankrupt distintegrating parties, nor a quiet refuge for effete politicians, but a great mass organization formed by organized labor." As against enemies of the working class, as against existing or future aggregations of socialist party leaders, "progressive" gentlemen-politicians and small groups of yellow trade union bureaucrats forming "labor parties" over night by private conference or conferences excluding all but hand-picked bureaucrats, we very correctly raised the cry, "A labor party only if it is formed by the trade unions!" For the purpose of broadening the movement to the furthest possible limit in the worker's organizations, for the purpose of stirring up and bringing with us into this political activity the last possible rank and file member of a trade union, we described the all-inclusive labor party and had no hesitation even in declaring that "any other form would be a mere caricature, a political swindle, and a miscarriage"; and we have no apology now for having done so under the circumstances of that time. To hear Comrade Bittelman argue now, after time and the fight have developed a new relationship of forces, that we cannot lead any sort of left wing crystallization of workers willing to turn against their bureaucrats under the slogan of "a mass farmer-labor party," reminds me of old Doctor Isaac Hourwich arguing against the Russian Bolshevik's dispersal of the constituent assembly on the ground that the Bolsheviks had made the calling of it a slogan of struggle.

3. Majority thinks the present trade union burocracy must be the leaders of any farmer-labor party that is formed.

The idea of the Foster-Cannon group was that we must refrain from making ourselves and our Communist platform conspicuous in concrete labor-party situations, but must on the contrary let the movement have such non-Communist leaders and platforms as will as Comrade Foster said, "rally the great mass of farmers and workers." "We expect that type of organization and that type of candidates," Comrade Foster told the St. Paul Convention; and he told us that even to consider the possibility of a farmer-labor organization made up of left-wing sympathizing organizations centred and led by Communists would be "dividing the labor movement."

The majority thesis carries out this idea very clearly when it explains, in effect, that the Foster-Cannon group thinks the role of Communists in the labor-party action was to compel the trade union burocracy to form a labor party or failing to get Mr. Gompers to do this (tho "not necessarily by the Gompers crowd," writes Comrade Bittelman), to withdraw from the labor party action, denouncing the labor burocracy as "exposed." But under no conditions to consider the formation of any farmer-labor crystallization of any other kind.

It might be difficult to belive that the Foster-Cannon group really conceived of a labor party led by the Gompers burocracy as a probability and the only possibility in America, if it were not for the use they have made, in their thesis, of the following words:

"We also realized that, unlike the Communist parties of Europe, our task was not to win away the masses from reformist mass political parties speaking in the name of labor, because there were none at that time in the United States, but to compel the reactionary trade union leaders to break with their old non-partisan policies and to lead the unions into the political struggle as labor organizations; that is, to promote among the masses the growing movement in favor of independent political action and thus compel the trade union burocracy to either form a labor party or expose themselves before the masses as enemies of the working class." (My emphasis).

I have a haunting impression that the foregoing words were copied or paraphrased from a much worthier document. To state the case as having two alternatives (either the burocracy must form and lead, etc. or else the burocracy stands exposed etc.) might be a very acceptable way of stating it if the majority realized at the time that it is not truly an alternative, that in fact the burocracy is not going to form a labor party, and that really it is only a case of one possibility: the exposure of the burocracy and consequent entrenchment of the Workers Party as the leader in the political united front action, crystallized possibly in a united front organization.

But the majority thesis shows the astonishing fact that the majority considered exactly the opposite alternative to be the only reality: that the only possible organizational outcome of the united front farmer-labor party campaign would be if the trade union burocracy actually did form a farmer-labor party!

4. Majority thinks that since the trade union burocracy refuses to organize a labor party, and betrays the movement, then the object of the slogan (which was to have a labor party) is lost and the basis of our political united front action has vanished.

For, after the trade union burocracy has failed to form one of these farmer-labor parties of the kind which "if it is to be a success cannot be a Communist party," and after they have thus presumably exposed themselves, then, says the majority thesis:

"But when the leaders of these organizations enter into a permanent alliance with the petty bourgeoisie and when such an alliance with the LaFollette movement receives the recognition and support of almost the entire organized labor movement, then the question of forming a labor party loses its basic foundation and ceases to be a fighting issue for immediate practical use."

Foster and Cannon think that the desertion of the leaders breaks up the basis of the united front. For them in theory, as in practice it was shown to be, the political united front is inconceivable except as a farmer-labor party to be reached thru agreement from the top. "To say that the Fitzpatrick group did not want a labor party is ridiculous," said Comrade Foster to the Comintern. But now Fitzpatrick is with Gompers, and Comrades Foster and Cannon turn in bitter remorse to tell us: "Now . . . it must be the united front to fight for specific demands, on burning issues, from below in the shape of 'councils of action,' unemployment councils, shop committees, etc. And not the united front from the top in the shape of farmer-labor parties." (See the majority's summary of its thesis.)

5. Is the period of 1924 the same as that of 20 years ago, when British Labor Party was formed?

We assert that the misconception of the Foster-Cannon group in considering that the use of the farmer-labor party united front slogan would not be "profitable or successful" because there is "no immediate possibility of the growth of a mass farmer-labor party," arises from that group's belief that the only "profit or success" from the use of the slogan would be the actual formation of a labor party something after the type British labor party, including at one sweep the respectable A. F. of L. practically as a whole. We have never believed this. As we say in our minority thesis:

"The conclusion that it will produce a similar party to that which exists in England ignores the fact that it is developing in a different historical period — the period of the decline of capitalism and of the proletarian revolution."

And as far back as our thesis of November 1923 (which the Foster group desperately fought against but later accepted momentarily for the convention), we said, " . . . it would be an illusion to believe that an all-inclusive mass labor party will be organized in the near future." We said then, "Only the left wing of the labor movement will in the beginning participate in the organization of a mass class party of the farmers and workers." But when the Foster-Cannon group discovers for the first time in November 1924 (exactly a year later) that an all-inclusive mass labor party as large in the girth as the British labor party is not in the immediate future in America, they hurriedly sound the alarm and scurry out of the political united front policy.

Our conception of the aim of the united front has differed from theirs from the time of our first practical action—that of the Chicago farmer-labor convention of July 3, 1923, when our policy was the ruling policy. From the beginning our conception of the united front labor-party policy has always been that:

"The first task of the Workers Party is to become a mass Communist Party of workers." (Immediately after the July 3 Chicago convention it was Comrade Pepper who called the political committee together furiously to denounce the inadvertent organ which had crept into the party organ, "build the F. F. L. P." and/or demand that it be changed to "Build the Workers Party!" and that any efforts to get individual members for the F. F. L. P. be stopped) and that the slogan in regard to that body be, "Secure affiliations of labor organizations for the F. F. L. P.")

We followed the united front labor party tactic for this purpose, realizing that we are not living in the period of before the war in which labor bureaucrats would form British labor parties, but that the mass cry of independent political action, even tho it expresses itself in picturing an all-inclusive labor party in America, will in the course of the united front action reveal that only a left wing can be rallied for the slogan of independent political action; and that this left wing can be material over which we can establish our leadership for the purpose of building our Workers Party into a mass Communist party.

6. Does the betrayal by Gompers, Fitzpatrick, Hillman, Hillquit & Co., or the electoral defeat of LaFollette, destroy the basis for the use of the labor party slogan?

We assert that the mass basis of the demand for independent political action (historically expressed as the labor party demand) is still in existence. This demand did not originate in the soliloquies of Mr. Fitzpatrick or Mr. Hillman or Mr. Johnston, and therefore the Foster-Cannon group is wrong when it says that "when the leaders . . . enter into a permanent alliance with the petty-bourgeoisie" and get for the alliance the support of "almost the entire organized labor movement" which they control—that then "the question of forming a labor party loses its basic foundation." On the contrary. If the class struggle is sharpening and creating the friction which generates the mass demand, and unless the class struggle is being abated, the betrayal of these leaders creates the best possible basis for the use of the slogan. The greetings sent to our last year's convention by the Comintern are still valid and quite applicable on this point:

"That Gompers and his reactionary trade union officialdom oppose it (the united front) because of their antiquated, treacherous policy of 'rewarding the friends and punishing the enemies of labor' in the capitalist parties; that the socialists, having renounced every revolutionary idea and lined up with the reactionary forces of the country, also oppose it; and that a few so-called 'progressive' trade union leaders of the middle west have betrayed the workers and gone over to Gompers, that they denounce the ideas they once stood for and therefore also oppose the united front—is creating the best basis for the united front policy."

The class struggle is sharpening in America, not abating. The fury of government repression will strike death blows at labor more, not less, in the immediate future. The demand for political action on the united front basis (which historically takes the form of the demand for a "farmer-labor party") will be more urgent now than ever before.

But "the present situation calls for neither a labor party policy nor a labor party slogan," writes Comrade Bittelman! And under such guidance we slip into setarian solitude while the A. F. of L. convention comes and goes, and the C. P. P. A. conference, where the betrayed trade union dupes of LaFollette were to have their showdown on the promise of "a labor party after election," comes and goes, and the Communist Workers Party no longer speaks for political action on the basis of the united front.

SOVIET ISSUES INSTRUCTIONS TO ITS MISSIONS

Emphasises Proletarian Rule in Russia

MOSCOW, Dec. 7.—The Soviet government has issued instructions governing the conduct of its diplomatic agents accredited to foreign capitalist nations. The regulations emphasize the proletarian character of the Soviet government and are designed to meet the wide social and other differences existing between the Soviet and other governments.

After stating that the Soviet missions would observe the principle that nations do not appoint foreign missions for the purpose of carrying on propaganda, it points out that the Soviet missions represent a republic of workers and peasants where there exists a special mode of life and special social and moral convictions.

The statement continues:

"Owing to this fact Soviet missions accorded to foreign countries must in their personal relations as well as in their diplomatic households observe simplicity of form and economy of expenditure. Their refusal to participate in the customary dipomatic and social functions of foreign countries does not arise from the position they occupy and should not be regarded as an unfriendly act.

"The same view should be taken regarding their refusal to participate in manifestations which have a monarchial character or which generally are not in harmony with the Soviet principles. Such acts should not be considered in the nature of propaganda or as demonstrations of a political character.

"On the other hand, the Soviet government will not regard as an unfriendly act the refusal by foreign diplomats accredited to Soviet Russia to participate in functions which they consider contrary to their custom or which appear to have a revolutionary character."

"We believe observance of these regulations will establish better understandings between the Soviet and foreign countries."

SOVIET WORKERS GAIN DESPITE ANCIENT TOOLS

Labor Unions Oversee Apprentice System

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—Russian workingmen are ingenius mechanics, says Samuel Shipman, for two years labor manager for the industrial plants in the autonomous industrial colony of Kusbas, Siberia. The Russian workers can get along with antique or broken down machinery that would drive an American mechanic to despair. Accustomed to work with poor materials during the years of czarism and the blockade that followed the revolution they have learned to improvise their own ways of getting things done.

The difficulty comes in getting the Russian mechanic used to the modern machinery that is being installed in the Kusbas district and in the industrial centres of old Russia. For this new, modern machinery, Shipman says, young men and boys are more adaptable.

To Train Apprentices.

Shipman told of the apprentice training system at the colony. The industrial laws of new Russia compel each plant to carry and train a number of apprentices equal to six per cent of the total force. The labor unions oversee the apprenticeship system in order that the coming mechanics get the proper training and the proper health safeguards while learning. Youngsters between fourteen and sixteen are permitted to work only four hours daily; between sixteen and eighteen only six hours.

No worker can be discharged without the consent of the union but the unions feel the responsibility for production success as they do not in capitalist communities so no worker who is not pulling for the benefit of the colony can expect the backing of his organization.

Bronx Educational Work.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—A class for new party members in the Bronx has been organized. This class is conducted by Comrade Stamler and the subject is the A. B. C. of Communism. It meets every Tuesday evening at 8:30 at 1347 Boston Road, Bronx. We wish to particularly stress to our new party members the importance of attending these classes. The discussion at these classes made up of new party members who are equally as new for a clear understanding of the aims of our movement will be very helpful for future active participation in branch activities. Do not fail to take this class seriously. Come next Tuesday night.

THE EMBODIMENT OF THE PROLETARIAN WILL TO POWER

Editor's Note.—Every day until publication has been completed, the DAILY WORKER will publish a new chapter from the book, "Lenin: The Great Strategist of the Class War," by A. Losovsky, secretary of the Red International of Labor Unions. The eighteenth chapter is entitled, "The Embodiment of the Proletarian Will to Power."

* * *

ONE of Lenin's most notable characteristics was his will power. He knew nothing but the revolution, and had been pursuing this end with all his energy. So-called public opinion had no influence over him. He never paid any attention to "what the other paid any attention to "what the other fellow will say." He always felt the pulsation of the working class, because he was so closely connected with it. He also knew how to swim against the current, how to overcome obstacles, whenever this was demanded by the revolution. Let us recollect how he passed to Russia thru Germany at the beginning of the revolution without paying the least attention to the insinuations of the capitalist and reformist press the world over. He possessed the ability to concentrate his will power and to strike the enemy at the weakest spot. While he was very patient with his friends he never knew or showed any tolerance to the betrayers of the working class. When a friend of yesterday would become the enemy of today Lenin would pursue the same tactics of uncompromising hostility. His tactics were always elastic, which enabled him to utilize even the slightest mistake of his opponent in order to drive a wedge into the ranks of the enemy. He never shunned responsibility, especially in decisive moments of struggle. He always knew what he wanted. The most characteristic feature of the political and moral physiognomy of Lenin, this gigantic concentration of the will of the proletariat, were his extraordinary will power and his all-inclusive spirit.

Standard Oil Places Another Man on Senate Foreign Relations Body

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON.—Standard Oil has taken another place on the senate foreign relations committee, by securing the approval of the republican committee on committees to the candidacy of Senator Edge of New Jersey. He will fill the place held by Lodge of Massachusetts. To the place left vacant by the death of Brandegee of Connecticut on the same committee, the party has chosen his colleague, McLean, who has been faithful to the bosses and is chairman of the banking and currency committee.

With Borah as chairman and Hiram Johnson as ranking majority member the committee dealing with foreign relations will comprise Moses, McCormick, Wadsworth, Lenroot, Willis, Pepper, Shipstead, Swanson, Pittman Shields, Robinson, Underwood, Walsh of Montana and Owen, this winter. McCormick, Shields and Owen will drop out on March 4. If Bonds finds a way to lead a majority of the republican members on any important issue it will be because he is in accord with the Mellon-Coolidge plans.

Swanson, the ranking democratic member, is as hostile to recognition of Russia as is Wadsworth or Edge.

WORKERS' REVOLT IN PHILIPPINES TERMED TRIFLE

Weeks Says "Finances" Are in Sound Condition

Everything is lovely in the Philippine Islands under the dictatorship of General Leonard Wood, according to the report of Secretary of War Weeks, except that there have been two serious outbreaks of natives, and that the Philippine legislature has presented several petitions to the president.

Secretary Weeks attempts to minimize these "trifles." "The outstanding accomplishment of General Woods' administration in the islands is the stabilization of exchange. As a result of rigid economy and careful supervision, the finances of the government are in sound condition," says the secretary of war.

The secretary of war fails to mention that the natives of the Philippine Islands have been clamoring for independence. He characterizes the disturbance in Surigao as an "outbreak" which involved thousands of ignorant Christian religious fanatics who had fallen under the influence of unprincipled leaders, who used them for their financial advantage."

Belittles Struggle for Independence.

Unable to ignore the missions sent to the United States asking that the dictatorship of Wood cease and that the Philippine Islands be granted independence, Secretary Weeks attempts to belittle the agitation for independence. "Two missions representative of the legislature visited the United States during the year," he says. It is noticeable that the war department fails to mention the purpose of these missions, which was to seek Philippine independence from control by American capitalists. "The first of these, headed by the speaker of the lower house of the Philippine legislature," declares Weeks, "presented a petition to the president to which a formal reply was made."

"This reply was well received and appreciated" Weeks continued, unmindful of the growing agitation for independence among the Philippines "Notwithstanding the fact that it was in effect, a denial of the requests of the petition."

"The second mission, headed by prominent leaders of the three parties participating in the last general election in the islands, arrived at about the close of the congressional hearings, but was given an opportunity to set forth its views. There was no resulting legislation."

ANOTHER STEP TO SAVE SACCO AND VANZETTI

Witness Declares He Never Saw Sacco

(By The Federated Press)

BOSTON, Mass.—Another legal step was taken towards saving Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti from the electric chair when a fourth bill of exceptions was filed in Dedham courthouse to Judge Thayer's ruling against a new trial.

This fourth bill will inform the Massachusetts supreme court about the affidavit of Roy E. Gould, a witness of the South Braintree payroll robbery and murder, whom the prosecution failed to call, because his testimony refuted the charges against the two workingmen. Gould's affidavit tells how he stood within five to ten feet of the murder car, so close that one of the bandits fired point blank at him, thinking to put a possible identifying witness out of the way.

The shot passed thru his overcoat says Gould. He got a good view of the bandit doing the shooting, the one on the right hand seat of the car. Gould told his story to the South Braintree police chief at the time and the story was published in Boston papers. In the months before the trial came he went out of town. The prosecution had his address—the defense did not—but the prosecution refused to call him. Long after the trial he was found by a defense investigator and taken before Sacco in Dedham jail.

Had Never Seen Him.

Gould positively declared that he had never seen Sacco before, that Sacco was not the bandit he remembered so clearly. This refuted the prosecution's assertion that the bandit on the right hand seat was Sacco.

Gould's new evidence was hard for Judge Thayer to get around, when the judge wrote his lengthy decision denying a new trial to the men convicted in his court. The judge did not challenge Gould's veracity. Instead he adopted the novel tack of saying that the case against Sacco and Vanzetti did not depend on eye witnesses —and after all, he said, Gould was only another eye witness. The case against Thayer, rested on circumstantial evidence.

Convinced of Frame-Up.

This amazing confession of the judge, that circumstantial evidence was all the state had to convict the two workingmen, astonished New England folk who had been following the case. It convinced many more persons that the two defendants were being framed. With vital direct evidence, such as Gould's ignored, with affidavits from Lola Andrews and Pelzer, confessing to perjury in their identifications of Sacco; with the micro-photographs showing Sacco's gun barrel does not fit the mortal bullet the array of proof is breaking down the barriers of prejudice.

The Gould evidence, filed again by the defense attorneys, will put the issue before the higher court. Three other bills of exceptions had already been filed. The Massachusetts supreme court is the last stage in the legal proceedings for these famous international working class defendants unless they can be carried to the supreme court of the United States.

SOLIDARITY OF PRIVATE BANKERS REAL END ACHIEVED BY CREATION OF THE FEDERAL RESERVE SYSTEM

In Union There Is Strength was the slogan of the private bankers when they put over on the country a new constitution which vastly extended their title to exploit the wage earners and farmers.

This new constitution which superseded that adopted in 1787 is known as the federal reserve act of 1913. It was amended in 1917.

This further increased the power of the bankers to exact every ounce of increased productivity from the actual producers who were thus left no better off as the result of the progress of industry.

Solidarity of the private bankers was the real and achieved by the creation of the federal reserve system. The full resources of the country's money power thus became available to prevent collapse in any locality where suspicion developed that title to this power rests on fraud. The federal reserve act gave the bankers power to issue paper money guaranteed by the United States in order to allay any such suspicion.

Want Power to Issue Money.

Approximately 95 per cent of all the money used today is created by the private bankers and circulated in the form of checks. It is supposed to be secured by the paper profits derived from bank-made money of the past. It is really a mortgage on the surplus which labor will create in the future.

In 1907 the bankers found that the old banking law limited their ability to create this bank money by requiring a reserve of at least 25 per cent of it in gold. This actually prevented them from expanding their money as fast as the productivity of industry. The result would have been a steady reduction in prices, a consequent increase in the purchasing power of the people and a collapse of the huge capitalization which had been reared on the expectation that prices would be maintained at a level which would take the entire surplus production as profits. A panic followed.

The panic of 1907 was a result of the conflict between the principle of limiting the right of private bankers to issue money and the capitalist determination to control the issue of money to expand their profits and power.

Morgan was able to prevent the spread of this threat to the entire power of capital and the bankers immediately set about forestalling a more serious one in the future. They spent over $1,000,000 in a campaign to prove to the people that the welfare of the country demanded bank reform.

The reform which they secured was Woodrow Wilson's federal reserve which permits them to consolidate the entire bank reserve of the country and to issue as much money as might be necessary to keep up prices as the productivity of the people expanded in the future. As a result private bankers now create bank-made money not to 4 times their reserve but to 20 times their reserve. And the money they create is a mortgage on the future production of wage earners and farmers.

In brief the financial oligarchy has kept up prices and vastly extended its power to prevent the workers from consuming their increased production.

WATCHMAKERS OF WALTHAM IN STRIKE TO WIN

Bosses Refuse Workers Right to Organize

By ESTHER LOWELL

(Federated Press Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—"We won't go back until we all go back and Waltham Watch company recognizes the union!" emphatically declare Bertha Fulton, Alma Sicotte and Ruth Weatherby, striking watchworkers from Waltham, Mass., who are telling New York labor unions about their fight for organization. "We're fighting for those who'll come after us." It is a tough battle, the girls admit, especially against the group of bankers and brokers controlling not only Waltham Watch company but Amoskeag Manufacturing company and other textile mills as well as numerous enterprises of various sorts all over the country.

Will Not Deal with Union.

Altho Frederick C. Dumaine and I. E. Boucher, president and superintendent of Waltham Watch company, pretend that they are not against the principle of workers' organization they will not deal with the union at all, the girls assert. "We call Dumaine a great organizer," says Mrs. Fulton, "because his action forced us out and together." The strike of watchworkers began with a spontaneous walkout in August after another wage cut had been posted. The strikers' Watchmakers' Protective Association grew out of this first demonstration of solidarity and is now affiliated with the International Jewelry Workers' Union.

Strikers Holding Out.

"Some of our workers have had to get odd jobs," say the girls. "The Watch Manufacturers' Association agreed not to take Waltham strikers in other factories. Waltham Watch company has a 99 year lease for water power on the Charles river and with the cotton mill will not allow outside enterprises to come in so that there isn't much work in town. But the strikers are holding out splendidly; getting along on almost nothing some of them. We have to help them get rooms and give some money for food. One crippled man who can't work anywhere but at his job in the watch factory refused to go back to work when given a special offer altho he has a wife and two children dependent."

"Waltham workers were never known to be overpaid," declares Mrs. Weatherby. "Boys in my department, 18 girls, are given only $12.82 to start and were cut nearly $1.05." From 35 cents to 40 cents an hour is paid for day work. Dumaine put most of the workers on piece work which amounted to a wage cut. Six months is needed to learn each job and there are many intricate, delicate tasks necessary to make the fine grade watches that Waltham produces.

Work Nerve Wracking.

All the job masters are striking, the girls state, so that the company cannot train any new workers as they might be able to get. Workers in other watch factories will not come to Waltham because the wage scale is even less than their own. President Faulkner of the Watchmakers' Protective has job prices from Elgin which show that Dumaine's contention that he was paying as much as other watch factories is false. Work on a watch is nerve-wracking, say the girls, "and Dumaine won't let us get up from our benches and walk around a bit for trellet as we used to." Boucher wants the lower halves of the windows frosted so that workers could not look out occasionally to relieve eye strain. Many workers must wear glasses.

The Machinists' local in Waltham is keeping up the picketing with the strikers. The Women's Trade Union League of New York is assisting the Waltham girls and providing escorts for them in their canvassing of local union meetings for funds.

The European Crisis

Two facts stand out from the European dispatches of the last three days.

1. That there is a great revival of revolutionary sentiment and action on the continent, and

2. That the capitalist governments are hysterical and fearful of mass uprisings right at the time when the Dawes plan was supposed to have lulled the masses into that state of somnolence which is necessary for their successful plundering.

One more conclusion can be drawn from the European news and its full significance will be understood. It is that under the domination of American capital, to which every western European power is mortgaged now, there is being prepared another offensive against Soviet Russia that waits a favorable opportunity to go into action.

The success of the Dawes plan depends upon the wholesale subjugation of European labor. The Communists in every nation are the leaders of the fight against the Dawes plan and it is the purpose of the capitalist governments to crush the Communist parties which take the lead in organizing the European working class against the Dawes plan and against war on Soviet Russia.

Raids, arrests and mass murder are not going to stamp out the Communist parties. The European working class already know that they have been sold by their rulers to American imperialism. The capitalists of Europe have lost their greatest propaganda weapon. They can no longer raise the slogan of defense of the fatherland and rally the masses of the workers who know that the House of Morgan speaks thru every European cabinet.

The raids on the Communists, as in France and Germany, the death sentences passed out en masse in Esthonia, Spain, Roumania and Bulgaria, the foolish stories of the "tottering Soviet government," are not evidence of the strength of European capitalism, but of a new crisis within it that means its greater instability and greater mass movements of the working class led by the Communist parties, a continual acute crisis that even floods of American gold cannot cure.

Justice

The class nature of judicial processes in the United States is shown again in a recent ruling of Judge Anderson of Indianapolis who, after accepting in 1922 the evidence of hundreds of government stoolpigeons and provocateurs as a basis for the nation-wide injunction against the striking railway shopmen, reprimands a federal narcotic agents for "framing up" a morphine peddler.

Opium and morphine salesmen, white slavers and defaulting bankers, being more or less useful to capitalism at times, must be accorded their constitutional rights. But striking workers and revolutionary agitators, being a menace to the system that makes judges and dope fiends common defenders of its sanctity, need be given no such consideration. They are without the pale and any evidence—none at all is better, according to General Panther—and any method is good that puts them behind the bars.

Beating the Boss to the Punch

The workers employed by the Illinois Traction company at Springfield have gone on strike for a 10 per cent increase in wages. Their chances of winning are good inasmuch as they gave the company only a few hours notice instead of thirty, sixty or ninety days as is customary in respectable union circles.

When the American unions develop the system of surprise attack—a military tactic endorsed by the best authorities—as one of the most dependable weapons in industrial warfare in place of long drawn out negotiations that give the capitalists ample time to recruit scabs and gunmen, they will be on more even terms with the bosses and the labor movement will profit immensely by the militant spirit that this tactic will spring from and increase.

New War on Children

That the fight against child labor launched by the Workers (Communist) Party of America is actually a struggle against capitalism is shown by the organization recently in North Carolina of an association of cotton manufacturers to fight any encroachment on their power to exploit the labor of children. The North Carolina organization is, so its supporters claim, the beginning of a nation-wide militant organization of textile capitalists for the perpetuation of child slavery. Tobacco manufacturers and growers will also be lined up against the children and the Workers (Communist) Party, whose program, with its provision for government maintenance of all children of school age, meets the situation in the only way it can be met short of the abolition of capitalism for which the party also strives.

Comrade Trotsky Can't Explain This

Comrade Trotsky is not helping himself or the Communist International by the continuation of his opposition expressed in his recent book, "Lessons of the 1917 Revolution." He is a member of the political bureau of the Russian Communist Party and his opposition is therefore the more reprehensible than if it came from one of the rank and file.

Comrade Trotsky approaches genius in many ways, but it seems that he has never learned to submerge himself in the party except during periods of the greatest crisis. He must express his individuality at all costs and in a nation which has the whole of the capitalist world to fight, such an attitude on the part of one of the leading comrades of the ruling Communist Party is a danger, not only to the Russian working class, but to the whole revolutionary movement.

Comrade Trotsky has many admirers in America—he even has a few imitators in the American Communist Party—and his departure from a leading position in the Comunnist International and the Russian Communist Party, inevitable if his present attitude is continued, will cause more excitement here than in Russia where the party is supreme.

The ill-concealed glee with which the capitalist and social-democratic press greets every new opposition utterance of Comrade Trotsky ought to be enough to convince him of his error. Certainly it is enough to convince millions of far more humble and less able comrades in the parties of the Communist International.

This joyous chronicling of his opposition by the blackest enemies of the world's working class is something that not all of Trotsky's literary skill is able to explain away.

Lewis and the Left Wing

There is a definite revival of left wing sentiment in the labor movement. In the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers, in the railway terminals where the shop crafts are employed, even in the Carpenters' Union, long believed almost lost, election results and actions of the workers indicate new militancy.

In line with this is the great revolt of the rank and file of the miners against the continuous betrayals of Lewis and his underlings. The anthracite territory is in open rebellion and Lewis has answered with the old weapon of the reactionary enemies of the labor movement—revocation of charters, disruption of the union, denunciation of the striking miners in the capitalist press, a united front with the bosses and vilification of the left wing elements.

The best way to get a clear idea of exactly what this expulsion of thousands of miners from the union means at this time, is to briefly review the condition in which the union is at present. It is the target of a well-planned and carefully organized attack from the coal operators' association. Non-union mines in the south are being developed rapidly and the coal from these mines is given preference over union-mined coal right in the natural markets of the union districts. Even with winter coming on the union has been unable to develop over fifty per cent employment for its members because of the flood of non-union coal. The crying need is for organization of these non-union fields, but instead of this the Lewis machine disrupts the union in the districts that are needed to furnish the money and men for organization work in the scab territory.

This is playing the game of the bosses with a vengeance and it is no wonder that the Lewis machine hates with a poisonous hatred the Workers (Communist) Party and the Trade Union Educational League that exposes this betrayal of the dues-paying membership and the whole working class.

The Bully Becomes a Bum

The immediate outcome of the volcanic situation in Italy is not hard to predict.

There will be an entente cordiale between the remnants of fascism and the constitutional opposition—a united front against the Communists and the working class—for a time. This is already forecast in the speech of Mussolini who frightened the yellow socialists and liberals and cajoled them into giving him another vote of confidence by playing up his downfall as a surrender to Communism.

That it would be tantamount to this no one will deny who is familiar with the speedy march of events in Italy. The bloody and bombastic bully, Mussolini, has become a craving raven with spotted plumage that droops more sadly at every new victory of the Communists. His loud challenges to the whole world have shrunk to whispered exhortations for aid from the constitutional opposition which, like Mussolini, sees and fears the advancing forces of the Italian working class who have learned in the last year and a half how to deal with their oppressors and betrayers. Mussolini, the bold "bad man," has become Mussolini the bum—begging favors from former enemies.

The Italian situation is full of gloom for capitalism and its procurers, but full of hope and promise of victory for the workers.

What does Judge Elbert Gary think of Mussolini now as his idol trembles and pales in the face of the wrath of the Italian working class?

Which reminds us that another Communist baiter, somewhat nearer home, one Rinaldo Cappellini, is hiding from the outraged Italian-American miners in the anthracite district.

CELEBRATE THE FIFTH YEAR OF TECHNICAL AID

Group of the "Red Ray" Commune Leaves

The fight of the local Russian counter - revolutionary clique against the influence of the "Society for Technical Aid to Soviet Russia" and its "Soviet School" took the form, last Saturday night, of a Russian motion picture program in opposition to the fifth anniversary celebration and farewell party in honor of a group leaving for the "Red Ray Commune" near Odessa.

The picture program was heavily advertised and praised in the local reactionary sheet "Russky Viestnik," and the advertisements were so worded as to draw both the reactionaries and the radicals.

For instance, at the main five-reel film was called "The Calvary of Russian Womanhood," other titles read, "Russian Movies, 1918-1919," "Red Leaders in Kiev," "The Cheka in Kiev," etc. What Russian is not interested in motion pictures of 1918? So this program was staged at 1839 W. Division street. The Soviet School is at 1902 W. Division street. And to make doubly sure the counter-revolutionists secured a so-called "friend of labor," M. I. Vorobiev and his "Russian-American Choir" as entertainers.

"Hero' Hissed.

But only a handful showed up, and even this small crowd was unsympathetic toward the white guardists. Whenever the "hero" Denikin appeared as the "Saviour" of Kiev, he was greeted by more hisses than cheers, while the "villain" Trotsky received tremendous applause. This greatly disheartened the Denekinites.

The greater part of the crowd left immediately after the show for the already crowded farewell party at the Soviet School and the fiasco of their "white" enemy added to the good spirit there. The program was furnished by the Y. W. L. orchestra and members of the John Reed Junior Group. A well-known Russian proletarian actress, Namgova, sand the hymn of the Russian youth, "The Young Guard."

The chairman, in his review of the five years of activity of the local „S. T. A. S. R.," stated that many members of the society were now busy in the mills, mines, factories and fields of Soviet Russia. The largest group of the society, the commune "Red Ray," has over fifty members, with tractors, American implements, tilling the soil in the Odessa district. At the conclusion of the program lantern pictures of the activity of the society were shown. The greatest applause was brought forward by the pictures of the actual work in the "Red Ray" commune in Russia, and by the persecution visited upon the society in the 1919 raids.

Get Big Sendoff.

The group, which left on the midnight train, was given a rousing sendoff. As they marched to the door the entire audience stood up singing "The International." Dancing concluded the program.

On Saturday, Dec. 27, 8 p. m., the society will give a Russian play entitled "Miner Kort." This is a revolutionary episode in the struggles of the miners of the Donetz Basin during the perilous days of 1918. The play is being directed by the celebrated Russian actor, A. Pokotilov. It will be held at the Soviet School, 1902 W. Division St., Chicago, and many comrades who do not understand Russian know from attendance at previous plays that the action is so excellent that failure to understand the words does not take away the enjoyment of the play.

WISCONSIN S. P. IS READY TO SHUFFLE OFF

Prepares for Alliance with Republicans

By G. S. SHKLAR.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Dec. 7. — The socialist party of Wisconsin is getting ready for the final act of betrayal of giving up its socialist name and definitely aligning with the middle class movement.

William Coleman, state secretary of the socialist party, participated in the meeting of the state conference of the conference for progressive political action in Madison, Wisconsin, on Nov. 30, at which it was decided to go ahead with the formation of a "new political party."

It is interesting to observe that the socialist party does not even play with the words farmer-labor. In giving up its radical name, it will change it for a real innocent name that would not be offensive to the middle class politicians. It is apparent that the S. P. will go a long way toward forming an alliance with the republican party politicians. Any kind of a party will do seems to be their slogan.

S. P. Is C. P. P. A. in Wisconsin.

The conference for progressive political action in the state of Wisconsin is composed chiefly of the socialist party politicians and the followers of former Lieutenant Governor Commings, an unsuccessful candidate for governor on the republican party ticket, who was defeated by Governor Blaine.

The true virtue of Commings consists of, the socialists say, of being a true christian and in being very honest. The result of honesty the S. P. of Wisconsin substituted for the class struggle. A truly unique perversion of Marxism.

Both of these groups claim to be the only true followers of LaFollette but it seems that LaFollette does not care for people who seem to take him too seriously. At the crucial moment in the election campaign LaFollette endorsed Blaine in opposition to other candidates and Blaine received most of LaFollette's votes, while the opposition group including the socialists could rally 45,000 votes of the total 350,000 votes cast for LaFollette.

And still this group persists in licking LaFollette's boots and fights for the favors of wearing the master's name, while at the same time displaying intolerance and bad hatred towards the Communist movement. The group humbly submitting to the dictatorship of LaFollette is madly raving about the proletarian dictatorship in Russia.

It is apparent that if the new party is formed it will be nothing but an other political abortion including the renegade socialist party and a small group of sympathizers. This group will claim for itself the heritage of LaFollette's movement and will eventually be outwitted and destroyed by the LaFollette republican machine headed by Blaine, even as this group was outwitted in the last elections.

Communist Movement Growing.

The final betrayal of the socialist party politicians will help to clarify the issue. The elimination of the socialist party from the political arena offer wonderful opportunities for the Communist movement. The membership of the Workers Party in Wisconsin will maintain contact with workers who still follow the lead of the socialist party and who will eventually follow and join our movement as soon as they will learn to understand the impotence and treacherous character of the socialist party.

To win the masses away from the corrupt leadership of the socialist party and under the banner of the Communist movement is one of the principal tasks of our party in Wisconsin.

The socialist party is dead—Long live the party of revolutionary socialism—The Workers (Communist) Party of America.

GENERAL WU'S FOLLOWERS NOW REGULAR BANDITS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PEKING, Dec., 7.—The followers of Wu Pei Fu have now deserted him and are resorting to banditry in order to make ends meet. The general has taken to his heels out of Honan province following a revolt of his troops. It looks like Wu's finish.

There are persistent reports that General Chang Tso Lin and Tuan Chi Jui, both favored a better proposition than flight to Wu, but it seems that the influence of Sun Yat Sen is very strong at the capital and he looks on Wu as a tool of foreign capital. The revolutionary leader is expected to arrive here tomorrow after a successful visit to Japan.

British and U. S. Influence.

American and British influence has been brot to bear on the military leaders now in control of Peking to bring back Wu and oust the pro-Soviet leaders. This has not yet happened, however, and it is not denied that Soviet Russia is exerting powerful influence in the situation for the unification of China and the betterment of the conditions under which the Chinese masses live.

LA FOLLETTE IN MOVE TO FLOAT BOURGEOIS PARTY

Will Use Farmer-Labor Movement as Ballast

By LAURENCE TODD.
(Federated Press Staff Correspondent.)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—Berger is keenly enjoying the situation created by the LaFollette movement.

"Sen. LaFollette has fought the republican party and left it; there is no question about that," he has told the press. "The senators barred by the republican caucus have made speeches charging that the republican party is corrupt and operates as the enemy of the farmers and wage workers, as an enemy of the common people. They have done all they possibly could to defeat the republican party.

"There is just as much cause and reason to keep them out of the republican caucus as there would be to keep me out if I claimed now to be a republican. I believe it is dishonest to use a false label to get into office. Sen. LaFollette has nothing to lose by making good his promise, by joining a new party. The chances are that he will be re-elected to the senate in four years if he takes that course. As for the house members they may feel the loss of committee appointments but they must be willing to pay the price if they are to be pioneers."

LaFollette's circular letter to state chairmen of the progressive campaign organization is indicative of his intention to do the thing that Berger urges him to do. After thanking the chairmen for their efforts in the campaign in which he says a vote of 6,000,000 was cast for the independent ticket, the Wisconsin senator sounds the keynote—"We have just begun to fight!" He says the Coolidge organization employed misrepresentation, slander and intimidation to an extent hitherto never dreamed of in American politics, and he emphasizes the economic pressure applied in every direction to break down the political revolt of the people.

"In order that we may carry on the work we have begun," he asks for detailed information as to names and addresses of persons who helped in the campaign, the character and extent of work done, the character of intimidation and slander used by the opposition, the cost of the campaign on both sides and the result of the final count of ballots. Repeatedly he warns them against becoming discouraged at the outcome of this battle; "we just begun to fight."

WHAT CAUSES OUR POORNESS?
Translated from "Nasha Molodjezh"
By HELEN VRABEL (13 years old.)

Did you ever stop to think why we are so poor? Did you ever talk to your parents about it? No? Wouldn't you like to know why we cannot have everything like the rich people? Of course you do!

First of all let us consider how we live. All the things we need for our comfort, for the comfort of those we love and which we cannot afford to buy.

We are told at school what kind of food to eat to give us strength but our mother has just so much money to spend on food and she must buy the food that is cheap and satisfies our hunger rather than that which will build finer bodies for us. Such expensive food is for those who have money to spend without an end.

The stores are filled with good warm clothes. They are beautiful to look at. We need new clothes but we know that we can only wear the clothes our parents can afford to buy for us. Most of us must wear clothes that our mother makes over from old clothing.

When we come home from school everywhere in our home we see poorness. Our mother is so tired from overwork that she hardly has time or the strength to talk to us, let alone play with us. Our father comes home from work, eats his supper and then he must go to bed so that he will be strong enough to work and keep his job. He is always telling mother about the boss. We hear little bits of conversation between them. "Today the boss said twenty men will be laid off." Mother looks up worried. "I don't think I will be laid off but those who remain will get a cut in wages." Or, "I suppose I will be laid off and have to look for a job again. Better not buy shoes for all the children. Buy shoes for John and mend John's old ones for Tom."

And we wonder! Why are we poor? What causes this poorness?

Is it our father's fault? Is it because he is lazy? Is it because he does not bring all the money he earns home to us?

No indeed. Our father works hard and brings his money home. He is not lazy. Whose fault is it then? What causes our poorness?

(To be continued tomorrow)

Yesterday I saw at the fair,
A big, fat greedy millionaire.
His eyes are sharp like a pin
Greedy to grab the money in.

He sends out some of his trusty spies,
Then closes one of his greedy eyes
And fancies he sees the money come in
From the poor workers who are so thin.

ELECT 44 GERMAN COMMUNISTS

Mexican Communists Win Peasant Leadership

AS WE SEE IT
By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

If you are not on your way to California to spend the rest of your life in that allegedly agreeable climate, it is not the fault of Arthur Brisbane, the widely-known chief of William Randolph Hearst's editorial staff. Arthur draws something like $100,000 a year from Hearst for poisoning the minds of the masses with his slippery promaganda. He is now enroute to California, very likely to see how his real estate ventures are getting along.

On the train he sits down to a dictaphone and hurls a column of nonsense into it. But tho it is nonsense, it is nevertheless dangerous. The object of Brisbane's praise of California is to advertise his real estate business and to create a feeling of contentment in the minds of the American workers and make them feel that this is a country of unlimited opportunity provided they have the desire to get wealthy. Brisbane, the millionaire journalist and pen prostitute knows that under capitalism the great wealth and unlimited resources of America are in the hands of our ruling class and that the millions of producers will never have access to this wealth until they first get rid of the capitalists.

THE number of votes alloted to the candidates of the Workers Party by the official count for the state of Illinois is so low that it is ridiculous. We are not complaining about this kind of treatment; it is just what we expected. The Communists do not expect a square deal from the capitalists, so we are not disappointed. Only those whose Communism is skin deep will lose heart because the official count shows hundreds of thousands of votes for LaFollette, Davis and Coolidge and only a few thousand for Foster. In this country with millions of workers disfranchised and those the most radical, the election result is not a good thermometer to register the political temperature.

A BIG famine faces the Irish workers and peasants. How little native rule means to the masses of any country is demonstrated by the fact that the south of Ireland is now ruled by native Irishmen, yet these men are taking as little interest in the welfare of the workers as the British government did when Ireland was ruled from Dublin castle. The writer does not hold that Ireland is free from British rule merely because a so-called Free State is in existence. Not at all. Ireland was never more under British rule than today. And Ireland would also be under the iron heel of Britain if DeValera and his supporters were in office.

WHY? In the first place an Irish Republic free from British domination is inconceivable, short of the overthrow of the British ruling class and the dismemberment of the robber empire. As long as England has a single battleship left she will defend Ireland—for her own sake—as the apple of her eye. She will fight for the retention of Ireland for strategical reasons just as she will spend hundreds of millions of pounds and spill a river of blood to protect the Suez canal, properly characterized by a

Our Party Wins 44 Seats in New Reichstag

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Dec. 8.—Despite the campaign of terror and imprisonment carried on by the government against the Communists, the latter succeeded in sending 44 deputies to the Reichstag according to the present incomplete tabulation.

The upholders of the Dawes plan used every weapon at their disposition to crush the Communists who were the only sincere opponents of the fettering of the German working class by the Wall Street bankers.

True to their role of servants of the bourgeoisie, the social-democrats mobilized all their strength in order to bolster up the capitalist government, which is one of the agents of the American financiers.

Not a True Picture.

Tho the Communists had 62 deputies in the previous Reichstag, the disparity between that figure and the present representation does not give a true picture of the political sentiment among the German working class. Every species of terror from blacklisting to imprisonment was used against the workers who were sympathetic to the Communists.

But the capitalists are not at all happy over the idea of having 44 Communists in parliament. That number can only cause a little less

TACOMA OFFICIAL SENDS OUT APPEAL FOR AID TO THE UNEMPLOYED

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 8.—E. Brown, superintendent of the Tacoma city-state free employment office appeals to the people of Tacoma to assist in furnishing work to the needy. It is estimated that 500 unemployed seek work in his office daily, which does not include the hundreds who wait at gates of factories and sawmills every morning.

The Todd steel shipyard recently closed down, throwing nearly 1,000 skilled men out of work.

DETROIT RUNS FIVE BIG BOLSHEVIK FILM SHOWS IN ONE WEEK

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 8.— Five shows in three different theaters in one week is the record hung up by the Detroit Workers Party as a mark for other locals to equal if not beat.

The picture program includes the famous new feature, "The Beauty and the Bolsheviki," and the three-reel educational "Russia in Overalls." These two films will be shown:

Medbury Theater, Dec. 8 and 9.
Caniff Theater, (Hamtramck), Dec. 10 and 11.
Royale Theater, Dec. 12.

Toward the end of the week there may be an announcement of further dates in the Jewish section, and the Armenish colony is also to come in for attention. In the meantime, pick out the theater nearest you and come early to avoid the rush.

THE TIGHTWAD

MASSACHUSETTS IN LINE WITH 2,636 VOTES FOR FOSTER

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BOSTON, Dec. 8.— The official returns of the vote in the state of Massachusetts in the presidential election has just been published.

The Workers Party candidate for president, William Z. Foster, received a total of 2,636 votes.

John J. Ballam, who was the Workers Party candidate for governor, is credited with 9,506 votes. Dwyer, for secretary of state, secured 24,000 votes.

The socialists supported the LaFollette progressive ticket in the presidential race, but had their separate socialist ticket in the state election. Their candidate for governor received 4,367 votes or about half the votes of the Communist candidate for governor.

CALL FOR STRUGGLE AGAINST IMPERIALIST RULE OF WALL STREET IN BOTH AMERICAS

The DAILY WORKER is proud to give in the following manifesto the signal of a new, intense class solidarity between the revolutionary workers of the United States and the oppressed workers and peasants of Latin-America, driven by the whip of native taskmasters, betrayed by traitors of their own race and repressed with the bayonets and rifles of the United States army and navy.

Across the barrier of language and border lines, the workers of America—ALL America!—not merely in the United States, stretch fraternal hands with their southern comrades in the fight for life and power.

• • • •

TO THE WORKERS AND PEASANTS OF MEXICO AND LATIN-AMERICA.

COMRADES: The capitalists of the United States and their government today rule not only the United States but Latin-America as well.

The same capitalists that rob the workers of the United States, jail and murder them with their armed forces, use these same forces to deprive the Latin-American nations of their independence, make them colonies of Wall Street, increase the misery of the Latin-American workers and peasants and bring them under the iron rule of American imperialism.

The Mexican government that was established by the workers and peasants, for which they gave their lives by the thousands, has surrendered to the American capitalists. It dares no longer fight for the full freedom of the working class.

In Brazil, the capitalists of the United States and their government furnishes army officers to foment war against Argentine.

In Chile, the Anaconda Mining Company and the Guggenheims backed by the United States government, have seized control and murdered workers who dared to protest. They foment war with Peru. These plots against the lives of the masses of Latin-America are for the purpose of dividing them in their struggle against American imperialism.

In Santo Domingo, an American army rules with bayonets and machine guns.

In Haiti, thousands of workers killed by American troops is the basis of American capitalist power.

In Cuba, American bankers, behind whom stands the power of the United States, dictate the policies of the Cuban government while American capitalists plunder the workers and peasants.

In Panama, the Latin-American workers are held in virtual slavery by the American government.

Wherever the influence and investments of the American imperialist banditry are threatened by strikes and revolts of the Latin-American workers and peasants, there are found American bayonets and battleships.

The lives of the workers and peasants are nothing to them. They want profits and it makes no difference to them if it is stained with the life-blood of the working class.

Aligned with the capitalists of the United States are the social-democrats and reformers, the traitorous labor bureaucrats and other hangers-on of American and Latin-American capitalism. They protest friendship for the Latin-American masses but they fight only for the capitalists.

The Workers (Communist) Party of America calls upon the working class of the United States, Canada, Mexico and all of Latin-America to unite against the monstrous aggressions of American imperialism, to set up a united revolutionary front against the attacks of American capitalism and its government on the liberties, lives, and working conditions of the working class. It urges the working class to unite for this revolutionary struggle against American imperialist aggression, against the native capitalists, and against world capitalism under the banner of the Communist Parties in every country and the Communist International.

The Workers (Communist) Party of America pledges itself to wage the most militant struggle in its power against American capitalism. It alone in the United States fights for the toilers of Latin-America. It alone tells the masses of the danger to them in the growing power of the American capitalists of which their domination of Latin-America is a menacing sign. It alone rallies the workers of the United States for war on American capitalism.

Comrades: Extend this struggle to every corner of Latin-America. Broaden it. Organize the working class for the most stern resistance to

VOTES FOR FOSTER AT EAST LIVERPOOL, OHIO, NOT COUNTED

EAST LIVERPOOL, Ohio., Dec. 8.—Owing to the inability of the Workers Party to get on the ballot in Ohio, the district organizer of the party circulated the branches in the state with leaflets explaining how the Workers Party candidates names should be written in on the ballot.

I know several in our precinct who voted thus, but not a Communist candidate was mentioned in the election returns.—Signed, Mary Waters, Secretary, City Central Committee.

STRIKE TIES UP SOUTH ILLINOIS TRACTION LINES

Men Demand Increase in Wages and Contract

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Dec. 8.—Communication between many Southern Illinois towns is completely tied up following the strike of 500 trainmen on the Illinois traction system.

The striking motormen, who are affiliated with the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes, demand an increase in wages, better working conditions, and a union agreement.

100 Per Cent Effective.

The strike is one hundred per cent effective and not a wheel was turning yesterday on the entire 400 miles of the Illinois Traction company system W. J. Taylor, spokesman for the striking trainment, said that no negotiations have been started with the company and neither side has put forward any offers of compromise.

Officials of the traction system were in conference yesterday in Chicago. J. M. Fowler, an official of the traction company, declared that decision has not yet been made as to whether or not an attempt will be made to run the cars with strikebreakers.

Traction service between the cities of Danville, Decatur, Champaign, Bloomington, Peoria, Springfield and St. Louis is tied up. The trainmen walked out at midnight Saturday night. The men ask an increase of ten cents an hour in wages, improved working conditions, and abolition of the "open shop."

Mail Service Disrupted.

Mail service from St. Louis to Virden, Edwardsville, Staunton, Mount Olive, Litchfield, Kinmundy, Gillespie, Colinsville and other Illinois points was entirely disrupted by the strike.

One of the principal demands of the strikers which the company refuses, so far, is the nine hour day for the passenger workers and the ten hour day for the freight workers.

At the office of the Illinois Federation of Labor the DAILY WORKER was referred to John Walker at Springfield; as no information about the strike was on hand in Chicago.

JURY WOULD CREATE STATE POLICE BECAUSE OF KLAN VIOLENCE

WARREN, Ohio, Dec. 8—The riots at Niles instigated by the Ku Klux Klan have been used as an excuse by the Trumbull County special grand jury to recommend to the state legislature the creation of a state constabulary. The jury also advised that the mayor and chief of police be removed from office and that bands of men operating as state police be discontinued.

One hundred and four men were indicted charged with participation in the Klan violence.

ALL EXECUTIVE COMMITTEEMEN ARE COMMUNIST

Hard Blow for Reaction of Compers-Morones

By J. W. JOHNSTONE.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 8.—The most inspiring event of recent days in the western hemisphere is, to my mind, the Second Congress of the Agrarian League of Communes, just ended at Jalapa, in the state of Vera Cruz, with a sweeping victory for the Communists.

The entire executive committee are Communists and they are proceeding to organize nationally under the chairmanship of Ursulo Galvan, the outstanding figure in the peasant's movement of Mexico.

Blow for Gompers-Morones.

At the convention of the Pan-American Federation of Labor in Mexico City, this and other troubles were accumulating on the horizon for the Gompers-Morones traitors to labor, in spite of their endeavors to shut out of the convention all hints of revolutionary and anti-imperialist struggle.

Guatemala introduced a resolution demanding that American troops be withdrawn from all Latin-America and expressing bitter opposition for the infamous "Platt amendment" forced upon the Latin-American countries, which provided that the United States could invade and plunder and kill at will in the so-called "independent" nations of Central America. The Guatemalan delegates are strong fighters, but they are denied a vote by the Morones-Gompers gang, only having a voice.

Exposes Sugar Trust.

Santo Domingo introduced a resolution showing how the American sugar trust rules Santo Domingo thru the Hughes-Peynado treaty, which is nothing more than a plan of annexation giving the "right" of intervention, the control of legislation and legalizing the stealing of land by the sugar trust.

The armed forces of the United States are still in control and "elected" the president, Horacio Vasquez, who serves the imperialism of Wall Street and denies the right to organize or to strike, ignores labor laws and is protected by United States bayonets, warships and marines. It is a government of vasseldom, oppression and death.

These are the terms of the resolution which points out that Peynado is a sugar trust lawyer who worked in cahoots with Secretary Hughes to rob Santo Domingo of independence, which it demands be given without limitations, treaties or impositions. The Dominican resolution is very strong, but the Dominican delegate is very weak.

Every time an unpleasant word is said about Wall Street imperialism, Gompers moves an adjournment. He seems to feel the need for stimulants to bear up under the strain of listening to indignant Latin-Americans attack his friends and fellow-imperialists, J. P. Morgan and Charles E. Hughes. The convention is a series of adjournments.

Hit Barefaced Lie.

The great scandal coming out of the Pan-American convention is the barefaced lie, stated in the report of the executive committee, that "Communists supported the De La Huerta rebellion."

Everybody in Mexico knows that the contrary is true, that Communists

(Special to The Daily Worker)

YUKON, Pa., Dec. 8.—Final election count here gives the Workers Party candidates, William Z. Foster and Benjamin Gitlow, 146 in Yukon county, with 23 in Monessen and 18 in Herminie. The vote in Herminie is significant in view of the fact that the Workers Party has no branch there as yet.

LEWIS AGENTS WORK HARD TO BREAK STRIKE

Cappellini Reported to Be Still Hiding

By THOMAS MYERSCOUGH.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSTON, Pa., Dec. 8.—Altho 121 men were laid off and have long been kept out of work, for the "crime" of resisting wage cuts, the same being the basic reason for the strike at the ten mines of the Pennsylvania Coal Co., the officials of the United Mine Workers of America are still concerned only with the operator's viewpoint which is that the miners have no right to strike.

Vice-President Isaacs of District No. 1, is a notable exception to the rule in this belief, altho he seems to be afraid to definitely take a position with the men. The order revoking the charters of the striking locals did not bear his signature altho it is said that there was a place provided for it.

D. W. Davis of Illinois, chief representative of Lewis and who was placed in charge here when Isaacs failed to carry out the Lewis orders, and Enoch Williams, secretary of district one, signed the revocation order. Cappellini's name did not appear on the order and many reasons are advanced for this fact. Rumor has it that Cappellini has returned from El Paso and is in the region here in hiding, being afraid to come out in the open to take a position either for Lewis or against the men.

The men who are now on strike are responsible for his fame, if such it can be called, so another story has started the rounds, that he has been delegated to represent the U. M. W. A. at a Mexican labor meet. This however, is not believed generally but instead is regarded as "baloney."

Commission Arrives.

The commission of international board members, the same one that appeared here a few months ago to serve notice on the general grievance committees in this region, that they could not call any more strikes, has again arrived here. This commission, consisting of Neal J. Ferry of district 7 (anthracite), John O'Leary of district 5, Ed. Dobbins of district 18, John J. Mateo of district 9 and John Chisnoi of district 2, are instructed by Lewis to investigate every phase of the situation here and report back to him with recommendations. Already the local press has predicted the curtailment of the powers of the general grievance committees or the absolute disbandonment of them, the tone indicating that they know whereof they speak.

Reason for Cappellini's Absence.

This prediction was made in a previous article by me about six weeks ago, wherein I stated that Cappellini was the originator of the general grievance committee idea and the organizer of the first committee, the one that is now the storm center of the present controversy. Now I say that I am of the opinion that he has returned to this region and believe the story that he is hiding to escape personal responsibility for what is going to happen here. At that time, in the columns of the DAILY WORKER, we advised the miners not only to resist the effort to destroy the power they had won thru the instrumentality of such committees, but to also begin the formation of an all inclusive general body veresenting the whole district. This I have been doing again during the past two days while visiting in the sections affected by the strike.

Many of the strikers with whom I have talked seem to take the whole thing in anything but a serious mood, and laugh off the suggestion that their general grievance committees will be outlawed. They confess ignorance of the many Lewis crimes against the miners, and steadfastly refuse to even concede the possibility of such a thing happening. Many still retain their faith in Cappellini because he formerly belonged to the socialist party, because he formerly acted like a rebel and chiefly because he is the one who is responsible for the existance of the general bodies. They attach no significance to the fact that he is absent at a time when he ought to be in the midst of this fight to protect their interests.

Other Strikers Return.

The 1,800 strikers at the mines of the Lehigh-Wilkes Barre Coal Co., were ordered back to work by a meeting of their general body, with the "hope" that their differences would be speedily settled. That action allows for the "capitalist trinity" to get in its work, for it exemplifies that they have "faith" in something, while "charity" is always needed by workers who give away their birthright. Yes, faith, hope and charity always keep the worker in want, while the axiom of the employer is, "Power to take and have plenty."

However, this general body is reported to have gone on record as condemning the action of the officials in revoking the charters of the Pennsylvania Co. strikers, and also in favor of the calling of a special convention for the purpose of considering all the grievances existing in the district of which there are more than plenty.

Would Prohibit Heavy Sacks.

BERLIN, Dec. 8.— International agreements limiting the weight of filled sacks to 150 lbs. are urged by the International Union of Workers in the Food and Drink trades. The union reports many cases of hernia and curvature of spine among workers, due in part to reduced vigor since living standards were forced down after the war. In most countries the usual weight of filled sacks is almost 200 lbs.

CALL TO PAN-AMERICAN LABOR

the bloody tyranny of American imperialism under the leadership of the Communist parties.

Raise the slogan of "For a Workers and Farmers Government" as against the rule of American and native capitalism. Fight always and everywhere against all who betray the working class to the capitalists always remembering that the struggle against American imperialism for national independence is not the final struggle but nevertheless an indispensable part of the battle for the social revolution, the dictatorship of the proletariat, and the victory of the world's working class over its capitalist enemies.

Comrades: Under the red flag of the Communist International let us close our ranks and organized to break the power of American imperialism without which capitalism cannot live on the western hemisphere. Let us build our own proletarian power and be swerved from the struggle by no capitalist propaganda or imperialist terror.

Against the power of the capitalists the power of the proletarians!

Against the solidarity of the imperialists of all countries, the united front of the workers and peasants!

Against the rule of the capitalists, the rule of the working class under the leadership of the Communist Party!

lecturing British agent as the jugular vein of the empire.

* * * *

WHILE the situation in Ireland is so critical that, merely pointing to the goal of the great revolutionist James Connolly, is not sufficient, at the same time, it must be emphasized that only a revolution that will overthrow the capitalist system in Great Britain will also free Ireland. Therefore, the duty of the Irish workers who took inspiration from Connolly, is to make common cause with the Communist Party of Great Britain and join in the battle to dethrone the most astute if not the most brutal robber class in all human history.

IN the meantime it is distressing to note that no man of Connolly's vision and revolutionary understanding has yet appeared in the Irish labor movement, one who could take an objective view of the situation and take advantage of the chaos, depression and discontent of the masses to rally the workers and peasants behind a program that would lead to the goal of a workers' and peasants' government.

* * *

THE first thing a man of the Connolly type would do in this crisis would be to raise the slogan of unity in the trade union movement in accordance with the policy of the Red International of Labor Unions. This kind of a policy would close up the ranks of labor, discredit the fakers who prefer chaos and inaction to a militant constructive program and would also give undisputed leadership to those who are determined to make of the trade unions fighting instruments to wage the class struggle and not as agencies of class collaboration. Let us hope the present crisis will not find the Irish working class without at least making a step in the direction of such a policy.

Hard Blow for Reaction of Gompers-Morones

even led regiments against De La Huerta, which were organized by them under the hammer and sickle emblem on red flags, and many of the most active Communists of Mexico fell in action while fighting against De La Huerta and his Fascist counter-revolution.

Morones was compelled to deny this lie in a public statement when Gompers first made the accusation at El Paso. He then even allowed the Communists to answer Gompers in a paper Morones himself controlled. Vargas, his understudy, in the Mexican Federation of Labor also denied the accusation. But Vargas worked with Chester E. Wright in writing the Pan-American federation report in which this ridiculous charge is repeated. It is common knowledge that Gompers insisted that the report must go in the report, and Morones, lackey that he is, had to swallow the humiliation.

The Revolutionary Peasant Congress.

Flushed with their victory at Juarez, where the C. R. O. M. (the Mexican Federation of Labor) expelled Alfonso Soria, the Communist, and tied the C. R. O. M., officially at least, to the Gompers' chariot of class collaboration, the Morones gang promised their chief, that they would also conquer and deliver the revolutionary peasant organization of the state of Vera Cruz. "Comrade Gompers"—Holy Smoke!

But while "Comrade Gompers"—(In Mexico Gompers is paraded as a socialist!) was wining and dining with President Calles, along came the news that the attempt to carry the peasant congress at Jalapa for reaction was defeated.

The first act of the convention was to show its contempt for the Morones, Trevino, Rico type of leadership, by seating Soria, who had come as a fraternal or on his way back to his home state of Michoacan, as a delegate, because he had been expelled from the C. R. O. M. convention.

Affiliates to Peasant International.

They followed this up by affiliating the Agrarian League of Communes of the state of Vera Cruz to the Peasants' International, condemning the fake Calles "Labor Party." The Partido Laborista Mexicano, and endorsing the Communist Party of Mexico.

They decided to resist the attempt of the government to disarm the revolutionary peasants' regiments, and to solidify all Agrarian Leagues of Communes in Mexico into one national organization. To accomplish this, it was decided to send Ursulo Galvan, the present president of the Agrarian League of Communes of the state of Vera Cruz, and member of the executive committee of the Peasants' International, on an organizing tour in all states where agrarian leagues of communes are already in existence. A provisional national committee was formed, each state being allowed representation with Galvan as chairman.

What a Contrast!

What a contrast between this convention of ragged and ill-fed peasants, and the well-dressed, well-fed government-entertained delegates of the Pan-American congress. The Pan-American congress controlled by Gompers and his $10,000 to $20,000 per year executive council, and the government elected delegates from some of the small republics that have only a labor movement on paper.

Given free railroad transportation from and to their homes, entertained royally by the American imperialistic controlled Mexican government. While these despised but feared peasants had to walk hundreds of miles, were housed in the hall given to them by the unions of Jalapa, fed with food donated by the farmers and city workers, waited upon by the daughters and wives of union men.

An Inspiring Meeting.

One of the outstanding acts of this convention of peasants, which showed their understanding of the necessity of the workers on the farm and in the city joining forces in the struggle against capitalism, was the invitation given to the city workers to come and hear the reports on Russia, which was to be delivered by Bertram D. Wolfe, member of the executive committee of the Communist Party of Mexico.

This was indeed an inspiring meeting. The largest hall in town was packed to over-flowing with workers, their wives and children, peasant delegates, revolutionary peasant soldiers with red bands around their enormous straw hats, for all who wanted to know that they were not a pacifist organization. The old and the new governors of the state occupying one of the boxes, silent but not comfortable spectators. A tense, eager audience, who came to listen to the accomplishments of the workers and peasants of Russia.

Hear of Russia.

For over an hour they listened to the speaker compare Mexican life, especially peasant life, with that of the Russian workers. He compared the Communist program, its application to the everyday struggle of the Mexican workers and peasants, and the ultimate goal, with that of the class collaboration scheme of the C. R. O. M. and the P. L. M. He pointed out that Morones, Trevino, Rico, et al, attacked the Communists to hide their alliance with American imperialism.

A Mexican working class audience is somewhat similar to a Russian audience. They are not carried away with rhetorical speeches and fine oratory, you must speak in terms of what they need, and in language they understand. They have a well-founded suspicion of all governments. They will accept promises, about hurrah for Obregon and Calles, but they won't disarm.

The "Simple" Logicians.

In their simple way they are too damned logical. "Disarm, what for, if Obregon is for the workers and peasants, why disarm?". A very difficult question for the yellow socialists to answer. They understood the Communist language, the Communist logic, the Communist program and they showed their approval by an ovation that almost took the roof off the building.

Probably what was more interesting than the convention itself, was the atmosphere preceeding, and in which the convention met. Part of it was told by Galvan, in giving his account of his stewardship for the past year, and in making his report on his visit to Russia.

Galvan without doubt, is the most powerful and popular agrarian leader in Mexico. He told the delegates in simple peasant language of what he saw in Russia, of how the land was exploited for the benefit of the workers instead of the land owners, and how with the increasing of co-operative farming the crops became bigger and better, and with it the standard of the peasants' living raised.

He told how embarrassed he felt when Russian peasants asked him if it was true, that land, cattle and machinery had been given to the peasant to work for the benefit of all the workers in Mexico; of how he had pledged the Peasants' International to come back to Mexico with a greater determination to fight for the realization of the ideals of the Peasants' International.

A Peasant Communist Uprising.

He told them that when he reached Havana, on his way back, he had received a wireless from a comrade, not to land in Vera Cruz, because it was in control of the De La Huerta rebel forces. He disregarded the message and came secretly to Vera Cruz, gathered a group of 27 peasants with horses but with only seven revolvers and one rifle. That they armed themselves by capturing small outposts. Then they harrassed the enemy forces from the rear, gathering strength as they proceeded, and how the revolutionary peasants had aided very materially in crushing the De La Huerta uprising in the state of Vera Cruz.

He pointed out that after this service, President Obregon demanded the disarming and disbanding of this peasant army, which was now counted in the hundreds. How they had positively refused to do so, and Obregon seeing no way out, had made them an "unofficial official" part of the national army.

An Uncomfortable Labor Party Official

It was a very interesting report. In making it, he told how he had invited the governor to be present and hear it, (and he was) because he thought that state officials who say they are revolutionaries, should be reminded occasionally that we do not put much trust in them. The most uncomfortable man in the convention was the governor, who was elected on the labor party ticket.

Just prior to the convening of the convention, there was another threatened uprising of the De La Huerta forces. So Galvan made arrangements to have the revolutionary peasant army in the city to protect the delegates. So the four hundred delegates were reinforced by more than their number of armed red soldiers, with picturesque straw hats, decorated with red ribbons to distinguish them from the ordinary mercenary soldier.

It was a very tense and distinctly revolutionary atmosphere. The peasants of Vera Cruz are well organized, they are instinctive rebels. They understand the necessity of national and international solidarity, and the need of united action between city and farm workers. Their program lacks Communist clarity, but is taking very definite shape. They have confidence in the Communists and accept their political guidance.

Under the aggressive revolutionary leadership of Ursulo Galvan, a powerful national agrarian league of communes will be organized in the very near future. This organization, permeated with Communist ideology, will strengthen the Communist forces in the struggle against American imperialist domination of North, Central, and South America, and will be a factor in the establishment of a real workers' and peasants' government in Mexico.

German Capitalists Fail in Drive to Crush Communists trouble than 62 and cannot be arrested while the Reichstag is in session. A section of the bourgeois press is now blaming the government for not completely outlawing the Communists, while others hold that the arrest and imprisonment of so many leading radicals served to martyrize them.

Generally speaking, the election was a victory for those who support the Dawes plan, which proves that the majority of the German working class are suffering from the illusion that there is yet hope for them in the capitalist system.

The returns, according to the present incomplete count, is as follows: Communists, 44; social-democrats, 137; German nationalists, 104; clericals, 67; German people's party, 50; German democrats, 31; Bavaria people's party, 19; extreme nationalists, 14; economic party, 10; farmers' party, 4; Hanoverians, 4; other parties, 8.

One of the features of the election was the practical wiping out of Ludendorff's group. Ruth Fischer, Communist leader, was re-elected.

Fist of United Labor Grows Stronger Under Lash of White Terror

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, six Italian Communists have been ordered to leave France. It is the decree of the democratic pacifism of the "radical socialist" regime of Premier Herriot.

That isn't very many. There are 8,000 members of the Italian Communist Federation in France. Our Italian comrades in France have a weekly of their own with 23,000 subscribers. This indicates that Herriot has a big job on his hands.

* * * *

Herriot raised the cry of "foreigners." That sounds familiar to us here in America. Herriot claimed that he expected no trouble from native Frenchmen. Only foreigners were inclined to stir up trouble. To be sure the foreigners had to be labelled "Russians." But in the broad sweep of raids conducted by 700 police, not a single Russian was taken. Out of 500 arrests and examinations only six were held; six Italians.

* * * *

These six Italians are but small part of the great flood of Communists driven out of Italy under the bloody terror of Mussolini's fascist regime. Mussolini made war on native Italians because they were Communists. He couldn't raise the cry of foreigners. But he raised the cry of "Bolsheviks!" in his struggle to win power, just as he does now in his frantic efforts to hold it.

Mussolini outlawed the organizations of the Communists; sent thousands to death and other thousands to prison. But tens of thousands left Italy and scattered thru Europe. Some even crossed the seas and came to the United States.

* * * *

Now Herriot, like Mussolini, raises the cry that, "The republic is being attacked!" and under the cloak of liberalism tries to develop his own pogroms against the Communists. The net was spread far and wide; but it didn't bring in a single Russian. The Russians are busy at home building and strengthening their Soviet Rule. That's a big job. They are busy.

But there is no reason for a Russian to leave the confines of the First Workers' Republic. Conditions have changed since the czardom drove exiles to the four corners of the earth. Italy with its fascist club takes the place of the czarist regime and its bloody knout. And now the former socialist, Mussolini, head of Italy's anti-labor dictatorship, finds an apostle in Herriot, the "radical socialist" premier of France.

* * * *

They plot their own destruction. Herriot, the French "radical socialist"; Mussolini, the Italian fascist; Horthy, the Hungarian dictator; Ebert, the German socialist president with his "penitentiary elections," and all the lesser white terrorists in Western Europe, are destroying the last vestige of the "fatherland" appeal. It was under the lure of the plea to "protect the fatherland," that millions of workers allowed themselves to be hurled into the last war.

But the tens and hundreds of thousands of Italians, Hungarians, Poles, Spaniards, Germans, Bulgarians, and workers of many other nationalities, driven from their homes and scattered over Europe, know no capitalist fatherland. The last vestige of nationalism has been purged out of them. Their only struggle is to wipe out the capitalist regime of their oppressors. Their only hope is in Communism.

* * * *

Thus the army of the revolution grows. Hundreds of thousands, millions of implacable foes of capitalist rule. Prisons carry no terror for them. They reply to the threats of the Eberts and the Herriots, with redoubled energy for the revolution.

Morgan lifts his fist in Europe! But there is a greater fist; the fist of the united proletariat of all Europe. This is the fist that will crush all Morgan's pet schemes in Europe, and lift All-European Soviet Rule to power. The workers are on the march in Western Europe. What of labor in the United States of America?

TOOL AND DIEMAKERS OF CHICAGO FIND NEW INTEREST IN UNION

The Tool and Diemakers' Lodge, No. 113, of the International Association of Machinists, held their annual election on Friday, Dec. 5, and cast a vote which beat the best record in the last three years, in spite of the rain and cold.

The members are beginning to realize that it is up to them to build and maintain the organization, that it cannot be left to somebody else. The record-breaking vote may also be attributed to the interest arising in the clash of ideas which took place verbally just previous to the election between the perverters of socialism and the Communists.

The the progressives didn't win important offices, they polled a very good vote, and by the process of education continued in this manner, it is hoped that in the future the two forces in the local will unite for work for their common good. Organization, education, and solidarity with the whole working class, should be their future slogan.

RAILMEN DEFY LABOR BOARD IN VOTE FOR STRIKE

Ballot Is Being Taken on Chicago & Alton

A strike vote now being taken on the Chicago & Alton railroad by the Brotherhoods of Locomotive Engineers and Firemen and Enginemen is another step in the growing defiance of the railroad labor board by the railway employes.

A strike vote has just been completed by these brotherhoods on the Colorado & Southern system.

Brotherhoods Reject Ruling.

The railroad brotherhoods refuse to accept the ruling of the labor board which would force them to take a five per cent increase in wages at the expense of their present working rules. This increase has been granted the eastern roads without change in the working rules.

The Order of Railroad Conductors and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen are also involved in the dispute with 45 western railroads. The labor board is expected to announce a decision on the latter dispute early this week.

Try to Divide Workers.

The function of the labor board has been to attempt to break the solidarity of the brotherhoods by playing the eastern roads against the western, and by abolishing working rules which have raised the standard of living of the railway workers.

The brotherhoods have several times defied the authority of the railroad labor board, and discontent among the railway employes thruout the entire west is growing.

Mid-City Branch Changes Meeting Place on Thursday

The first meeting of the Mid-City branch since the opening of the party discussion on immediate tasks of the Workers Party will be held in a new meeting place. The Mid-City branch, which formerly met at Emmet Memorial Hall, will meet next Thursday, December 11, at the Greek Hall, 722 Blue Island avenue.

Due to the meeting night last month on Thanksgiving night, no meeting has been held for a month. Much important business will be decided upon at this meeting, and announcement of the speaker for the educational meeting to be held Dec. 25 will be made.

RUSSIAN LABOR GIVES FIMMEN GREAT OVATION

Secretary of Transport Workers in Moscow

(By Reeta News Agency)

MOSCOW (By Mail.)—Edo Fimmen, the veteran leader and general secretary of the International Federation of Transport Workers, was the object of a long ovation when he appeared at the session of the bureau of the Central Committee of the Railwaymen's Union in Moscow.

Fimmen remarked that he was going to speak in a private capacity, and not as an official representative of the International Federation of Transport Workers, empowered to negotiate with the Russian trades union organizations the question of unity of the international movement.

Answers Capitalist Lie.

"Altho I have yet been but a short time in your country," observes the speaker, "I feel bound to say that all I have seen so far has made a very strong impression on me. The first thing that has struck me is that all the nonsensical talk in western Europe about there being in the Union of Soviet Republics not a dictatorship of the proletariat, but a dictatorship over the proletariat, is a sheer lie. I must say that the European workers would be most happy if they had the same degree of liberty as the workers possess in the Soviet Union."

Further, referring to the criticism, often a very bitter one, directed by the Russian workers against the leaders of the western European trades-union movement Fimmen admitted that such criticism was often justified. "I saw it clearly myself in 1923, when I followed closely the developments in Germany. In fact, I was convinced of it when I saw how the bourgeoisie responded to the last Hague conference by the Ruhr occupation and how, after this, the European proletariat not only did not rush to fight for the emancipation of the German proletariat, but did not even make any attempt to do it."

Russian Tactics Correct.

This part of his speech the western labor leader concluded by re-asserting that the Russian tactics were correct: "Only then can any aim be attained when all the constituent parts of the trades-union movement will go hand in-hand and co-operate in their efforts."

Then the speaker told the audience about the actual situation within the International Federation of Transport Workers, stating that the question of admitting the Russian trade unions to the international congress of transport workers was discussed at the session of the executive committee.

"The minority," declared Fimmen, "strove to obtain this admission, and altho the majority, which was against, carried the day, the minority is getting stronger and stronger and will soon become the majority; the International Federation of Transport Workers will then be glad to receive the Russian trade unions in its fold. Indeed, the left wing knows perfectly well that without unity with the Russian unions we shall never reach our goal.

Workers Favor Unity.

"There is at the present moment a very strong movement within the International Federation of Transport Workers in favor of this unity and in favor of revolutionizing the federation, and I am convinced that this struggle will end in victory.

"Indeed, I feel confident," concludes the veteran European labor leader, "that, together with the Russian organizations, we shall be able to make the necessary move to achieve the world revolution."

CONGRESS OF RUSSIAN UNIONS REPRESENTING 6,400,000 WORKERS GREETS BRITISH DELEGATION

By HARRY POLLITT.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW.—(By Mail.)—The Ninth Annual Congress of the Trades Unions of the Union of Socialist Soviet Republics was opened amid scenes of great enthusiasm. The congress is being held in the magnificent hall of trade unions, once known as the Palace of the Nobility.

The great hall with its imposing array of marble pillars is decorated on a lavish scale. Everywhere the banners of the various unions represented at the congress meet the eye. On the center of the platform stands a tremendous model of our late leader, Comrade Lenin, and it seems but yesterday since I last stood in this hall taking my place as a bodyguard around the funeral bier.

Across the great hall huge slogans are blazoned on red streamers. They are of great importance, as they typify the task which the trade unions are now straining every nerve to accomplish. One reads: "The trade unions are the schools for Communism." Another, "Carry out the watchwords of Lenin. Increase production and so strengthen socialist economy." The next one, "Rally to the Communist Party, the bulwark of the proletarian dictatorship." Another, "Under the banner of the Communist Internation-al to a lasting proletarian victory." And the last one, running right across the hall, gives the watchword of the Russian trade unions, "The unity of the International Trade Union Movement."

6,400,000 In Russian Unions.

The hall is a sea of faces. Comrade Tomsky, the chairman of the All-Russian Union Congress, leads the platform party. The British delegation are immediately observed, and a roar of welcome goes up as they take their place on the platform. A warm and enthusiastic atmosphere is in evidence. A band strikes up the International. Everyone stands, and as this battle song of the proletariat resounds thru the great hall it sets the keynote for the whole proceedings. Comrade Tomsky declares the congress open. He reports that there are 1,500 delegates present, representing 6,400,000 workers. He makes a preliminary reference to the presence of the fraternal delegates.

Then come the speeches of the fraternal delegates. First comes the delegation from the Red Army to assure the congress of the solidarity of the Red Army and the desire to preserve the present close association with the trade unions. Then comes Comrade Schmidt (Minister of Labor) who brings greetings. Now the delegate from the Profintern is followed by a speech of welcome by Comrade Kalinin, the president of the U. S. S. R.

Zinoviev Speaks.

Now comes Comrade Zinoviev bringing greetings from the Communist International, he receives a magnificent ovation from the delegates and makes a speech analyzing the international situation and the special tasks facing the Russian Republic, with emphasis upon the important role to be played by the Russian trade unions. In a wonderful analysis of the British situation, which was especially interesting because of the presence of the British delegation, Zinoviev says it is the first sign of the end of the era of democratic pacifism.

The return of a reactionary government in England has been followed by a consolidation of reaction in America. Everywhere the workers are once more witnessing the gathering of the forces of reaction, who still hope by one means or another to crush the Russian revolution and also to commence a new offensive upon the whole working class.

It is because of the new situation that it is now so essential that the unity of the International trade union movement should be achieved.

The Big Event.

Now comes the big event of the evening. It is the turn of the British delegation. They had been met at Riga by a delegation from the Russian trade unions, and at every station from the Russian frontier to Moscow they had been met by large numbers of workers anxious to give them a first welcome to Russia and to demonstrate their solidarity. All thru the night this had gone on, and such enthusiasm and warmth must have surely impressed the British delegation with the magnificent spirit of solidarity which on all occasions has characterized the Russian workers and peasants. Tomsky introduces each member of the delegation and they all receive a reception which I believe they will remember as long as they live.

Purcell's Special Ovation.

Comrades Purcell, Bramley and Tillett are the appointed speakers, and Comrade Purcell is the first to take the floor.

Purcell explains that he was in Russia in 1920, and has been overwhelmed by the complete change that has taken place. A new atmosphere entirely seems to dominate the whole of the people, and it is an inspiration to be amongst the Russian workers.

He associated himself with Zinoviev's remarks about the league for International Trade Union Unity. The International must be based upon an anti-capitalist basis and the British Trade Union Congress would do all in its power to get the Russian unions into the international trade union movement. By one means or another the parties must be got together, and it is the task of the British Trade Union Congress to do this, and he appeals to the Russian unions to assist the British movement in this task. Finally, Purcell winds up with a significant declaration that if the Amsterdam International will not work to achieve this objective, then the British trade union movement must take the initiative.

Tillett's Great Speech.

Now comes Ben Tillet, who receives a splendid ovation; and Tillett at once pays a magnificent tribute to our late leader Lenin, whom Tillet described as being the greatest leader the working-class movement had ever produced. He was proud to be here, and when he thought of the achievements of the Russian revolution and what he had already seen, he felt humiliated that the Soviet Union had had to go for a loan to a capitalist government. Tillet then referred in scathing terms to the Zinoviev letter. He described it as the "forged letter," and, turning to Zinoviev, assured him that his name was now a household word in Great Britain. Tillet stated that when the delegation returned home they would nail the capitalist lie and forgery to the counter. Amidst a remarkable scene, Tillet sat down, having made a speech of great political importance.

A Great Conference.

This brought the session to a close, but the delegates would not leave until they had once more sung "The International." It was clear that these delegates were direct from the factories and workshops and farms. The stamp of the proletariat was upon them all, in marked contrast to our congresses where officialdom is rampant and the voice of the workers never finds any real expression.

MORGAN SHIPS $7,000,000 GOLD TO GERMANY

Reichsbank to Get Morgan's Gold

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—A shipment of five million dollars in gold coin was made by J. P. Morgan and company to the German Reichsbank, on the same day that the International Acceptance bank sent seven million dollars to a London correspondent. Bankers here claim that the largest shipment of gold, in a single day is "a signal of a world wide re-adjustment."

The German shipment, the largest to Germany since pre-war days, is said to reflect the German government's policy of removing the $110,000,000 American credit raised from American bankers thru the floating of loans.

The seven million dollars in gold sent to London was marked for transshipment, its final destination remaining secret. The gold shipments are a continuation of the policy of the American bankers in attempting to stabilize Europe by a flood of gold loans, made in connection with the Dawes' plan.

CONFERENCE TO PROMOTE WORK OF COLONIZATION OF JEWS IN RUSSIA CALLED FOR DEC. 21st

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—A conference to deal with the possibilities of colonization of the Jews in Soviet Russia has been called for Dec. 21, 10 a. m., in Manhattan Lyceum, 66 East 4th street.

The great majority of the Jews is facing a critical situation. The hundreds of thousands of Jews who formerly found their living as tradesmen and artisans are now without any means because of the inevitable economic development of Russia.

The activities of the state in the field of commerce and the rapid development of co-operation deprive the small tradesmen and the artisans of their economic positions, and it must be remembered that these artisans and tradesmen formerly made up the great majority of the Jewish population of Russia. There is great distress in many of the cities and towns with a prevailing Jewish population, and tens of thousands of Jewish families watch with horror the disappearance of all sources on which they formerly depended for their livelihood.

As a result of this situation a great striving to settle on the land has taken hold of the great masses of the Jewish population in Russia.

The Soviet government decided to come to the assistance of this new movement. Two hundred thousand dessiatins of state land in Ukraine, Crimea and White Russia were assigned by the government for settlement by Jewish groups which are anxious to settle on land. How seriously the government considers this question can be seen from the fact that it appointed for that purpose a special state commission among the members of which are such prominent members of the government as Smidowitch, Krassin, Litvinoff and Larin.

In addition to granting free land to the Jewish colonists the Soviet government also allows free transportation on the railroads to the places of settlement and relieves the colonists of all taxes. Various other concessions have also been granted to them. But in order to settle many thousands of Jewish families on land enormous funds are necessary. Neither the prospective colonists nor the Russian government are in a position to supply these funds. There is the urgent need of assistance from the Jewish population abroad, and especially from the Jews of America.

To help these Jews to settle on land, a committee was organized and has issued a call for a conference, to take place on Sunday, December 21st, at 10 p. m., in Manhattan Lyceum, 66 E. 4th Street, New York City.

Further information can be obtained from the Committee for Jewish Colonization of Soviet Russia, 46 Canal Street, New York City.

Waterbury, Conn., to See "The Beauty and Bolshevik" Sunday

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WATERBURY, Conn. has been successful in arranging a showing of the popular Soviet film, "The Beauty and the Bolshevik" for Sunday, Dec. 14, at 2 p. m., at the Rialto Theater on East Main street.

All Waterburyians and those in the vicinity of Waterbury are urged to take advantage of this date and spend an enjoyable Sunday afternoon with Kombrig, the Red Army commandant, courting the "beauty" who is the daughter of the priest and rich landowner of the village in which the Red Army temporarily settles after a fierce siege of warfare against the whites.

The healthy humor and realism running thru the picture makes it a vividly interesting story. It is as thoroly enjoyed by the American public as by the Russian workers.

In addition to the "Beauty and the Bolshevik" will be shown a three-reel film of industrial life called "Russia in Overalls." Special emphasis is being laid on those enterprises financed by American labor.

France Can't Pay Now.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—Five-sixths of the money borrowed by France from the United States was spent in America, Jules Jusserand, French ambassador, said in a speech here. Jusserand said that France will pay all her debts to this country, but did not know when France would be in a position to do this.

SOVIET KEEPS TRADE BARGAINS, KRASSIN CABLES

Scores Violent Acts Against Russia

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Dec. 8.—Leonid Krassin, the foreign trade commissar of the Soviet government, has sent a cablegram to the Amtorg trading corporation here, denying press dispatches claiming that the Soviet monopoly of foreign trade is hampering business relations with Soviet Russia.

"In those cases where the Soviet government has been compelled by aggressive acts against it to undertake changes in the direction of its goods or the placing of its orders, it has never deviated from the principle of fulfilling the obligations assumed in agreement or in contract," Krassin cabled, according to the trading company.

"When our trade delegation in Germany was subjected last May to an unparalleled raid by the Prussian police," Krassin stated, "which perpetrated this lawless act in secret from its own foreign office, the Foreign Trade Commissariat, while limiting and reducing the trade relations with Germany, has not stopped for one day the execution of current contracts or the payment on contrats and transactions which had been concluded.

"When a year ago, the Soviet government was compelled by a hostile act disturbing our trade, to stop the placing of orders in France, the English company Arcos, Ltd., which has been executing the orders of the Soviet government, appointed a special plenipotentiary for the liquidation of transactions entered into, and we do not know of any complaints on the part of the French firms which had concluded transactions with Arcos.

"The foreign trade monopoly, which insures the strictest government control of all trade transactions is the best guarantee that all obligations will be strictly carried out."

Business Men Are Deeply Entrenched In Farm Boy Clubs

Flag waving Americanism and glorification of industrial control of education by industry were emphasized by speakers at the sessions of the International Kiwanis clubs in the Sherman Hotel. William C. Green speaking on the activities of the Kiwanis Clubs in the United States, told of the increasing work being done by these, business clubs in the field of "Americanization, citizenship and education." He advised the Kiwanis clubs to increase their activities in this field.

It was explained that many of the officers of the agricultural college of the university of Illinois are members of the Kiwanis club, and thru this organization are enabled to work with more freedom among farm children than when hampered by "official position."

The work, according to Green, consists of getting the farm children into contact with education, taught according to Kiwanis, or business men's ideals. Green indirectly attacked the "red menace" in his plea for greater concentration on teaching American citizenship.

A MILLION FOR DRAMA!

Edward S. Harkness, a Standard Oiler, has given Yale a million for a drama school. We guess that Harkness is not so much interested in the drama as he is in keeping Yale a hundred per cent on his side of the fence.

The Harknesses have given other millions. Most universities are subsidized by givers of millions so that they will turn out brains useable in the donor's scheme of things.

We also have a scheme of things. We must also educate those who belong on our side and propel them into the struggle. The DAILY WORKER does this. It also needs finances. These must come from you. A more dramatic moment than will ever occur at the new Yale School of Drama, will take place when the masses begin to move to take their own. WHAT CAUSES OUR POORNESS?

Part Two

Our father works for a capitalist. A capitalist owns a factory and machinery. He is called a boss.

The workers of which our father is one have no machinery or property or money. So he is a worker and is bossed by the capitalist who gives him a job.

Our father must go to work for some capitalist because there is no other way that he can earn money to buy the things needed to keep life up.

Now our father goes to a boss and asks him for a job. The boss says I will pay you so much every week for which you must work for me so many hours each day for six days a week. Our father tries to get a little more. If the goods this boss makes are wanted by people so much that the boss must look around everywhere to find workers to work for him then our father is in luck and he can get a little more money. But if the goods this boss makes are not in very great demand and workers come to the boss begging for a job by the hundreds and even by the thousands when the boss puts an ad in the newspapers then our father, if he wants to get the job, must accept the bosses' terms.

Now why is the boss rich and our father poor?

Our father gets up early every morning and goes to the shop. All day long he works hard under the watchful eye of the boss, or the foreman who watches for the boss, to see that he does not waste one minute of the bosses' time. All day long he piles up goods which he has made. Then the boss sells the goods for a certain amount of money. But our father is not paid for all the goods he produces. He is paid for only a part of the goods he produces.

As an example we will use this one. Every day our father gets, let us say $7 (many workers get much less than that) while he makes goods worth let us say $35 (many bosses make much more profit than this). The amount of money left over when $7 is paid to our father remains in the bosses' pocket and is the profits from our father's labor. Of course since our father earns $7 a day he can only buy back that much worth on rent, food, clothes, doctor bills, etc. He must continuously work to earn that $7 to pay for his family's living.

So we see that in a capitalist system of society the workers slave for the capitalists that they may live and live that they may slave for the capitalists. And the bosses by owning the machinery and factories get rich on the labor of workers. The capitalists and their families have good food to eat, beautiful clothes to wear, lots of good times and large comfortable homes to live in because they rob our fathers.

Now do you see what causes our poorness?

Stockholders Get Rich.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Dec. 8.—New Bedford textile workers have not been getting full pay envelopes for a long time but stockholders of the mills fared well during the last quarter with average dividends of $1.33 per share. The total dividend for 1924 averages $5.50. Last year it was $7. Almost a third of the $67,-675,900 capital of the mills failed to return dividends for the fourth quarter Pierce mills gave $8 and $48 for the year.

Discussion of Our Party's Immediate Tasks

The Comintern and the Farmer-Labor Party

By WILLIAM Z. FOSTER.

IN their thesis the minority make the claim that their farmer-labor party policy has the support of the Communist International. By a series of evasions, half-truths, and downright misrepresentations, they get around the fact that conditions have greatly changed since the Comintern O. K.'d our farmer-labor party policy, and that in the light of the new conditions a new statement on this policy by the C. I. is necessary and will be had in the near future. The substance of the changed conditions is that when the Comintern consented to a farmer-labor party policy for the Workers Party, there was in existence a mass movement making toward the formation of a farmer-labor party. This mass movement is no longer at hand. It has been amalgamated or absorbed into the LaFollette movement, which has been destroyed the basis of the farmer-labor party policy. It has been made obsolete and its use would be a menace to the Workers Party. So the Comintern will rule when the problem is placed before it in the near future.

From the summer of 1923 until its latest decision, the Comintern has always recognized the principle that in order for the Workers Party to propagate the farmer-labor party slogan there must be a mass movement for such a party. In 1923, it was only when there was shown to be a strong movement amongst the masses for a farmer-labor party that the C. I. first agreed to our labor party policy. This principle has been adhered to since in all the letters and decisions of the C. I. upon this matter. In its recent letter to the Workers Party on the subject of the third party alliance the same principle was enunciated. A key sentence in the decision reads: "In many states farmer-labor parties are springing up." This clearly shows that the decision was based upon the assumption that there was in existence a strong mass movement for a farmer-labor party.

But a clearer indication than this that the Comintern would have the Workers Party advocate the farmer-labor party slogan only if there was a mass movement behind it, occurs farther along in the decision, where the St. Paul convention is dealt with specifically. This section says:

"In case of a split the question of whether or not the Workers Party shall act altogether independently in its own name, in the election campaign, or whether it shall launch a campaign under the name of a farmer-labor party, will depend largely upon whether or not it (the Workers Party) is successful in the split and will depend on how far it maintains contact with the working masses at the June 17 convention."

This part of the decision is a section of an amendment which I submitted to the original draft, and which was adopted in full. It came about this way. As a result of over-optimistic and exaggerated reports of the class masses behind the federated farmer-labor party, the belief existed in Comintern circles that even if there were a split with LaFollette at St. Paul there would still be sentiment enough to make a mass movement for a farmer-labor party. I disputed this assertion, asserting that only the "third party alliance" could prevent the amalgamation of the farmer-labor movement with the LaFollette movement, inasmuch as both movements were ideologically the same. I argued that if a split took place at St. Paul there would be nothing left to the so-called farmer-labor movement, except the Workers Party and its immediate sympathizers, which would make necessary the abandonment of the farmer-labor party ticket and the placing of W. P. candidates in the field.

Hence, I introduced my amendment, which provided for the Workers Party running independent in the eventuality of such a split as would destroy the mass character of the "class" farmer-labor party movement, as Comrade Ruthenberg calls it. The amendment was immediately accepted. Comrade Zinoviev endorsed it personally, and it was adopted unanimously by the presidium. This shows conclusively that the Comintern considers the farmer-labor party slogan as dead unless the masses can be rallied by it. The C. I. never intended and does not intend now that we should struggle behind the farmer-labor party slogan if there are no masses supporting it. The minority propositions for propagating the farmer-labor party slogan in season and out of season, mass movement or no mass movement, is contrary to the whole spirit of all the Comintern decisions on the subject.

Events since the June 17 convention and afterward proved the necessity of the above-mentioned amendment. The split with the LaFollette movement was so deep that there was practically nothing left of the farmer-labor party as a distinct organization. There were no masses to be rallied by the farmer-labor party so, following the Comintern decision to the letter, we dropped the farmer-labor party and put W. P. candidates in the field. Comrade Lovestone bitterly opposed this course, which practically the whole party now recognizes as having been absolutely vital for the welfare of the Workers Party. To have gone thru the campaign under the pale pink flag of the pseudo-national farmer-labor party, formed at the St. Paul convention, would have been a major disaster for the Workers Party. But Comrade Lovestone was willing that it be done, and he has not since changed his opinion. What matter what happens to the Workers Party so long as his beloved farmer-labor party is kept to the fore? It is Comrade Lovestone's ideas, more than anyone else's, that are incorporated in the minority thesis. He and the rest of the minority, following out their policy, which is the most opportunistic in the history of our party, are for a farmer-labor party regardless of the interests of the Workers Party. Let them deny this as much as they please, nevertheless the fact remains as stated.

In their thesis the minority get far away from the premises as laid down by the Comintern on our labor party policy. They make the formation of a farmer-labor party almost a matter of fundamental Communist tactics. Their thesis, for example, makes this astounding statement: "The slogan of the farmer-labor party remains our most effective means of agitation for political action on a class basis by the workers and poor farmers." We had thought that the Workers Party was the organization thru which to get "political action on a class basis." But it seems that according to the opportunistic minority the farmer-labor party is just as good, nay, even better. We learn much as the farmer-labor Communists put their ideas into print.

But, altho the minority seek to set up the formation of a farmer-labor party as a sort of sacred Communist duty, nevertheless they cannot altogether ignore the necessity for trying to prove it a mass movement. And with what bizarre results: In their thesis they actually have the brass to tell us that the farmer-labor parties of Washington, Montana, Colorado, South Dakota, and Minnesota, altho they voted for LaFollette, are not of the LaFollette movement. What an absurdity! What desperate straits the minority are in order to get masses for their celebrated "class" farmer labor party. The fact is, as even the veriest tyro knows, these parties are among the highest developed sections of the LaFollette movement. They have broken from the old parties and have definitely formed themselves into a LaFollette third party movement, regardless of what names they may call themselves. The only real difference they have with LaFollette is organizational one, the question of the immediate formation of a third party.

Have the minority adopted the S. P. conception that the third party is really a "class" farmer-labor party, except for a few trimmings? If not, is there any sane person in the imagination list the foregoing parties, especially the Minnesota party, as farmer-labor parties? The minority in their opportunistic hunt for masses to muster behind the dead farmer-labor party slogan, lugged into their service the chimerical collection of LaFollette parties in the entire country.

In their thesis the minority also inform us that the North Dakota farmer-labor party, and the Washington county farmer-labor party "never entered the LaFollette movement, but maintained their independent status." As the North Dakota party, it is simply an organization on paper. And as for the Washington county party—now it would be important if it could be shown that there is such a party in fact. At least one county out of the many many thousands of counties in the United States. But, alas, the Washington county party is also merely on paper. The only reason it "maintained its independence" was because it did not venture to call a general party meeting. If it had, the LaFollette rank and file would have formally registered by a majority vote the defection which they made to LaFollette anyhow. Cannonsburg comrades, who are among the best and most effective workers in our party, tell me that the Washington county party, when finally boiled down after the defection of the LaFollette adherents consisted of nothing but W. P. members and their close sympathizers Now it is hardly more than a name. They declare that the W. P. running under its own name in the elections would be polled as many if not more votes than the local F. L. P.

What a sorry line-up of "masses" the minority make for the farmer-labor party. On the one hand a display for our edification of a bunch of half a dozen LaFollette parties in the granger states, and on the other hand a defunct county party in an industrial section. It is a wonder they did not dig up the deceased Buffalo and Los Angeles labor parties and parade around their weary skeletons to scare our membership into voting for the minority thesis.

The fact is there are no masses in the farmer-labor party, and there are none that can be rallied by that slogan, at least not under present conditions. Hence the slogan loses its value to the Workers Party. The C. E. C. thesis (majority) says specifically:

"We are not opposed to the labor party in principle. Neither are we bound to the theory of the historic inevitability of the labor party in America. Still less do we hold the opinion that the formation of the only medium thru which independent class political action of the working masses can find expression. We approach his problem from the standpoint of whether the labor party slogan can now be used as a means to mobilize the masses of workers for immediate class political action, and we say neither for the present nor for the immediate future can the labor party slogan be employed successfully for this purpose."

If, however, in the future, conditions should so develop as to give a mass character to a farmer-labor party movement, and if at that time this movement offers an effective means for building the Workers Party into a mass Communist Party, then the slogan of a farmer-labor party would be of value and would be used by our party. At present this slogan does not create a united front with masses. Wherever we give it organizational form it simply creates a "united front with ourselves." It means the setting up of a substitute party for the Workers Party, the liquidating of our own party for the sake of an opportunistic non-Communist party. It would be folly to adopt the minority thesis and to embark upon a fruitless campaign for an abstract farmer-labor party. The Communist International will never sanction such a ruinous policy.

No Disagreement Here!

We discuss the future tasks of the party preliminary to a decision. After a decision is rendered we march forward unitedly to carry it into effect. In all this the DAILY WORKER lends a BIG hand. Today it constitutes our forum for discussion. Tomorrow it will help to carry the decision made into life.

A FEW FUNDAMENTALS

By IDA DAILES.

FIRST, let us get this basic fact in our minds: The farmer-labor party was so feeble an embryo that despite our anxious and sympathetic midwifery it was still-born. And now it is buried in the LaFollette cemetery. This is an accomplished fact and on it there can be little controversy.

From here on most progress the two groups in our Central Executive Committee have viewed the same facts and have come forward with different conclusions. The majority of the C. E. C. says: "Well, the farmer-labor party is no more. The Workers Party, how does it function? What is to be the next?" And they present to the party a united front program on the child labor amendment, on the Sacco-Vanzetti case, and propose that for the immediate future our political united front shall find expression in similar immediate issues of interest to the working class. No one can say in face of this, that the majority of the Central Executive Committee is abandoning the principle of the united front on the political field.

What is the attitude of the minority? It analyzes the economic situation, states the fundamental fact that with the development of capitalism comes the intensification of the class struggle; therefore, we must maintain the farmer-labor slogans. This looks like a blue print. Blue prints are all right, but let us examine this one. The principle argument is that conditions have not basically changed for the better since the farmer-labor movement was supported by large number of workers and poor farmers and therefore it is still a valid slogan. If this argument is correct, then why did the workers and poor farmers desert the farmer-labor party on July 4 1924? Were not conditions then the same as they were on July 3, 1923? Evidently the workers and farmers do not act according to blue prints.

Again, it seems to me that there are two great dangers in the farmer-labor slogan at present. Inside of a substantial, organized farmer-labor party, our duty is to support and criticize at the same time. We can point out the shortcomings of a farmer-labor party and propagandize for our own party But when we come to the workers with a slogan for the creation of a farmer-labor party, we will have to borrow the red clothing of the Workers Party in order to dress up the farmer-labor party. We will have to parade the farmer-labor party as the paragon of all the virtues of a "real revolutionary class party that fights for the interests of the workers and farmers." This will mean that we will be fostering a dangerous illusion in the minds of the working class.

Another danger is the danger to those within our own ranks. We well remember the serious deviations made by individual comrades and even by whole units of our party in our former labor united front. How much more serious and how much multiplied they would be in a campaign for a farmer-labor party that is as yet nonexistent can readily be imagined.

In conclusion two more thoughts: Under present conditions, does a farmer-labor party represent a political united front or does it represent a parliamentary united front? In other words, could a farmer-labor party take on the function of active participation in day to day struggles of the workers, or could it only be used as a rallying ground in election times? My second thought is: What is to prevent us from entering into a farmer-labor movement if such a movement manifests itself in the future? Do we bind ourselves eternally by our present decision?

I believe that every comrade, in studying the question which is facing the party, should take all of the above into consideration.

HOW the LaFOLLETTE "SUCCESS" FAILED TO DESTROY THE UNITED FRONT FARMER-LABOR MOVEMENT

By JAY LOVESTONE.

THE Foster-Bittelman-Cannon group is burdened with the illusion that the LaFollette venture was a howling success. In attempting to show that the conditions have changed they tell us that the working and poor farming masses now look upon the LaFollette election conglomeration as the farmer-labor party. Therefore, they say, there is no longer a mass demand for a farmer-labor party and the Workers Party must drop such united front tactics.

We deny that the Communists can no longer utilize, agitationally or organizationally, the sentiment for a united front farmer-labor movement as a means of hastening the development of the Workers Party into a mass Communist party. We deny the conclusion of the Foster-Cannon group that the LaFollette movement, led and dominated by the vacillating, weak-kneed petty bourgeoisie, cannot be assailed successfully by the Communists thru the slogan for a united front of the workers and exploited farmers in a mass farmer-labor party.

Great LaFollette Hopes Don't Materialize.

Let us examine the facts. At the outset, even the most rabid enthusiast over the howling "success" achieved by the LaFollette movement in the last election must recognize certain irrefutable evidence. The petty bourgeois optimists and all the others who would have us believe that the LaFollette movement is now in the eye of the masses what the farmer-labor movement was up to June 17 cannot deny that LaFollette ran far behind his party ticket in the election campaign. Both of these groups which see LaFollette invincible cannot deny that the "progressive" election achievement was in this sense a disappointment.

The Wisconsin senator expected to control from fifty to sixty votes in the electoral college, and to lay a strong enough basis in the new senate and house so as to enable many of the more timid, wavering small shopkeeper and trade union bureaucrat elements to line up for a permanent new party. Of course, nothing of the sort has happened in the LaFollette "success" as everybody knows.

Masses Being Disillusioned.

Many of the workers and poor farmers went along with the LaFollette movement during the election campaign because they expected and hoped that in this way they would hasten and assure the organization of a mass farmer-labor party. These masses were wrong in their expectations and hopes. The disappointing results achieved by the LaFollette outfit in the election is now a powerful force making for the disillusionment of these masses in their attitude towards the LaFollette movement.

The close ties between the LaFollette movement and democrats and republicans during the election campaigns in certain localities against the farmer-labor parties is further opening the eyes of these masses. From the general conduct of the LaFollette campaign, its weakness, its hesitancy, its failure to accept the reactionary challenge are also forces making for a growing understanding by the working and poor farming masses of the real character of LaFollette and his aids.

Liquidating LaFollettelism.

The election results and the reactions of various units of the LaFollette organization show clearly what a contradictory, what conflicting elements the LaFollette movement consists of. There is no better way of running away further from the truth than by stating that the LaFollette movement is already a completely crystallized movement. Many republican and democratic supporters of the so-called progressive party have already turned their backs on the LaFollette movement. The vice-presidential candidate, Wheeler, has gone to the democratic party Canossa. Wheeler has repented and has begged his way back into the fold as a full-fledged, regular democrat. Senator Brookhart has accepted the Coolidge agricultural program. Senators like Norris of Nebraska who were on the fence during the election are now further away than ever from associating with an organized political insurgent movement like LaFollette planned when he entered the campaign.

The American Federation of Labor trade union bureaucracy, at the height of the LaFollette movement, apparently pulled out only the toe of one foot from its expanse of "non-partisan" political action when it endorsed LaFollette last July. At the El Paso convention this bureaucracy came back with both feet into the time-dishonored political morass of "rewarding friends and punishing enemies." The railway union official supporters of the Wisconsin senator are now hesitating and wavering as to their next step. William H. Johnston, the guiding spirit of the conference for progressive political action, refused to make even the weakest sort of a pretense to fight for his pet political organization at the American Federation of Labor convention. He did not lift a finger or raise his voice to help line up labor sympathy for the organization of a party at the January conference of the conference for progressive political action. This tends to decrease the likelihood of any attempt being made to organize a third, a petty bourgeois party. The forces which see LaFollette invincible cannot deny that the "progressive" election achievement was in this sense a disappointment.

Today the sundry component elements of the LaFollette army tend to be apart at poles' ends. At best this movement is still in the process of crystallization. At such times it becomes doubly imperative for the Communists to help clarify the presently vague and confused gropings of the masses and to direct their unclear wants into the most practicable, the most possible class channels.

The Communist Task.

In view of the marked trend toward a farmer-labor united front for the past few years it becomes plain that the Communists favor a farmer-labor party and not the comparatively unheard of "labor congress" slogan as put forward in the majority thesis can today serve the Communists as a most effective means for clarifying the decisive issues, objectives and aims of the masses. It is a paramount task of all Communist parties to lend clarity of purpose and plan to the wants and demands of the laboring and poor farming masses. It is the foremost duty of a Communist party to precipitate the development of class consciousness among the working masses in order to separate these masses more effectively from the reactionary trade union bureaucracy and petty bourgeois leadership. Not until we have succeeded in thus separating the masses from their present misleaders will we be able to establish our Communist leadership over them.

What Means the Farmer-Labor Slogan?

With this analysis of the situation as a background let us turn the searchlight on some of the "evidence" the Foster-Cannon group gives us to prove that there is no longer a mass demand for a united front of the workers and poor farmers thru a farmer-labor party. Let us examine the following gem from the Bittelman thesis:

"The formation of a labor party becomes inevitable and possible only in cases when the economic mass organizations of labor are compelled to join hands for independent political action. BUT WHEN THE LEADERS OF THESE ORGANIZATIONS ENTER INTO A PERMANENT ALLIANCE WITH THE PETTY BOURGEOISIE, AND WHEN SUCH AN ALLIANCE, THE LAFOLLETTE MOVEMENT, RECEIVES THE RECOGNITION AND SUPPORT OF ALMOST THE ENTIRE ORGANIZED LABOR MOVEMENT, THEN THE QUESTION OF FORMING A LABOR PARTY LOSES ITS BASIC FOUNDATION AND CEASES TO BE A FIGHTING ISSUE FOR IMMEDIATE, PRACTICAL USE." (Our emphasis.)

We will spend little time with so fallacious a concept of the class struggle as the "inevitability" of a labor party. To us the question of the Communist use of the farmer-labor movement is a question of strategy and tactics for the enhancement of Communist influence. To us, the farmer-labor united front movement is not an end in itself as it has been, for many months, to those who entertain the ridiculous illusion that the Gompers trade union bureaucracy could or would at present imperialist era organize or tolerate a mass farmer-labor party. To us the farmer-labor united front movement appears as an effective means of hastening the establishment of Communist leadership over the working masses IN THE UNITED STATES, UNDER ITS HISTORICAL CONDITIONS.

Facts and "Evidence."

First of all, there is no basis in fact for the conclusion that the trade union bureaucracy has an unbreakable political hold on the minds of the masses. Many of these bureaucratic leaders are today quite confused and at sea as to how to proceed in their latest political venture. Their "permanent alliance" with the LaFollette movement is already being rocked to its foundation. Then, it is not true that the labor bureaucracy has allied itself as a unit with the LaFollette movement. The election results show that no one can dismiss with a wave of a hand the role of the Lewises, the Hutchesons, and Berrys in the last campaign. As we have seen, even that section of the labor bureaucracy which supported LaFollette is today less than ever homogeneous in its immediate political outlook and policy.

Assume, for the sake of argument only, that the political hold of the bureaucracy on the masses is as firm as ever. Does that mean that we should not challenge it politically in every effective manner? Does that mean that we must surrender the field of leadership of the masses completely to the Pankens, Kirkpatricks and other socialist party spokesmen in the campaign of agitation for a united front of the workers and poor farmers thru a farmer-labor party?

Role of Labor Lieutenants of Capital

Besides, since when are the economic mass organizations of labor not compelled to join hands for independent political action simply because their misleaders are attempting to pervert and undermine the aspirations of the rank and file of the working masses? When we will examine the present economic situation in a subsequent article of the series we will see how ridiculous such an attitude is. To the extent that the working masses in this country have resorted to independent working class political action, they have done so despite and not because of the trade union bureaucracy.

The trade union bureaucrats are today more likely than ever to redouble their efforts to uproot all united front farmer-labor sentiment, to undermine all sentiment for independent working class political action. These very facts are an added challenge to the Communists to intensify their campaign for such political action by the workers. The very fact that the socialist party is trying to establish itself as the leader of the masses in the movement for a farmer-labor party is only an additional reason for the Workers (Communist) Party assuming the full responsibility in the campaign for a political united front of our party with the organizations of the non-Communist workers and poor farmers, thru a class farmer-labor party. These conditions are only additional reasons for the Communists seeking to become the leaders and the dynamic force of such a united front movement.

The Role of the Communist Party.

The task of a Communist party is not merely to analyze the objective conditions correctly. Comrade Heinz Neumann, in discussing the achievements of Marx in a recent number of the Communist International, declared:

"He (Marx) was a strong opponent of all mechanical 'collapse theories' and of the consequent childish belief in the 'spontaneity of the masses.' Knowledge of our objective material conditions on the basis of which our policy is built up and which is only the PREREQUISITE of our strategy, is not enough to lead revolution to victory. It is not analysis of the objective situation which is decisive, but conscious intervention of the subjective factor: the leading party. The task of the latter does not consist only in right appreciation of the general trend of development, but rather in its acceleration. The task of the party is—to make the best possible tactical use of every constellation, to seize consciously all portunities 'accidentally' provided by history, to make a well-considered use of all 'accidentally' weak points of the enemy class. In a word, the task of the party is the ACCELERATION of the revolution by conscious leadership and application of all tactical maneuvers from the viewpoint of uniform revolutionary class strategy." (Our emphasis.)

The Conditions We Face.

Above all, since when are the mass organizations of the workers and the labor bureaucrats, who happen to be controlling them at a given moment, synonymous? Surely, one must be obsessed with a narrow point of view of the composition of the working class and of the development of the class struggle to arrive at such a conclusion.

Are we not on the basis of the developing economic crisis heading for a situation in which these masses will revolt against their reactionary leadership? Is it not necessary for the Communists, at present more than ever for the masses and strive to advance the political ideology of these masses, to throw out, on the eve of the impending sharp class conflicts, such slogans as "For a Farmer-Labor Party" to be built on the organizations of the workers and poor farmers? Is it not our task as Communists to throw out such slogans which it propagated and applied will satisfy a mass need and will hasten a revolt of the masses against the bureaucracy and the capitalist government?

These movements towards working class action must not always somehow or other develop themselves. As long as the economic and political conditions call for such demand, such movements, it is our task to facilitate and hasten their development. Raising questions like "immediate success" and the immediate organization of a mass working class farmer-labor party," during the present party controversy, is only throwing dust into the eyes of the party membership.

The Crux of the Problem.

The question we must ask is this: Is there an economic basis for a slogan of the conference for a united front farmer-labor movement? No one will contend that there is "TODAY," "NOW," a mass demand for Communism or for amalgamation. Yet we very properly today, now, propagate and work for Communism, for the Workers' and Farmers' Soviet government and for amalgamation, because there is an economic basis for these slogans.

In so far as the slogan for amalgamation particularly is concerned we must continue to work for it and propagate it because of the fact that it is a sign of an overworked imagination to believe as Comrade Foster would have us believe, in his article appearing in the DAILY WORKER of Dec. 4, that "Fully 2,000,000 union workers were won over to giving organized expression in support of our amalgamation slogan." Foster would have us believe today, in the face of the El Paso convention and similar unpleasant facts, that the majority of the organized workers in the United States have consciously and knowingly accepted the amalgamation slogan as put forward by Communists in all its implications.

The fact that it may take some time before we will achieve what Comrade Foster is trying to lull us into believing we have already won, does not mean that we have to desist from the immediate and energetic use of the amalgamation slogan. On the contrary, because we have not yet won over a majority of the unionized workers, (not certain union officials or some convention delegates—the united front from below and not from the top) "to giving organized expression in support of our amalgamation slogan" must we continue this campaign.

Communists do not measure the validity of their tactics and program with the same yardstick that the vulgar bourgeois pragmatists do. Communists do not test the revolutionary value of their slogans or principles by the chances of "immediate success." A COMMUNIST campaign for amalgamation does not depend on such "immediate success." Likewise, the value to our Communist party of the slogan and campaign for a united front of the workers and poor farmers thru a farmer-labor party does not depend on such immediate, arbitrarily defined success.

It is thru our propaganda and organization efforts for such working class slogans that we are able to hasten the development of an organized, of a political expression of revolt against capitalism among the masses.

Manley's Figures

By C. E. RUTHENBERG.

IT is necessary to keep the record of facts straight in the party discussion. In the DAILY WORKER of Dec. 5, Comrade Manley declares that the cost of the farmer-labor campaign to the party totalled $50,000. Comrade Manley could have secured the exact figures from the national office and saved himself such a silly blunder.

The figures, as shown by the party books are:

1922—C. P. P. A. expense	$ 360.32
1923—Total labor party campaign expense, exclusive of F. P. L. P.	2,702.83
1924—Total labor-party campaign expense, exclusive of F. P. L. P.	6,532.41
1924—Farmer-Labor Voice deficit	1,905.39
1924—National F. L. P. expenses	990.65
Add to this the cost of maintaining the F. P. L. P. from July, 1923, to July, 1924 as estimated by Comrade Manley	7,000.00
Total	$19,491.60

The receipts of the national organization for the farmer-labor campaign were:

1923—For a farmer-labor party fund	$ 3,334.84
1924—For a farmer-labor party fund	696.55
Mass class F. L. P. stamps	4,738.34
Farmer-labor assessments	8,776.34
Total	$17,444.77
The expenses of collecting this money were	2,021.76
Net Receipts	$15,423.01

The figures for 1923 are available to all party members in the public report of the national organization, appearing in the pamphlet "The Second Year." The figures for 1924 are taken from the trial balance of the national organization as of Oct. 31, 1924, and are available for inspection by any comrade who desires to investigate further.

'FARMERS' PRESS' GETS PEEVED AT DAILY WORKER

Bites Itself, Raps Reds and Mourns Magnus

(Special to the Daily Worker)

WILLISTON, No. Dakota, Dec. 8.—The Williams County Farmers' Press, which is the name for the newspaper department of the capitalist dictatorship in this locality, is so mad that it is biting itself like an angry rattler. In its edition of November 27, it devotes a large chunk of the front page a story printed by the DAILY WORKER telling of the election of A. C. Miller, secretary of the Workers Party local, to the state legislature with a vote of 1,777.

On the editorial page most of the space is given to attacks on the Communists, the rest being boosts for the American Legion, Magnus Johnson and Lynn J. Frazier, the heroes of the farmer-labor-non-partisan league combination. It says that both Comrade Miller and Andrew Omholt, who ran for sheriff, failed to "advertise themselves as Communists until after the Farmers' Press exposed them."

Concerning this statement, Comrade Omholt says: "The so-called Farmers' Press tells a deliberate lie. We had ourselves advertised all over the county as Communists, both before and after this 'exposure.'"

Gives Blood for Comrade.

BOSTON, Mass.—Two fellow shopmates of Carl E. Dahl, piper in the Readville shops of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad whose arm was so mangled in an accident at work that it had to be amputated, gave blood for transfusions to save Dahl's life. A medical student also gave of his blood for Dahl.

Fishers Make Big Crab Catch.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 8.—This town is full of crabs. There are more crabs this year than any other previous year. It is not due to the election of Coolidge, says the Crab Fishermen's Protective Association. Just an abnormal overcatch. They are selling for $2.00 per dozen.

Formal Logic versus Revolutionary Tactics

Editor's Note.—Every day until publication has been completed, the DAILY WORKER will publish a new chapter from the book, "Lenin: The Great Strategist of the Class War," by A. Losovsky, secretary of the Red International of Labor Unions. The nineteenth chapter is entitled, "Formal Logic versus Revolutionary Tactics."

IF one were to approach the estimation of Lenin's activities from the point of view of formal logic, one would find quite a number of contradictions. On the one hand, if one analyses his activity from the point of view of the objective conditions with which Lenin was dealing, and also considers dialectically the developments themselves, then all contradictions will disappear. He pursued the tactics of quick changes in orientation. His agrarian program between 1901 and 1903 had been based upon the principle of the division of land among the peasants, and in October of 1917 he carried thru the socialization of land.

Like all social-democrats Lenin started out as one favoring the defense of the fatherland. However, when the last war broke out, he immediately adopted the attitude of uncompromising hostility to the theory and practice of national defense. He declared that not even the defeat of Russia would matter for the working class. At that time the Marxian literature had just begun to discuss the problem of national and imperialist war. Lenin began devoting his attention to this problem and came to the conclusion that it is our duty to transform the imperialist war into a civil war.

From the provisional government of Russia he demanded the immediate convocation of the constituent assembly, and after the October revolution he dispersed this very same assembly. In the beginning Lenin was in favor of military Communism, but in 1921 he introduced the New Economic Policy. Following the socialization of the land in 1917, he favored in 1918 the formation of special committees composed of the poorest peasants, in order to split the peasantry thereby deciding the fate of the civil war in the villages. Starting out as an adherent of the idea of revolutionary war, he yet rejected this idea in 1918, and signed the Brest Litovsk peace treaty. And in 1920, he again favored the revolutionary war, this time against Poland. A deadly enemy of reformism, opposed to all dealings with the reformists, yet when conditions changed he declared in favor of the united front as a means of combating reformism altho it involved dealing with the reformists. Altho he favored a direct struggle against all parties of the Second International, yet at a certain stage in the development of the class struggle in England he favored the idea of supporting the British Labor Party and its coming into power. We could relate many more illustrations of the same kind.

In view of all this, would not the activity of Lenin appear to be full of contradictions?. Closest philosophers, adherents of the so-called rationalistic and logical formulae, could never adjust themselves to the "illogical" thinking of Lenin. But this proves only that these people have forgotten the whole Hegelian rule that the truth is concrete. Lenin's quick changes of orientation were not caused by abstract reasons, but by changes of realities. He was no conservor of dead formulae and lifeless slogans. Lenin's mobility in politics and tactics was always in accord with the daily changes in the mutual relation of forces between classes.

If we were to collect all that has been written on Lenin by his opponents, we should get one great historical rebus. According to some of his opponents, Lenin was a typical conspirator, a Blanquist, a Jacobin. According to others, Lenin was one of the greatest opportunists, a carperist, who was determined upon getting into power, irrespective of the price. All these descriptions are meaningless because they are based upon single instances of Lenin's activities, torn out from their connections with the whole, qualified according to the personal sentiments of one or the other of his enemies, and stamped accordingly.

Lenin was a dialectician in politics. That is, he knew how to attack, when necessary to retreat, always according to plan, to change directions, and when the situation became favorable again, to reassume the offensive, never for a second losing sight of his final aims. During the thirty years of his activities Lenin showed how changes of orientation could be effected without the party or the class whom he represented breaking their necks, but on the contrary strengthening their fighting ability and organization. From this point of view his entire political work has been a classical example of revolutionary class strategy.

EXTRA PROBLEM

An EXTRA problem faces us. What confronts us this day can only be overcome by ALL OF US—TOGETHER! There are financial obligations to meet. This is a year to look forward to!

We must go into 1925 well shod and armoured. The burden that impedes our progress must be kicked out of the way. We must give the DAILY WORKER a running start for 1925 which will take it through the year without a hitch and which will make it end the year twice the power it is today.

HOW THE SHOP NUCLEUS WORKS

THE organization of shop nuclei is one of the most important problems before the Workers Party at the present time. The reorganization of the party on the basis of shops and factories, mines and mills, will greatly strengthen our party organization. It is one of the steps necessary to make it a real Bolshevik party.

The following experience in one of the first shop nuclei organized by the party indicates how the shop nuclei work and how this form of organization places the party in close contact with the problems which the workers are facing:

Ten comrades were recently organized into a shop nucleus in one of the steel mills in the Chicago district. At the first meeting, the comrades of their own volition, brot up matters of importance in their shop. They decided on their own attitude towards collections carried on by the bosses for an athletic enterprise and decided that they would unitedly expose the enterprise as being an undertaking of the boss. They also decided on a definite attitude towards the Red Cross collection which the manager notified them would be taken up in the near future.

The same group of comrades proposed a draft for a short circular to distribute among the workers, pointing out what these attempts of the bosses mean.

This is only a small beginning of the functioning of the shop nucleus, but it immediately suggests that as soon as our comrades begin organizing on that basis their own natural instincts will bring their attention to conditions prevailing in the shops and the proper policies to pursue and what propaganda to be carried on by them in the party interests in connection therewith.

The Forgery Business.

NEW YORK—Forging of immigration certificates is a flourishing business in Warsaw, reports Sabin Balseres of New Orleans, American consul at Warsaw, who has just returned to this country. Most of these passport and visa forgers are Americans Balseres states. "They get as much as $300 and $400 for a forged certificate," he adds, "and the immigrant who buys it finds himself farned back when he attempts to board the ship."

Police Attack Union Men.

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 8.—Frank Brown, business agent of the Molders Local, was pumped full of lead by gunmen. No arrests. Two scabs were beaten up in Oakland. Four union men arrested. Police work fast when scabs are hurt.

Hangs 3 Men on New Year.

SAN QUENTIN, Dec. 8.—The new year at the state penitentiary will be celebrated with three hangings. As the bells ring out, "Peace on earth good will to all men," three men will drop thru the gallows trap.

COOLIDGE FORMS UNITED FRONT WITH 'FARMERS'

Bankers and Oil Men Pose as "Real Dirt"

The Chicago Daily News of December 5, ran a story with a headline, which said, "Farmers Join Hands to Push Farm Aid." The DAILY WORKER, being interested in farmers started to investigate. We found out things about these "farmers." Here they are.

A group of rich landlords, oil magnates, implement manufacturers, bankers, grain dealers, commission merchants and so on, control a block of about fifty so-called "farmers' organizations" headed by the American council of agriculture and having as the chief affiliated bodies such outstanding bourgeois organizations as the national grange, the American farm bureau and the so-called "Farmers' Union."

"Aiding the Bankrupt Farmers"

The character of this group is evident in what it did. It pledged to work in accordance with the plan of President Coolidge for "farm aid," and laid out a plan for the protective tariff applied to agriculture. This plan is to create a "farmers" export corporation" consisting of fifteen persons, all appointed by Coolidge and to include three cabinet members, with a capital of $200,000,000 from the war finance corporation. This is to have monopoly powers in leasing, buying, selling, storing and shipping in agricultural products. It would be hard to imagine what scheme could be more capitalistic than this one of these "farmers."

A Fine Bunch of "Farmers."

But among the "farmers" in control of this meeting were, George N. Peek, president of the Moline Plow company, vice-president and manager of the John Deer Plow company, director of the Merchants' National bank of Omaha; Oscar E. Bradfute, cattle raiser, president of the Bourgeois American Farm Bureau federation, and head of the firm of O. E. Bradfute and sons; Clyton H. Hyde, president of the Eagle Chief Oil company, the vice-president of the Shields Oil and Gas company, director of the Pioneer Oil Shale company, and vice-president of the United States Grain Growers, incorporated.

A Clever Trick.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—Bondholders of B. R. & R. Knight, Inc., textile mills have taken over complete management and operation of the mills because of the failure of the Consolidated Textile corporation, understood to be part of American Woolen company's interests, to pay interest on bonds. The big textile mills have just put their workers on a 10 per cent wage reduction. The forfeiting of the property to the bondholders is looked upon by some observers as part of the plan to keep wages reduced and workers speeded up under the plea of company poverty.

The Spectre Takes Form

The clear division in the world between capitalism and Communism is clearer today than ever before.

Seventy-five years ago Karl Marx wrote:

"A spectre is haunting Europe, the spectre of Communism."

That spectre took on form and flesh when the Russian revolution reared its head in 1917 and in spite of the desperate efforts of world capitalism to lay the ghost, it stands today behind every cabinet table and the ministers of capitalist governments can see and talk of nothing else.

Great Britain, altho menaced more than ever by France, her ancient enemy, sends Austin Chamberlain to plead with Herriot for a truce that will allow the marshalling of the weakened capitalist forces of both nations against the revolutionary working class to whom Communism is not a dreaded spectre but a messenger of hope and victorious struggle.

The French press notes with satisfaction that Chamberlain's note to Herriot contains the phrase "entente cordiale," used for the first time in years and, according to the New York Times, says that what Great Britain wants is "Western European and especially French solidarity with her against Bolshevism."

Continuing, the Times says, speaking of the Chamberlain-Herriot conference:

In this short conversation there was, therefore, discussed for the first time the real post-war division of the world, from which the perpendicular lines of the nationalists have in some part disappeared and given way to the horizontal line which divides Bolshevism from organized civilization.

The correspondent of the Times slips a little here. It is just because, if we may be allowed to emulate the Irish orator, that "organized civilization" is not organized that the world's working class under the leadership of the Communist International, is compelled to bring order out of capitalist chaos. The outstanding feature of European capitalism today, the feature on which all observers are agreed, is its demoralized character, its utter and increasing instability, its failure to recover from the death blow dealt it during the internecine struggles of the world war.

Even the Dawes plan—the extension of American imperialist control of European government, finance and industry—has not served to banish the spectre of Communism and this sacrifice of the independence of the European powers has merely increased the disillusionment of the European workers.

They might be seduced by nationalist phrases and induced to work for a national capitalism because of the influence of tradition and the remnants of patriotism, but to be enslaved to America, the richest capitalist nation in the world, is quite different. Before they will submit to this they must be conquered again by their own capitalists. The working class of Europe is in revolt and this revolt gains impetus every day because the workers prefer revolution in which they have a fighting chance to submission to slavery for generations to come.

The strength of the revolutionary movement in each country is proportional to the strength of the Communist Party, so it is against the Communist parties and the Communist International that the new "entente cordiale" will direct its offensive. This again intensifies the internal crisis and trouses the revolutionary masses.

The extension of this policy can end only in war on Soviet Russia, whose government endorses the Communist International, is a government of workers and peasants and therefore a source of inspiration to revolutionary workers thruout the world. This is what the Times correspondent means by "the horizontal line which divides Bolshevism from organized civilization."

Great Britain is the backer of this policy of aggression. She is the great colonial nation and in every one of her Asiatic and African colonies there are powerful movements for national independence which the Communists encourage while at the same time organizing the working class for the social revolution. This is the historic policy of Lenin and the new "entente cordiale" is the best tribute to its revolutionary effectiveness. France, too, is a great colonial nation and likewise feels the pressure of the national revolutionary movements.

These two national capitalisms cannot live without the tribute squeezed from the colonial peoples and the Soviet government, with its practical, not paper, policy of self-determination is to France and England the personification of the force that threatens to disintegrate their empires.

Neither nation dares now challenge the United States in a battle for world supremacy. They are forced to accept the Dawes plan and forced to comply with the demands of the efficient American imperialists that the European opposition to the plan, which is led by the Communists, be stamped out.

Thus the world divides more sharply than ever into two classes—the capitalists who will profit from the Dawes plan and the working class who suffer from it. Is this not a clear illustration of the conflicts within capitalism that forces it to draw closer the battle lines and intensify the class struggle at a tme when it needs as never before the unthinking loyalty of the class it exploits?

Then there are the national rivalries which will not down and which prevent any such absolute unity of world capitalism as that implied in the "entente cordiale." Unity against Bolshevism means war, war for territories now acknowledging the rule of the workers' and peasants' government of Soviet Russia. The question of the division of the loot must first be settled by the bandit chiefs and this question they cannot settle. It is this question that appears to issue always from the shadowy mouth of the red spectre and the capitalist rulers go crazy trying to find the answer. There is no answer except that given by the Communist International, "Revolution!"

It is here in the United States that the only really powerful counter-revolutionary force in the world lives. Here are the billions of wealth and the millions of backward workers—the finances and the cannon fodder for war on the European working class, and it is here, therefore, that the most telling blows must be dealt this new conspiracy against the world's workers, against the Communist International and against the workers' and peasants' government of Russia.

Every string that moves the ministerial puppets of Europe has its end in Wall Street. Morgan, the puppets' master, also jerks the strings controlling the American variety in the White House and American capitalism prepares—first, to crush the world revolution and second, to crush its capitalist rivals.

The Communist Party of America has the biggest job of all.

"And the Scabbard Is Thrown Away!"

The birth of a new and powerful alliance, a real united front of exploited masses, is heralded in the announcement of the organization of the Pan-American Anti-Imperialist League with headquarters at Mexico City.

This organization, born of the resistance by revolutionary workers of ALL America, to the savage imperialism of the capitalist government of the United States—the "colossus of the north," as it is termed by the Latin-Americans—bids fair to give unflinching battle to the infamous class collaboration schemes of Gompers and Morones and their satellites in North, Central and South America.

The manifesto signed by this organization is signed as well by the Workers (Communist) Party of America, the Trade Union Educational League and the Communist Party of Mexico. These are strong and determined forces to open the struggle altho they face a foe whose power is beyond theirs at present.

But the forces of history are on the side of the soldiers of labor. The workers of the entire western hemisphere are arousing, slowly but certainly, the challenge to western imperialism is made, "The night is gone, the sword is drawn and the scabbard is thrown away!"

Down with imperialism!

The Miners' Election

The members of the United Mine Workers of America, thruout the jurisdiction of that organization are voting today on the election of national and district officers for the next two years. This election is of the greatest importance to every coal digger in the United States.

It is a damning indictment of John L. Lewis, and his administration that while the ballots are being cast ten locals in the anthracite coal fields are disfranchised by that autocrat's orders, because the members dared to strike against the coal companies that violated their agreements. The czar of the miners' union seized upon this pretext to lift the charters of the locals knowing that the sentiment there was strongly against him.

The incident in the anthracite field could be multiplied one thousand fold. From Nova Scotia to Kansas and from Alberta, Canada, to Wilkesbarre, Pa., this labor faker has left his trail of treachery. Lewis and his administration, including his machine in every district should be driven from office and the progressive slate elected.

Not until the United Mine Workers of America and the entire trade union movement are under Communist leadership and the tools of the employers who now rule them are ousted, will these organizations become effective instruments to fight for the workers' interests.

Today the coal miners have an important duty to perform. They should vote for the progressive slate and solidify their forces for the next drive against the entrenched agents of the coal operators who now crucify them. The battle cannot be won in a day, but victory is theirs just as soon as they make a real and determined effort to win.

Progressive workers in every industry in the United States are today watching the action of the most militant section of the American proletariat.

The Chicago gunmen, altho denounced vociferously by the mayor and district attorney, are doing business in the same old way.

DETAILED STORY OF BRAZILIAN MUTINY WHEN CREW SAILED OFF WITH $5,000,000 BATTLESHIP

(Special to The Daily Worker)

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil, Dec. 8.—With the most powerful battleship of South America stolen by mutineers and taken to sea, the government's most strict censorship cannot prevent the writer from getting to the outside world what little the people of this South American metropolis knows of the most remarkable exploit in Brazilian history, now ended by the ship's internment in the foreign port of Buenos Aires, Argentina.

Extreme discontent against the government exists in the Brazilian navy. On Dec. 4, two of the great battleships of Brazil, the Sao Paulo and the Minas Geras, were lying in the Rio De Janeiro harbor. After long negotiations with the higher officers who refused their demands, the crew and petty officers of the Sao Paulo, led by five young second-lieutenants not yet out of their teens, seized their officers and put them ashore.

Raise Red Flag.

They raised the red flag over the ship and declared their intention of joining the revolutionary party. The marine commander, Senor Alexandrino de Alexncar, under white flag, boarded the ship and argued all night with the mutineers to no effect. When he finally left they cleared decks for action and slipped her cable ready for the sea.

By rumor the news of the mutiny had spread like wildfire and the docks and wharfs around the harbor were black with people at dawn.

The Minas Geras Would Not Fire.

The Sao Paulo sent a demand to the crew of the Minas Geras to join her in the mutiny. Evidently the officers prevented seizure of the Minas Geras, altho they could not force her crew to open fire on the Sao Paulo, which, flaunting the red flag at the masthead, began steaming down the harbor after sending a couple of shells into the naval prison on the harbor hills and demolishing it while the prison guards ran for their lives.

The President Was Elsewhere.

Not taking any chances, the Sao Paulo kept her guns trained on the Minas Geras while she stopped for an hour just off the palace of the Brazilian president on the Praia Flamengo Apparently learning that the president was not at home that morning, and not wishing to waste ammunition on a perfectly good but empty palace, the Sao Paulo went down the harbor.

Fort Gunners Had Bad Eyes.

Here it came under the guns of the forts covering the harbor entrance one of the best fortified harbors in South America. She was subject to a few shots from some of the lesser forts and replied with one or two shots. Then she reached the harbor mouth and came under the great guns of Fort Copacaban. Strangely enough, it appeared that the gunners of the fort were purposely shooting wide of the mark.

By 12:30 in the afternoon the Sao Paulo, seemingly without injury and with full steam up was out to sea and turned southward. She is a battleship worth $5,000,000, fully armed and equipped with coal and supplies for a voyage of 5,000 miles. Altho some of the crew wished to take the ship to Soviet Russia, the nationalist sentiment prevailed, so after a futile voyage which was, however, a demonstration of what could be done, the ship was voluntarily interned at Buenos Aires.

PATERSON STRIKERS CAN NOW TAKE CARE OF THEIR MEMBERS

After four months of strike, the Paterson, N. J. silk workers, thru their strike committee, make the following statement relative to the collection of funds raised by outside organizations for their support:

The results of the appeal issued by the strike committee to support the Paterson strikers in their struggle for better conditions surpassed all its expectations.

This is sufficient evidence that, despite the attacks by certain newspapers and so-called labor leaders to the effect that the strike was an outlawed one, the workers thruout the country, and particularly from New York, recognized the cause of the silk workers of Paterson as a just one.

However, at this time, we are justified in making the statement that the strike has reached the stage where we will be able, with the funds on hand and the money being raised by our membership, to take care of those who are in need of support.

We take this opportunity to thank all individuals, organizations, and committees who have assisted in the raising of funds.

We request that all monies collected by organizations and committees be forwarded without delay, so that an accounting of receipts and expenses can be submitted.

France to Enter New Naval and Air Armament Race

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, France, Dec. 8.—France's new naval program calls for the building of over half a billion dollars worth of battleships, and the entire reconstruction of the navy, as outlined by the chamber of deputies commission. Particular attention will be given to strengthening the Mediterranean fleet, in order to compete with the Italian fleet which is at present superior to the French ships in the Mediterranean. Air service will be developed to keep pace with American air service development.

The reconstruction of the navy will take twenty years to complete according to the plan.

We Cannot Win This Race in Boots

The American Tobacco Company fed the yellow press $2,000,000 worth of advertising last year. And what a smoke screen the yellows made with this! Standard Oil was about as generous in lubricating dailies that chirp for it.

The Calumet Baking Powder Company raised the hopes of the yellow press for dividends by an addition of $1,500,000 to income. The United States Rubber Company stretched this by slinging in an equal amount. And along came Wrigley, Jr., and gulped up a wad, a cool million in size.

A few of the big national advertisers, which are also the big exploiters, gave a few of their favorite mouthpieces the neat sum of $48,036,973 last year to sing their tune. The big exploiters are loyal to their yellow press. They treat it royally.

We're in this race to win the world. We're speeding ahead as fast as we can. But we are handicapped. We face encumbrances. They impede our progress. WE CANNOT WIN THIS RACE IN BOOTS.

A mighty and lasting spurt forward towards victory can be made if we rid the DAILY WORKER of its burdens. The DAILY WORKER, is the red beacon of revolutionary labor in America TODAY. But how about tomorrow and 1925? Shall there be a worker's daily to speak for labor, defend labor, lead labor's offensive in the months to come?

Fifty millions of dollars for a few of the yellows from a few of the master class. They stand by theirs. And we? Shall we stand by our guns, to a man? Fifty thousand dollars for your RED DAILY from the red workers of America and we'll continue giving the yellows a fight for their life. Are you with us? Then

MEETING OF CARPENTERS' LOCAL CALLED ON EXPULSION POLICY; DETERMINED TO DEFEND MILITANTS

The members of Local No. 181, of the Carpenters' Union last Monday night summarily called a halt on the illegal policy of expulsion without trial of loyal members of the union, when a meeting that almost filled Wicker Park hall, rose en masse to defend the illegally expelled members against the tools of Harry Jensen and the small army of policemen who tried to have them ejected from the hall.

A complete story of the case appeared recently in the DAILY WORKER. Briefly stated it is as follows: Several members of Local No. 181 signed a resolution which was passed by the local, protesting against the signing of a scab contract with the Chicago contractors by Harry Jensen, district president. Copies of the resolution and the agreement were forwarded to the Indianapolis convention for distribution there.

This aroused the wrath of General President Hutcheson and shortly afterwards the officers of Local 181, had charges preferred against ten members who signed the resolution. Some of them were members of the Workers Party and the Trade Union Educational League and some were not.

It Was Lese Majeste.

To pass a resolution criticizing the policy of Czar Hutcheson was nothing short of lese majeste so the czar demanded that the local withdraw its censure and prefer charges against those signing the resolution. The secretary of the local, Elinar Larson, dutifully did this and had himself selected prosecutor.

Larson succeeded in inducing three of the members of the trial committee to sign the report, which was a tissue of falsehoods from start to finish. This fake report said that the expelled members pleaded guilty and five of the ten members were declared guilty. Such a brazen lie could not stand so there was a strong comeback.

When the fake report was read to the meeting, the chairman refused to give the defendants or the minority of the committee a chance to be heard despite a constitutional provision providing for a hearing for both sides and requiring a two-thirds vote of all those present to expel a member. The chairman by use of the gavel declared the members expelled, tho they had violated no law of the constitution either in spirit or the letter.

For a Square Deal.

The meeting last Monday night showed that the members of Local 181 are strongly in favor of justice for the expelled militants. No sooner had the meeting been called to order than a policeman was seen in the hall. The chairman asked the conductor to take the password after which he asked the illegally expelled members to leave the hall. They declined stating that they did not have a trial in accordance with the provisions of the constitution and would insist on their rights. The conductor was then requested to violently eject them and this not being done, the police were called upon to throw out good union men from a union meeting.

This was too much for the rank and file. As one man they rose in protest and told the yellow reactionaries that they had reached the limit of their patience and would stand for no more railroading of good union men by the tools of Harry Jensen and Hutcheson

Trial Was a Fraud.

The members shouted at the top of their voices that the trial was a fraud and that they would insist on a square deal for their fellow workers. The police were seen conferring with the secretary who enjoyed the role of prosecutor for awhile. This did not add to his popularity as the carpenters have no reason to love the uniformed servants of the bosses.

The officials who carried out the orders of Hutcheson and Jensen are weakening and Monday night's meeting added to their discomfort. The members were told that an international officer would be present at the next meeting and the audience yelled "Let them come, we want to give them a piece of our mind."

The chairman had to adjourn the meeting before any business was transacted as he realized that it would take a large part of the Chicago police force, together with all the gunmen at the disposal of the committee to enforce the Landis award to browbeat a hall full of fighting carpenters. The members declared that they would attend every meeting from now on so that the fakers would not put any more raw deals over on them.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THERE is a remarkable similarity between the manner in which Ramsay MacDonald was bounced out of office and placed in a bad light before the wavering workers of England and the plot woven around the liberal Premier Herriot of France by the big bourgeoisie of England, quite likely assisted by the big bourgeoisie of France. Herriot, like MacDonald, immediately after recognition of the Soviet government proceeded to make raids on the Communists, presumably in order to prove to the big bourgeoisie that his recognition of Russia did not mean that he was in sympathy with Communism.

IT should be noted that MacDonald and his government had the Communist editor, Campbell, arrested just about the time he signed the trade treaties with Russia, and delivered furious attacks on Communism in general and on the Communist International in particular. The bankers knew by experience that MacDonald is not "red." He succeeded in doing that but the bankers were not in the least grateful. Just as soon as they had used Mac for all he was worth, they gave him the order of the boot.

HERRIOT seems to be on the same road as MacDonald. He began to attack the Communists when Krassin, the Soviet ambassador, arrived in Paris. He arrested the French capitalist, Sadoul, who was sentenced to death by a court martial in 1918, for plotting the Bolshevik. He organized raids on the Communists, on the misinformation that a plot hatched by foreign radicals to overthrow France had been discovered. He removed a Communist mayor because the latter led the workers of the town in a strike. Yet, this conduct does not seem to have appeased his foes, the big capitalists. It certainly does not meet with the approval of the workers.

FOR those who still prattle about Soviet interference in the affairs of other countries, the visit of Austen Chamberlain to Herriot may prove illuminating. The tory minister talked long and secretly with the French premier about the "Communist menace," chiefly in the colonial possessions of the capitalist powers, but also in France. Chamberlain is actually reported to have presented Herriot with evidence of Communist activities in France collected by British secret service operatives. It is stated that this "evidence" induced Herriot to start the anti-Communist raids.

THE big bourgeoisie do not trust the Herriots, MacDonalds or La Follettes any more than the class conscious workers do. Only in cases of necessity, usually when the masses are in a state of incipient revolt and some decoy duck with a radical camouflage is needed to deceive them until the big capitalists get their wind back, do the latter tolerate the leadership of representatives of the petty bourgeoisie. It can be predicted that Herriot will go the same road as MacDonald when he succeeds in discrediting himself with the workers and peasants who mistook him for a radical and when the big bourgeoisie are in a position to ditch him.

THE Communists of Germany put up an excellent fight despite the handicaps under which they suffered, with most of their leaders in jail and the remainder hounded by the police. The social-democrats and the other capitalist parties used the Dawes plan to fool the masses. But the Dawes plan will soon disillusion them and then they will turn to the only party that opposed it from the beginning.

• • •

THERE is no indication that capitalism in Europe will be able to get back on its feet. It is very groggy the still able to waddle around. The American bankers gave it an injection of the gold cure which peps it up for a little while, but there will be a

LEWIS FAILS TO COW HARD COAL STRIKERS

Demand Cappellini Get Out of His Hole

By THOMAS MYERSCOUGH.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSTON, Pa., Dec. 9.—They came, they met and, after five hours of coaxing, pleading and attempting to get the Pennsylvania Coal Co. strikers back to work at any cost, the committee of international board members, sent here by President John L. Lewis, left without having accomplished anything.

To the plea of the committee, that they return to work and leave their grievances in the hands of the officials for settlement, Delegate Joe Piore, of Old Forge local union, said "We have been bitten twice already, and we are too sore to stand another bite."

Conciliation Board A Graveyard.

For five solid hours, the longest session held in a long time, the various grievances were argued, but reports indicate that the general tone of the officials was just the same as that of the greedy coal operators, "abide by the agreement," "let the officers handle your grievances," etc., etc.

But the pleas were falling into ears of men that knew only too well, the length of time that these grievances were already reposed in the care of the district officials. At the mention of the word "conciliation board," Delegate Londo remarked, "The conciliation board has become the 'graveyard' for our grievances, and we want you to know that these grievances are very much alive, therefore, we do not intend to bury them."

Every mention of "illegal strike" and "violation of agreement" brought forth a chorus of "Tell the operators to abide by the agreement." Many of the responsible leaders of the general grievance committee in charge of the strike, in their talks to the assemblage while the committee of Lewis was present, showed no hesitancy in placing the blame for the present situation, on the shoulders of the officials that they are now asked to trust their troubles to.

All the time the committee was in

ENTIRE CREW ARRIVE HANDCUFFED AND ARE IMMEDIATELY JAILED

ALICANTE, Spain, Dec. 9.—A case of mutiny on the seas was reported by the British steamer Olbel Gasahul which arrived here today. The captain of the ship declared that the crew had attempted revolt and proposed to confiscate the wealth contained on the ship. There was 35,000,000 pesos in gold and currency and the ship was bound for London. The entire crew arrived handcuffed and was arrested immediately upon arrival.

TWO LACKEYS OF WALL ST. IN PALAVER

Mattie Woll Adds Note of Caution

By J. W. JOHNSTONE.

(Special to the Daily Worker)

MEXICO CITY (By Mail.)—The English section of the capitalist newspaper called "Excelsior," published in this city, gives an account of the grand reception of Samuel Gompers by President Calles of Mexico at the presidential palace.

"Addressing the chief magistrate in English," says the "Excelsior", "Gompers' speech was translated into Spanish." But the "Excelsior" quotes from the English speech as it fell, like priceless pearls, from the lips of Gompers himself. Sammy spoke as follows:

"Comrade Gompers" Greets "Comrade Calles"

"Comrade Calles, not only to manifest our respect for the president of Mexico, have we come here, but also we realize the importance of the last few days. We have come to express our absolute certainty that American workers are unchangeably loyal, friendly and fraternal towards the president of Mexico and towards the Mexican workers."

Sammy conveniently forgot at this moment that he has aided and abetted in the vicious campaign in the United States against immigrants from Mexico.

"Comrade Calles" Hails "Comrade Gompers"

Then "Comrade Calles" opened up his speech of reply by saying, "Comrade Gompers and esteemed companions." And he kept going like that for a long time, ending up with a tribute to "that great fighter, Samuel Gompers."

It remained for Mattie Woll to sound the note of caution in this conference between "Comrade Gompers" and "Comrade Calles." Mattie hitched up his trousers and released the following

Mattie Gives Conservative Tone.

"The American Federation of Labor is not opposed to capital nor to private ownership. There is nothing in our ideals for Pan-American trade unionism that can meet the disapproval of the Anglo-Saxon, and I believe they will guide the labor movement of Mexico, altho it is true that when the masses of people are oppressed, true reason cannot prevail."

Mattie Woll, disciple of "pure reason" of the "Anglo-Saxon" type, seemed to be entirely untroubled as to whether his "ideals" would "meet with the approval" of the Latins or not. He was solely concerned only with the difficulty he foresaw of having this "Anglo-Saxon" A. F. of L. "guide the labor movement of Mexico."

Down With Anglo-Saxon Imperialism!

In view of the fact that he understood that this was a hard job "when the masses of people are oppressed," we are inclined to agree with him that it is going to be difficult. The Pan-American Anti-Imperialist League, combined with the Communists of both the United States and Mexico, are going to see that Mattie Woll and his Anglo-Saxonism—which is his alias for Wall Street imperialism—has some hard sledding south of the Rio Grande.

Communists Gain 18 Seats In Prussian Elections As Socialist Strength Fades

LANDIS AWARD COMMITTEE CLAIMS THEIR POLICY COST ONLY ELEVEN MURDERS SINCE ITS INCEPTION

Under the leadership of Thomas E. Donnelley, chairman of the citizens' committee to enforce the Landis award, Chicago building contractors and business men met on Monday at the Hotel LaSalle and voted to continue indefinitely the union smashing policy of that organization.

While it was unanimously admitted that the open shop policy was a success, since it secured the benevolent neutrality of the labor fakers and the practical endorsement of some, it was nevertheless stated by architects that the work of the committee was lagging behind and did not progress at last year's rate of speed.

The report of the committee showed that in three years the stupendous sum of $2,053,654 was spent to enforce the Landis award. How much of this went to crooked labor fakers, the report did not state.

An element of unconscious humor was introduced in the report with the admission that "since its existence only eleven deaths or murders are traceable to the Landis award." No doubt, the learned Judge Landis award would consider the smashing of the unions cheap at any price and eleven murders is certainly getting away at cut rate prices.

It was announced unofficially that the Chicago carpenters' district council withdrew its million dollar damage suit against 800 contractors and building material men. The suit originated during the lockout of the carpenters in 1919.

Harry Jensen, president of the carpenters' district council and Hutcheson, general president of the international union recently signed an agreement with the local contractors on the lines of the Landis award... This action has caused a miniature rebellion in the locals and brought about expulsions of some members who took a leading part in fighting the scab contract.

GREEK COMMUNIST BRANCHES RALLY TO AID "DAILY" DRIVE

Insurance policies to build the DAILY WORKER for 1925 have been sent to all Greek branches thruout the country, Comrade Cryssis, secretary of the Greek Federation announced to the DAILY WORKER. "Our Greek Communist paper 'Empros,' has published stories in three successive issues, telling the Greek Workers Party members and sympathizers about the DAILY WORKER campaign," said Comrade Cryssis.

"The quota of $639.00 which has been set for the Greek Federation is reasonable, and I believe we will exceed this quota before the campaign has come to an end."

NEW YORK STATE GIVES CANNON 7,613 BALLOTS

By RICHARD J. VERHAGEN.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Dec. 9.—The Schenectady Gazette, altho giving the summary of the election returns as reported on the official count by the state biard of canvassers, does not give the Workers Party vote except for governor, where Comrade James P. Cannon is given 7,613 votes.

For the other state offices, such as secretary of state, the Workers Party vote is concealed in the large group of over 200,000 which is termed, "scattering."

However, the official count now being available, the national office of the Workers Party will be informed of the exact vote of the party candidates for every office.

In Schenectady county, the county board of elections has informed me that in the county the vote of our presidential candidate, William Z. Foster was 54, Cannon for governor, 51; Brill for lieutenant-governor, 56; Lilly Lore for secretary of state, 51; Epstein for comptroller, 53; Lindgren for treasurer, 53; Leeds for attorney general, 51; Verhagen for engineer and surveyor, 56.

NEW YORK DAILY WORKER PLEDGES COMING IN FAST

Ten Thousand Dollars Is the Goal Sought

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Dec. 9.—Pledges of many hundreds of dollars to insure the DAILY WORKER for 1925 are rolling in from each of the main New York branches of the Workers Party.

What is more significant, these pledges are being immediately followed up by substantial donations of hard cash—enough to not only insure the DAILY WORKER for 1925 but to make it grow.

Comrade L. Weiman, a working woman, paid in the first cash donation to the New York DAILY WORKER agency. Comrade Weiman, altho money comes hard to her, set a good example to the rest of the DAILY WORKER readers by taking out two ten dollar policies.

The downtown English branch has pledged $175.00. At the last branch meeting personal pledges of the forty members present totaled $273.00. This is an average of almost seven dollars per member.

Fifty-nine dollars in cash has already come in from the Harlem English branch which pledged $425.00. The Bronx English branch No. 1 has brought in $39.00 as the proceeds of the sale of its first eight policies.

New York is expected to go over the top with a fund of over ten thousand dollars to insure the DAILY WORKER for 1925.

RUSSIAN COMRADES IN STRENUOUS DRIVE TO EXCEED THEIR QUOTA

The Russian Federation is behind the DAILY WORKER campaign to build a stronger working class paper for 1925, and is making strenuous efforts to exceed its quota of $2,745, Comrade A. Striz, secretary of the Russian Federation, told the DAILY WORKER. "Substantial contributions have already come in from Connecticut, Minneapolis, Chicago, Pullman, and many other Russian branches," said Comrade Striz.

At the last meeting of the Chicago Russian branch, last Tuesday, the insurance books were distributed, the campaign was explained, and cash donations were given to the DAILY WORKER.

OPPONENTS OF DAWES' PLAN SCORE VICTORY

Capitalist Press Mute on Communist Gains

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Dec. 9.—The capitalist press which gloated over the losses of the Communists in the Reichstag were strangely silent over the big gains made by that party in the elections to the Prussian diet.

Provisional figures show that the Communists won 47 seats as against 29 in the last elections while the socialists lost twenty.

The elections to the various state parliaments in Germany are very important. The Prussian diet wields tremendous power. It was the Prussian minister of the interior, Severing, who authorized the raid on the headquarters of the Soviet trade delegation last year. It is significant that the Communist vote should go up in the most highly industrialized part of Germany.

ARBITRATION OF DISPUTE STINGS PEORIA STRIKERS

Call for Walkout of All Traction Workers

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PEORIA, Ill., Dec. 9.—A complete tie-up of street railways in this and surrounding cities loomed up today when officials of locals of the Amalgamated Street and Electric Railway Employes of America in Bloomington, Galesburg, Decatur, Champaign, and Danville urged the Peoria local to take the leadership in a general strike against all electric lines in that region unless the traction strike on the Illinois Power and Light corporation is settled shortly.

The railway employes are the victims of an arbitration decision declared President Joseph Scott of the Peoria local.

Tie Up Complete Third Day.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Dec. 9.—The strike of the trainmen of the Illinois Traction System, which has stopped electric passenger and freight service thruout central Illinois, entered its third day.

All the 285 strikers remained away from their posts, according to reports, and no attempt was made to move trains.

The trainmen assert that their real reason for striking was the refusal of the company to grant time and one-half for overtime work and a closed shop.

The role of the peacemaker in the strike of Illinois Traction System trainmen, which has tied up service on 400 miles of electric railroad, was assumed today by the Springfield chamber of commerce, after conferences with strike leaders and company officials.

A committe of leading Springfield business men was appointed to act as a point of contact between the strikers and the company, who have had no negotiations since the train crews walked out Saturday at midnight.

HERRIOT BITES "RED" BAIT THAT KILLED RAMSAY

Tory Party Nails One More Liberal Sucker

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, France, Dec. 9.—Premier Herriot is being put on the same toboggan which shot Ramsay MacDonald off into space. After doing the dirty work for the reactionaries and Morgan's banks, in accepting the Dawes plan, getting it put over one a working class which might otherwise object if it were not presented to them by a "radical socialist."

It is pointed out by Communists that the same trick is being used—and apparently with the same success—against Herriot as was used by the English tories against Ramsay MacDonald. The most astonishing thing is that the English tory foreign minister, Austen Chamberlain, helping his party to frame-up on MacDonald, goes over to Paris on his way to the League of Nations meeting in Italy and puts the same frame-up over on Herriot.

Mac Was Big Sucker.

It must be remembered that MacDonald was confronted with a "red scare" in the form of the forged "Zinoviev letter," which was cold-bloodedly planted on Ramsay. He took the bait, opened an attack on Soviet Russia and, nevertheless, went down to defeat in the elections while the "red scare" was being played up, because the tories made the electorate believe that MacDonald was "too weak" and was aiding the Communists to overthrow the government.

Now the old trick is working on Herriot. He, too, is falling for the same fish-worm, painted red as before. The reactionary papers of all France begin a stupendous and senseless "red scare." Herriot is called on to "do something." Austen Chamberlain, fresh from the massacre of MacDonald, comes over and genially volunteers the advice that "Bolshevism must be crushed." Herriot announces that he agrees.

The "crushing" begins. Herriot's police, 700 of them, round up the mythical "Soviet army." It turns out to be 500 workers, who were arrested but that all except six Italians had to be released as there was nothing to hold them about. They had no artillery, no "Zinoviev letter" and very little money. Not one Russian was bagged.

Immediately, the reactionary press attacks Herriot as a "weakling" who "cannot handle the red peril." And the "radical socialist" premier, who is made to walk the plank, can only gasp and surrender to Poincare.

COAL MINERS AT YUKON, PA., POLL 146 VOTES FOR THE COMMUNIST TICKET

(Special to The Daily Worker)

YUKON, Pa., Dec. 9.—In this coal mining county—Westmoreland county—Foster received 146 votes for president. Yukon was at the top with 23 (six ballots of ours were spoiled and counted out); Monessen was next with 16; Herminie third with 11. Note that Herminie has no Workers Party branch, and in a place called "Old Madison," where there are supposedly only "100 per centers" living, Foster got three votes.—Signed, M. W. Brajdich.

session, arguing against the efforts of the officials to have them return to work, the rank and file miners lined the sidewalks outside the hall waiting for the verdict. I mingled with those men as a disinterested person, questioning them about the strike and its cause, and I was agreeably surprised to find, that all, with whom I talked, were in favor of the strike, declaring it to be a justifiable one.

Without any urging on my part, they all blamed the "crooked" officials, because they allowed the companies to do almost as they pleased with the men. When Chairman Feery of Lewis' committee finished his plea for the men to end the strike, one by one the delegates arose and began the story of their abuse at the hands of the coal company, as well as the failure to remedy the situation thru official circles. Each also told of the sentiment of their constituencies as well as of themselves, which was for continuance of the strike until "satisfactory" settlement was secured. This was probably best portrayed by a young man named Moleski, vice-chairman of the general grievance committee, who declared, "We are ready to fight, as we have had to fight for everything we ever won. Nothing was ever given to us on a platter."

Demand Cappellini Disintern Himself

A demand was also voiced that Rinaldo Cappellini come out of his hole and take a position of one kind or another in this situation, for these are the men on whose shoulders Rinaldo rose to power and they want to know now where he stands. Altho the story is being circulated that he has not yet returned from El Paso, where he went on the call of John L. Lewis, little credence is given to the rumor, especially since the outside committee of national board members were summoned here so quickly. This committee while failing to change the minds of the strikers, have been successful in preventing other general bodies from voting to go on strike with the Pennsylvania Coal company men. They have not, however, prevented these bodies from voting to condemn the officials for their action in revoking charters or for the calling of a special convention to air everything.

Civil Liberties Will Continue the Fight to Reinstate Glassberg

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—The American Civil Liberties Union has taken its fight for the reinstatement of Benjamin Glassberg to Dr. Frank P. Graves, states commissioner of education.

The Glassberg case came up at the last meeting of the Board of Education and the board refused to review the case. The Civil Liberties statement charges that the meeting was surcharged with prejudice against the case. "We submit that no case can be considered on its merits in the atmosphere created by the presence, in a large number of protesting officers and members of the American Legion," reads the petition.

Among the signers of the petition are such well known educators as Professor Thorstein Veblen and Dr. David Star Jordan.

KING DEFENDS RUTHLESS WAR AGAINST EGYPT

Does Not Explain the "Zinoviev Forgery"

LONDON, Dec. 9.—King George V. in a speech today opening parliament defended the indefensible action of his government following the death of Sir Lee Stack in Egypt. Of course the speech was prepared for the king by the prime minister.

The royal parasites were closely guarded by policemen on their way to the parliament. Formalities were quickly over and the king launched into his speech.

Wants More Time.

"I follow with deep interest the important deliberations of the league of nations. My government has not yet had time to study in consultation with the dominions the protocol for pacific settlement of disputes drawn up at the last assembly of the league with attainment to its character and demands.

"My government is unable to recommend for your consideration treaties with the Soviet Republic signed Aug 8. It is my desire that normal intercourse between the two countries shall not be interrupted. I trust that attainment of that object will be made possible by strict fulfillment of those conditions of friendly international intercourse which have repeatedly been placed before the Soviet government and accepted by them."

The king said the Anglo-Russian trade agreement "Does all that is at present possible to foster neutral trade."

His Majesty Stuttered.

The king seemed to be embarrassed while reading the speech which was handed to him in view of the audience by the lord chancellor. This open admission that the king does not have anything to do with writing what is supposed to be the "King's Speech" was considered a bad blunder by enthusiastic admirers of the monarchy.

George stuttered occasionally while reading the document and once mumbled his words like a little boy sliding over vague parts of the lord's prayer.

Turned Down Burlesque.

The king declared that he had a request from the president of Argentine that the prince of Wales visit South America. Requests from vaudeville and burlesque circuits were turned down but the king announced that his son would be glad to visit South America.

The royal gentleman said many other things that don't amount to much, but the feminists and liberals will chortle over the proposal to legitimize children born of unions resulting in subsequent marriage. He also favored land tax reforms and a guarantee of the Irish Free State land act bonds.

NEW YORK HOLDS CONFERENCE FOR RED AID SUPPORT

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Dec. 9.—Fifty delegates representing the Young Workers League and the Workers Party attended the conference for the organization of a New York branch of the International Workers' Aid.

The conference went on record approving the Red Aid movement and pledging its support. It voted to hold a conference of all workers' organizations sometime in January to draw all workers into the work of support of political prisoners. It then voted to send a communication to all branches of their organizations, labor unions and fraternal organizations asking them to make Red Aid an order of business at the next meeting.

Comrade Landy reported that a bazaar was arranged jointly with the Labor Defence Council. The conference pledged its support to the bazaar. Tickets, subscription lists and souvenir programs were distributed at the meeting for that purpose.

The next conference of the Workers Party and the Young Workers League delegates will be held on Dec. 14 and thereafter every two weeks.

SUGAR TRUST RULE DEPORTS STRIKERS FROM CUBAN MILLS

(Special to the Daily Worker)

HAVANA, Cuba, Dec. 9.—The Cuban government is showing its servility to the United States Sugar trust. It is deporting Spanish workers which it had previously inveigled to Cuba with the offer of high wages only to deceive them by the most miserable conditions and wages so insufficient that by debts contracted for living the companies kept them in a state of peonage.

Six Spanish workers who took part in the great strike in the sugar mills were deported about two weeks ago. One American is scheduled for deportation back to the states, and 28 Spaniards were deported a week ago on the French lines LaFayette. The deportations take place without trial and all the legality there is to cover the dictatorship of the sugar trust is the order of the secretary of the interior.

In spite of this deportation of "foreign agitators" the strike in the sugar mills is not entirely defeated, some of the mills being closed and others badly crippled. The authorities are worried that the railroad men may go out, as the workers on the Cuba Northern line have threatened to strike.

SHOW COMMUNIST VOTES STOLEN IN CLEVELAND, OHIO

Many Ballots Cast Never Counted

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Dec. 9.—In compliance with the request for such information as we have of the standing of Communist votes in the last election, I wish to report the following:

Two sympathizers who read the DAILY WORKER voted the Workers Party ticket at the same place. Not a single vote has been registered in the returns.

In another precinct of the 20th congressional district, where Comrade Ruthenberg was candidate, ballots were given out for Comrade Brathin Workers Party candidate of the 22nd district. Needless to say, these ballots were not counted. "Too late to obtain the correct ones," was the claim.

The ruling by the secretary of state that in the elections it would be the right of the Communists to strike out one of the other party's emblems and candidates' names, and write in the name of the Workers Party and its candidates—this ruling has been disregarded by the election clerks and the votes of the Workers Party not counted.

Challengers were admitted to the polls only if they represented the two old parties. Other rumors of fraud are plentiful, but these can be vouched for.—Signed, John Brosch, secretary.

TELEGRAPHERS ON PENNSY BAN COMPANY UNION

Attempts of the railroad systems of this country, led by the Pennsylvania railroad to foist company unionism on their employees was given another jolt when the telegraphers on the Pennsy lines voted overwhelmingly to have officials of the Order of Railroad Telegraphers represent them in wage disputes before the United States Rail Labor board.

The Pennsy has been nourishing company unionism for quite some time but a tabulation of the vote showed 4,258 for trade unionism and only 318 for the company union.

Don't Want Boss Unions.

The union officials appeared before the rail labor board a few months ago to speak in behalf of the telegraphers but the company disputed their right to represent their employes, claiming the men would speak for themselves and thru their own leaders and not by "outsiders." The men have spoken and have proved that they are not willing to let the bosses pick their leaders for them thus unfortunately the labor fakers are only too willing to serve the bosses.

Similar votes are now being taken on other railroad systems, and company unionism is not expected to enjoy a long lease of life.

Ninety per cent of the engineers, firemen, hostlers, and hostlers' helpers, of Southern Pacific, El Paso and South Western and Arizona Eastern systems have voted to strike if necessary in order to enforce a settlement of their demands.

LOS ANGELES, Dec. 9.—The lives of seventy persons were believed saved today when the Mexican states liner Oaxaca, burning fiercely 40 miles south of Mazatlan, on the west coast of Mexico, was turned ashore, beached and abandoned.

The Grave Diggers of Capitalism Meet Again in Council of "League"

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, the imperialist diplomats of Western Europe are again assembling in another Council of the League of Nations, being held in the capital city of Fascism, Mussolini's Rome.

It is one more get-together of the enemies of the workers. Austen Chamberlain, foreign minister for Baldwin rule in Great Britain meets with Italy's dictator to win his support for an alliance with England, France and Belgium, with all its Anti-Soviet implications.

Against the growing power of the Union of Soviet Republics, capitalism in western Europe is trying to overcome some of its contradictions and rally some of its scattered forces.

* * * *

The unmasking of Premier Herriot's democratic pacifism, in his attacks on the French Communists, has given General Wrangel, one of allied imperialism's pet counter-revolutionists against the Workers' Republic, the audacity to raise his voice once more. He is reported as protesting against the return of Russian ships, seized by France, to the Soviet Republic.

The "baron," his hands dripping with the blood of tens of thousands of workers and peasants, men, women and children of Soviet Russia, at this late date, utters the specious plea that, "The Soviets were never legally established as the government of Russia."

* * * *

That will win applause only among the little circles of czarist emigres that exist by consent and support of foreign capitalist rule. No one else will pay serious attention to it. The "baron" adds that, "No political regime imposed by force against the will of the nation can last eternally."

Here the "baron" is wrong on two points. A rising subject class can impose its will thru force in tearing down an old social order and building a new system of society upon its ruins. Such force is successful because it has the support of the vast majority, the awakened masses.

"Baron" Wrangel was defeated in all his counter-revolutionary efforts because the Russian workers and peasants were opposed to him. They fought him. Even the few "Hessians" that Wrangel could muster turned against him. The gold, munitions and other war supplies furnished lavishly by the allies of the Versailles Peace were of no avail. The "baron" was trying to use force to keep alive the czarist system that died when the Dictatorship of the Russian Workers and Peasants came into power on Nov. 7, 1917. It was an impossible job. The "baron" professes not yet to realize it. But even he will learn.

Mussolini will also learn the lesson. And Horthy! And all the other fascist dictators that are trying to keep capitalism alive in Western Europe. Two big facts are against them. They are fighting for a dying social order and the masses of the people are against them. Their fascisti dictatorships maintain their supremacy for the time being through the most ruthless persecution. But it cannot last. The proletarian masses will gradually develop sufficient strength to win the victory.

The New York Times correspondent in Rome cables to his paper that Chamberlain and Mussolini "appeared highly pleased with the result of their discussion." They must have been smiling with their tongues in their cheeks. Or was it just the sickly smile in reminiscence of Mussolini's recent declaration that, "The Communists constitute the best organized revolutionary force in Italy."

This present meeting of the Council of the League of Nations furnishes just as black an outlook for the Paris allies, as the score of imperialist conferences that have preceded it, during the six years since the world war ended in an impossible truce. The capitalist grave diggers are still at work.

Survey of Daily News Items Gives the Lie to Coolidge Prosperity

A few items taken from one day's news demonstrates how "the country is enjoying prosperity under Coolidge." The news dispatches printed below are typical of those that can be seen in every newspaper every day:

Boston, Mass.—Advertisement appearing in Boston paper: "SLAVE—Situation wanted—Male, 24 (white), sound, intelligent, gentle, belonged to aristocratic family; lease by the year, $1,000." The advertisement was inserted by Cuvier Grover Flint, a grandson of John Fiske, historian.

LEFT WING IS GROWING ACTIVE AMONG PRINTERS

Militants Call Organ "Amalgamationist"

A sign of reviving interest in the left wing work in the printing trades, which promises to become by steady progress a force to reckon with in this industry, is appearing in the form of a publication called "The Amalgamationist."

The printing trades workers have many battles to fight if they are to make headway in the immediate struggles to improve conditions and to become conscious that these immediate struggles, be they won or lost, are only a preparation for the revolutionary struggles.

Must Fight Militantly.

The workers of the printing trades in common with those from all other industries will not advance, even their immediate interests, unless they fight militantly, clearly realizing that the basis of all disputes with employers, is the class struggle; that strikes are only separate battles in the class war, which is not settled when this or that strike is won or lost, but which must go on until a condition comes in which the working class, as a whole, attains supreme power and ends class exploitation.

In the struggle, the printing trades have a highly important part to play, and the employing class, well aware of the need for controlling the organizations of the workers, not only fight them by frontal attacks in such manner as the "open shop," but by a more dangerous method of controlling the workers' unions with weak, hesitating, or even openly traitorous officials. These officials keep the mass of the union membership conservative if possible, and when that fails, they expell the most militant and active members, as is demonstrated by George L. Berry in New York and elsewhere.

Amalgamation Primary Need.

In the printing trades, as elsewhere, the conservative officials oppose the greatest improvement in the industry that could be imagined in any one measure. That is, the uniting of all crafts in the industry into one union, with the necessary departments of course, with one set of officers and one policy which must be to forward the interests of the workers at all times.

Only by such unification can the printing trades workers become able to fight the "open shop." The best thing in the "Amalgamationist" is, therefore, a complete plan of amalgamation for the printing trade unions. This should be studied and applied by a persistent fight of rank and file workers.

New Jap Ambassador.

TOKYO, Dec. 9.— Appointment of Tsuneo Matsudaira as Japanese ambassador to the United States was officially announced here today. He is expected to leave for Washington before next Friday. MEXICO CITY, Dec. 9.— Political circles were stirred today by the charges pending against Eduardo Ruiz, minister to Costa Rico, ordered brought to trial for failure to account for 15,000 pesos of government funds.

"morning after." The European tour of Austen Chamberlain is for the purpose of building up an entente against the Soviet Republic. When King Edward made his famous journey in 1905 he organized an iron ring around capitalist Germany and succeeded in destroying a competitor, at least temporarily. Forming an iron ring around Soviet Russia will prove more difficult, because not all the supporters of Soviet Russia live in Russia.

If Calvin Coolidge follows the precedent set by him in his recent visit to the cattle in the stock yard, the White House appropriation for traveling expenses will be intact when his next term of office is ended. It may be turned over to the G. O. P. campaign fund to pay the deficit if there is any. One queer fellow from Marion, Ohio, criticized the president for traveling in an ordinary train instead of in a special one, on the ground that his election cost too much money and he should be more careful of his person. It might be remarked that Harding hailed from Marion; that he traveled in a special train and became a total loss. Perhaps "Cal" is displaying his usual caution.

Discussion of Our Party's Immediate Tasks

LOVESTONE EXPOSES THE RIGHT-WING ORIENTATION OF THE MINORITY

By EARL R. BROWDER.

COMRADE LOVESTONE has exposed another section of the right wing deviation of his group. In his article in the DAILY WORKER of Dec. 9, he says:

"No one will contend that there is TODAY, NOW, a mass demand for Communism or for amalgamation. Yet we very properly today, now, propagate and work for Communism, for the Workers' and Farmers' Soviet Republic and for amalgamation, because there is an economic basis for these slogans."

Now we know the reason for the hysterical defense of the farmer-labor slogan by the minority. They think it expresses the same basic need of the proletariat as does Communism, or amalgamation. They think the farmer-labor party is an organ of the class struggle, equal in historical validity with the Communist Party or with the economic organs of struggle of the workers. Therefore, to them it makes no difference that the immediate political conditions have changed; they did not favor the farmer-labor slogan on the grounds of immediate conditions, but, as they favor the Communist Party or the amalgamation of the trade unions, they stand for it whether it is a practical mass slogan or not. They have faith that it must become a mass slogan just as must Communism, the Soviet Republic, or amalgamation of the trade unions.

The Same Mistake as That of the German Right Wing.

This is petty bourgeois opportunism with a vengeance, more open and flagrant than any ever exhibited in the German party. The only reason why it does not promise such immediate disaster is that the American political struggle is not so far advanced. Our minority is the American expression of right wing revisionism against which the Fifth Congress sounded the alarm. We never expected that we would have the same fight in America so quickly. But here it is.

What was the essential error of the German right wing? It is stated in a paragraph by A. Maslow, leader of the German Communist Party at present in an article in Inprekorr No. 77, Nov. 5:

"The Communist party is THE party of the PROLETARIAT. The essence of Leninism is that it theoretically propagates and practically realizes the thesis: there can only be only ONE party, THE party of the revolutionary proletariat. Events in Europe have fully confirmed this doctrine. Wherever it has been disregarded (as in Germany in 1923) the proletariat has experienced a defeat."

But Comrade Lovestone does not believe this. He believes that there not only can be two class parties (the Communist and farmer-labor party) but that there must be the two, that the second is fully as historically required as the first. He believes that it is just as much a duty of Communists to raise the slogan of a farmer-labor party as it is to raise the slogan of a Workers' and Farmers' Government. His position is identical in theory with that of the German right wing which received such a castigation at the Fifth Congress. The only difference is that Comrade Lovestone has not had an opportunity for doing so much mischief.

Lovestone Says Labor Party Equally Important With Amalgamation.

Our right wing says that the farmer-labor party is equally as important as the amalgamation of the trade unions; they really think it much more important than the trade unions, as they will doubtless say openly before long. Lovestone specifically says that if the amalgamation slogan is always timely, then so, also, is the farmer-labor party slogan. Is this a Bolshevik viewpoint? It is not. It is another side of the same error pointed out above, the complete misunderstanding of the role of the Workers (Communist) Party on the one hand and a similarly complete misunderstanding of the role of the trade unions on the other.

"You are aware," said Zinoviev at the Fifth Congress, speaking on the trade union question, "that the first split between the Bolsheviki and the mensheviki occurred in 1903, that is more than 20 years ago. The Bolsheviki have acted quite differently in the trade union question. In spite of the various splits in the political organizations we have neither before, during, nor after the revolution caused a split in any trade union." "The struggle for the unity of the trade union movement is one of the characteristic features of Bolshevism. . . . solely for one reason, because we regarded the trade unions as a center around which the mass of the proletariat, the whole working class gathered . . . They are the historic form of the mass organization of the proletariat under capitalism." . . . "Lenin often said that had we not had the unions behind us in 1917, the dictatorship would not have lasted months, let alone years"

In other words, the Communists fight for unity of the trade unions (amalgamation) at any and all times because it is a historic necessity for the revolution, because the winning of the trade unions is basic revolutionary strategy, because the Communists must have them as fundamental weapons for the overthrow of capitalism and the establishment of the proletarian dictatorship.

What does it mean, therefore, when Lovestone says the slogan of the farmer-labor party is equally important with that of amalgamation? It can have but one meaning: Lovestone and our right wing are revising their conception of the role of the Workers (Communist) Party. They do not believe that "there is and can be only ONE party." They think that the farmer-labor party is just as necessary for the revolution as revolutionary trade unions and a Communist party. Or—is it possible—have they stopped thinking about the revolution?

Detroit Experience Supports C. E. C. Thesis

By EDGAR OWENS

District Organizer, Dist. No. 7.

THE party discussion should be made the means of a real Communist education for our membership. Every phase of the theses should be fully treated, every tendency explained. And when the convention speaks we should have traveled a long way on the road to being "a monolithic party, hewn of one piece."

My contribution to the discussion shall be based upon our experience with the farmer-labor party movement in Detroit. I think this experience will not differ greatly from that in other localities. As I have been able to judge from information that has come to me the experience of the party the country over has been singularly uniform.

Here in Detroit the party has carried on an energetic campaign for the farmer-labor party policy. Early in 1923 the party machinery was mobilized for the July 3 Chicago convention. The labor movement here prides itself on being "progressive," and resolutions "for a labor party" met with comparatively little opposition. Numerous unions endorsed the July 3 convention call. The Detroit Federation of Labor voted to send delegates.

After the convention of the federated farmer-labor party, Geo. Tries, D. F. of L. delegate who had been made a member of the F. F. L. P. Executive Council made his report, and we got the surprise of our lives. We were unominiously defeated.

But we were not long in learning the reasons for our defeat.

During the whole campaign for the F. L. P. we had seriously neglected to take the elementary steps that were absolutely essential to make the F. L. P. policy a successful policy. Our program states that "a real labor party cannot be formed without the trade unions . . ."

But the fact was our membership were not in the trade unions. And this was (and is) true not only in Detroit but thruout the entire country. Reports from the industrial department of our party showed that only a small fraction of the membership were in the unions, and the further fact, that only a small fraction of those in the unions really participated in trade union activity.

Here in Detroit we undertook to remedy this defect. We undertook an intensive campaign to get our membership in the unions, and the effort achieved considerable success. But we were not so successful in getting them to function actively in the trade unions.

During the fall and winter of 1923 and the spring of 1924 we waged the campaign for F. L. P. and we felt we were making progress.

Our campaign for the June 17 convention went forward. Again we went to the unions with resolutions. Again we secured the passage of these resolutions.

Last April we issued the call for the Wayne county farmer-labor party convention. The D. F. of L. considered this piece of impertinence on our part. Delegates came from the Carpenters, Painters, Molders, Machinists, Barbers, and several other unions. But most of them were members of our party. We endorsed the June 17 call and instituted an intensive campaign to gain support.

Now we were working against the bitter opposition of the trade union politicians. We fought for June 17. They fought for July 4. We advocated class struggle. They advocated class collaboration.

The result? The sentiment we had labored so diligently to develop was veered around to the collaborationist policy of the C. P. P. A.

Michigan sent 13 delegates to St. Paul. Eleven of them were members of the Workers Party.

We returned from St. Paul to continue the fight. On July 6 we had a picnic under the auspices of the Wayne county farmer-labor party. Alex Howat and Alice Loraine Daly were widely advertised as the speakers. But on July 4 the C. P. P. A. endorsed LaFollette for president, and I doubt if 200 non-party members attended our picnic. Our Wayne county farmer-labor party resolved itself into what it had really been from its inception—the Workers Party.

The farmer-labor party is distinct from a LaFollette party is dead in Detroit. The F. L. P. is not an issue with them.

And what is of greater importance, our membership is not for it. They carry out party decisions in a formal manner, but there has never been any real enthusiasm for it. And if a slogan will not move the membership, what must the effect of this slogan be with the masses?

Our first task is to Bolshevize our party. And this process of Bolshevization can best be carried out by participation in the struggle of the masses for their elementary economic needs. Making revolutionary speeches will not do it, though this may help. Issuing revolutionary proclamations will not do it, though this too may help.

Political action is something more than participation in election campaigns. And it is these more elementary forms of political action that our party must enter into. Wage cuts affect our members as the broad masses are affected. The fight against the wage cuts brings the masses into conflict with the capitalist state power. The same is true of the struggle against the open shop. The organization of the unorganized carries with it strikes and lockouts with the police and soldiery hurled against the workers. And so on down the line with all these elementary economic issues that confront the workers practically every moment of their lives.

It is in these struggles that our party must train itself for the leadership of the masses. It lacks the glow of the spotlight. It falls short of the front page. But it is here, and only here that we can gain the support without which, no matter how much we make a noise like a Bolshevik, we are nothing more than spouters of hot air.

An Unanimous Decision

A UNITED FRONT UPON THE POLICY TO

Insure The Daily Worker for 1925

AT the last full meeting of the C. E. C. of the Workers Party an important decision was made. It was decided that all party papers must proceed the discussion going on in their columns regarding the future policy of the party by a call to action, by a call for a united front upon the POLICY TO BUY A POLICY TO INSURE THE DAILY WORKER FOR 1925.

Nothing must interfere with the campaign now in progress to give the DAILY WORKER a helping hand over a bit of rough road it is at present compelled to travel. The assistance of EVERY party member must be had. The C. E. C. voted that no other campaign shall be made by the party until the DAILY WORKER is made safe.

We understand that the attention of every party member will gravitate towards the interesting party discussion now going on. Every party member should take a vital interest in this discussion. But every party member must give equal attention to helping the DAILY WORKER. The C. E. C. in fact decided that every discussion meeting held must be preceded by a talk upon and sale of INSURANCE POLICIES, issued to INSURE THE DAILY WORKER FOR 1925.

Your branch secretary has received a BIG RED BOOK OF POLICIES. These INSURANCE POLICIES are priced $10, $5 and $1. Party members should buy no less than a $5 policy. The $1 policies can be sold to sympathizers.

While the party seeths with discussion over our future party policy and tasks, there is ONE POLICY upon which there must be unanimous agreement. That is the POLICY to buy a POLICY to INSURE OUR DAILY.

WORKERS PARTY OF AMERICA

THE ISSUES IN THE PARTY DISCUSSION

By HAROLD R. JOHN

IN the discussion now going on within the party as to our party's immediate tasks, particularly in relation to the party's "farmer-labor party" policy, there is agreement on four points, altho the conclusions are reached in a slightly different way.

1. The proponents of each point of view claim that their proposed policy is the one which is consistent with the present policy of the Communist International. Both agree, rightly, that such consistency is desirable.

2. Both groups agree on the necessity of the Bolshevization of the party.

3. Both groups advocate the building of the "United Front from Below."

4. The two points of view meet on the proposition that the Workers Party is the leader of the left wing of the labor movement.

This agreement on fundamentals, while differing as to the methods necessary to pursue for their accomplishment, pending final decision of the party in Communist fashion, is quite as it should be and in keeping with Communist practice. If it were not for such differences, there would be no discussions, and the party would stagnate, which is not a Communist condition. These differences, and therefore the discussions, lead to the growth and strengthening, the Bolshevization of the Workers Party and therefore should be welcomed by all of us.

The C. E. C. majority and minority differ solely on how to "Go to the Workers," otherwise they appear to be in agreement.

The majority claims that a non-Communist mass party of workers and poorer farmers is not necessary, not conducive to the building up and strengthening of the Workers Party and increasing its prestige and ability to lead the left wing of the labor movement; that the reorganization of the party on the shop nuclei basis, the creation of shop committees and the organization of the unemployed, are the necessary methods.

The minority agrees that the latter steps are not only desirable but extremely necessary, but claims that political organization of the entire left wing, including the Workers Party, as an entity, with the non-Communist as a forerunner to a mass Communist Party and the political unity of all the workers, is also of prime importance.

The majority claims that there is no demand, at present, for a mass, class farmer-labor party, that those who did formerly stand for the formation of such a party are now satisfied that in the LaFollette progressive movement they have such a party or, at least, the makings of one.

The minority deny that the demand for a class party of workers and poorer farmers has ceased to exist outside the ranks of the present supporters of the LaFollette-progressive movement, and contend that the latter elements look forward not to the formation of a class party of labor, but to a progressive, capitalistic party which shall include, and be dominated by, labor membership. They (the minority) say that those workers who did mistakenly support the LaFollette-progressive movement in the recent election, thinking that, as a result, a class party of labor would be formed, have been disillusioned and have already deserted, or will desert, the LaFollette leadership.

The above, I think is truthful, if only partial, presentation of the claims of the maority and the contentions of the minority of the C. E. C. Which is right?

Both as a result of logic and of my personal observations I think that the minority is right. If they, and I, are wrong, I believe this discussion will serve to clarify the situation and set us right.

However much we wish it were so, the Workers Party is not the left wing but only part of it, to say nothing of the party being the working class, nor is the left wing ready to become Communist, even tho it has recognized the necessity of united, class action politically and will follow Communist leadership. The Workers Party is the leader of the left wing. We must be, well organized, better than at present, in order to lead. The left wing, outside the Workers Party, must be organized politically in order that it can be lead by anybody and the Workers Party must be included in that organization so that Communists can lead. Such leadership of the Workers Party should be open, as the majority would have it.

Furthermore, we look to the slogan, "For a farmer-labor party," meaning a mass, class party of industrial workers and working farmers, not so much as a means of organizing a farmer-labor party, but rather as a rallying cry thru which we can bring nearer to us the non-Communist left wing which has progressed only so far as to demand simply class action and not revolutionary class action. Remember: "Workers (not revolutionary workers only) of the World, Unite!"

For clarity, then action.

WHERE DO YOU STAND?

By ANTON BIMBA.

THE convention of the Workers Party is coming and there are some very vital questions before us, which must be thoroly discussed by the membership.

Here I have before me two long statements on the results of the election campaign, by the majority and the minority of the C. E. C., and two sets of theses, each 14 columns long, on the results of the election campaign. And all of them eminating from members of the C. E. C. Do you, poor rank and filer, understand them? No, of course not. They were not written for you to understand them. The authors of the documents themselves know this fact, so, I noticed they have decided to go along with their theses and explain them to you. So there you are; you got tired of working during the campaign, you got more tired reading about 35 columns of massed material on the results of the campaign and you will get still more tired listening to the explanation of these theses in a closed room filled with smoke. And I think that when you have passed thru this Turkish bath, you will know just as much as when you started.

I have read both of these statements and both sets of theses. It was quite a hard job, I tell you. I am quite sure that only a very small portion of the membership will take pains to read them thru. They will be wearied to death by their length and will drop from exhaustion just looking at them. Here is my opinion of the theses of the majority and the minority.

There are only two real questions upon which the difference of opinion arose and which is the foundation of these two sets of theses. One is the question of our attitude towards the slogan "For a class farmer-labor party" and the other the role of the Communist Party in the class struggle. All other questions that are raised in both theses are only a repitition of the same things which were said in the communications of the C. E. C. 10 or 11 months ago. Take, for instance, the questions of the industrial work, the Young Workers' League, or organizational work of the party. There is nothing new added to these questions and I do not understand why they have been inserted in the theses.

I stand for the general position of the minority of the C. E. C. and hereby offer my criticism to the theses of the majority. Of course, there are minor points in the minority theses with which one may disagree, but the main conclusions are correct.

As far as I can get anything out from 28 columns of this massed material, the general analysis of the political and economical situation of this country are alike in both sets of the theses.

The majority says:

"The Dawes' plan and the victory of the reaction in the elections . . . have raised the morale of the capitalist class in the U. S., but have not reversed any of the fundamental factors characterizing the present period of decline of world capitalism. . . . The process of disintegration continues and is bound to produce further crisis with further sharpening of the class struggle.

"The expected low point in the crisis has not been reached . . . 1925 holds the prospect of repeating the experiences of 1920-21, when six million workers were unemployed.

"The known and predicted forces at work all point to a renewed development of crisis."

Enough repetitions from this set of theses.

The minority in its theses says.

"The economic crisis of the U. S. is not only a passing shadow, but the reflex of the fundamental crisis of the world capitalism. . . . No period of prosperity that may temporarily arrest the downward tendency of American capitalism can save it from its doom. The future in the U. S. holds a period of deep-going depressions."

Hand in hand with the crisis march the sharpening of the class struggle.

The majority says:

"The overwhelming weight of economic tendencies now operating point to an intensification of the class struggle. . . ."

The minority follows with the same argument:

"The economic conditions of capitalism will develop sharper and sharper struggles. . . .

"We must look forward to the sharpening of the class conflicts growing out from these economic conditions. . . ."

So the analysis of the development of the economic crisis and the class struggle in the U. S. of both theses is the same. The Communists must form their tactics on the basis of these analysis. So, naturally, we would expect that the same tactics will be formulated by both the majority and the minority. But it is not so. Here is where the difference comes in:

The majority says:

"The basic reasons for our support of this movement (i. e. the farmer-labor party movement—A. B.) are not in existence.

"There are no longer present the basic conditions which moved our own party and the Comintern to adopt a farmer labor party policy.

"The Workers Party, therefore, cannot advantageously promulgate the slogan of a 'farmer-labor party' at the present time." . . .

And in practice the majority of the C. E. C. have already liquidated that slogan without even waiting for the convention of the Workers Party, by turning and consulting the membership of this very important question. During the election campaign this slogan was relegated to the background Our party did not raise that slogan at the convention of the American Federation of Labor. There was a golden opportunity to raise it and crystallize the sentiment in the federation for an independent political action around it. But, you see, the majority thought that we cannot do it "advantageously," so they did not do anything—just sat down tight and kept quiet.

The minority says:

"The slogan of a 'farmer-labor party' supplies the propagandistic basis for the development of political consciousness of the masses.

"In intensive struggles of the immediate future, the slogan of the farmer-labor party also becomes the basis for real campaigns.

"The slogan 'for a class farmer-labor party' finds our most effective means of agitation for political action on a class basis by workers and poorer farmers."

We see, then, that the majority in its theses rejects the slogan "for a farmer-labor party" even in theory, what they have already done in practice. The minority says that we should maintain that slogan.

I think that the position of the majority is a wrong position. It has neither logic nor common sense.

Why did we ever raise the slogan "for a class farmer-labor party"? Was there a real foundation for it or did we invent it from our own heads? Was there a real foundation for it. There was an industrial and agricultural crisis which produced a more intensive class struggle. In that struggle the capitalist class used its political power openly and brutally against the workers. That forced the masses of the workers and poorer farmers to lean towards the independent political action. This gave us a real foundation for our slogan.

The majority theses admit that the industrial and agricultural crisis is not over. On the contrary, it will grow more acute. They also admit that, as a consequence, the class struggle will become sharper. They further admit that capitalist class will use its political power against the masses in the strikes even more openly than in the past. Therefore, all factors for the development of the independent political action on the part of the masses still exist and will grow in the future even to a greater extent. But someway or other, the majority discovered that there is not and will not be a sentiment in the masses for the independent political action. Therefore, we must abandon the slogan "for a class farmer-labor party." You see, there is the same cause, but there is not the same effect. Can you see any logic in this reasoning?

If the majority thinks that there is no sentiment for the farmer-labor party today and there will not be in the near future, then it must admit openly that there was no such sentiment in the past, too. Therefore, our slogan was a mistake. But the majority finds somehow to its advantage not to repudiate the past openly, but after beating around the bushes, they can and repudiate the present and thus practically repudiate the past in a masked form. Such tactics may serve for a political advantage of some comrades, but it certainly will not serve our party, which must fight its mistakes, if there are any, state them clearly and openly and try to avoid them in the future.

Now the question arises: What happened with the sentiment and the movement for independent political action? The majority answers flatly: Mr. LaFollette came along and swallowed it up or "absorbed it." The majority goes even further and assures us that "the masses of the workers and the poor farmers follow the lead of the LaFollette movement." Well, and what must we do about it? The majority practically says: Let them go. We say: No!

We say to these masses: The LaFollette movement is not a movement in the interests of your class. You must organize yourself as a class politically into your own class party. Build your party which will fight your battles.

But the majority is not so foolish as to say to the LaFollette movement openly and directly: "We wish you good luck! Grow and prosper!" No, they propose to put up against the LaFollette movement the Workers Party. And they think that here they have discovered and proposed something entirely new, something unheard of.

We always thought that it is our Communist duty to put up always and everywhere the Workers Party against all other political parties, including labor parties, farmer-labor parties, or socialist parties, etc., but it seems that the majority did not think that way. They thought that if we raise the slogan "for a farmer-labor party" we must forget about the Workers Party. It seems that they had been working under this wrong and dangerous conception when they stood and worked for the farmer-labor party during last summer.'

No, there is nothing new in their proposal to put up the Workers Party against the LaFollette party. This is our Communist duty, which we must not forget for a single moment, if we want to remain Communists. There are certain fundamentals in the Communist movement which we must learn by heart, remember them and fight for them always. We cannot make any compromises on them, and one of these fundamentals is, that for us the Communist Party is the party of Labor. There was another: "revolution versus reformism." Third: "Soviets versus parliaments." Fourth: "Communism versus capitalism." These fundamentals are as old as the Communist movement itself. We do not forget them. We do not our theses every two or three months.

The majority, by repeating this long ago accepted duty of every comrade, only tries to avoid the real question of the controversy and wants to appear to us before the party as the only real patriots and protectors of our party. "You see, we are putting forth the Workers Party, and they are proposing something else, so they are not Communists at all." Such tactics in the Communist Party will not work.

The real controverstial question is not "the Workers Party versus the LaFollette party." It is a question, by what means and slogans can we strengthen the Workers Party, bring it into contact with the widest masses of workers, so that we would be in a position to propogate to them the Communist ideas and lead them forward towards the proletarian revolution.

The comrades of the majority themselves admit that the "masses of the workers and poor farmers are not yet ready to accept the leadership of and to give their support to the Workers Party, but they "follow the lead of the LaFollette movement." Now the question arises: How and by what slogans can we get these masses away from the leadership of the LaFollette movement and bring them nearer to the Workers Party? The saying that we propose to them the acceptance of the Workers Party and, further, that we will invite them to join the Workers Party is no answer to this question. The authors of the majority theses themselves admit that the masses "are not yet ready to accept the leadership of the Workers Party." By raising the slogan "for a farmer-labor party," which is much easier for the masses to digest at the present time, we, the Workers Party, and under the name Workers Party immediately advance to them and acquaint them with the leadership of the Workers Party.

They will immediately see that we are trying to approach them and point out to them a way. Not proposing to them any practical slogan and only hollering on the corner "come along into the folds of the Workers Party," we will not advance our real cause. We cannot and we must not accept the sectarian tactics of the socialist labor party.

Now as to the sentiment for independent political action. By what means does the majority measure this sentiment? They admit that there were about five million votes cast for LaFollette and that about one million were not accounted for him. Among this six million votes, at least several million were votes of workers and poor farmers. Why did they vote for Mr. LaFollette? Does the majority dare to deny the fact that a great many of these workers voted for Mr.

FIRST TIME IN HISTORY

For the first time in history a worker's daily has lived a year without subsidy or a call for funds. This is an accomplishment, YOUR accomplishment. Now the decision has been made to place every last one of the 25,000 members of the Workers Party, every friend of the DAILY WORKER full square in back of it, lift it right over the rough road under foot, and speed it down the highway ahead to victory.

JAPAN AROUSED OVER HAWAII-U. S. WAR MANEUVERS

Mass Meetings Demand Protest to Cal

(Special to The Daily Worker)

TOKYO, Dec. 9.—The proposed 1925 American battle fleet maneuvers in the vicinity of the Hawaiian Islands are arousing the keenest public sentiment against the United States throughout the Japanese empire, with several of the newspapers actively stirring the Tokyo government to protest to Washington against the forthcoming naval demonstration.

Several public meetings already have been held, attended by Japanese notables, at which the United States has been accused of desiring to make the Pacific Ocean "an American lake."

The newspaper Jiji, commenting on President Coolidge's message to congress, declares:

"The proposed Pacific maneuvers of the American fleet will constitute the greatest menace to the world's rest."

The Nichi adds that somebody should call President Coolidge's attention to the grave folly of stirring up international unrest at this time.

Diplomatic Lying.

However, in spite of the alarmist faction of the Japanese press, the conservative journals do not regard the purpose of the United States as imperialistic, tho they do seriously question the wisdom of the proposed Hawaiian maneuvers.

Neither the Japanese foreign office nor the navy department will comment officially on the American Pacific maneuvers. Inflammatory speeches on the subject unofficially made by Japanese naval officers have been suppressed, the navy department disclaiming all responsibility for these utterances. Likewise, statements attributed to Admiral Okado to the effect that Japan was unconcerned at the Hawaiian naval demonstration have elicited word from the navy department that these statements were also unauthorized, Okado having had no permission to speak for the government.

LaFollette because they were told and they themselves believed that they are voting for independent political action. If this is not an indication of the sentiment for independent political action on the part of the workers, then what is it. Of course, these masses were fooled by socialists and labor bureaucrats, but their sentiment is there nevertheless.

If there are conditions, that is the industrial crisis and acute class struggle which create the sentiment for independent political action, and if there is such sentiment among many million of workers and poor farmers (as the votes for Mr. LaFollette showed) and if we raise the slogan only when there is a sentiment for it, then, where is the ground for the majority proposition to get rid of our slogan "for a class farmer-labor party"?

Further, let us assume that the masses do follow and will follow the leadership of petty bourgeoisie from the LaFollette camp; let us further assume that a definite political third party will be organized very soon composed of those two elements—that is, of petty bourgeoisie on the one hand and the workers and poor farmers on the other, will we not work as hard as we can in order to split the labor wing from the leadership of the petty bourgeoisie? Will not the slogan "for a class farmer-labor party" be the most effective means to help us accomplish that mission?

What slogan does the majority propose to raise before and at the January convention of the LaFollette movement? The socialists, in the amalgamated people, the representatives of various state farmer-labor parties will speak (and mostly only speak) for a labor party. How and by what means will you most effectively unmask them and prove to the masses that they are not sincere, that they are only talking and would never fight for a class labor party? With our slogan "for a class farmer-labor party" we will compel them to open their cards and appear before the masses as traitors and phrase mongers.

Now we come to the slogan: "Fight against leading the masses back to the old parties." Even the majority supports this slogan and have raised it in their statement on the results of elections. It is a correct slogan.

But what do you propose to these masses in place of the old parties? Where is your logic to call upon them not to go back into the old parties, not to follow Mr. Gompers who leads them there and at the same time not to tell them, in practical language, where they should go?

By not telling them where to go you are practically urging them and asking them to remain with the LaFollette movement and follow the leadership of the petty bourgeoisie. Further, you are helping the LaFollette movement and working for its success. So what becomes of your cry that we must fight the LaFollette movement? You see, you are not sincere when you say you are going to fight the LaFollette party. You are deliberately and conscientiously are delivering the masses to this "third party."

The majority says that the advice of the Comintern to break with the policy of the "third party alliance" was a correct one and they were and are very much satisfied with it. I say you are not, or at least, you were not satisfied with this advice. Comrade Foster stood and fought for that alliance. He said that we should not oppose the nomination of Mr. LaFollette. He even went so far as to express himself that we ourselves may advance his nomination. He said that, it is of prime importance to break the small bourgeoisie from the old parties. The LaFollette movement will also disrupt Mr. Gompers' non-partisan policy in the American Federation of Labor. And that is what we are after. Once I put the following question to Comrade Cannon: "What do you think will happen, if the C. I. rejects our 'third party alliance'?" He answered: "It would be a very great blow for the Workers Party and the farmer-labor party movement would be entirely disrupted for many years to come."

And now, because the C. I. did not approve this "third party alliance," the authors of the majority theses are ready to get rid of the slogan "for a class farmer-labor party" altogether.

Do the majority theses openly reject the united front tactics? Of course, not. These authors are not so childish to do so. On the contrary, they declare that the "united front policy remains the central tactical means for the class struggle and for building of the Workers Party into a mass Communist Party." But the thing that we are supposed to do now is "to start a movement from below," "form a united front from below, of the workers and poor farmers with the Workers Party." But did anyone ever propose a united front from the top? Do you call the Chicago convention (July, 1923) a united front from the top, or the St. Paul convention of last summer? Do you call our participation in the farmer-labor parties of Minnesota, Montana, Washington, West Virginia, Buffalo, etc., a united front from the top? Would it have been a united front from the top if our party would have proposed to and fought for a farmer-labor party in the convention of the American Federation of Labor? Would that be a united front from the top if we would propose the slogan "for a class farmer-labor party" to the January convention of the C. P. P. A.

If no one is proposing a united front from the top, so why all that talk about the united front from below?

The united front from the bottom must finally come out to the top, or your united front policy is nothing else but a farce. In the shops and factories the Communists are always and continually in the "united front" with the workers, so much so that we do not call it a united front at all. When we talk about the united front we have in mind a unity of action of different organized groups of workers on certain definite issues. The majority goes even further, entirely forgetting that at the beginning of its theses they had denied that there is left any sentiment for a farmer-labor party, and admit that there might be such a sentiment. Here is what they say:

"As the class struggle develops and our campaign against LaFollette progresses there will be found in a number of localities organized labor bodies ready to break their alliance with the petty bourgeoisie and to enter election campaigns as labor organizations."

What does the majority propose to do in such cases? Will we reject the united front with these bodies as being from the top. Of course, not. First we will try to win their support for the Workers Party. If we are not successful in this attempt, then we will propose united fronts for election purposes." In what form these "united fronts" occur, the majority does not know. It may be "under the auspices of" labor congresses, councils of action, labor parties, etc."

So, after all, we will have a united front in elections, and not one, but many of them! They will be scattered in different localities and under various auspices. But we must not and will not strive to unite these several united fronts into one united front; we cannot allow them to develop on the national scale, because that would require a national "auspices" and a national slogan. The majority rejects the slogan "for a class farmer-labor party," so in place of one united front we will have many of them masquerading ourselves under various names. We are not going to attack the LaFollette movement on the national scale, but we will begin to undermine it piece by piece in different localities! Such is the policy of the united front as is proposed by the majority theses and which the membership is asked to accept.

I come to the point of the majority theses on the industrial work. What is the primary object of our industrial work? The majority does not point out. The minority theses say:

"The mobilization of the party for industrial work and its active participation in industrial struggles must have as its primary object the development and political activity of the working class."

And again:

"The raising of political slogans in connection with all industrial struggles thus directing these struggles towards the political objective and developing political action by the workers."

Why that very important omission in the majority theses? Do you think it slipped out unnoticed? Far from that. Those of us who have followed the leadership of our party for the last year must have noticed the systematic tendency in our industrial work to get away from the political issues as much as possible, or at least to neglect as much as possible this political objective. Today we are getting rid of the slogan "for a class farmer-labor party" and say nothing about the political phase of our industrial work. You see, we cannot go too far at a time. Tomorrow we will advance the idea that industrial work is sufficient in itself, that it exists for its own sake and that political issues are of secondary importance, and finally the political movement itself is of no value to the emancipation of the working class. Do you think for a moment that this omission has no background, has no tendency, or an idea or aim behind it? Just let us abandon the constant and systematic fight against the syndicalist tendencies in our party and you will see what will become of our party in a year or two.

The last point in the majority theses on which I want to offer my criticism is on the question of opportunism in our party. First they speak about the "Second-and-Half International tendencies" as represented by Comrade Lore's group. I do not like to question any one's sincerity in the Communist Party, but the majority certainly did not live up in the past, according to its present declaration. Here are some well known facts: During the last ten or eleven months, they did not raise a finger against the Lore group in District No. 2 where this group is very influential. On the contrary, Comrades Foster and Cannon fought tooth and nail everyone and everybody who opposed the Lore group. They conscientiously and openly paced the leadership of District No. 2, the largest and most important district of our party, in the hands of that group and now when the same comrades come along and declare that the tendency of the Lore group is dangerous to our movement and that we must fight it, how can anyone take this declaration seriously?

Then the majority finds opportunism in another camp, in the "tendency to make the farmer-labor party an end in itself and to relegate the Workers Party to the background." And again: "This farmer-laborism opportunistic tendency within the Workers Party means death and destruction to the Communist movement in America."

If there is such a tendency within our party we must crush it right now. But where is it? Who are the representatives of this tendency? Before I read the theses of the majority I thought this tendency is represented by this very group. I know, for instance, that to the very last date of the form the St. Paul convention, comrades Foster and Cannon were very enthusiastic, if not the most enthusiastic, exponents of the "third party" alliance, but now since they have decided to get rid of the farmer-labor party slogan, they discovered that someone else is more opportunistic and more dangerous to the party than they themselves.

And who are they? Of course, those who stand for the continuance of that slogan; that is, the authors of the minority theses. But I absolutely fail to find anything in the minority theses that would "relegate the Workers Party to the background" or that would say or claim that "the farmer-labor party is an end in itself." On the contrary, I find the following emphatic declaration:

"The party must never hide its identity in these united front maneuvers. It must stand out openly and boldly as a leader and initiating and conducting the united front struggle.

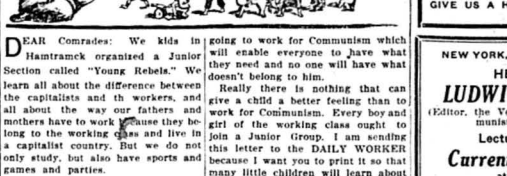
"The united front tactics does not mean that the party shall not carry on campaigns in its own name and under its own leadership. It means precisely the reverse. . . Our immediate campaign must be one of agitation. Whether the left-class party elements will be eventually actually organized into a farmer-labor party fighting class battles of workers and farmers is not the essential question at present. The inevitability of the formation of the farmer-labor party is not the basis of our campaign. We use this slogan as a means of agitation and to establish contact with workers who are moving towards independent political action, to win them for the Workers Party and to build our party.

Can anyone honestly say that this shows a tendency to relegate the Workers Party in the background? Or is there anything in the minority theses that can be interpreted to mean that there is a tendency to make the farmer-labor party an end in itself?

It seems that the majority is trying to blame some one else for its own sins. The minority correctly points out that it was the Foster-Cannon group that "considered the formation of a farmer-labor party as a goal in itself and were ready to sacrifice the bringing under the leadership and the influence of the Workers Party of a left wing farmer-labor party group."

The membership of the Workers Party should reject the theses of the majority and accept the theses of the minority.

Your Policy must Be — Buy a Policy —



DEAR Comrades: We kids in Hamtramck organized a Junior Section called "Young Rebels." We learn all about the difference between the capitalists and th workers, and all about the way our fathers and mothers have to work because they belong to the working class and live in a capitalist country. But we do not only study, but also have sports and games and parties.

Before we kids became "young rebels" we thought there was nothing nicer than being rich and having lots of clothes and we wished we could be rich too, but now we feel different about such things. We know how people become so rich that they have more than other people and we are going to work for Communism which will enable everyone to have what they need and no one will have what doesn't belong to him.

Really there is nothing that can give a child a better feeling than to work for Comimunism. Every boy and girl of the working class ought to join a Junior Group. I am sending you a letter in which I WANT WORKER because I want you to print it so that many little children will learn about our club.

We are very busy just now arranging an entertainment in which all of us (there are 25 in our group) are going to take part and we have committee meetings and verything to make it a big success.—Z. H. Makowski, Hamtramck, Mich.

LITHUANIAN PARTY PUBLICATIONS GIVE AID IN "DAILY" DRIVE

The Lithuanian Communist newspapers, "Vilnis" and "Laisve," are running special stories in each issue, giving much space to explaining the drive to insure the DAILY WORKER for 1925, according to Comrade Mizara, secretary of the Lithuanian Federation. The Lithuanian Federation has been given a quota of $2,283 as its share in raising the $50,000 fund to build the DAILY WORKER for next year.

"Our quota has been set on the basis of 761 members," said Comrade Mizara. "I am sure we can go over this figure, by soliciting help from subscribers to our papers, as well as party members themselves. We have appealed to all our branches to end money coming from insurance policy sales direct to the DAILY WORKER office."

UNEMPLOYMENT VERY SEVERE IN CLEVELAND, OHIO

Many Jobless Workers Attempt Suicide

By GEORGE PAPCUN.

CLEVELAND, Dec. 9.—Despite the optimistic reports of the chamber of commerce, seconded by local labor fakers, unemployment in this city is increasing daily. Many workers have already reached the stage of starvation.

Local labor leaders are attempting to dissipate the discontent of the unemployed with promises of jobs—in the spring. This will hardly satisfy the 33,645 workers who applied at the city employment office for work during October and November and who now presumably remain unemployed.

Colored Workers Hit.

These figures do not include the many workers who have ceased making what they found useless calls upon the employment office. The colored workers are the hardest hit. They are compelled to walk around the employment office for days at a time and when a job does come in to hear "white workers wanted on this job." The consequence is that there is much bitterness among them and a general discontent with both the industrial and social conditions which militate against them.

Suicide Evidence.

Reports such as the following now make their regular appearance in nearly every issue of local capitalist sheets:

"Joseph Novotny, 39, of 3372 E. 66th, slashed his throat in an effort to commit suicide. He was despondent as a result of inability to find employment. Elsie Sindelar also attempted to take her life for the same reason. John Mencin committed suicide by hanging himself in a garage in the rear of his home. Police assert he was despondent because unemployed."

Shut down factories, and factories displaying "No Help Wanted" signs are the reasons for these suicides and for the many more that will probably be committed in this and every other industrial city as the winter weather becomes more severe.

St. Paul Aids Novy Mir.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Dec. 9.—The District Committee of the Russian Section of the Workers Party District No. 9, (St. Paul) will give it first entertainment of the winter in the form of a grand masquerade ball to be held on Sunday evening, Jan. 10, at Victoria Hall on Thomas and Arundel Sts.

This affair is being offered for the benefit of the Russian daily, Novy Mir. It is the first time that an entertainment of any kind has been run by the District Committee for this purpose.

They ask that all party members reserve this date and to arrange other doings that will conflict with this one. A good time is promised, with good music and prizes for best costumes. All readers of the DAILY WORKER and the public are invited.

RECOUNT GIVES EMIL YOUNGDAHL 59 MORE VOTES

Gains in 10 Precincts; Opponent Loses in 11

By C. A. HATHAWAY.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Dec. 9.—With one-half of the ballots recounted Comrade Emil S. Youngdahl, candidate for the 35th Minnesota legislative district, has made a net gain of 59 votes over his opponent E. S. Swenson.

With glaring inaccuracies occuring in many precincts there is a strong possibility of discovering many more.

Youngdahl has gained votes in ten precincts and lost votes in seven, while Swenson has gained but four votes in four precincts and lost votes in eleven precincts.

The recount shows great ignorance in voting by a great mass of the people. This is indicated especially in the labor districts. Labor candidates fail to be elected because a great many workers and especially their wives fail to vote or when they do vote, neglect to vote the whole labor ticket. But it is equally true that many workers are becoming mistrustful of many candidates carrying the labor endorsement. The betrayal of the working class by many of its former leaders has created suspicion and lack of confidence. Despite the calumnies of the capitalist press and the fake labor leaders, the rank and file of the workers are turning to the Workers Party for guidance.

Rescue Sacco-Vanzetti!

STIRRING APPEAL IS ISSUED BY WORLD COMMUNIST ORGANIZATIONS IN FIGHT FOR SENTENCED WORKERS

The DAILY WORKER gives in the following manifesto, signed by the Communist International, the Red International of Labor Unions and the Communist Youth International, an appeal which should stir the labor movement of America from one end of the country to the other.

The victimization of workingmen by venal capitalist courts has become so institutionalized in America that accepting the death sentence against their fellow workers Sacco and Vanzetti, that it is imperative for every class conscious worker to take up the cry "Sacco and Vanzetti shall not die!"

To the workers of all countries!
To all trade union organizations!
Comrades!

For over three years Sacco and Vanzetti have been pining in the prisons of the American bourgeoisie.

The class justice of the American "democracy" was never at a loss when it was a question of excesses and incitements to assassination, in order, by means of lying accusations, to deliver revolutionary workers into prison.

There was hardly any affair in which the whole baseness and meanness of American justice showed itself with such naked brutality as in the well-known trial of the two Italian workers Sacco and Vanzetti.

Sacco and Vanzetti are class conscious workers who have fought with all their energy for the revolutionizing of the American workers. Sacco and Vanzetti possess a leading influence among the revolutionary working class.

What is the "crime" of these two comrades?

Sacco and Vanzetti were in possession of exceedingly compromising information on the shameful acts of the secret department of the American police service. This band of spies and police agents had, during his examination, tortured the Italian worker Salcedo to death.

When the police learned that Sacco and Vanzetti were in a position to produce proof of this shameful crime they commenced a persistent persecution of these two revolutionaries.

By means of agents, prostitutes and bullies, they framed up a trial for robbery and murder of two cashiers and with the help of perjurious witnesses dragged Sacco and Vanzetti into the trial. Thereupon all bribable elements were set into motion: the judges, the jury, the witness, the press, and "public," as a result of which the judges conducted the proceedings with unlawful and forbidden methods.

Sacco and Vanzetti were declared guilty of the robbery and murder which they had never committed, and were condemned to death.

This was in May, 1921.

But the American bourgeoisie shouted their triumph too soon. The demonstration of protest of the workers of the United States, supported by the revolutionary and class conscious workers of all countries, evoked such a general storm of indignation that the American government held it wiser to suspend the carrying out of the sentence.

Three years have passed since then. Sacco and Vanzetti, immediately after the pronouncement of the sentence, appealed to the higher court Th court dragged out this appeal for three years. It was hoped to render submissive the two revolutionaries in the prison of the state of Massachusetts, which are worthy of Nicolas the Bloody.

Workers, Comrades!

The reaction in America is becoming continually more insolent. Black America, the America of the Ku Klux Klan, the America of the blood-suckers of Wall Stret, the America of the executioners of Chicago, the America of the torturers of Sacco and Vanzetti, this America is the stronghold of international fascism. The "era of democracy" is to be followed by the "era of fascism."

The appeal of comrades Sacco and Vanzetti was rejected by the court. The death sentence is to be carried out. Sacco and Vanzetti are to be brot to the electric chair.

Revolutionary workers! Summon all comrades to the fight against the bloodhounds of Wall Street! Against the gang of hangmen of Washington! Down with American class justice!

The murder of Sacco and Vanzetti must be prevented. We must wrest these, our revolutionary brothers from the claws of the American bourgeoisie!

Organize mass demonstrations! plaster this appeal upon every street corner! Demand the liberation of Sacco and Vanzetti!

Down with black America! Down with Wall Street!

Down with the white terror of the bourgeoisie!

Long live the revolutionary fight of the workers of all countries!

Show Forbes Got $45,000 Graft on One Hospital Site

Government attorneys repeated charges in the trial of Charles Forbes that the former head of the United States veterans' bureau, made, with his conspirators, $45,000 personal profit ant of the Livermore, Calif. government hospital site alone.

Garrard Winston, under secretary of the treasury, when called as a defense witness, identified a letter which he said was written by Secretary of the Treasury Mellon. The letter, dated Dec., 1921, inquired as to the amount of money available for the purchase of sites for veterans' hospitals, Winston admitted under cross examination that the letter was not the original.

U. M. W. A. LABOR FAKERS ARRIVE IN DISTRICT ONE

Only Concerned with Breaking Strike

By THOMAS MYERSCOUGH.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSTON, Pa., Dec. 9.—Immediately on its arrival in this section yesterday, the commission of international board members, appointed and sent here by International President John L. Lewis, proceeded to the meeting of the Lehigh Valley general grievance committee, and with the usual line of bunk prevented action by that body, which would bring another large number of miners on strike.

They did not, however, prevent an unlimited amount of criticism from being heaped on those who are really responsible for the appalling situation prevalent at practically every mine in this district. Nor did they prevent a motion to demand a special convention, at which all the conditions prevailing in the district will be aired, and the responsibility for same be placed.

Special Convention Wanted

Today meetings of the Pennsylvania, Hudson and Glen Alden (D. L. & W.) general grievance bodies will meet and the commission expects to visit all of them for the purpose of checking the spread of the strike. It is, however, believed that a special convention will have to be called, as the demand for same is so great.

Neal J. Ferry, chairman of the commission, in a straddle statement to the local press, admits that there may be something connected with the grievances hereabouts, to make the strike justifiable, but quickly adds, that his belief is, that radicals bent upon the formation of a union within the U. M. W. of A. are in some way responsible, as an agent of this group has been known to them as being quite active for several months.

It seems to be of no concern to any of the officials of the union hereabouts that the operators have repeatedly violated the agreement. All they want to see is the end of what they call an outlaw strike with victory for the operators.

Knit Goods Workers Join Twice.

NEW YORK.—The United Garment Workers Local 55, International Ladies' Garment Workers union, is in the field with a charter from the international. It is also affiliated with the United Textile Workers union. The local's office is at 7 E. 15th St. New York. It succeeds the Amalgamated Knit Goods Workers union. Its dual affiliation to the ladies' garment and textile union comes from the fact that the knit goods are made from yarn but are made directly into finished garments.

WAR AND REVOLUTION

Editor's Note.—Every day until publication has been completed, the DAILY WORKER will publish a new chapter from the book, "Lenin, The Great Strategist of the Class War," by A. Losovsky, secretary of the Red International of Labor Unions. The twentieth chapter is entitled, "War and Revolution."

FROM the very beginning Lenin had a clear conception of the international nature of the class struggle. Long before the war he already felt himself a stranger at the international socialist parades where the phrase reigned supreme and where no action was to be seen. As a result of his appearance at international congresses (Stuttgart, Copenhagen) there was formed a small and loosely allied left wing. This "Russian sectarian" was treated condescendingly by the leaders of European reformism. Some of them looked upon Lenin's activities as a sort of sectarian madness, others considered it a result of the mystical traits of his Slavic character. Very few realized the significance of this coming leader of the international working class movement. Only a few radical Germans, Polish social-democrats, and several comrades of other countries, stood in close political relations towards Bolshevism. Clara Zetkin relates the following story: At the congress in Stuttgart, held in 1907, Rosa Luxemburg, while pointing out to her the place occupied by Lenin, said: "See that man? Just watch the characteristics of his head. He looks as if he were ready to crush the whole world, that he would rather break his head than surrender."

Lenin knew the international working class movement well for many years. But in the international labor movement began to know Lenin only after the October revolution. And here we approach one of the most interesting questions connected with the theory and practice of the labor movement. How many people are familiar with the giant of scientific socialism whose name was Marx? A few hundreds of thousands. On the other hand, how many have heard of Lenin? Hundreds of millions. How is this to be explained? Marx forged the weapon of criticism for the struggle against the capitalist system, while Lenin employed this criticism as a weapon to strike the enemy over the head. The oppressed millions have gotten a very clear conception of the significance of what Lenin was doing, while the materialistic conception of history, the theory of the socialization of production, could be understood by a limited number of people. But the expropriation of land, factories, and banks, the abolition of exploitation, the annulment of debts—such propaganda by action appealed to and was understood by the widest sections of the working class.

One of the French bourgeois papers wrote after Lenin's death: "His thoughts were grey and theoretically monotonous." For the bourgeois world the ideas of Lenin were really grey. But how did the international working class movement respond to his ideas? Millions of people understood his thoughts because they were simple and within the grasp of the masses. They were in harmony with the class instincts of these masses, if not always with their conscious understanding. But the true greatness of Lenin's "grey ideas" could be seen only after these ideas had been transformed into "red actions."

When at the end of 1914 Lenin spoke of the necessity of putting up the civil war against the imperialist war, not even the left wing could follow the trend of his thoughts. He therefore, organized at Zimmerwald a left wing which assumed definite form only at Kienthal. But even after the conference at Kienthal one of its participants, the French delegate Brison, spoke of Lenin as of a queer sort of fellow who had been making publicly very childish propositions.

From the very beginning Lenin had a very clear idea as to what results the imperialist war would bring to humanity, and that the capitalist world would under no circumstances be able to avoid civil war. This explains his radical slogans. But the international labor movement had been developing very slowly. It had to have a few more years of war before the masses would come back to their senses. And this had been Lenin's task, to awaken the masses to revolutionary action altho he was very little known to the wide proletarian masses.

After the February revolution the patriotic henchmen of all countries started a campaign of vilification against Lenin as an agent of the German general staff. This story found wide circulation also among social-democratic circles. Only after the October revolution did the masses come to learn the part played by Lenin at Zimmerwald and Kienthal where he lemanded that the working class be aroused against the imperialist war. Only after he assumed the leadership of the greatest revolution in the history of the world did the masses come to know who Lenin really was. And since then the international labor movement has been divided into two groups as far as Lenin was concerned, enthusiastic friends and deadly enemies.

Every day of the existence of Soviet Russia, every attack against Russia by its enemies, have contributed towards the increase of Lenin's popularity among the masses, thereby raising the importance of those organizations (the Communist International and the Red International of Labor Unions) whose fate was bound up with that of Soviet Russia.

Lenin's death deeply impressed the working masses of the entire world. Most of the leaders of the international revolutionary movement have realized that Lenin has been the trailblazer for the Communist Parties of every country in the world. At present the theoretical and practical features of Bolshevism which were created by Lenin have become factors of world importance. Since Bolshevism has thrown off the chains of czarist rule, it has become the object of universal attention and of the hatred of the imperialist bourgeoisie the world over. Bolshevism at present stands imperialism and reaction as a real power. In the constant development of our movement, in the constant growth of the Communist ideas and Communist Parties, in the extended influence of the Communist International and the Red International of Labor Unions, in the internationalization of our methods of struggle and in the elasticity of our revolutionary tactics, in the growing international unity between the various sections of the revolutionary proletariat— in all this we can see the firm hand and the great genius of Lenin. He stands out in the history of the international labor movement as one of its foremost and greatest leaders.

THOUSANDS MAY DIE IN IRISH FAMINE CRISIS

Connemara Farmers Are Living on Seaweed

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DUBLIN, Dec. 9.—The probability that thousands may die of starvation in Ireland as a result of the crop failure and the industrial panic was voiced today by many prominent leaders in Irish public life. Much criticism is directed at the Free State government, which so far has ignored the cries for help from the panic stricken people in the famine area and in the cities where the industrial proletariat are in great distress.

Peasants in Dire Straits.

The people on the west coast of Ireland usually live in a state of chronic poverty. The food staple is the potato, which with fish, bread and tea is the main article of diet. The failure of the potato crop leaves the peasants in dire straits.

Instead of solving the problem in a realistic way, the government suggested that the inhabitants in the famine areas be removed to richer communities. This plan did not work however as the people do not want to leave their own homesteads.

The peasants in Connemara are now living on seaweed according to reports reaching the capital. Local committees and charitable bodies have completely broken down under the strain of handling the situation.

Twenty Per Cent Unemployed.

Minister of Industry McGilligan, admits that 20 per cent of the workers are idle. Former service men are bitter in their criticism of the governor. Those who aided the Free State lackeys of the British government in crushing the republicans are now begging on the streets and starving in garrets. "We saved the Free State from the irregulars" declared one of them" and now the Free State should save us from distress."

But the ex-service men of Ireland will learn that capitalist governments do not make a virtue of gratitude. When they are thru with their tools they leave them on the scrap heap. "Nearly 40,000 former soldiers are workless. I know hundreds of cases in Dublin where for three days at a time wives and children have not tasted food." This statement was made by an ex-service men's leader.

Their first conversation betrayed the fact that she was not fastidious

AT a distance she had appeared unusually neat, immaculate. But upon closer inspection meeting he discovered that her teeth were not clean. And he soon lost interest.

So many people overlook this one matter of fastidiousness. And do so in spite of the fact that in conversation the teeth are the one most noticeable thing about you.

Notice today how you, yourself, watch another person's teeth when he or she is talking. If the teeth are not well kept they at once become a liability.

Listerine Tooth Paste cleans teeth a new way. At last we discovered a safe, effective, yet powerful polishing ingredient that really cleans without scratching the enamel - a difficult problem finally solved.

You will notice the improvement even in the first few days. And you know it is cleaning safely.

British Imperialism Plays Trumps

Austen Chamberlain, new minister of foreign affairs in the tory cabinet of Britain, has arrived at Rome to attend the thirty-second session of the league of nations council. He heralds a new and aggressively imperialist control over the league of nations, a control which corresponds to the end of the period of "democratic pacifism" and the rise of militant imperialism under the Dawes plan.

Mr. Chamberlain has in advance of his arrival at Rome succeeded in the major part of the business to be transacted there. By an artful bit of double dealing he obtained while stopping off in Paris, the hearty co-operation of Premier Herriot in his own retirement on an anti-Bolshevik issue, and at the same time he obtained the—at least temporary—approval of France for a "gentleman's agreement" whereby no question of England's bloody repression of Egypt should come before the league of nations. He even got an agreement that France would let Britain have a "free hand" in Africa in exchange for a like attitude for the French colonies on that indeed "dark continent."

This "free hand" is meant to make England independent of American cotton, a fact which may interest our own cotton trust to some degree, but which we hope will interest more the wage workers in cotton production who must now compete with labor of Africa which will be, if it is not already, completely enslaved.

Mr. Chamberlain is now in Rome and he is going to reverse the old maxim, and make the Romans do as he does. He is going to ask Mussolini to come in on the "gentleman's agreement" to repress in one imperialist united front the black populations of Africa.

The situation is that the great imperialist nations of Europe, in artful calculation of their lease on life before the capitalist decline takes them into oblivion, are striving to add to the stabilization of the Dawes plan, which is made at the cost of the lives of the European masses, an "Austen Chamberlain plan" for more intensive exploitation of the colonial peoples. But this has its penalties, as the concurrent rise of militant revolutionary symptoms show in the colonial countries from the Near East to the Far East.

"Only Eleven Murders—"

According to the figures submitted to a meeting of the Landis award committee held yesterday, this body spent $2,053,654 in three years breaking strikes—"enforcing the Landis award," is the euphonious term used to describe the reign of terror against the unions launched by this committee of open shoppers.

The greater portion of this huge sum was spent in 1922—the year of the open shop drive.

That the activities of the committee had as their chief objective the disruption and smashing of unions and that enforcing the award proper was a small part of their task, is more than hinted at by the report given Monday which shows that but one-sixth of the building contracts let in the last twelve months went to Landis award concerns.

"Since its existence only eleven deaths or murders are traceable to the Landis award," says the report of the committee and this smug reference to the atrocities of its army of thugs and the covering of the clues to most of their crimes against unions and union men is quite in line with the hypocrisy of the chamber of commerce crowd that raised $50,000 dollars to hang the miners of Herrin who defended themselves against a private army of gunmen recruited from the Landis award mercenaries here in Chicago.

$2,053,654 will buy a lot of thugs, guns, blackjacks, judges and police protection. There is considerable resistance left in the American labor movement when, divided into feeble crafts as it is, rent and torn by jurisdictional disputes, sold out by its officials, it can fight a powerful and well-financed group of bosses backed by the state, as well as it has here in Chicago.

With the amalgamation of the unions and a recognition of the class struggle the building trades could wage a struggle that would make the bosses thing twice before starting another war on labor.

When, however, such incidents as the signing of a Landis award agreement by Hutcheson, president of the Carpenters' Union, without the consent of the membership, is followed by an attempt to expell the most militant members of the union because of their exposure of his treachery, it is no wonder that the bosses feel encouraged and confident of their ability to break a union that tolerates as its head a man who could easily qualify as a member of the Landis award committee.

If the Mexican workers read the American capitalist press more, their appreciation of President Calles would be a bit shaken by the chorus of approval.

Streetcarmen in Action

The impartial nature of wage arbitration boards is an illusion that is being rapidly shattered even here in the United States where the "identity of interest between employer and employe" theory has been foisted upon the workers to an extent unknown anywhere else.

The members of the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes, working for the Illinois Power and Light company, are the latest group of workers to repudiate the "arbitration" method of settling wage questions. They were handed a reduction several months ago by one of these "impartial" boards, but today the workers on the McKinley traction lines are on strike and a general strike in sympathy with them is in preparation in Peoria, Galesburg, Bloomington, Decatur, Champaign and Danville.

The streetcarmen have demanded an increase of 10 per cent as against the reduction recommended by the arbitration board.

This strike has all the appearances of having resulted from the mass dissatisfaction among the street railway workers and the officials of the union have had to move. The workers are holding closed meetings and the proposal for a general strike shows that they are insisting on immediate action.

It is one of the anomalies of American life that a strike of streetcarmen while it makes for great inconvenience of the travelling public, almost invariably evokes mass sympathy for the strikers. This is a great advantage enjoyed by the streetcarmen's union and one that in this instance they have not discounted by allowing the traction capitalists months in which to get ready to break the strike.

The DAILY WORKER hopes that the streetcarmen give the traction company a sound trouncing.

A Few Encouraging Signs

Company unions are losing their popularity with the workers in spite of all efforts of the corporations to perpetuate these tools of capitalist reaction.

Following the defeat of the shop crafts in 1922 there was a movement of the workers away from the unions, inspired largely by the weak and spineless policy of union officialdom expressed in separate settlements with railway companies and which ends logically in the acceptance of class collaboration illustrated by the B. and O. plan. But the Trade Union Educational League, the only organized left wing movement in the United States, has carried on an energetic campaign against the desertion of the unions and this campaign now shows real results. There is a revival of militancy among both organized and unorganized workers, especially in the transportation industry. Votes taken under the auspices of that government agency of the railways—the railway labor board—now invariably show big majorities against company unions.

In addition to this the news of a big majority for a strike in the referendum among the engineers and firemen on the Southern Pacific lines is further evidence that even among the highly paid aristocracy of labor there is much discontent.

We look for some big accomplishments for the Trade Union Educational League during the coming year. There is no other leadership for the left wing movement that is developing and the program of the Red International of Labor Unions will attract ever larger masses as the workers are forced to fight the Coolidge-Morgan-Dawes dictatorship, whose first blows will be at the living standards of the workers.

Farmers Who Fight

In the correspondence of Comrade J. W. Johnstone from Mexico, he tells of the intensity of feeling among the peasants who, from all over Mexico, but especially from the state of Vera Cruz, gathered at Jalapa for their second peasant congress.

It is particularly to be noted that in the great upsurging of the Mexican people, the peasants are organizing under the direct leadership of the Communist Party of Mexico.

The Jalapa congress denounced the fake labor party of Calles and rallied enthusiastically around the slogan of the Communists for a workers' and farmers' government, and endorsed the Communist Party of Mexico, choosing its leaders and their leaders. These are farmers who really fight.

The failure of the French police to find a single Russian among the three hundred Communists arrested yesterday must be a severe disappointment to the French capitalist press.

The stereotyped formula for the explanation of revolutionary movements is "foreign agitators" and it is consequently embarrassing to have to admit that the native working class is capable, without inspiration from abroad, of resenting and fighting the oppressions of capitalism which, in France particularly, lives principally on the doles granted by billionaire foreign agitators like J. P. Morgan.

Bolshevism and atheism cannot be blamed for the famine in Ireland. The opposite might be much nearer the truth. As in 1847 there is enough food in Ireland today to feed ten times the population, but under capitalism food, like all other commodities, is produced for profit and not for consumption.

The Russian method may not be the most pleasant in the world for the czar, but it has proved less painful for the Russian workers and peasants than that followed by the German social-democrats.

WORKERS SCHOOL STARTS OLGIN'S CLASS TUESDAY

"The Russian Revolution" Given in Lectures

NEW YORK CITY, Dec. 9.—Moissaye J. Olgin, noted Communist lecturer and writer, will give a course of lectures on the Russian Revolution at the Workers' School of New York beginning Tuesday, Dec. 16.

The course will consist of ten lectures dealing with the problems of the Russian peasantry, the controversies within the Russian Communist Party, the cultural aspects of the Russian Revolution, the theatre in Soviet Russia, modern Russian literature, etc.

Comrade Olgin, who needs no introduction to New York militants, is especially well-qualified to give such a course. While a delegate from the Workers Party to the Fifth Congress of the Communist International, he spent several months in Russia studying the problems and constructive achievements of the Workers Republic. His lectures will treat of vital aspects of the revolution which it is essential to know in order to understand the full significance of the new life that is being built in Russia.

Lore on Current Events.

Ludwig Lore, editor of the Volkszeitung and member of the Central Executive Committee of the Workers Party, will conduct a class in current events at the Worekrs' School of New York every Friday night, beginning Dec. 12.

To carry on effective agitational and organizational activity in the labor movement, militants must be well informed on the happenings of the day. They must be able to analyze present struggles and achievements in this and other countries with a revolutionary understanding of the forces at work thruout the world.

The course in current events given at the Workers' School does not aim merely to supply information, but to teach militants how to interpret such events from the Communist viewpoint.

Workers are urged to enroll now. The classes will meet at the headquarters of the school, 208 east 12th street. The fee for the courses is $2 each. Single admissions, 25 cents. For registration and information inquire at the office of the Workers' School.

MUSIC.

By ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN.

JACOB SCHAEFFER covered himself with glory Sunday night, when the Freiheit Singing Society gave a concert at the Eighth Street theater. For most of the program was made up of his compositions, he is the director of the chorus, and musical organizations stand or fall by the work of their directors.

After a pulse quickening performance of "The International," the Freiheit mandolin orchestra, under Harry Dolman, took the stage. They played Grieg's "Norwegian Wedding Procession" rather nervously, but gained composure and followed it up with the Schubert first military march and Gillet's "Invitation to the Ball" done in fine shape. There is a most unusual effect produced by this group of twenty-five or more mandolins. It sounds something like the effect of a heavy fall of rain tuned to a scale and controlled so that melodies can be produced. The orchestra is wise in adding a flute, oboe and cello for contrast of quality.

The singing society came on again to sing Schaeffer's song. Unfortunately I cannot review this part of the concert in detail, since the program was printed and the songs were sung in a language with which I am unfamiliar. There is a fine virility in the conductor's compositions, and an astounding precision and spirit in the work of the chorus. The Friheit group sings with all the perfection of a professional choral society, (and better than some), and yet they are all workers, some of them unable to read notes, I am told. For amateurs to sing without accompaniment in perfect intonation and rhythm is a real achievement.

An account of the concert would not be complete without some mention of Schaeffer's orchestral compositions played by a band of Chicago Symphony men under his direction. Especially good was a series of variations on what is known in English as a "Marching Song of the Red Army." (The English text begins: "Whirlwinds of danger are circling around us, O'erwhelming forces of darkness assail—") the tune was worked out with considerable knowledge of its possibilities, and of the resources of the orchestra.

The program closed with Mendelssohn's setting of Goethe's first Walpurgis night.

Requiescat In Pace

IN plain English it means "The baby was knocked cold." And this is exactly what an energetic DAILY WORKER Builder did. David Harris of New York "swings a wicked wallop" and he tells us how he did the damage:

Dear Comrades: Enclosed herewith please find P. O. M. O. for twenty dollars and fifty cents ($20.50) for the following:

1—A ten dollar ($10.00) insurance policy—to help insure the American Federation of Labor against the class struggle.

2—One year's subscription to the DAILY WORKER in advance of expiration of the old one—in memory of our grandmother, the late S. P. of the U. S. A., who so miserably perished on the road to Wisconsin.

3—One year's subscription to the WORKERS MONTHLY in advance of expiration of the old one—this merely out of sympathy for brother Mussolini, who needs it so badly.

4—One year's subscription to the COMMUNIST INTERNATIONAL in advance of the old one—this in recognition of and as an encouragement to our humble servant of King George V.—Ramsay MacDonald.

Yours for the DAILY WORKER,

D. HARRIS.

UNEMPLOYMENT HAS INCREASED 10 PER CENT SINCE 1923, DECLARES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR FIGURES

Unemployment on November 1 showed a considerable increase over unemployment at the same time in 1923, according to figures for October 1924, given out by the United States department of labor.

"Reports from 6,607 identical establishments in the two years, show a decrease in 1924 of 10.8 per cent in employment, a decrease of 13.3 per cent in total earnings, and a decrease of 2.8 per cent in per capita earnings," the department of labor reports.

The greatest losses, according to the report, in employment and employes' earnings in the 12 months were in the shipbuilding foundry, machine tool, rubber boot and shoe, steam railroad car building and repairing, shirt, automobile, structural iron, agricultural implement, hosiery, iron and steel, cotton goods, and men's clothing industries.

The number reported on the payrolls in identical establishments was 2,231,087 in October 1923 as compared to 2,079,046, or a decrease in the number of employed since last year of 10.8 per cent.

The amount of the payroll in October 1923 was $63,093,250 while the amount of the payroll had gone down to $54,709,847 in October 1924, a decrease of 13.3 per cent for the year.

The amount of the payroll on the class 1 railroads of the entire country decreased 11.7 per cent since last year.

Unemployment in Illinois increased over 12 per cent over unemployment for October 1923, according to reports of the Illinois department of labor. "Last month our survey showed that there were fewer people at work in the factories of Illinois than there were on the average in 1922, when we were just shaking off the harrowing effects of the depression of 1920-21," says the November report of the Illinois department of labor.

"The survey shows that the factories of Illinois had fewer workers than they had in any October in the past four years. The perciptate declines of early 1924 with only slight swells in August and September and a renewed decline in October leave the factories with 13 per cent fewer persons than were at work at the peak of operations in 1923 and 12 per cent fewer than one year ago at this time."

One hundred and thirty-nine persons were registered for each 100 jobs as compared to 117 seeking 100 jobs in 1923 and 97 seeking 100 jobs in 1922.

OIL UNIVERSITY ADMITS RUSSIA BACKS SOVIETS

Poor Professor Thinks Russians Are Different

John D. Rockefeller's University of Chicago seems to have decided that the Bolsheviki are accepted by the Russian people, in theory and as a party, and that the Communist government "seems secure."

Even more than that, "The Bolsheviki are the party in power in Russia, and if you want to deal with Russia, you will have to deal with them."

Discuss Other Revolutions.

These statements were made in the class in history III (European history: The later modern period, 1789-1920), by the instructor of that class, Walter Louis Dorn, Mon., Dec. 8.

The discussion of the Russian revolution comes as a sort of culmination to the discussion of the great French revolution, the revolution of 1848 and the imperialistic wars. The classmates of Loeb and Leopold were led up to the instructor's appraisal of Lenin by way of the same individual's judgment of Napoleon the Little, Bismarck, and Garibaldi.

According to Dorn, Lenin made the Russian revolution. Lenin seems to have assumed some of the qualities of anti-Christ, in the mind of Dorn (the University of Chicago was originally a theological seminary, and does still preserve some of the aspects of methodism.)

Blames All on Lenin.

Dorn says that Lenin "created the Communist Party," "created the Soviets," "created the Red Army," "created the dictatorship of the proletariat"—all by means of his "diabolically logical mind," and "unreasoning faith in his essentially wrong and twisted economic theories." In fact, according to Dorn, "Lenin was the Bolshevik revolution," and, "until he died, Lenin was dictator of Russia."

Dorn's theory is that the Soviet system of government is on trial, and is accepted by the Russian people because they are different from all other peoples.

A Carnegie Lackey.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 9—Sen. Phipps of Colorado, the new chairman of the senate committee on education and labor, was formerly treasurer of the Carnegie Steel Co., and is known as one of the bitterest foes of union labor who ever has sat in congress. The new senator from Rhode Island, Metcalfe, has been chosen to this committee to lend his aid to Phipps against Borah and Brookhart. Dale of Vermont, has withdrawn from the committee.

Borah surrendered the chairmanship of the committee on education and labor in order to become chairman of the foreign relations committee.

MILITANT DELEGATES IN REVOLT

YALE UNIVERSITY LIBRARY NEW HAVEN CONN.

...KATY.

HEAVY blows descend with lightning rapidity on the heads of the czarist emigres in Paris. They saw the French government recognize the hated Soviet; saw the palatial embassy building turned over to the representatives of the workers and peasants, but the worst was yet to come. The latest calamity to cast its baleful shadow over the future of the parasites is the probable loss of the Russian orthodox church, which was sequestered recently on request of the Soviet ambassador.

THE church was built on ground purchased by the czar with the money of the Russian peasants, of course. The building was placed under the protection of the Russian embassy. Last year when the czarists saw signs of peril on the horizon in the form of approaching recognition of the Soviet government, the countryless Kerensky ambassador, MaklaKoff, suddenly decided to put the property under the protection of Jesus, who unfortunately for the emigres is not any more popular now than he was in the days of Pontius Pilate, at least not in Paris.

THE French courts will decide the disposition of the church building but there is hardly a doubt but it will be delivered to the Soviet government. One of the novel arguments put forward by the emigres in support of their contention that the church belongs to them, is the danger that, once disconnected from the influence of the church, the mortality rate from sudden and violent death in the monarchist colony may rise. It could be said, however, in support of the other side of the question, that, in America at any rate, the clergymen are running a close race with the professional gunmen for the mortuary record. We suggest that the emigres get to their God and watch the result.

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW has joined with H. G. Wells and other intellectuals in poking fun at Karl Marx and the Russian Communists, the most noteworthy exponents of his theory. Shaw says the Soviet tactics are behind the times and that Russian revolutionary leaders are novices. They may not all have as much wisdom as Shaw, who gets along very nicely with the bourgeoisie the enjoying the luxury of making them writhe occasionally on the point of his satirical pen. But when the bourgeoisie are in danger, as during the war, Shaw is their man. The Russian revolutionists may be novices in the art of revolution, but let us see.

IT appears to us that they have conquered one-sixth of the surface of the earth for Communism, defeated a world in arms, put down several counter-revolutions largely financed by the government which Shaw supported during the war with his pen, forced the governments of the world with the exception of two to recognize its Red Army, and organized a world revolutionary organization to carry the message of Communism to the farthest ends of the earth. These are only a few of the accomplishments of the Russian revolutionists. It would be cruel to compare their accomplishments to those of the British socialists, the leaders who accept bribes from tory capitalists and endowed autos and get kicked in the posterior when the bosses they serve no longer need them.

THE German capitalists are again jockeying in an attempt to form a cabinet. They are bargaining for positions like hucksters. For them, elections mean a fight for offices and appointments of office. The socialists are lined up with the capitalists. That is their conception of the united front. The Communists, despite the fact that hundreds of their leaders were in jail, elected 44 deputies to the reichstag and 47 to the Prussian diet, a gain of 19 since the last elections. The Communist Party of Germany has shown that it has its roots sunk deep in the masses.

THE farce of the league of nations still continues. Its stepfathers are in Rome giving it much vocal support but nothing to do. Unless the poor old thing is given a function it is liable to get arrested on a charge of vagrancy. However, so long as it serves England some purpose it will not be without visible means of support. England would not let the league touch the Egyptian question with a pair of asbestos gloves, but Chamberlain threw it the Mosul question as one would throw a bone to a famishing cur.

MICHIGAN COURT UPHOLDS ATTACK ON COMMUNISTS

Ruthenberg Verdict Is Affirmed at Lansing

(Special to The Daily Worker)

LANSING, Mich., Dec. 10.—The supreme court of the state of Michigan today confirmed the conviction of C. E. Ruthenberg, executive secretary of the Workers Party, for violation of the Michigan criminal syndicalist law in "assembling with" the Communist Party at the convention in Bridgeman in August 1922.

Ruthenberg was tried at St. Joseph, Michigan, in April, 1923, following the disagreement of jury in the case of William Z. Foster, and the appeal has been pending before the supreme court of Michigan since that time.

Plan For an Appeal.

The opinion of the Michigan supreme court is not yet available and whether the opinion leaves open the way to an appeal to the supreme court of the United States has not been decided as yet.

Attorneys Frank P. Walsh and I. E. Ferguson, who argued the case before the Michigan supreme court, will immediately take up the question of an appeal to the supreme court of the United States.

31 Other Indictments Pending.

There is still pending in Berrien county the indictments against thirty-one other Communists who were arrested in connection with the Bridgeman case.

Whether the prosecutors at St. Joseph will now press any of these cases to trial is still an open question.

If it becomes possible to appeal the Ruthenberg case before the supreme court of the United States it is not likely that any of the other cases will be tried until the decision is made on the Ruthenberg case.

UNITED STATES AND BRITAIN IN FIGHT OVER LOOT

U. S. Holds the Bag and Also the Dollars

LONDON, Dec. 10.—The British and American governments are quarreling over the war spoils now being taken out of Germany by the Dawes plan under the title of more reparations.

The British foreign office claims that the United States not having signed the Versailles treaty is not entitled to benefit under it and has no legal claim on reparations under the Dawes plan.

Fleecing German Workers

The United States feels that because it hatched up the scheme to fleece Germany in a most scientific manner; it has as much right to its share of the loot as any other robber nation.

Great Britain stands alone in denying the American capitalists the right to participate in the hold-up of Germany, the other bandits taking America's side. The United States claims that while it did not sign the Versailles treaty it helped to defeat Germany and therefore should share in the spoils. The robbers are expected to reach an agreement.

YOUNGDAHL IN STEADY GAINS IN VOTE COUNT

Hathaway Tells About Confusion in Voting

By C. A. HATHAWAY.
(Special to the Daily Worker)

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Dec. 10.—The recount in Comrade Emil Youngdahl's legislative contest shows additional gains. A net gain of 60 votes has been made with almost one-half of the district yet to be counted.

The most significant is the tremendous lack of class consciousness shown in the voting, coupled with ignorance as how to use the ballot.

Much Fraud in Voting.

Of the 15,000 ballots cast in the district, it could be safely stated that not over 500 are straight labor ballots. Vast numbers voted for a reactionary for congress, followed by a vote for a Communist for the legislature and then wound up by voting for the whole slate of reactionary judges.

Or they would vote for a labor candidate for congress, a reactionary for the legislature, and a labor man coupled with some reactionaries for the judgeships. All is confusion.

This is due to several causes, the chief of which is our present election of state legislators on a nonpartisan basis. The county ballot was headed by the partisan candidates for congress, then followed the nonpartisan candidates for the legislature, next the nonpartisan judges and the ballot wound up with the candidates for petty nonpartisan county executive offices.

Such a hodge-podge on one ballot is confusing to the average voter, even tho he has made a diligent study of the candidates and their multitudinous platforms. The candidate who polled the largest vote in the 35th legislative district contest is an arch reactionary republican, Harry A. Montgomery. He polled 500 more votes than his next highest opponent.

The district is a working class one. He did not make over six speeches during the campaign, issued absolutely no platform and his official campaign expense was but $35.00. But he had a well oiled political machine working for him.

Two years ago the voters in practically the same district defeated him for re-election as county commissioner, on account of his voting for a road contract, in favor of the bituthic trust, costing the county $160,000 more than an equally good pavement of a non-trust variety. Thus is shown the fickleness and forgetfulness of the average voter.

The workers in Minnesota must be aroused to class conscious voting. The hope of the producers lies with the Workers (Communist) Party.

MOSCOW DOCTORS URGE TROTSKY'S RETURN TO CAUCASUS FOR HEALTH

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MOSCOW, Dec. 10.—Leon Trotsky, soviet commissar for war, is seriously ill. The following bulletin was issued today by Trotsky's physicians:

"On November 24, the undersigned examined Trotsky, finding a feverish condition which was aggravated by grippe lasting ten days. A second examination Dec. 5, showed persistent abnormal temperature. Despite the measures taken, the present high temperature is analogous to last year's temperature and results from an irritation of the bronchial glands. This, in turn, was brought on by the climatic change which Trotsky made, it being dry in the Caucasus and damp in Moscow.

"We think that Trotsky should hasten his departure to a health resort where he will be in a warmer climate."

STRIKERS FIGHT FOR LIFE FIT FOR HUMAN BEINGS

Spurn Lures Held Out by Business Interests

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Dec. 10.—Officials representing the striking trainmen employed by the Illinois traction company have issued a statement declaring that every man is on strike, and stating the demands of the strikers.

At the same time officials of the Illinois traction system have declared their hypocritical willingness to arbitrate, but only after the men return to work.

"Instead of asking for an overtime penalty after eight hours, as most people work, we ask for overtime after ten hours," says the statement signed by W. I. Taylor, chairman of the trainmen's strike committee and Alex McGuire, international vice-president of the union.

"We wanted the assurance that we could work like human beings and have some time to spend with our families. We know the only way to accomplish this was to have a penalty on overtime, which is in most every contract except the Illinois Traction System contracts."

Frantic efforts by Springfield business men to lure the strikers back to work have utterly failed. The company officials refuse to arbitrate the question of overtime pay until the men call the strike off. The strikers, however, turn their backs on arbitration and refuse to return to work until the overtime pay question is settled.

Traction officials declared they will at present make no effort to run the cars with strikebreakers. They are concentrating on trying to dupe the men back to work by using their fake arbitration as bait.

According to representatives of the strikers, the Illinois Traction System is completely unionized, only four employes being outside the union when the strike was called. These four men joined the ranks of the strikers immediately. The strike vote was 267 in favor of striking and 18 against, but in the interests of solidarity these eighteen men made the decision unanimous.

Forward orders on the books of the corporation on November 30, amounted to 4,031,989 tons, against 3,525,270 on October 31 and 3,473,780 on September 30, 1924. On November 30 of last year unfilled tonnage amounted to 4,368,584.

VOTES STOLEN IN ILLINOIS, SAYS SWABECK

Illinois Gives 2,622 and Indiana 987 Votes

The elections in the states of Illinois and Indiana, according to Arne Swabeck, district organizer, were not altogether reliable so far as counting Communist votes was concerned. In fact he charges that, "At least five to one of all votes have been stolen," in the state of Illinois. In spite of that 2,622 votes were credited in Illinois and 987 in Indiana.

In proof he cites the reports of fraud, previously published in the DAILY WORKER, particularly from Williamson county, where the Ku Klux Klan and the declarations of martial law by Governor Small resulted in blocks of votes being stolen according to reports of Workers Party members. It would indeed be strange if Communist votes were not stolen.

Stealing Was Successful.

Comrade Swabeck says, in addition, "A number of our poll watchers in Chicago also reported attempts made right at the counting to steal our votes, in many instances the stealing became successful."

In Illinois the presidential vote for Foster was 2,622; for senator, Comrade Engdahl got 2,618; for governor, Comrade William F. Dunne got 2,329; for lieutenant governor, John Watt received 2,310; for secretary of state, Comrade Loeb received 2,235; for representative at large, Comrades Minor and Hewlitt received 2,235 and 2,160 votes respectively.

The remarkable, and even unusual similarity between the votes of the presidential candidate and the other candidates, looks very queer, almost arbitrary, when we see how the vote has varied in other states between candidates.

Few Members in Indiana.

In Indiana, where 987 votes were returned for Foster, it is accounted for by the fact that the Workers Party has few members in the state, and those few mostly in Lake county, and South Bend region, with one small branch in Indianapolis and in Clinton.

RULE OF GOMPERS AND MORONES IS SHAKEN IN THE PAN-AMERICAN FEDERATION OF LABOR CONGRESS

By J. W. JOHNSTONE.
(Special to The Daily Worker)

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 10.—The Pan-American Federation of Labor developed in its last day into anything but a smooth stream of water whereupon the class-collaborationist ducks of Sam Compers and Luis Morones could swim about in peace.

The delegates of the Central and South American countries, even such few of them as there are represented, and even such week elements as they were, revolted against the naked and shameless betrayal of their interests to Yankee imperialism.

The T. U. E. L. Strikes Hard.

This is the immediate result of the publication of a manifesto of the T. U. E. L. of the United States, the Mexican committee of the Red International of Labor Unions and the Pan-American Anti-Imperialist League. This manifesto is creating a sensation in the labor movement and in political circles as well.

The congress closed with a bitter attack on the Communists by Luis N. Morones, the "Gompers of Mexico," who insisted that the Pan-American Federation of Labor was not merely a parliamentary body, but stood for social and economic changes as well. He begged that no one be "deceived by those who come masked as liberators, but who were incompetent and insincere."

Begs Help for Sammy.

He made a plea that the officials of the federation, especially Gompers, be defended against criticism, and asserted that if in the future the critics "imposed upon the officials" these critics should be expelled from the congress. He did not mention the Communists by name, thus leaving the road open to expel even non-Communist critics such as the delegate from the Central-American countries have turned out to be.

These delegates began to protest when their resolutions, asking for some real action on their complaints against the savage imperialism of the United States government and the Wall Street bankers, were "referred to the executive committee"—which means to bury them.

A Reason Six Months Long.

The delegate from Santo Domingo protested against this treatment, and wanted action against the American dictatorship. He said he had served six months in prison merely for saying that the Hughes-Peynado treaty was not evacuation, but annexation.

Also "referred to the executive committee for investigation" were the resolutions from Guatemala demanding withdrawal of American troops, the abrogation of the Platt amendment, free speech, free press and the right to organize and strike; as well as those asking that the Pan-American federation demand the abolition of the death penalty for labor organizers and their torture in the prisons of Guatemala by American troops or by natives under American control.

The Guatemalan delegate protested that referring these resolutions to the executive committee, meant that they were practically rejected, they would sleep in the archives of Gompers.

Gompers Holds Out for Torturing Organizers.

"Surely," he stated, "the congress is opposed to torture of labor organizers by hanging them up by the thumbs and breaking them on the rack as in the times of the Inquisition."

"While we suffer," he cried, "you give us words to fight the powers of American imperialism. The congress

SOVIET EMBASSY IN PARIS TARGET OF ROYALISTS

Reactionaries Attack Communist Party

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, France, Dec. 10.—The campaign of the reactionaries to accomplish two objects, the persecution of the Communists and the cashiering of Herriot, is going forward with a great rush.

The royalists staged a demonstration yesterday in front of the Soviet embassy; and all the organs of reaction are filled with attacks on Herriot for his "weakness in handling the reds."

The international press seems to have taken up the scent and cables from America and England tell of the "intense preparation for revolution" on the part of French Communists which is purely imaginary except that the Communists are always preparing for overthrowing capitalism. But this is hardly news. Just now the Communists are making a drive for amnesty and have set up a united front to fight for that measure.

Herriot, trying his best to persecute the Communists, is at loss what to do. The Communist Party is loyal and all his hundreds of gendarmery cannot find anything illegal. Yet the capitalist press wants more than deportation of alien workers.

It cries out that "No French Communists have been molested and nothing has been done to interfere with the organization of the party." They must have blood and fascist repression. Herriot fears to give them this, not because he is not a reactionary, but because he knows that the workers of France will be no longer fooled by his claim of being a "socialist."

Herriot has had to dodge, like MacDonald doged. It may be as useless to him as to Ramsay MacDonald. The Communists in the parliament are pressing Herriot to state his policy on the release of Jacques Sadoul.

Another case the Communists are pressing in parliament is the prosecution of the Communist mayor of Douarnenez, the Brittany fishing village where a strike, led by Mayor La Flanchec, has been directed against the sardine packers.

LaFlanchec has been arrested by the prefect of the department who suspended the mayor on charges of rebellion and obstruction of work.

The answer of LaFlanchec was to tie the tri-color scarf of his office around his waist and lead the strikers in a demonstration, in which a strikebreaker driving a truck of packed fish was persuaded to leave his wagon and seek shelter in the factory.

Police Call for Help.

The mounted police intervened, but the spirit of the strikers was up. They surounded the police who had to call for help from another town.

Practically the whole police force of the district had to be called in before the Communist mayor could be rounded up and arrested. The workers of the district are furious, and are determined to send LaFlanchec to parliament if he is put in jail, an act which under French law, must give him release in order to occupy his seat in the chamber of deputies.

ROBBER POWERS SUSPECT EACH OTHER'S MOVES

Singapore Base Makes Japan Worry

TOKYO, Dec. 10—An announcement that Great Britain intends to build a naval base at Singapore, in the straits settlements is causing considerable antagonistic comment thruout Japan adding even the intense feeling felt against the proposed American 1925 battle fleet maneuvers around Hawaii. The Japanese press is widely discussing the Singapore base, pointing out the possible threat it may hold against Japanese sovereignty in the Orient. Official quarters, however, decline to comment either on the Singapore project or the American fleet manouvers.

To Make Protest.

In connection with the Singaporg announcement, the foreign office here denies that Japan intends to protest to Great Britain against the proposed base, tho it is rumored that Hayashi, Japanese ambassador in London, has been instructed to make friendly representations to Britain outlining Japanese apprehensions against the British far eastern naval base project.

Observers here believe that if Britain proceeds with the Singapore base Japan will re-open the entire question of naval disarmament if another limitation conference is proposed.

Working Women in Detroit Hold First Anniversary Meeting

DETROIT Mich., Dec. 10.—The working women in Detroit held a very sucessful rally celebrating the first year of their activity in the labor movement.

This organization is composed of working women of all nationalities and has carried on numerous activities in behalf of the labor movement. Comrade Krakaites, the organizer, reported on some of their activities as for example the work for relief of the starving workers in Germany thru the International Workers' Relief, their participation in the political affairs in the state of Michigan by participating in the St. Paul convention and by working for the Workers Party candidates in the election as well as numerous other local affairs of the workers in Detroit.

Comrade Overgaard was the main speaker and he appealed to the women to unite with the Workers Party in the struggle against child labor in the United States as well as in the struggle against imperialist wars. He showed the role of women in the class struggle and pointed out the necessity for overthrowing capitalism in this country and establishing a Soviet America in its place.

LABOR FAKERS MAKE NEW PACT WITH RAILROADS

For Consolidation of Railroad Systems

(Special to The Daily Worker)

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 10.—Gompers is opposed to the amalgamation of the craft unions into industrial unions, but if reports current in political circles here are correct, the official bureaucracy of the American Federation of Labor and the brotherhoods have set the seal of their approval on the move to consolidate the railroad systems of this country.

Cal on the Job.

Calvin Coolidge, true to his role as executive of the capitalist government in Washington is taking the lead in this move. His administration has started a drive in congress for legislation permitting a voluntary consolidation of the nation's rail system.

Administration leaders have had conferences with representatives of organized labor, meaning of course the labor fakers, "in an effort to compromise the employes' differences." And no doubt they were compromised. In fact it is stated that an agreemen was reached between the government and the labor fakers to revise the powers of the rail labor board and to create a new tribunal, invested with authority to make decisions in disputes where a strike is threatened.

PRESIDENT EBERT OF GERMANY IN PINK TIGHT FIX

BERLIN, Dec. 10.—Should the socialist president of a capitalist republic appear at a public bathing resort in pink tights? President Ebert of Germany is the center of this controversy. Some years ago Ebert went bathing and was "snapped" in scanty raiment, which in the eyes of a monarchist supporter is undignified and brings the republic into ill repute.

When the photograph first made its appearance the Communists seize upon it and turned it into a cartoon depicting the social-democratic butcher of the German workers surrounded by a sea of blood, the blood of the members of his class on whom he had betrayed and slaughtered.

BELGIUM NEXT TO FALL PREY TO J. P. MORGAN'S GOLD

Banker Gets Commission from French

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—The next step in the control of European governments by J. P. Morgan and the American bankers is the loan of $75,000,000 to the Belgian government. The loan will be made in the form of two bond issues, the first for $25,000,000 for the improvement of the Belgian Congo, which is expected to be issued in January. The second bond issue will come a few month later, according to announcement of bankers here. It will be a loan of $50,000,000 for direct use of the kingdom of Belgium. Both loans will be issued at 7 per cent interest, it is said.

During the week cash payment on the French loan of $100,000,000 will be made by J. P. Morgan and company who are acting as agents of the French government. Less than $94,000,000 in cash will be turned over to the government, as the French bonds sold at 94, and the Morgan firm is expected to receive a substantial sum for commission and interest charges.

The British government is to pay $91,500,000 to the United States this week, in semi-annual interest and amortization on a debt of $4,500,000,000. The British purchased many millions of dollars' worth of liberty bonds below par, some of which were sold in the American market at a profit.

But Ibanez Stays in Paris.

PARIS—The Journal today said that Vincento Blasco Ibanez, Spanish novelist and enemy of Spanish monarchy was sending airplanes to fly over north Spain, dropping republican propaganda.

BORAH ASSUMING LEADERSHIP OF LEFT WING G. O. P.

LaFollette Outlawed by Old Guard

(By The Federated Press)

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4.—Borah has taken the first step toward formation of a balance-of-power group in the senate.

He has aproached Couzens of Michigan with the suggestion that there will probably be ten or a dozen republican senators who will want to work with LaFollette, Brookhart, Frazier and Ladd, the "outlaw" group from time to time, and he has asked Couzens whether the latter will go with him in the venture.

Couzens replied to Borah with an immediate and vigorous acceptance of the plan. Inasmuch as they need only one other man to hold the balance of power, even if Bruce of Maryland, a nominal democrat, votes as a regular republican, it is apparent that they will succeed in destroying the administration's majority in the new congress. Norris is counted with the LaFollette group.

Workers By the Millions Must Reply to Attack on Foreign-Born Comrades

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, on the crest of the Coolidge triumph, reaction is plotting renewed war against America's foreign-born workers.

It is easily understandable that one of the first moves in congress, providing for an elaborate police system to keep continual watch over the 7,000,000 workers in this country not yet naturalized, should come from a democrat, Representative Aswell, of Louisiana.

The two parties of Wall Street, the republican party of Coolidge and Hughes, and the democratic party of Underwood and Davis, have a common basis for action against the masses of restless foreign-born workers in the United States, exploited to the last drop of their blood in the great basic industries.

* * * *

Representative Aswell is a product of the state guilty of the worst oppression against workers in the oil fields and lumber camps. His loyalty to the master class was lavishly rewarded. He was raised from a country school teacher to president of the Louisiana State Normal College and then sent on to the congress.

He joins his views of political science, of which he is alleged teacher, with those of Secretary of Labor Davis, the Pittsburgh banker, and comes to the conclusion that an elaborate espionage system must be created to watch over all foreign-born workers.

The aim of Aswell's whole program is clearly stated in his own words, "to help the worthy and facilitate deporting the undesirables."

It is well known who the "worthy" aliens are. They are the ones who patiently bear the burdens of toil, refusing to unite for their own protection, trembling to struggle against their American masters. The metropolis of Louisiana, the city of New Orleans, was one of the great chattel slave markets before the Civil War. On the great cotton and sugar plantations of Louisiana, chattel slavery showed its most diabolical face. It is from this state that a democratic congressman now comes forward pledging aid to the republican in their well thought out schemes to hang new chains upon the limbs of all foreign-born workers.

* * * *

"Deport the undesirables!" says Aswell, repeating in altered words the edict of the republican strikebreaker, General Leonard Wood, of "Ship or Shoot!" The undesirables are the workers who protest the brutal exploitation forced upon them, who organize into trade unions, who go out on strike to win their demands; but, most of all, those who accept the leadership of the Workers (Communist) Party and join its ranks.

It is for these especially that the detailed registration system is provided with its certificates of identification that must be ready for presentation to the police on all occasions. The police must be notified of removal from one city to another. All hotel and boarding house keepers must report alien patrons. Heavy penalties are provided for all violations. The foreign-born worker is not only the victim of this adaptation of czarism to the United States, but he must also pay for being victimized. He must pay $10 for registration on the great American black list, with a fee of $5 demanded for each subsequent registration.

* * * *

One of the camouflage arguments advanced in favor of this labor-enslaving plan is that the "undesirable" foreign-born workers are enabled to send "savings" back to the old country. Last year, it is claimed, they send $400,000,000 to the old world. All this under the "protection of the American flag." It is urged that this money be held in this country; that is unpatriotic to send it abroad.

It just happens, however, that on the day that Aswell's plan is loosed on the nation, that J. Pierpont Morgan remits $110,000,000 in gold to the German capitalist republic, every cent of which was taken out of the agony of American labor. Another $100,000,000 is to go to France to bolster up its tottering capitalist regime. Belgium wants $75,000,000. These are only the transactions of a few days. American capitalists have put four billion dollars of their surplus capital, taken from labor, into South America. All of which receives no notice from the Louisiana schoolmaster doing the bidding of his capitalist masters in Washington.

* * * *

Congress is adjourning shortly for the Christmas holidays. But the senators and representatives will soon be back in Washington again. The time before March 4, when the present congress dies, is very short. But it is long enough for the enemies of labor in Washington to put thru the worst legislation attacking the foreign-born workers.

The Workers (Communist) Party calls for a United Front of all workers, native and foreign-born, against this move of the capitalist class. Workers by the millions must rally to the Communist call for a fight against this scheme of American oppression. This is one of the most important struggles of all American labor in this present hour.

MONROE DOCTRINE OF LABOR AIDS MONROE DOCTRINE OF WALL ST.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 10.—By motion of the delegates from the A. F. of L., the Pan-American Federation of Labor congress here appealed to all Latin-American governments to affiliate to the imperialist concern which is the quintessence of the Monroe Doctrine—the "Pan-American Union" of governments.

The congress, ruled as it is by agents of imperialism in the ranks of labor, also asks these Latin countries to "demand representation" in the American financial conference, which is called for the special purpose of skinning these same Latin-American countries alive.

In Exchange for this piece of business for Morgan's banks, the Latin-American countries are asked to "demand" that labor representatives be attached to all their consulates, thus affording many lame ducks in the labor faker family of class collaboration, an easy living and an efficient delivery of the labor movement to Yankee imperialism.

Democratic Urge Ends in Bloodshed.

TRENTON, N. J.—The great war kills another workingman. Peter Matuza, gassed at the front in 1918, finally went insane and threatened to kill a woman and three children living in the same Trenton house. After successfully holding off a squad of police with his revolver the war veteran shot himself dead.

Oppose Black Belts.

NEW YORK.—A nation-wide campaign against segregation of Negroes is to be launched Jan. 4 at the annual mass meeting of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People in New York City. The annual business meeting of the association will be held Jan. 5.

Start Coop Butcher Shops.

NEW YORK.—Co-operative butcher stores are to be established all over New York City by the Hebrew Butchers Union, affiliated with the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butchers of North America. The Hebrew butchers have won a strike for $3 increase per week. The first shop established is at 306 Brook avenue, Bronx.

U. S. MAKES NEW THREAT OF WAR AGAINST CHINA

Sends Ultimatum With Recognition Bait

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PEKING, China, Dec. 10.—The United States government, in combination with all the other imperialist powers which signed the so-called Washington agreement, threatens to wage war upon the Chinese nation in an ultimatum delivered yesterday, unless China severs all relations with Soviet Russia.

Coupled with the threat of intervention is the bait of recognition of the new Chinese government, if it "respects" the imperialist treaties and loans forced upon the hitherto helpless nation, and repudiates the recognition of Soviet Russia.

If this is not done the imperialist powers threaten that "results of world-wide consequence may follow."

Fear a Soviet Republic.

The imperialist diplomats are at their wit's end to know what to do if no heed is given this threat. They say that such "consequences" will follow if General Feng Yu-hsian, "should attempt a radical program with Soviet Ambassador Karakan."

The Soviet embassy and the Chinese Communist party have been making preparation for a tremendous welcome for Sun Yat Sen when he arrives here. The walls everywhere are posted up with great manifestos denouncing imperialism, demanding the abrogation of treaties which were forced upon China at the cannon's mouth, and the abolition of extra-territorial rights.

A Good Servant—But No Army.

The imperialist diplomats are apprehensive at Sun's arrival. They fear that General Feng and Sun will combine the Chinese workers and peasants in a drive to institute Bolshevism. They do not depend on Tuan Chi-jui who is their jackey but who has no army.

Altho Tuan Chi-jui has issued orders to arrest Communist agitators, the police and the soldiers are not expected to do this, as they are all adherents of Feng, who is suspected of sympathy for the Communists. The western imperialists are in an unhappy position.

CUMMINS WANTS TO EXTEND THE JOHNSTON PLAN

Peace Between Workers and Bosses the Aim

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—Collaboration between the railroads and their wage slaves along the lines of William H. Johnston's "B. & O." plan is the object of a bill now under consideration by Senator Albert B. Cummins of Iowa, former chairman of the interstate commerce committee and joint author of the Esch-Cummins railroad law.

Under Cal's Orders.

Cummins, acting under instructions from the White House has held a series of conferences with labor leaders in an effort to secure their assistance in making his plan a success. It is reported that his efforts have met with success.

The proposed bill would substitute another blind for the rail labor board which is under fire from the trade unions. It will take the place of the Howell-Barkley bill, which is approved by the railroad brotherhood chiefs.

Invitation From Cummins.

Senator LaFollette has received an invitation from Senator Cummins asking for the Wisconsin's co-operation in an effort to secure unanimous consent to put his bill thru. He expressed his desire for peace on the railroads so that "the employes and the railroads may go about their work without thot of constant trouble."

Discussion of Our Party's Immediate Tasks

The C. E. C., the Minority, and Comrade Lore

By JAMES P. CANNON.

FIRST ARTICLE.

How the Minority "Fought" Lore When They Controlled the Party.

THE outstanding characteristic of the right wing always and everywhere is its political cowardice. This has been demonstrated so often in the international Communist movement that it can be laid down as an axiom. Opportunism is so foreign to Communism that it instinctively feels itself to be an intruder and tries to conceal its identity. The right wing never has the courage to stand up and fight directly for its policy, but tries by devious ways, by indirection, and by shifting issues, to advance its influence and smuggle in its policy.

At least a tendency in this direction is manifested in the article of Comrade Ruthenberg in the DAILY WORKER of Dec. 6. In this article Comrade Ruthenberg runs away from the central and immediate issue of the "class farmer-labor party," which has already been so badly shattered in the party discussion. He attempts to divert the discussion from the real issues of our present and future policy in regard to the labor party question to the question of who was right and who was wrong in the past on a number of questions. By raising the issue of the opportunistic errors of Comrade Lore he evidently hopes to avoid further discussion of the opportunistic policy the minority sponsors now.

We welcome the occasion to discuss this issue of "Loreism" openly before the party. But we will not oblige Comrade Ruthenberg by separating it from the present issue of the opportunistic policy of the minority on the "class farmer-labor party." On the contrary, we will link them up together and show that the attitude of the minority toward the opportunistic errors of Lore has been itself, from first to last, an example of opportunism.

The Lore question has a history and to deal with it adequately and get the true perspective we must go back a little. Comrade Lore's mistakes did not begin since the present central executive committee took office. As Comrade Olgin points out in the DAILY WORKER of Dec. 6, they began in the early days of the Comintern. They arose from a faulty conception of some of the essential elements of Leninism and for that reason they have been repeated in a quite systematic manner.

The Lore of this year is no more out of harmony with the main line of the Communist International than the Lore of last year, when the Pepper-Lovestone-Ruthenberg group were in control of the party. In fact, as I shall prove in these articles, Comrade Lore is today closer to the Comintern than ever before. As a result of the C. I. decision, and the ideological struggle of the C. E. C., he has pulled—admitted a number of his past errors, which is the first necessary step towards correcting them. This does not please the minority, but we are sure it pleases the Comintern.

Therefore, let us have a real and thorough discussion of the Lore question. Let us review it at least for the past two years. Such a retrospect will reveal some very interesting facts.

The thesis of the minority says:

"Contrary to the decision of the Communist International, the Foster-Cannon group, in place of assisting on a struggle against the tendency has maintained an organizational alliance with it."

Comrade Ruthenberg repeats these accusations in practically the same words.

In these articles I will not only show the falsity of both these accusations, but I will prove the following:

1. The Pepper-Ruthenberg group itself had both an organizational and political alliance with Comrade Lore.

2. The Pepper-Ruthenberg group never once uttered a word of criticism of Comrade Lore, to say nothing of making a fight against his ideas, during the whole year in which they controlled the party, altho some of his greatest mistakes were made during that time.

3. The Pepper-Ruthenberg group did not utter a word of criticism of Comrade Lore during the last party convention, but, on the contrary, sought his help in their fight against us.

4. Their "fight" against Lore began only after the last party convention, not as an honest ideological struggle, but as a factional maneuver against the C. E. C.

The Minority Attitude Toward Lore When They Controlled the Party.

In the hectic days of 1923, the year of the boom, when the party was buying gold bricks right and left, Comrade Lore was in high favor with the C. E. C. He was handled with the greatest tact and consideration, and his advice and support were always sought whenever a question of policy was to be considered. Comrade Lore was carried around—so to speak—like a basket of eggshells. I never saw a grown man handled with more tender concern.

If I may be pardoned a few personal allusions, which are introduced, not in any sense as a complaint but merely by way of illustration, I might cite the fact—to show the high favor enjoyed by Comrade Lore—that he was drawn into the political committee when I was excluded from it, and tha he was appointed a member of the C. E. C. steering committee at the July 3 convention in Chicago which I was denied the right to attend, being as signed to speak at a picnic in Port land, Oregon, on that historic occasion.

After July Third.

After "July 3" the C. E. C. returned to New York with the "federated farmer-labor party" in its brief case The letter of the Y. C. I. to the Young Workers League of America quotes Karl Radek, who wrote the last C. I. thesis on America, as having said in the American commission: "The federated farmer-labor party is seveneighths a fantasy." What the other one-eighth consisted of, the letter does not say.

In the August meeting of the C. E. C., Comrades Foster, Bittelman and myself began to ask a few questions about this "fantasy"; but Comrade Lore supported it. Perhaps I do him an injustice. Comrade Lore's attitude, as I recall it, was about as follows: "We've got it, so we have to keep it."

At this meeting the "August thesis," the most curious melange of opportunism and confusion ever pressed into one document, was adopted. Foster, Bittelman and myself voted against it. Comrade Lore voted for it and his support was most gratefully accepted. Comrade Lore was one of Comrade Pepper's famous "majority." I mention this merely as a matter of history.

Up till the time of this meeting Comrade Foster had also been generally been supporting the original experiments of Comrade Pepper in the political laboratory and had consequently enjoyed a certain respect in the C. E. C. In fact, Comrade Foster was highly regarded. He was immune from all criticism, and, as long as he did not attempt to assert himself in the C. E. C., was given the title, not only of "leader of the party," but "leader of the whole American working class."

When the attempt on his life was made in Chicago, the Worker carried a two-line streamer head, written by Comrade Pepper, running across the entire first page. "The capitalists want to kill Foster—WORKERS YOU MUST DEFEND YOUR LEADER!"

The Attempt to Destroy Foster.

But when it became apparent that Comrade Foster was not becoming reconciled to the P. F. L. P. "fantasy," and that he was beginning to assert his right and duty to participate actively in the party leadership, the leading group in the C. E. C., which had formerly been heaping such fulsome flattery upon him, turned on him in fury. They set out to destroy him, to "kill" him, to rob him of his great prestige and undermine his authority in the party.

The leading group in the C. E. C. suddenly discovered that Comrade Foster was a "syndicalist," a "trade unionist," but is to say, no good. A subtle campaign in the party against "non-Communist and syndicalist tendencies" held by unnamed comrades was accomplished by a systematic whispering campaign of slander and character assassination in the party ranks against Foster and the Chicago trade union comrades generally. Some of Comrade Lore's greatest errors were made during this period—his estimation of events in Germany and the party crisis there—but the C. E. C. took no notice. It was too busy fighting the "trade unionists."

This campaign to destroy Foster and the group closely associated with him continued right up to the last party convention and was the one big issue there.

The convention divided into two camps over the resolution introduced by Pepper and Ruthenberg, which had for its object the putting of the whole blame for the July 3 debacle upon Foster and the Chicago trade union comrades, who were standing up in the Chicago unions under the heaviest blows of the reactionaries and bearing the whole brunt of the fight for the party.

In the C. E. C. meeting held on the eve of the convention, and in the convention itself, Comrade Lore voted for the resolution of Pepper and Ruthenberg.

The overwhelming majority of the convention delegates, however, revolted against this monstrous piece of political crookedness and swept those who sponsored it out of power in the party.

What Happened in the Last Party Convention?

The minority have been making the statement, and still repeat it, that the present C. E. C. gained the majority at the last party convention by making "an alliance" with the Lore group, and that this alliance is still maintained.

Here are the facts:

1. The majority of the present C. E. C. appeared at the last party convention as a distinct and independent group, having its own policy on every disputed question that came before the convention.

2. On all questions we had a clear majority of the delegates from the beginning of the convention to the end.

3. We made no compromise on any question of policy with any group or individual in any way, shape or form. We specifically refused all proposals of the Lore group to change or modify our attitude toward the "third party alliance." (In this we were wrong, but we fought honestly for our wrong position.)

4. The Pepper-Ruthenberg group, in its desperate efforts to get the support of the Lore group for their fight against Foster and the Chicago trade union group, went to unheard of lengths. They withdrew the entire section of their thesis dealing with the "third party alliance" in order to avoid a collision with the Lore group. In addition to this they centered their whole fight, during the entire convention, on the Chicago "trade union group" and had not a single word of criticism for Comrade Lore.

5. Our group received from the convention a clear majority of the C. E. C. members, independent of both other groups. The majority has stood unshaken until the present time firmly united, on the rock bottom foundation of common policy, constantly drawing a line between itself and the Lore group, as well as the Lovestone-Ruthenberg group, on questions of policy.

The present majority of the C. E. C. has a policy of its own and fights for that policy. It had no alliance with any other group, organizational or otherwise, at the party convention and has no such alliance now.

The above constitutes a record of facts which no one can refute. It shows that Comrade Lore was politically and organizationally united with the Pepper-Ruthenberg group at the time this group was leading the C. E. C. The record shows that Comrade Lore was highly honored by the former C. E. C., which drawn into the political committee and appointed to the steering committee at the July 3 convention in Chicago. It shows that the former C. E. C. sought the support of Comrade Lore at the convention, that it received this support on the main issue of the convention and that it made no criticism of Lore there. And it shows that some of Comrade Lore's greatest errors, which the C. I. has pointed out, were made during the administration of the former C. E. C. and passed over in silence.

During the entire year that the present minority controlled the party, up to and thruout the party convention, their "ideological struggle" against Comrade Lore's ideas was—not a word of criticism, not one single article, nor speech, nor motion. Their "fight" against Comrade Lore, which Comrade Ruthenberg now demands so virtuously, was—an organizational and political alliance with him against the "trade unionist Communists."

In my next article I will prove that the great fight of the minority on "Loreism" since the last convention is not now and never has been primarily directed against the wrong tendency of Comrade Lore. On the contrary, it has been directed against the C. E. C. This indirect means of attacking the C. E. C., under cover of a fight against "Loreism," is merely a continuation of the last year's direct attempt to destroy Comrade Foster and the group around him, and is organically connected with it. The raising of the Lore issue by the minority, after the convention, was merely a shift in tactics to serve the purposes of unscrupulous factionalism. The real target was not the wrong tendencies of Lore, but the Communist C. E. C. which has nothing in common with these tendencies.

New York Campaign Disproves Minority Position

By REBECCA GRECHT.

THE falseness of the contention of the minority that the Workers Party cannot as yet itself serve as a rallying point for the class conscious elements within the labor movement, and can gain a hearing before them only to the extent that it fights for a farmer-labor party, was effectively demonstrated by the recent election campaign carried on by the Workers Party in New York.

The wisdom of the decision to drop the farmer-labor party and wage a Communist campaign and at first questioned by many members of the party, there is today little doubt left in the minds of any New York comrades that the policy was correct. Their attitude is usually expressed in this way: "The campaign put the Workers Party on the map in New York. It made us a political factor in this city." What does this mean? According to the conception of the minority, the Workers Party as such cannot marshal the "left class elements," who are not yet prepared to accept the proletarian dictatorship. How, then, was it possible for the party to "put itself on the map" in New York when it carried on an intensive campaign under its own name as a Communist Party, with Communist candidates?

Only one answer is possible—that the Workers Party can gain the support of the militant workers first only as a Communist Party; that the "left class" elements are ready to follow the lead of the Workers Party; that there is no need for the Workers Party to take a seat modestly in the rear while it pushes a more "attractive" figure, a labor party, to the forefront.

This was shown in many ways during the campaign. Take, for instance, the fact that more than $15,000 was raised in the New York district to finance the campaign. This money came not alone from members of the Workers Party but from workers who supported the Communist candidates—those same "left class" elements whom the minority are so eager to form into a "left class farmer-labor bloc." Admissions and collections at mass meetings, donations from local unions, subscription lists circulated in shops—these were the sources of the campaign fund raised in New York. And there can be no question that this sum would never have been gathered were not the left wing, the class conscious workers, ready to follow the Communist Party.

It is very significant to compare the financial support the Workers Party received in its campaign with that received by the federated farmer-labor party of New York City. If the minority were correct in its analysis, then the F. F. L. P., being a labor party with its wider appeal to the broad masses of workers, should have received considerable financial aid from organized labor. As a matter of fact while 25 local unions and 73 fraternal organizations officially endorsed it the Workers Party campaign fund, only two local unions ever paid the per capita tax to the federated. Members of the minority might agree that the campaign for support of the federated was not pushed—hence the poor showing. To which we may well reply that the money the federated might have gotten would have been contributed by those very unions who were ready to support the Workers Party.

Significant also were the mass meetings arranged by the party during the campaign. New York had never before seen such rousing mass demonstrations for the Communist movement. The Foster meetings alone were attended by about 6,000 workers. Who were these workers? Workers Party members and militants accepting the leadership of the Communists. No farmer-labor party, federated or otherwise, could have attracted wider masses to its demonstrations. As it was freely admitted on all sides, the workers came because these meetings were part of a Communist campaign carried on openly and directly by the Workers (Communist) Party. In other words, that part of the labor movement in New York which is left wing in character, was prepared to follow and support the Communist Party. Certainly the F. F. L. P. of New York can never boast that during its campaign last year it was able to rally any considerable mass of workers to its demonstrations. In fact, its audiences were composed of Workers Party members and a close circle of sympathizers whom the party could rally to its support without the cloak of farmer-laborism.

Further proof of the appealing power of the Workers Party itself was given by the highly successful street meetings which were held thruout the campaign. These outdoor meetings often approached the character of mass meetings. They were each attended by 200 to more than 1,000 workers who bought our literature and contributed to our campaign fund. They were the means of spreading the principles and program of the Workers Party amongst thousands, added new members to our ranks, increased our circle of sympathizers. At no time during the F. F. L. P. campaign last year could we point to our street demonstrations as indicative of the "appealing power" of the labor party. That the presidential election this year raised the general level of interest in politics. The fact remains, however, that notwithstanding all the pious wishes of the farmer-labor enthusiasts in our party, the workers did not flock to listen to our plea for the federated on the street corners of New York. But they did rally in great numbers to hear the message of the Communist Party.

Defenders of the minority thesis may argue that if the Workers Party was able to gain a wide hearing before the militant workers of New York during the recent campaign, it was due mainly to the fact that we raised the slogan of a farmer-labor party. This is a false analysis. The issue in New York, where the socialist party at the height of its power polled over 100,000 votes, was not a farmer-labor party but a straight political party. The issue was, a party upon the principles of the class struggle versus a party based upon the policy of class collaboration.

Our party in New York came to the fore in this campaign as the only party of the workers. We were replacing the socialist party in the minds of class conscious workers—which means that we had considerably strengthened our leadership of the left wing elements in the labor movement of New York. What was the reason? Was it because the socialist party betrayed the farmer-labor party idea by supporting LaFollette while we, the Workers Party, favored and fought for such an organization? By no means. The reason lay in this: that the socialist party, by its alliance with the petty bourgeoisie, had given the final proof of its desertion of the revolutionary struggle, while we stood forth as the only representatives of the class interests of the workers.

It was as the Workers Party, uncompromising defender of a militant struggle against capitalism both in immediate as well as ultimate demands, and not as the Workers Party advocate of a farmer-labor party, that we were able to rally to ourselves the class conscious workers of New York.

The election campaign in New York clearly showed that the farmer-labor party has no magnetic charm by which it draws masses of workers to its support, that the Workers Party can be, and is, the leader of the left wing. Those who might be prevailed upon to enter the "left class farmer-labor bloc"—that strange political phenomenon recently discovered by the minority—are ready to follow the Communist Party. It is our task not to organize them into a separate political body, a semi-Communist substitute for the Workers Party, but to influence them to join our ranks by raising and fighting for the immediate dynamic issues of the class struggle around our own party, and not around the slogan of a farmer-labor party. The thesis of the majority points the way.

UPON ONE POLICY WE ARE ALL UNITED and that is to Insure The Daily Worker for 1925

ALMOST complete discussion upon future party policy is possible today because we have the DAILY WORKER. Every party member who reads the DAILY WORKER, yes, and every one that does not because he cannot read English, will understand this to be an advantage of prime importance to the theoretical development of our members.

But the DAILY WORKER serves the party in many other ways. It is an all the year around weapon against the foe, it is an educator, it is a propagandist—and also, it is a bond, a chain, which ties member to member, city to city, district to district. It is the DAILY WORKER that helps to centralize our party into the effective machine it should be.

We must keep the DAILY WORKER and make it safe for 1925. To do this we must give our dollars generously today. If we expect to win, then the DAILY WORKER must live and prosper. With the DAILY WORKER, forward to victory, or—nothing. It should be easy to choose.

INSURANCE POLICIES are in the hands of the branches. They are priced $10, $5 and $1. The Central Executive Committee has decided that every member shall buy. Every member should buy no less than a $5 POLICY.

And while the party seethe with discussion over our future policy and tasks, there is one Policy upon which there must be unanimous agreement. That is the POLICY to BUY A POLICY to INSURE THE DAILY WORKER FOR 1925.

VICTORY! That's what we are after. If we expect to win then the DAILY WORKER must live and prosper. Victory and the DAILY WORKER are inseparable, bound up with each other. The daily AND victory or—nothing. It should be easy to choose!

WHY I AM FOR THE MINORITY THESIS

By L. CANDELA.

TO be a Marxist and a Leninist one must be able to understand first how the capitalist system works as a whole and what the fundamental relations are between the exploiting class and the exploited class; second how to apply the best tactics to awaken the exploited class to the reality of things, and replace the capitalist system with the Communist system.

At first sight, this seems a simple problem, but going into the matter more deeply, we will see that there are more and more complicated problems, requiring a solution. After more thoro study we realize that to reach our goal is indeed a hard task. That is why we often find that leaders of our movement make serious mistakes.

The thesis of the majority, altho it is cautious from beginning to end in giving facts and proposing the means of the future struggle for the advantage of our movement, draws a very, very poor conclusion. It seems that the analysis of the comrades composing the majority of our C. E. C. at the present time, is that the LaFollette movement will develop as the social-democratic movement of Germany, the left bloc of France and the labor party of England developed, and therefore, the majority says we must wait until the LaFollette movement is crystallized and has acquired power, namely, when it "Begins to show concrete and practical signs of its antagonism to the working class." (Read the majority thesis on the political situation.)

At that time, according to the majority, by means of the united front from below our party will find itself in a very influential position in the labor movement. We will then, the majority says, be able to counteract the LaFollette movement by assuming leadership of the masses. This seems to be the simple and logical conclusion of the majority thesis. The trouble is in their anxiety to be over-cautious, they hardly explain a clear cut view of this proposition.

First of all, as a Communist, I wish to object to the demagogic use of the phrase "United front from below," as the minority thesis is agreed on the united front from below. The fact that we are in favor of arousing the masses does not mean that the minority refuses to have a united front from below. Contrary to the menshevist interpretation of some of the majority comrades, the slogan "For a Class Farmer-Labor Party" means to further the united front from below on the field of political activity.

Coming to the main point, we see that the majority thesis is not opposed to the labor party in principle (see section 8 on the political situation). But the majority is opposed to the use of the slogan "For a Class Farmer Labor Party" as one of the best means to disintegrate the LaFollette movement and to strengthen the ranks and the prestige of our party. Further, because they find themselves trapped in the historical development of the labor movement in this country, they propose a general labor congress as the main objective of our activities (ending of section 8.)

Personally I could not understand what the majority means by calling a general labor congress. I do not know, nor have they themselves given a clear idea, as to the objective of calling such a labor congress. We must be clear on this point because it is very important to the life of the party. Suppose the idea of such a labor congress realized, and the general labor congress were called, let us say from below. What would be our position before such a congress? Certainly it would depend on what the situation happened to be at that time. I ask the comrades of the majority will agree with me when I say that such a labor congress would not be a Soviet congress, and our party would therefore make the most advanced economic and political demands possible under the circumstances.

Then the logical conclusion is that the congress would constitute itself into a political body, for the LaFollette movement by that time would have shown signs of betraying the workers. This would mean the formation of a farmer-labor party. So our puritan majority comrades will find themselves the formers of a farmer-labor party in spite of themselves.

However, if we go a little deeper we will learn that things will not be developed as easily as they are described. If we really mean to get the organized workers together in a political body, then in the course of our activity we shall adopt a strong political slogan, which combined with all our other slogans and activities will be the means of rallying the masses until the time is ripe to call such a labor congress. The minority, from this point of view, offers the slogan, "For a class farmer-labor party," as the most effective for the purpose. What does the majority offer in their thesis?—nothing.

Going deeper yet, I am convinced that for a long time to come, such a labor congress is not possible. But if it does take place, then it may develop into another C. P. I. A. If before such an occasion, our party refuses to crystallize such a congress into a united front on the political field, which is what the majority group has done in the past.

Then comes another question. Whether or not the Workers Party will ask the congress to adopt its program and platform, and ask the delegates to bow and obey at its command. Such a proposition will be ridiculous indeed, and it will put the party in danger of remaining isolated from the masses that are to gather at this predicted labor congress.

In the last point of the majority thesis, the comrades are warned to be on their guard against a "laborist tendency," which they say is appearing in our party. Further, they say it should be stamped out of the party. This is the most demagogic statement which has absolutely no basis in facts. I took the time to patiently study the thesis of the majority, and also their objectives, and the comrades who have done the same have noticed that if there is a tendency in the Workers Party which approaches to "laborism," it is just the tendency of the present majority of the C. E. C.

I believe now is the time to clear the deck once and for all. In the past the Foster-Cannon group have advocated a broad, genuine, farmer-labor party. Today we want a general labor congress which practically expresses the same idea.

Comrades, let us not forget that our party is going to deal with a historical development of the labor movement of America, which has no analogy with the movements of France, Germany and England. It is true that the LaFollette movement is of the same composition as the social-democratic party of Germany, the left bloc in France and the labor party of England. But of course, it is petty-bourgeois, containing the bureaucrats of the trade unions, the labor aristocracy, professional politicians, etc. And they will render the same service to the great capitalists.

But the comrades of the majority do not seem to understand that the structures of the said movements are different from each other, because they developed in different historical ages and among different economic conditions. Altho the MacDonald movement of the American will play the same part as the social-democratic party of Germany has played in the history of the class struggle, it is not organized on the same basis as the German party. So it is with the left bloc of France and the LaFollette movement of America. The LaFollette movement is already discredited in many ways, and is not yet crystallized into a third party.

Faced with these situations, the C. I. has instructed the Communists in England to penetrate into the labor party while different tactics are pursued by the comrades of France and Germany. As Marxists we too shall be able to maneuver in the American movement in accord with the conditions and the situation in America. Our party can find the best means of approaching its goal.

The minority thesis gives a brilliant analysis and conclusion as to what should be our tasks in the American labor movement. We must not forget that while America has the most highly developed capitalistic system in the world, the American masses are among the most backward in receiving the Communistic and socialistic theories. In addition, we are going thru an age of world capitalist decline. The masses of America have not yet awakened to the consciousness of their political independence. That is why the LaFollette movement is not as yet crystallized into a party. Therefore the situation in America must be considered from different angles than in other countries to meet America's unique objective conditions.

The minority thesis offers us the slogans, "For a class farmer-labor party, as one of the most effective means of opposing the crystallization of the LaFollette movement into a third party and increasing the prestige of the Workers Party among the masses of America. Amalgamation of the craft unions into powerful industrial unions! Organize the unorganized! Relief for the unemployed! Reorganization of the party on the basis of shop nuclei! Join the Workers Party! Active participation of the party members in immediate burning issues that confront the masses, and raising of political slogans in connection with all industrial struggles, thus directing these struggles toward political objectives and developing practical political action!"

When some of the majority comrades write that the minority adopted the farmer-labor slogan as the only way open to the Workers Party to arouse the masses, we may say that these majority comrades give a bad example of political honesty, because such an assertion is not true. The minority thesis contains many more

COST OF LIVING TAKES ANOTHER UPWARD FLIGHT

But the Workers' Wages Remain Stationary

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—Retail food prices took an upward trend in 19 leading cities of the country during November, ranging from less than five-tenths of one per cent in Detroit, to three per cent in Rochester, N. Y., the department of labor announced today.

An increase of two per cent was reported by Louisville, New Haven, New York, Portland, Maine and Washington, while Baltimore, Boston and Columbus, Dallas, Fall River, Manchester, Milwaukee, Omaha, St. Paul and Springfield, Ill., reported an increase of one per cent.

As compared with the average cost in 1913, the retail cost of food on Nov. 15, 1924, was 69 per cent higher in Richmond and Washington, 57 per cent in Baltimore; 56 per cent in New York; 54 per cent in Boston and Detroit; 53 per cent in Charleston, S. C., and New Haven; 51 per cent in Fall River and Milwaukee; 50 per cent in Dallas; 49 per cent in Manchester; and and 45 per cent in Louisville and Omaha.

The Paxton Hibben Board of Inquiry Reopens Hearings

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—The case of Capt. Paxton Hibben, reserve army officer whose trial by a board of inquiry appointed by Major Genera. Robert E. Bullard on charge of "hol ng be liefs favorable to enemies of the United States government" was suddenly halted in September, is to recommence this month. Col. John J. Bradley, commanding officer at Fort Slocum, Hibben's counsel, has been notified by Brig. Gen. William Bar-(and, clay Parsons, president of the board of of fleers combining the trial. Bradley has received a copy of the thousand typewritten pages of testimony already presented, most of it as relevant to the case as Webster's dictionary or Encyclopedia Brittanica, according to Bradley, who will move to have most of it excluded. It consists largely of alleged efforts of the Third International to overthrow the U. S government "in which Capt. Hibben is not even mentioned and with which he has never had anything whatever to do," says Bradley.

Hibben's counsel will introduce an affidavit from Capt. E. A. Yarrow in relief work at Tiflis, Transcaucasian Russia, which supports Hibben's views on the necessity of U. S. restoration of normal relations between Rus ia and America. Yarrow tells of Hibben's relief work in Russia in 1921 and states that it is his belief that officers in the army should be "leaders of thought not time servers and should be outspoken in their honest convictions not muzzled."

CHICAGO NORTH SIDE POLISH BRANCH IN BIG START FOR DRIVE

The North Side Chicago Polish Branch No. 20, gave the campaign to insure the DAILY WORKER for 1925 a big send off in the Polish Federation by contributing a total of fifty dollars in cash and pledging many more dollars to the drive. The quota for the Polish Federation is set at $450.00, and judging from the start of the campaign, this sum will soon be exceeded. The Polish branch No. 20 took out three $10.00 policies, and five comrades present took $5.00 policies. There were only eleven comrades present at this meeting. The branch has already ordered two more insurance policy books. A committee was elected to visit subscribers to the Polish Communist paper and ask their support.

"In my opinion the quota set for the Polish Federation was too low," Comrade Kowalski told the DAILY WORKER. "I believe members of the Polish Federation will subscribe at least $700.00 for the DAILY WORKER drive."

The leading two-column editorial in the "Trybuna Robotnicza" last week was devoted to a call to the members of the Polish Federation to get behind the DAILY WORKER campaign to insure the DAILY WORKER for 1925.

slogans than the majority thesis, and the minority does not say anywhere, nor does it show anywhere, that the slogan, "for a class farmer-labor party" is the only good one. On the contrary they show how, together with the other slogans, that slogan becomes one of the most effective weapons to raise the prestige of our party and to further the class struggle.

The majority thesis also contains many slogans. But the political significance of the farmer-labor slogan in face of the events of America's political life, is not recognized in the majority thesis. The majority does not even understand the most elementary fact—that if there is no united front slogan on the political field of America, such as the class farmer-labor party slogan, the Workers Party will be helping to crystallize the LaFollette movement into a third party. The majority simply demonstrates political blindness coupled with a sectarian spirit of the first magnitude. It is childish to believe that the C. I will support the present majority of the C. E. C.

"Join the Workers Party" is not a united front slogan.

The Defeatist Thesis of the C. E. C. Majority!

By W. J. WHITE.

THE Foster, Cannon, Browder, et al, majority theses is one of the most discouraging documents it has ever been my misfortune to have to wade thru, and I use the word wade advisedly, for that is what the rank and file must do in order to get the true inwardness of their flunking and running away from the necessity of forming a united frant in the ranks of the landless farmers and the unorganized industrial workers.

And when these workers have gotten a headache, from their toil and their hardships, the unwelcome task, this long-winded apology imposes on the membership, no word of hope or encouragement will they find to greet them at the end, nothing but discouragement and despair if they have the tenacity and concentration of purpose to stick it out to the end. So much for the theses itself.

Running like a thread thru this is the continual cry of despair: "Oh, woe is me! We went out to these and they did not head. Everything is lost! Let us quit, let us quit, let us leave them to their fate!" This is the left motive running thru the entire document. A quitting, defeatist theses.

How Sam Gompers, Lewis, Berry and other capitalist allies, who helped to foist upon the workers the LaFollette goblin, must laugh when they see the panic and fright their political masked strategy has caused in the ranks of the Foster, Cannon, Browder groups. How they will chortle with glee when they see this bunch of Don Quixotes still charging at the wind mills of LaFollette and LaFollettism, which they set up for this very purpose, instead of putting all this wasted energy to the best purpose of attacking the real enemy of the working class, lack of solidarity and organization in the ranks of the poor farmers and the unorganized industrial workers and showing them the necessity of class solidarity and organization in the face of a common enemy.

With this panic running thru the ranks of the majority committee it is well that there is a minority to have the courage to call the attention of the membership to the real tasks confronting the workers. Paragraph after paragraph in this theses is devoted to laying this LaFollette ghost. It would take me adding inches to keep tab on the number of times the word LaFollette and LaFollettism is to be found in this epic to the goblin of LaFollettism. Take courage Corporal "Cy Kieg" Bittleman and "Sancho Panza" Browder, you who are fighting this rear guard action, to lay this ghost, for this is not so deadly as it seems, and after the majority of your group have recovered from this panic and fright, they will find that this red herring of LaFolletism under other forms will be dragged across the path of the workers time after time. The rank and file of farmers and industrial workers are not such dampboofs as they seem.

Do not, I beg of you, waste so much ammunition bombing fogs and shooting ten pounders at chipmunks. Turn your guns on real issues, there are plenty of them, and they are worthy of your marksmanship, I assure you.

However, I see another matter which is running thru this theses, which is to be called to the attention of the rank and file of the members of our party who read the DAILY WORKER, and that is the attempt of this new majority to foist upon the minority the guilt of their own sins.

In the "August Theses" it was the maneuver of Pepper and Ruthenberg to form a united front of the farmers and industrial workers, who were ideologically, and in interest, closest to the Workers Party, and the only criticism the Communist International made on this was that they stressed the farmers' end on this front of workers and farmers too much. In other words they were right from a Bolshevist viewpoint, but did not balance up their work in the two wings of this logical front, while the work of the Communist International has been to keep the party going to the left and not swinging to the right under the leadership of the Foster-Cannon group.

This move of Comrades Pepper and Ruthenberg was the true Bolshevik position and to true conception of Marxism and Leninism, but the Communist International said the Workers Party was not strong enough from the standpoint of Bolshevism to carry out the maneuver.

This was the decision of the Communist International on the question. In the case of the LaFollette maneuvering under the leadership of the Foster-Cannon group it was only under the hardest kind of work of the international that we were kept heading from plunging headlong into the chaos of the third party abyss and to which they now would place the blame on the shoulders of the minority, who have all along held to the true Bolshevik position, but also to the constant criticism of the Communist International against the swinging to the right are we indebted, and this constant criticism has been against this present majority, the Foster-Cannon group. Let those who have sinned bear the result of their sinning and not try to shift the sin onto the shoulders of some minority.

Ready enough they were to follow the LaFollette "illusion" over the brink and into the precipice, and they now rush to the other extreme and say: "A general agitation campaign by the Workers Party under the slogan of 'For a Mass Farmer-Labor Party!' would not be profitable. The policy of applying the united front tactic by attempting to form a mass farmer-labor party of which the Workers Party would be a part, is not adaptable at the present period."

Let me ask the Foster-Cannon majority group at this juncture: Did the election which we have just passed thru remove the necessity for a mass farmer-labor party? You say it did. Why do you say this? Has this election given the landless farmers back their land? Has the pressure of capitalism been removed from the shoulders of the proletariat in the mills and mines? Is the robbery of these workers any less today than it was before the votes were cast? Is it not a fact that these workers have a common interest in throwing from their shoulders this common enemy, capitalism? Can they do this better in separate groups than in mass action of farmers and workers led by the Workers Party? You know they cannot.

Again you leave no doubt about your lack of grasp of the question confronting the workers and the Workers Party when you say a little farther on in the theses: "Our chief task of the immediate future is not the building of such a farmer-labor party but the strengthening and developing of the Workers Party. . . ." How pray are you going to build this Workers Party? Have you some magic formula which will enable you to get this material out of the nonexistent?

Now is not the time for you to wrap your bedraggled cloak of ingrowing political puritanism and virgility which you have soiled, about your shoulders and attempt to hold aloof from this great mass of workers and farmers from whom the strength of the Communist movement has come, and from which it must come.

The mass farmer-labor party is the slogan which must be used to rally them to the Communist movement. It is from the mass that the revolution will come. Cheer up the worst is yet to come. It is not as black as it looks.

Wants Registration of Aliens.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 10.—Demand for registration of all aliens is again made by Secretary of Labor Davis in his latest annual report to congress. This action is denounced by organized labor and by defenders of civil liberties as being a scheme to fix an industrial passport system upon foreign-born laborers in this country, is supported by the national association of manufacturers. It would enable the immigration bureau to keep tab on the whereabouts and activities of these workers, and to hustle them out of the country if they were found to be taking part in labor agitation or strikes.

Michigan Coops are Sturdy.

MAKING MOTION PICTURES TALK FOR COMMUNISM

(I. W. A. Press Service.)

Sooner or later the expression of class interest in the motion pictures will be recognized as equal in importance with that of the press. It will be an accepted fact that every local labor movement must have its movie theater side by side with its newspaper, that the Labor Temple is only half complete unless it contains a well-equipped movie theater to pay its expenses and to express the workers' cause in the most eloquent medium known. Such a motion picture theater is the natural meeting place and rallying ground in local class battles, strike meetings, school protest gatherings, etc.; its billboards are always read and therefore would become bulletins for union notices and other items of importance to the workers. The maintenance of such labor theaters would be an effective basis for a local united front, which would be constantly extended as the showplace was put to more and more distinct use during the sharpening of the struggle.

Look for Our Friends.

The first step is the showing of every film we now have in every house friendly to our cause so as to build up a demand for labor movies. The demand must be built up not only among isolated individuals but among working class organizations, unions, fraternities, co-operatives, schools; this can best be done by lining them up in support of our present film ventures. In so doing we not only insure the success of our present shows but we build solidly for the future. We must immediately list all theaters and managers favorably disposed toward us, and all organizations which might be induced to produce our films on their own auspices. All such information should be sent to the International Workers' Aid, 19 S. Lincoln St. Chicago, Ill.

HUNGARIAN SECTION CONVENTION ENDORSES C. E. C. MINORITY'S THESIS

(Special to The Daily Worker)

NEW YORK CITY, Dec. 10.—The convention of the Hungarian section in New York which held its sessions on Dec. 4 and 5 heard the reports of Comrade A. Bittelman, representative of the Central Executive Committee of the party, and Comrade Benjamin Gitlow, representing the minority of the Central Executive Committee.

After the speeches of the two representatives and a thoro discussion, the convention voted on the question of its attitude toward the theses of the majority and the minority.

The resolution adopted by an overwhelming vote representing branches from every part of the country was as follows: After having heard the report of the Central Executive Committee and the minority of the Central Executive Committee and after having thoroly discussed the question placed before it, the Hungarian section of the Workers Party in convention assembled declares itself unqualifiedly in favor of the position of and thesis of the minority group of Comrades Ruthenberg and Lovestone.

The convention wishes to emphasize the following points: 1. The necessity of continuing the use of the farmer labor party slogan as one of the most effective weapons for rallying the workers and poor farmers around the Workers Party into a mass Communist Party. 2. The necessity in accordance with the decision of the Communist International of the Central Executive Committee of the party and the whole party membership carrying on an energetic campaign to root out all vestiges of the Second-and-a-Half International ideology and conception of the Communist activity still prevalent in our party and accepting no lip adoption of the position of the Communist International. 3. The necessity of strict party control of all party organs so that there may be no repetition of the left social democratic point of view being represented and defended in our press. 4. The necessity of Bolshevizing the party thru a thoro Marxian-Leninistic education of our party membership to enable all members actively to participate in the daily struggles of the workers and in all phases of our party work. A complete reorganization of the party on the basis of shop nuclei, as the only effective means of mobilizing all party forces and masses of the workers for the proletarian revolution. The complete reorganization of the industrial department of the party in order that it may carry out the tasks laid down by the Red International of Labor Unions, in its recent decision. The organization on an aggressive department for carrying on persistent work among the poor and exploited farmers of the country. This convention pledges energetically to support the DAILY WORKER, the central organ of the party, as one of the best mediums for increasing the influence and prestige of the party among the workers and poor farmers of the United States. The convention is of the opinion that only by fulfilling the above tasks will the Workers Party grow into a mass Communist Party capable of leading the American workers and poor farmers into the struggle for the establishment of the proletarian dictatorship thru a Soviet government in the United States.

The resolution also provided for the discussion of the two theses thruout the branches.

In the afternoon session, Comrade Israel Amter, who for a year and a half represented the Workers Party in the councils of the Communist International, made a spirited address. A special invitation was extended to him by the convention. He was very warmly received. Thunderous applause and a tremendous demonstration greeted Comrade Amter when he mentioned the name of comrade Pepper and his services to the Workers Party, in particular, and the Communist International in general.

The convention was considered to be one of the most successful ever held by any federation language group of the Workers Party.

Red-Hunter Disappoints Diners.

NEW YORK.—American Defense Society leaders pepped themselves up with anti-Bolshevik cocaine at a select dinner at the palatial Hotel Plaza, where Francis McCullagh, former British spy in Russia, and New York Herald correspondent from Warsaw, spoke luridly of red terror, red slavery and red free love.

McCullagh's climax was disappointing to his audience. The Bolshevik regime is quite secure, he said, supported by a well-armed and well-fed red army.

ITALIAN COMRADES PLEDGE SELVES TO EXCEED THEIR QUOTA

Candela, assistant secretary of the Italian Federation declares, "The Italian Federation will exceed the quota of $1,698 set for it by the DAILY WORKER," Candela said.

"I am confident that the Italian branches will not only reach the quota, but will far exceed it. The total quota set is fifty thouand dollars as an absolute minimum. We are having our struggle with 'Il Lavoratore', our Italian Communist daily, and we know what it means to issue a Communist daily newspaper. We are advertising the DAILY WORKER campaign in 'Il Lavoratore' and we call on all comrades in the Italian Federation to help us make the campaign by putting the quota of the Italian Federation over the top."

MUSIC.

By ALFRED V. FRANKENSTEIN

SYLVIA LENT, who is one of the youngest violinists who ever played solo with the Chicago Symphony orchestra, was soloist with that organization in the eighth program of this season. She played the first concerto of Max Bruch. Now the Bruch concerti, to say the least, are a bit overworked hereabouts, and it takes an excellent violinist to put them over so they do not sound bromidic. This Sylvia Lent did. Her tone is remarkably large, fine in quality, and her technic and style are sure and firm. Hers was a new and charming interpretation of the slow movement, with its idyllic, singing melody.

"A Night on the Bare Mountain," a symphonic poem by Modest Musorgski, opened the concert. Musorgski tells the story in this work of a dance of the demon Chernobog and his followers on the Bald mountain, near Kiev. A church bell rings, and the devils are dispersed. I prefer to think of the work apart from this commonplace program. It is probably the grandest storm in music. For Musorgski, like Wagner, knew that to picture a storm in tone one does not need to pile up all the noise a modern orchestra affords, but one needs rather write themes that in themselves have a restless, stormy character.

The ninth or unfinished symphony of Anton Bruckner, Mr. Stock's favorite composer, followed the Musorgski. Even without the finale, the symphony is quite long, and tenaciously romantic and affecting. Bruckner is unfortunately an unheard composer in Chicago, and Stock ought to give us more of him.

As a memorial for Gabriel Faure, who died a few weeks ago, a suite by him taken from his incidental music to Maeterlinck's "Pelleas and Melisande" was performed. It is nice, unimportant salon music. It makes one neither enthusiastic in its praise or condemnation. Debussy said all there was to be said in the way of a setting for "Pelleas and Melisande," and beside his creation, the work of the earlier composer is insignificant.

HELP! HELP! Give Us a Hand—

We are swamped again. There is just a load of work piling up in our office and our small force is struggling hard to get it done. If any comrades have a day, an hour or a minute to spare, COME ON OVER—GIVE US A HAND!

THUGS WHO BEAT UP I. W. W. FACE DAMAGE SUITS

But Brass Knucks Are Hard Argument

(By Defense News Service)

SEATTLE, Wash.—Heavy damage suits will shortly be filed against Sheriff C. R. Conn, the county of Skagit; City Marshal James Owens of Concrete, and several deputy sheriffs, for the part they played in the recent deportation of 105 striking construction workers from Concrete and the beating and injuring of various strikers. The suits will be filed by the legal bureau of the Seattle Central Labor Council.

Conn is accused of assaulting Henry Gehrig and Joseph Smith with brass knuckles. Gehrig and Smith were members of a committee sent by the I. W. W. from Seattle to gather up belongings of the deportees. Owens, a 300-pound man, is charged with beating and kicking Leo C. Smith, who weighs 135, and pushing him down a 50-foot embankment, at the bottom of which Smith was beaten by deputies.

Harry G. Clark, long resident of Concrete, was jailed overnight without a warrant, "to prevent him from being lynched." He had been speaking in behalf of the strikers. A policeman told Clark that the American Legion had debated whether or not to lynch him.

The strike began Oct. 17, tying up a big Stone & Webster hydro-electric project, on which 700 men had been employed. Demands of the strikers included these: Release of the Centralia defendants and 97 criminal-syndicalism law prisoners in Washington and California; 35 per cent wage increase; clean bed-linen weekly; concrete fumes to be made safe; better food; boycott of all California products in camp. Numerous men had been hurt in accidents resulting from unsafe fumes.

TWO AMERICAN GIRLS MISSING IN CHINA

From Shanghai comes the news that Elizabeth Berg and Ingebork Nystul, Americans, attached to a mission at Juchow, are missing.

China today is a powder magazine. Any spark may cause a conflict of world-wide consequences. Sympathy for two missing girls or a curly-headed servant of God will be the excuse the imperialists will offer for the war.

Of course they are not going to say that we war to make it possible for Jones and Co., Incorporated, capitalization a hundred million, to keep profiteering in the goose-feather business.

The Father of the Communist International

LENIN was the creator and the driving force of the Communist International, which he began building during the very Second International began openly to support their governments. Lenin issued the following slogan: "The Second International is dead; long live the Third International." He was one of the organizers of the conference of Zimmerwald and Kienthal, where he formulated the basis for the left wing. During the years of war he ruthlessly opposed and attacked every shade of opportunism, particularly the meaningless pacifist abortion of Kautsky. But it was only after the October revolution that conditions became ripe for the Third International, conditions which laid the national, territorial, social, and political foundations for the International of action. The Russian experiences served the Communist International as the guiding line of its policies.

However, Lenin did not reject in an offhand manner everything that was created by the Second International. He understood how to differentiate between what was valuable and what was not. In his article entitled "The Third International and Its Place in History," he said the following:

"The First International laid the foundation for the international proletarian struggle for socialism. The Second International constitutes the epoch in which the ground has been prepared in a number of countries for a mass movement. The Third International utilizes the results of the activities of the Second International, breaks with the opportunistic, socialchauvinistic, and petty-bourgeois tendencies, and begings to realize the dictatorship of the proletariat."

In the same article Lenin explains what he considered the foundation of the Third International:

"The historic world significance of the Communist international consists in this that it begins to put into effect the things which Marx has proven theoretically to be a necessity, thereby realizing the consequences produced by the socialist and labor movement, that is the dictatorship of the proletariat."

Lenin gave the Communist Intertion by the formulating many of national not only its ideological direction by formulating many of the theses adopted by the Comintern, which have drawn the attention of the Communist Parties to the importance of the agrarian and colonial questions, to the mutual relations between the dictatorship and capitalist democracy, but he also participated directly and actively in the solution of all problems confronted by the Communist International. Between Congresses he always occupied himself very intensively with the problems of Communist Parties all over the world. And when, in the beginning of 1920, he noticed the appearance of a sort of utopian Communism, he began struggling against it in his famous booklet, "The Infantile Sickness fo Communism," thereby dealing a death-blow to this tendency.

After the formation of the Communist International, Lenin's main worry was to close the gates to the opportunist elements. The famous 21 points, which attracted so much attention, not only of the reformist press but also of the capitalist press, belong to Lenin. Lenin looked upon the Communist International not as a meeting place of all kinds of independent national parties, but as an absolute homogeneous international fighting organization. However, he always had regard for the situations of the various countries, and never presented exaggerated demands to the newly-formed Communist organizations, for he knew only too well how much effort it would require to educate politically and organizationally and to put on the right track all those new Communist Parties which had just emerged from the ranks of social democracy. He considered it the best means to pursue a clear revolutionary policy and, in this sense, he developed his activities in the Communist International. Lenin was, for the Third International, what Marx was for the First. The revolutionary workers of all countries have still a lot to learn from Lenin's works, particularly from his actions, because Leninism and Communism are one and the same thing.

EGYPTIANS AT LEAGUE MEET BOTHER TORIES

Make Strong Attack on British Tyranny

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROME, Dec. 10.—Austen Chamberlain is going thru the farce of pretending to take the league of nations seriously, after giving it a solar plexus blow when the tory cabinet warned the other league nations that Britain would not tolerate bringing the Egyptian question before that body. This leaves the league with nothing to do. It is little better than a dead slogan or a pious wish.

But the Egyptian question refuses to be sidetracked. Senator Louis Fancus, chairman of the foreign affairs committee of the Egyptian senate, sent a memorandum to the chairman of the league council declaring that the Egyptian parliament's plea for intervention to the league did not come from the government, it nevertheless represented the sentiments of the Egyptian people.

Faced The Cannons.

The reason the appeal did not come from the Egyptian government is because England had cannons pointing at its members and several of them were thrown into jail immediately after the killing of Sir Lee Stack.

In a prepared statement for the press, Senator Fanous said:

British Repression.

"We want to find out if the league is merely trying to dodge behind technicalities and quibbling and whether might and force still rule the world despite the allies' grand pose and idealistic statements during the war.

"Despite the British efforts to stifle the discussion here and sending Foreign Minister Austen Chamoerlain to throttle the other delegates, we believe the people of Europe and America, too, must be made to realize what the seizure of Egypt and the Sudan means. Hundreds of millions of people of different race, different color, different religion from you are watching this test case. If the British succeed in grabbing Egypt there will be repercussions thruout the near and far east."

Wool Manufacturers Celebrate; Their Man Friday Goes to Senate

(By The Federated Press)

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—With much self-congratulation for lobbying against the French-Capper truth-in-fabric bill in Washington and for the recent election of "one of our own members—Jesse H. Metcalf of Metcalf Bros. & Co., which gives us direct representation in the upper house of congress," the American Association of Woolen and Worsted Manufacturers held its annual get-together at the Waldorf-Astoria, New York City. All phases of the business end of the textile industry were discussed in the lengthy speeches but never a word about the human factor, the worker.

None of the manufacturers assumed that the new senator from Rhode Island would represent the people of the state instead of his business associates who paid for his election. Gifford said: "In matters of national scope, the association each year increases its position and its capacity for influence in Washington, and in this connection it is with no small gratification that we view the recent election of business men to the United States senate," and mentioned Metcalf as example.

Hungarian Workers in Drama by Lassen.

Reviewed by Simon Felshin.

The play, "Hungary, 1914-1919," by John Lassen, the eminent young Hungarian Communist writer, was produced with great success at the Meckescher Foundation Building, 104th Street and Fifth Avenue, New York City, on Saturday evening and Sunday afternoon, Nov. 15 and 16. John Lassen, who has displeased the authorities here with a poem recently printed in the Hungarian Communist daily, Elore, depicts in his play the eve of the war, the war, the revolution, and the counter-revolution.

It ends with an epilogue which is a prophecy of a new and better life that is yet to come in spite of the crimes of the counter-revolution.

Play Is Direct.

There is nothing equivocal in the play, nothing of the ambiguity of petty bourgeois pacifists, such as Romain Holland or Ernest Toller. Everything is direct. A hatred for the capitalist's war, a glorification of the worker's revolution and anathema for the murderous counter-revolution. Not a moment did the play lag. There was stirring scene after stirring scene. The play had dynamic qualities. There were moments when the audience were stirred to their depths. The mass scenes were of tremendous effectiveness. The writer evidently knows masses and how they act.

With an amateur company of workers with insufficient properties the production was nevertheless excellent. Evidently the director could work wonders with little at his disposal. The playing was better than could have been expected and the reason must be that the workers who composed the cast felt every bit of the theme and acted with the feeling born of actual revolutionary experience.

The devices used in the production were in the latest European style, with the scenes taking place in panels so that quick changes could be effected by switching the action from one panel to another.

Last Scene Powerful.

The last scene was overpowering in its emotional qualities. On one side was the prison cell with the shadow of the gallows on the wall and the young revolutionary leader awaiting death. On the other, the prison hospital with the sweetheart of the revolutionist, a daughter of the bourgeoisie gone over to the revolutionary side, in the throes of child-birth. And when, outside, the revolutionist is hanged, his sweetheart dies. But the child has been born, and this child is the symbol for the new and glorious life that must be born out of the suffering of the present.

Graft Case Trial Here Exposes Booze Deals in Capitol

Elias H. Mortimer, the government's "paid informer" was on the witness stand today in federal court here in the bribery and conspiracy trial of the former veterans' bureau head, Charles R. Forbes, and the millionaire contractor, J. W. Thompson. Mortimer's story of graft and corruption in connection with the hospital contracts for the veterans' bureau brot a few more names to the roster of the crooked transactions that are perpetrated at the government's capital behind closed doors.

Speaking of Washington, Mortimer went into detail concerning plots to remove liquor from government warehouses and to obtain pardons for convicted bootleggers. He called their booze and pardon deals and he broke in the names of Representative George Edmonds of Philadelphia, John W. Langley of Kentucky, Sidney Bieber, former protege of "uncle" Joe Cannon and George W. Bean, republican national committeeman of Florida.

APPEAL FROM ONE OF OUR READERS FOR AID OF PERSECUTED MINER

Dear Comrades:— am writing this letter in the interest of prisoner H. C. Hickey in Lewisberg, West Vo. County Jail. No doubt you are familiar with his case as well as the others there. He committed the "horrible crime" of participating in parade of coal miners in March 1921 and thus became a victim of the hate of the coal barons.

The prisoner has served his time which was up this month but there is a $500 fine which must be paid and the poor worker is desperate He has no money and no friends who can pay and he writes asking what can we do to help him.

I am asking all the workers who believe in the fight in the class struggle, especially the DAILY WORKER: "What can we do to help this worker and others who are in prison?"

I know the DAILY WORKER has made the best fight for the workers in prison by their honest toil. It's the best friend and the best paper for the working people in this country.

Long Live the DAILY WORKER.

Down with the coal barons who take their hate out on the bended backs of the poor miners.

SHOW GERMANY IS PAYING INTEREST ON OWN MONEY

Dawes Plan Squeezes German Exports

(Special to The Daily Worker)

BERLIN, Dec. 10.—Germany has advanced on her reparations account 235,928,846 gold marks to the reparations committee, of which the agent general for reparations payments turned back to Germany 214,834,917 gold marks—at interest—as part of the international "reparations loan."

This passing of money back and forth, with Germany receiving a loan which she herself has provided, is part of the "Dawes plan." S. Parker Gilbert, jr., agent general, announces that "the first year's reparation annuity is to come from the proceeds of the foreign loan and the interest of the German railroad bonds, so as to avoid a drain on the German budget for the first year."

Another feature of the Dawes plan which is not working so well, is the 25 per cent "reparations export tax" on German products. This matter will be further discussed by the allied finance ministers at their meeting in Paris in January, according to Gilbert.

Under this plan, Germany is controlled by the American bankers financing the "Dawes plan" and is being kept from entering the competitive world markets.

Speaking of Stability

Where is the evidence of the recovery of European capitalism from its rapid downward trend since the world war?

The yellow socialist press of Europe and America constantly play up the recovery of capitalism, but fails to bring forward any proof of stabilization except the Dawes plan upon which the reformist betrayers of the European revolution now stake their hopes.

All of the evidence contained in the news of the last three months has been a refutation of the growing stability of captalism and the last two weeks have shown a remarkable collection of facts proving that only the most ruthless suppression of the masses of workers and peasants prevents the complete collapse of capitalist production and exchange.

In Belgium the coal miners fought for two months with arms in their hands and finally forced an increase in wages which ended the conflict temporarily while the miners prepare for a more bitter struggle.

A general railway strike in Austria disrupts the national economy while the league of nations and Zimmerman, its bailiff-in-chief, fume helplessly.

In France there has been strike after strike with the Confederation Unitaire (the section of the Red International of Labor Unions) in the lead. Immense Communist demonstrations have put the Herriot government in hot water.

In Italy the anti-fascist movement gains headway every day with the industrial workers and landless peasants rallying to the Communist Party.

In Bulgaria the bloody Zankov government hangs on only by murderous repression with the masses against it and its overthrow looming in the near future.

The Horthy dictatorship in Hungary confronts a growing mass movement that is accelerated by the expulsion of opposition deputies from parliament.

In Germany the industrial workers in the strategic centers—coal and iron—are against the Dawes plan and even the outlawing of the Communist Party, the arrest of its leaders and mass terror thruout Germany has resulted in an actual increase in the Communist vote, altho they lost deputies in the reichstag.

In Poland the governmental terror has imprisoned 6,000 trade union officials and Communists. Only bayonets and machine guns maintain the hold of the lackeys of French capitalism on the state power. The nation is ruined insofar as industry and agriculture is concerned.

In Esthonia, Latvia and Lithuania, Jugo-Slavia and Roumania, the governments hold power by terror alone. There is no such a thing as mass support of these terroristic states. They live on subsidies from the allied nations.

Even in staid old England, the foundation of reaction and the bulwark of European counter-revolution, a great left wing movement shows itself in the trade unions. India and Egypt must be kept down with an iron hand. They are no longer held by the leading strings of the empire.

Overshadowing all else is the program of unity of the world trade union movement brought forward by the Red International of Labor Unions. It has received a grateful reception from the organized masses that frightens the reactionary leaders whose program is that of complete submission to the Dawes plan.

The economic recoveries of capitalism that are cited from time to time are only within the general cycle of capitalist decay. They represent temporary gains made by capitalist offensives, but the mass movements of the European workers and particularly their response to the unity slogan of the R. I. L. U., is conclusive proof that the last line of capitalism's defense—the reformist and reactionary trade union officials—are being swept away by the rising tide of revolution.

The only stable government in Europe is Soviet Russia.

The only stable and growing labor movement is the Red International of Labor Unions and the Communist International.

According to newspaper reports, the Kaiser's supporters in the German elections came within a hairbreadth of winning. There is little danger of the czar's suporters winning out in Russia, certainly not with the ballot and not very likely with the bullet.

LaFollette denounced the Communists for their policy of boring from within. He has not yet commented for publication on how he feels over the action of the republican party in throwing him out of the G. O. P. caucus. It is a case of the biter getting bitten.

Class Collaborationist Strabismus

It is necessary for those who fall for class collaboration to make some other argument for their position, other than that they believe in working hard for the bosses' interests. So they appear in the guise of "constructive" revolutionists, with "practical" programs, and they sneer at these "wild and visionary Communists."

We are reminded of this by the facility for searching out "practical" things done by the arch-reactionaries in the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, and the right wing of the A. C. W., as exhibited by the New York correspondent of the Federated Press, Art Shields.

Mr. Shields, we regret to say, has a nose for news that is sensitive largely to the innocuous. He has found great worth in the unemployment insurance agreement signed by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers. But accepting the official boasts of Mr. Billikopf without making inquiry as to how the rank and file workers feel about this agreement, exhibits a barren reckoning of the forces engaged in the garment trades.

The workers in the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' union who have a left wing viewpoint, who adhere to the program of the Trade Union Educational League, and they are a considerable number if not the majority, are 100 per cent in favor of unemployment insurance. Let that be understood. But they are in flat opposition to the agreement upon that question, which provides that the workers themselves shall contribute half the relief funds, yet provides that the employers completely control the fund and the payment of unemployment relief.

If Mr. Shields would have not been possessed by an astigmatism which allows him only to see officials in the needle trades, he would have noted that the left wing has decided differences with the arrangement and has made these differences heard thruout the union.

The left wing says that "The industry must support the workers"—and upon that principle it opposes to the present agreement the proposal that the employers alone must furnish the unemployment funds, and and that to avoid discrimination against active unionists, it shall be administered solely by the union. This information is just as important as the statements of Mr. Billikopf, termed "the impartial chairman of the New York market."

Another slight item of interest in the A. C. W., is the wave of resentment that has swept the whole union at the speech of Hillman in Chicago, in which he openly gave up the class struggle and announced that the days of strikes were over except upon purely defensive grounds to save the union from utter collapse.

But in the I. L. G. W., the insensate and tyrannical crushing of the left wing, the disfranchisement of tens of thousands, the expulsions, the gang rule, the disgraceful Boston convention and the strong rank and file movement in opposition—this is invisible to Mr. Shields. All he can see is a dental clinic in New York City, which under operation of the union doubtless does good work, but which monopolizes a whole sheet of Federated Press news which we are compelled to throw in the wastebasket.

Perhaps the Sigman-Abe Cahan gang expects that they may use the dental clinic to pull the teeth of the left wing, but we fail to discern any reason why they should pull crossways the eyes of a labor press correspondent as well unless his training in the I. W. W. has made him unusually susceptible to this treatment.

Carpenters Rally for Struggle

The speedy manner in which the militants in Carpenters' Union 181 rallied to the members expelled for their exposure of President Hutcheson's treachery in signing a Landis award agreement is not only encouraging as more evidence of a reviving fighting spirit in the unions, but as a sign that there is a deepseated disposition on the part of the rank and file to put an end to the autocracy of officialdom.

The recent meeting in Wicker Park Hall was a real rank and file protest. The meeting was practically unanimous against the local Hutcheson satellites and these gentry, by calling in the police in an attempt to terrorize the membership, alienated what little support they had.

This is the way to carry out the program of the Trade Union Educational League—to intensify the struggle against the crooked officialdom so that it confronts, not a little handful of convinced revolutionists, but a solid bloc of the rank and file for whose interests the left wing speaks and for whom it fights.

The announced determination of the membership to to attend every meeting en masse until the militants are reinstated, will bring no joy to the hearts of the fakirs whose rule is based on a small minority.

The next step of local 181 is to bring all the other Chicago locals into the fight.

One of the high lights of the king's speech at the opening of parliament was that the prince of Wales has found a country in which he has not yet fallen from his horse. He is going to Argentine to remedy this oversight.

The railway labor board seems to be about as popular among the railway workers as the kaiser is among the German Communists.

HERRIOT'S RED RAIDS TURN THE LAUGH ON HIM

Communists Ridicule Terror Campaign

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PARIS, Dec. 10.—The raids on the Communists inaugurated by the Herriot government have now become the laughing stock of France.

Herriot has been ordered to bed by his physicians, while the Communists came off with flying colors.

Herirot Ridiculed.

A Communist deputy made an attack on Herriot for his "red raid" and ridiculed the government for using such drastic measures against the Marxian socialist schools which have existed in France for the past thirty years without interference. Several Communist deputies had the house in convulsions of laughter over the ludicrous pictures cut by Herriot and his armies in quelling the "revolution" the existence of which he was made aware by Austen Chamberlain, tory secretary for foreign affairs.

Herriot denied that his actions were repressive or directed against free speech. The Communist simply did behind it in its attack on the Communists.

Feared Communism.

That the repressive measures employed by Herriot against the Communists were not due to any sudden decision on his part, but rather to a deep seated fear of the growth of Communism was proven by the fact that more French capital was exported, invested in foreign securities, during the past week than in any two previous months.

The capitalist newspapers that have been calling for repressive measures against the Communist menace for the past few weeks have calmed down considerably owing to the depression on the bourse and to the failure of the government to "rally the masses

DETROIT JUNIORS TO SHOW WHAT THEY CAN DO

(Special to The Daily Worker)

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 10.—The members of the junior section of the L. W. L., Detroit, Mich., will present a spectacular program at the House of the Masses, 2646 St. Aubin Sts., Dec. 12, at 8 p. m. The feature numbers of the program will be three plays: "The Children's Auction," scene from Andreyev's "King Hunger" and a two-act play, "Schooldays." Solo selections by the children will complete the program, which promises to be one of the most interesting presentations ever given to a working class audience in Detroit.

The junior section of the Y. W. L. in Detroit has been organized for two months and now has one hundred members, every one of whom will participate in this program. From the very start the juniors have been marked for their activity. They contributed to the success of the seventh anniversary celebration in Detroit. They have made meetings of both the party and the league more enthusiastic by their singing. The only fight in Detroit against American educational week was waged by the juniors. This program, their latest effort, is a glorious demonstration of what the freed energies of childhood can achieve.

Do You Live in Cleveland?

CLEVELAND, Ohio, Dec. 10.—Two new junior groups have been organized, one in Collinwood named "Kaplan Group," and one in Finnish Hall, 1303 West 55th St. The original group is functioning and doing good work at 3211 Woodland avenue. Comrades are invited to come to any of these groups and bring their children. A new group is to be organized on Sunday at South Slavic Hall, 5607 St. Clair avenue. All comrades of the Workers Party and Young Workers' League desiring to teach a group should communicate with the local junior director, Nell Amter, 5527 Euclid avenue.

AMERICAN CLASS WAR ORPHANS' BENEFIT IN SAN PEDRO SATURDAY

SAN PEDRO, Cal., Dec. 10.—A benefit will be given here for the American class war orphans in Harbor City, San Pedro, Saturday evening, Dec. 13, at Firemen's Hall. WORKERS IN ATTACK ON GOMPERS AS THE INSTRUMENT OF YANKEE IMPERIALISM IN LABOR MOVEMENT

The DAILY WORKER prints below a translation of the stirring document which was issued in Mexico City and addressed to the delegates of the Pan-American Federation of Labor:

TO THE DELEGATES:

Gompers is the instrument of Yankee imperialism in the labor movement.

He sabotaged the protest of the Third Congress against the occupation of Santo Domingo.

He sanctioned the occupation of Haiti (See the American Federationist for March, 1924.)

He proposed to the United States government that it pay less wages by 25 or 35 per cent, to the Latin-Americans in the Panama Canal zone, than to the workers from the United States.

In spite of the repeated resolutions of the Pan-American Federation, Gompers has done nothing for the Mexican immigrants, inhumanly exploited in the United States.

He opposes any fight whatsoever against Yankee imperialism, a fight that must be the object of continental solidarity and of the Pan-American Federation.

He opposes socialism, and he says so frankly.

He opposes the yearly protest on the First of May, because it is "revolutionary."

He breaks strikes declared in solidarity, and in general he breaks them because they endanger capitalism.

He sabotages strikes in the great industries (steel, railways, etc.) for the same reason.

He opposes the entrance of the workers of North America into politics as a class, not because he is an anarchist, but because he wants them to remain within the capitalist parties.

In the congress, the Mexican delegates, now under his control, as proved by the convention at the city of Juarez, say that Gompers is the friend of the working class of Mexico, by having helped Calles and Obregon against De La Huerta." Do not be deceived. Always Gompers follows in Mexico the policy of the United States government. He did not help De La Heurta because the National City Bank, Morgan, Rockefeller and Hughes (his masters) helped Obregon.

Yankee imperialist helped Obregon because British capital helped De La Huerta; because Obregon had conceded the nullification of Article 27 of the constitution by "recognizing" that it was not retroactive, having signed the Lamont-De La Huerta treaty and made other concessions. In Mexico, as in all Latin-America, Gompers does as Morgan dictates.

Gompers must not be re-elected president of the Pan-American Federation.

The Pan-American Federation must convert itself into an instrument of struggle against Yankee imperialism.

The workers of Latin-America and those of the United States demand it.

has done nothing but talk and has not shown by any positive act the slightest sympathy towards the enslaved people of Guatemala or any other Central American country."

Morones' Bird Squawks.

A henchman of Morones from the C. R. O. M. (the Mexican federation) attacked the Guatemalan saying that the Guatemalan government demands withdrawal of American troops, then why should the labor delegate to the congress ask it to interfere? This was rather stretching logic, so the Mexican openly stated that the Pan-American Federation of Labor was opened to interference in the "internal affairs" of governments. He tried to make a point by claiming that the Guatemalan asserted that capitalism was international, then he advocated nationalism. The Mexican stated that the Pan-American federation was "not an instrument of offense, but only a moral factor, each union group working within its own boundary."

A Fair Offer.

The Guatemalan retorted that the class struggle was international, but he would be satisfied if the American Federation of Labor would work "inside its own country for withdrawal of American troops from Guatemala, against the Platt amendment, and for the non-recognition by the United States of any government who did not recognize the right to organize."

Frey, the Molder's delegate in the A. F. of L. convention at El Paso, and defeated here from the A. F. of L., objected to the statement that the congress had given only words and taken no action.

Guatemala "Misunderstands."

"The Guatemalan brother misunderstands the principles of the federation," said Frey. "We don't want to compel any government to do anything that they do not want to do." Every union must do its own work, he said, strangely leaving little reason for an international in the wake of his talk.

Mysterious Document to Gompers.

Frey accused the delegate from Guatemala of not appearing before the committee. Then, after Frey's substitute motion to refer the Guatemala resolutions to the executive committee for investigation had been carried, Frey said that Guatemala had given a written statement to the committee, upon the conditions of labor in Guatemala, which statement, if read or made a part of the minutes, would endanger the liberty of the delegates. Frey advised that it be considered as a confidential document given to Gompers alone. This was carried.

All resolutions protesting against the conditions of labor under the imperialist satrapies of the United States, were referred to the executive of the Pan-American federation "for investigation." All those which praised any capitalist government were passed and recorded in the minutes. All unanimously. The two left wingers from Guatemala had no vote! The receipts show that the American federation, the Mexican federation and Santo Domingo are the only actual affiliations.

The old executive committee was, of course, all re-elected. The only change is that Matilo Woll takes Lord's place in the Pan-American organization. Capitalism used to send missionaries to betray and help rob the weaker nations, imperialism sends labor leaders. Such is the lesson of the Pan-American congress.

WORKERS' SCHOOL VETCHERINKA ON SAT., DEC. 13

Harold Ware, Lately from Russia, Will Speak

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—The Workers' School of New York will have another vetcherinka on Saturday night, Dec. 13, at its headquarters, 205 east 12th street. Which means—another evening of fun and pleasure, as all can testify who came to the last one.

This time, a program has been arranged for the serious-minded as well as the merry ones.

Harold Ware will speak on "The Tractor as a School Book in Soviet Russia" at 8 p. m. Comrade Ware, who has had extensive experiences among the Russian peasantry will tell how American methods of agriculture are being introduced in Russia. He is a very interesting lecturer and his talk will be a treat which New York comrades should not miss.

Dancing will follow, with music provided by the famous orchestra of the Williamsburg English Branch of the Workers Party. Come and bring your friends. You will enjoy yourselves, and boost the school besides.

ART TREASURES FEATURE OF LOS ANGELES BAZAAR

LOS ANGELES, Calif., Dec. 10.—The International Workers' Aid Committee of Los Angeles is holding a two-day bazaar, on Wednesday and Thursday, Dec. 17 and 18 at the Knights of Columbus Hall, 612 So. Flower street, the entire proceeds to go to the destitute families of political prisoners in Germany.

The comrades in charge of the bazaar are all excited over the lucky strike they have made. And you will be too when you see the exquisite collection of Russian art treasures that have been contributed to the bazaar. The articles in this collection are hand crotcheted laces of the most artistic design. Words cannot describe them. They must be seen to be appreciated. But when we tell you that they have been exhibited in all the principal countries of Europe, that they have been on exhibition in the largest cities in this country and that they have been awarded the gold medal at the last Panama exhibition you can get some idea of the value of these pieces of art handicraft that have been valued by connoisseurs at thousands of dollars.

You can get these beautiful art collections and at the same time be performing the most important duty of a good Communist: help care for the families of political prisoners in Germany.

Spread the news about the bazaar! Come and bring your friends.

Waterbury, Conn., Comrades, Notice!

WATERBURY, Conn., Dec. 10.—"The Beauty and the Bolshevik," a comedy feature film brot over from Russia and the most talked-of and appreciated picture that has come over, will be shown on Sunday, Dec. 14, at 2 p. m. at the Rialto Theater, on East Main street. With it will be given a three-reel film on Russian industrial life, "Russia in Overalls." These pictures have had long runs in New York City and other large cities in the United States and comrades living in Waterbury should not miss the opportunity to see them on Sunday.

FOSTER, GITLOW ARE GIVEN 33,316 VOTES IN 13 STATES BY THE PLUTE POLL JUDGES

After some five weeks of waiting the national organization of the Workers Party has at last been able to secure information in regard to the vote credited to the Communist candidates in thirteen of the fourteen states in which the party was on the ballot.

The figure received as the total vote in these states, 33,316, bears out the contention of the Central Executive Committee of the party, taking into consideration the fact that in many instances votes cast for the Communist candidates were not counted by election officials, that the total vote cast for the Communist candidates reached 100,000.

One of the striking discrepancies shown by the report of the vote given to the Communist candidates is the fact that in the state of Iowa, where the Workers Party has scarcely any organization, 4,037 votes were credited to our candidates, whereas in the state of Illinois, a great industrial state where the party has a strong organization and carried on an active campaign, only 2,622 votes were counted for the Communist candidates.

Reports from various sections of the country, pointing out the failure to count the Communist vote, are appearing in the DAILY WORKER from time to time.

In the votes credited to the Workers Party candidates, New York state leads the way in the total number of ballots counted for Foster and Gitlow. The vote in that state was 8,244. Minnesota shows the second largest vote credited to Foster and Gitlow, the total being 4,406.

The vote reported by the secretaries of state in the various states in which the party was on the ballot, is as follows:

Massachusetts	2,636
New York	8,244
Pennsylvania	2,735
New Jersey	1,540
Indiana	987
Illinois	2,622
Wisconsin	3,760
Minnesota	4,406
Iowa	4,037
North Dakota	370
Washington	781
Montana	357
Colorado	560
	33,316

The vote for Rhode Island is still not officially counted and the returns for this state are not included in the above figures. In addition, the Workers Party had a state ticket in Connecticut, but no presidential ticket and in Ohio and California had candidates for local offices and congressional candidates on the ballot.

AS WE SEE IT

By T. J. O'FLAHERTY.

THE business office of the DAILY WORKER has received a check amounting to $11.93 from the English-American section of the Political Emigrant's Club in Moscow for the Sacco-Vanzetti defense fund. This news should make a strong pull on the purse strings of the readers of the DAILY WORKER. And it should inspire the American workers to renew their efforts to save our imprisoned comrades from the electric chair and one of the best ways to do this is to raise funds for legal defense.

THE millions of the employing class of the United States are behind the state of Massachusetts in the effort to send Sacco and Vanzetti to the death chair. It is significant of the growing spirit of solidarity among the workers of the world that our comrades in other lands should voluntarily contribute their share to thwart the aims of the assassins of labor in the United States. The fight to save Sacco and Vanzetti is as pressing a duty as ever confronted the American working class. No time should be lost. Money is badly needed. It should be remembered that only last week the workers of Moscow sent one thousand dollars to the Sacco-Vanzetti defense committee. Russia is indeed the land of the free—workers.

THERE are no Sacco-Vanzettis in Fascist-ridden Italy. This is a good effort to hurl in the teeth of the enemies of the Soviet government who preach a doctrine of dictatorship and persecution of the bourgeoisie. When a worker ponders over the sufferings of the Russian proletariat and peasantry under the czar, the patience of the emancipated Russian workers is marvelous. It should not be forgotten that it was a parade of Leningrad workers before the American embassy in that city that first dramatically called the attention of this city to the crime that was perpetrated on Tom Mooney and that parade helped to initiate the great movement that saved him from the gallows. Sacco and Vanzetti must be freed and it is up to the American workers to get busy.

MICHIGAN DECISION SHOWS THE CLASS CHARACTER OF THE COURTS

By C. E. RUTHENBERG.

THE affirmation of the verdict of the Berrien county court finding me guilty of criminal syndicalism by the supreme court of the state of Michigan, establishes a new "crime" so far as the state of Michigan is concerned. The only charge against me was that I attended the convention of the Communist Party at Bridgeman. I was not charged with any speech or other act violating the criminal syndicalism law. It was not charged that the convention itself adopted any proposal which violated the criminal syndicalist law. The mere assembling of the convention in Michigan and my "assembling with" the convention constituted the "crime."

The United States supreme court in its decisions "interpreting" the clauses of the constitution declaring that congress shall make no law infringing upon the right of freedom of press, speech and assembly, in the espionage law cases has not dared go farther than to say speech and writing is punishable when there is "a clear and present danger" of injury resulting therefrom. The Michigan court has no further and declared that the "no belief in certain political principles—the principles of Communism—is a crime.

Thus one more step is taken to completely emasculate the provision of the constitution. The criminal syndicalist laws were enacted to protect the capitalist system against the advocacy of ideas which would build a movement against that system. I declared during my trial that the court in which the case was being tried was a capitalist court existing to protect the capitalist system. It is not at all surprising that the Michigan supreme court which is part of the same capitalist government and existing to protect the exploiters of labor has given its approval to an interpretation of the criminal syndicalist law which tears down the last vestiges of the right of freedom of speech, press and assembly. The verdict is an example of how the governmental machinery functions in the interest of the ruling class—the capitalist class—and against the workers.

The case will be appealed to the United States supreme court. The upholding of the decision of the Michigan court by the supreme court will be proof that the constitutional provisions have no meaning for the working class and will put an end to the claim that the constitution protects freedom of speech, press and assembly.

DEATH GAINS ON SCIENCE SHOWN BY MORTALITY RATE

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—Despite the onward march of science and medicine, the American mortality rate last year was higher than the year before, the department of commerce announced today. In 1922, the rate was 11.8 per thousand; last year it climbed to 12.3.

Only seven states, six of them in the far west, showed lower mortality rates for 1923 than for 1922. These were Colorado, Idaho, Montana, Oregon, Utah, Washington and South Carolina.

DAILY WORKER DRIVE TAKES ON NEW LIFE

Loeb Returns From a Successful Tour

Revived interest in the task of increasing the circulation and subsequently the power and influence of the DAILY WORKER was reported by Moritz J. Loeb, business manager of the workers' daily, on his return from an organizing tour which took him thru Cleveland, Detroit, New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Pittsburg.

"The comrades in every city visited by me, expressed and showed their determination to translate into action the decision of the Central Executive Committee on the building of the DAILY WORKER," declared Comrade Loeb.

The DAILY WORKER is now receiving the main attention of the party and the local units thruout the country realize that it is the most important weapon in the hands of the Workers Party for bringing the message of Communism to the attention of the working class.

New York in the Lead.

New York City has taken the lead in boosting the DAILY WORKER The subscription list in the metropolis has been increased by over 1,000 during the months of October and November. This increase in subscriptions made it possible to place the daily on the newsstands in New York bringing the sales up to one thousand copies per day at the present time.

Local New York of the Workers Party has set itself the task of bringing the paid circulation in that city up to 3,000 and according to present plans, when that figure is reached, a special New York edition will be issued. Comrade L. E. Katterfield, city DAILY WORKER agent, is of the opinion that our paid circulation will exceed 10,000 before the end of April and he expects the press pageant which will be held in Madison Square Garden on March 15, to boost the circulation to that figure. The New York militants will not let up in the until they have created a sufficient demand for the publication of a sister, Communist daily in the world's biggest city.

Boston to Open Drive.

Comrade Winfield A. Dwyer of Boston, who polled 24,000 votes for secretary of state on the Communist ticket in the recent elections, has been appointed city agent for the DAILY WORKER in that city. He has full charge of the distribution of the daily, and the Workers Monthly. He has proceeded to organize the already existing sentiment for the daily and plans to launch a campaign to increase the circulation in Boston to 1,000 copies within two months.

In Philadelphia, it was decided to put a full time DAILY WORKER agent in the field and to launch a campaign that will lay the basis for plac

Rockford Farmer Is Killed While Trying To Deliver Scab Milk

(Special to The Daily Worker)

ROCKFORD, Ill., Dec. 11.—Rockford's milk war today claimed its first victim.

Richard Saunders was shot in the abdomen and Charles Carlson was badly beaten in a pitched battle resulting when farmer pickets along the highway halted a truck load of milk which Frank McKiski was attempting to deliver to a boycotted dairy. Two deputies who were accompanying McKiski are accused of being responsible for the injuries and today they were under peace bonds.

The milk war was precipitated by differences over prices, the farmers picketing the roads to prevent deliveries by all who were not supporting their organization.

GOMPERS DIES DURING TRIP THRU MEXICO

Heart Failure on High Mountain the Cause

(Special to The Daily Worker)

MEXICO CITY, Dec. 11.—Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, and president also of the Pan-American Federation of Labor, from the convention of which he was returning, died on the train at San Nicolas, a small town near San Luis Potosi, supposedly from heart failure due to the high altitude.

This is reported as the immediate cause of his death, as his heart was unable to function while he was being taken by train thru a high mountain pass.

But he had suffered a relapse from other ailments while at Mexico City,

American Capitalism Loses Loyal Servant

SAM GOMPERS is dead. There is no doubt that the capitalist daily press will put their front pages in mourning; that the bitterest enemies of the working class, such as Coolidge, Dawes, Morgan, will pay their respects to the departed. But the militant workers will shed no crocodile tears.

Gompers died in the harness of his masters, the imperialists of America, in his last great effort to extend their power over the toiling masses of the world. The El Paso convention of the A. F. of L. was the crowning achievement in a long life of working class betrayal. The sessions of the Pan-American Federation of Labor over which he had just presided were a continuous suppression of the grievances of the workers of Latin-America and a white-washing of Wall Street's imperialist domination and exploitation. Where formerly imperialism sent missionaries with bibles as their advance agents, Gompers showed them the more effective way of sending labor fakers to blind the masses, to corrupt their leaders, and to disorganize their movement.

For more than 40 years Gompers consistently plied his trade. Allied with the most corrupt and reactionary elements in the labor movement, the Brindellis, the Lewises, the Murphys, the Berrys, the McCarthys, who formed the basis of his powerful machine, Gompers ruled supreme, the bitter and ferocious enemy of every attempt to strengthen the working class and to use its power in struggle against capitalism. He was the enemy of industrial unionism, fighting desperately to keep the unions small, divided, and weak. He blocked and sabotaged every militant action of labor. He conspired with the capitalist politicians to keep the labor movement hitched to the capitalist parties, and opposed all efforts for independent political action of the working class. He ignored or sabotaged every attempt to organize the unorganized, as was instanced in the steel strike. He completely neglected the problems of the unemployed workers, except insofar as Judge Gary and President Harding invited him to help capitalism solve its problems. He was the outstanding champion of class collaboration, with all of its consequences of subjection of the working class, and against the class struggle in its forms.

In the struggle of international imperialism to strangle and destroy Soviet Russia, none was so militant and bitter as the servant of imperialism, Samuel Gompers. In his invective against the first government of workers and farmers, Gompers outdid even such spokesmen of the capitalist class as Hughes, Lloyd George, or Poincare. He hated Russia because Russia of the Soviets had become the symbol of working class struggle in the betrayal which Gompers himself was steeped for 40 years.

Among the last acts of Gompers was a final crime against the cause of working class solidarity, his attempt to block the great movement for world unity in the labor movement, the unity of the International Federation of Trade Unions of Amsterdam, and the Red International of Labor Unions of Moscow. Gompers withdrew from Amsterdam when Wall Street temporarily withdrew from direct participation in European politics; Gompers was, when he died, busy reentering the European labor movement to follow the Dawes plan and help to enforce it. He was maneuvering to enter the Amsterdam International to fight the unity proposal of the Red International of Labor Unions, and to perpetuate the split in the international trade union world.

In the annals of capitalist imperialism, the name of Gompers will be written high among those who served it loyally and well—but in the annals of the revolutionary working class, Gompers will be given his true place as the betrayer of the toiling masses and the agent of the mortal enemies of the proletariat.

The weakening of the reactionary labor machine of which Gompers was the head thru his death should be the signal to the workers of this country for a militant struggle to drive Gomperism from the labor movement. The alliance between the reactionary labor officials and the employers must be broken, the trade unions must be amalgamated into strong industrial unions, a widespread campaign for organization of the unorganized must be launched, labor must take up the struggle against unemployment, labor must enter the political struggle as a class to fight its own battles.

Gompers is dead! The workers must now kill Gompersism.

CAPPELLINI ONCE POPULAR IDOL, NOW A TRAITOR

Striking Coal Diggers Grill Renegade

By THOMAS MYERSCOUGH.

(Special to The Daily Worker)

PITTSTON, Pa., Dec. 11.—Rinaldo Cappellini, once the popular idol of the miners of this section of District 1, United Mine Workers of America, returned to these parts last Sunday night from his sojourn in Texas and Mexico.

He spent much time in his office in Scranton on Monday, raving over the growing sentiment against his administration and threatening to expel those responsible, regardless of who they may be (intimating that some are officials or organizers), as agents of the coal operators. Today he appeared at the meeting of the general grievance committee in Pittston, not as the district president, he said, but as "an individual."

He had been invited by the committee upon hearing that he had returned so as to find out what his attitude was in the present situation. He was asked to appear yesterday, but claimed other matters prevented it and the meeting today was arranged for him.

Cappellini on Defensive.

Claiming that there was a concerted move on foot to get rid of him by making him "the goat" for everything, Cappellini said, "I have come to the meeting to help decide whether or not I am a traitor, or whether the coal company is back of the strike. Why don't you fellows ask the members of the district executive board to come to the meeting to defend themselves as I, as an individual, am defending myself?" To a number of "pointed" questions asked at different intervals during the five-hour session, Cappellini invariably replied that he would not answer.

He refused to answer Delegate

WORKERS PARTY BIG FACTOR IN MINERS' FIGHT

Farrington Expected to Count Himself "In"

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Dec. 11.—John Hindmarsh of Riverton, Illinois, progressive candidate for president of District No. 12, United Mine Workers of America against the present incumbent, Frank Farrington, is leading his opponent, according to unofficial returns from the elections that were held on Dec. 9.

The only obstacle in the way of Farrington's removal by vote of the membership is the fact that he counts the vote and may steal this election as he has always done in the past.

The progressive leaders declare that no coal miner in Illinois outside of those on Farrington's payroll will admit that they ever voted for the arch-reactionary and agent of the coal operators. Farrington says, "I will be your next president whether you vote for me or not."

Vigorous Campaign.

The progressives in the Illinois Miners' Union have carried on a vigorous campaign against Farrington and his henchmen. In this they were given valuable aid and leadership by the Workers Party and the Trade Union Educational League and particularly by District 8, of which Comrade Arne Swabeck is organizer.

This district of the Workers Party recently published and distributed among the miners 10,000 copies of a sixteen-page pamphlet, exposing the career of Frank Farington in the labor movement and particularly in the miners' union. This pamphlet and the campaign carried on by the progressives under Communist leadership had the effect of solidifying the opposition to Farrington and his lackeys.

Clean Sweep for President.

The returns from the Springfield district where the Communists are leading the fight against Farrington, show a clean sweep for the progressive ticket led by Hindmarsh. Farrington has been after the scalp of John J. Watt and Freeman Thompson, officials of the Springfield sub-district for a long time but the membership in that section are solidly behind them. Duncan McDonald was recently dropped from Local 448, on threat of lifting their charter by Farrington.

One of the propositions which the miners were called to vote for besides offices for the next two years, was the old age pension guaranteeing aged miners $25.00 a month. It is proposed that an assessment be levied against the wages of the miners in order to cover the cost of the pension.

Another Religious Institution Takes Cue From the Holy Ghost

A police investigation of the Lutheran Girls' Home, a semi-charitable organization here, was launched today following the arrest of the chef at the home and his alleged confession that he was the father of a baby born to one of the inmates.

The home, according to police, purports to be an establishment where working girls are able to obtain room and board at nominal costs under the chaperonage of a matron. There are 76 girls living there.

Attention was directed to it when Mrs. Letta Schenk, 19, gave birth to a baby at a local hospital. To her husband, summoned from Minnesota, where he lives, Mrs. Schenk is said to have involved Thomas Richmond, 20, chef at the home. His arrest followed.

STRIKERS TURN DOWN PROPOSAL OF ARBITRATION

Company's Attempt to Run Scab Train Fails

(Special to The Daily Worker)

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Dec. 11.— Efforts of Mayor S. A. Bullard of this city to induce the 350 striking employes of the Illinois traction system to return to work again failed yesterday.

The strikers insist that they be paid time and one-half overtime for all work over ten hours and demand a closed shop. They have refused to listen to proposals of the mayor and Springfield chamber of commerce that the men return to work and then arbitrate.

Strikers Surround Sash Train.

A passenger coach was operated from Litchfield to Staunton Monday night by a non-union crew. A crowd of several hundred strikers and sympathisers surrounded the car and its crew on its arrival at Staunton, and insisted that the car be returned to the Litchfield barn and kept there The car was taken back to Litchfield and no further efforts to use strikebreakers have been made.

At the main office of the Illinois traction company at Springfield, the company denied responsibility for the running of the car. Company officials claimed the car was taken out of the barn without their permission, "probably by joyriders." Strikers, however, declare that the car was run to try out sentiment of the population in the towns affected by the strike.

Long Records of Strikebreaking.

Superintendent D. W. Snyder, who is representing the company in negotiations, has a long record as a vicious strikebreaker. Snyder was formerly manager of the traction system at Bloomington. He was responsible for the historic Bloomington street car strike of 1917, which was marked by violence and bloodshed incited by gunmen imported by Snyder.

In the Bloomington strike these professional strikebreakers tried to do their stuff in the usual fashion, and there were several clashes between the strikers and the hired gunmen Bloomington unions raised $5,000 to defend and exonerate several of their members indicted by a packed grand jury for alleged rioting. The Bloomington carmen now have a 100 per cent union as evidence of Snyder's incompetency as a strikebreaker. It looks as tho the running of the car to Staunton were some of Snyder's handiwork.

Further negotiations are expected to take place today either at Peoria or at Springfield.

The last strike on the Illinois traction system in 1918 resulted in a partial victory for the strikers.

FRENCH COMMUNISTS TO PROTEST THE MASS ARRESTS OF WORKERS

PARIS, France, Dec. 11.—Communists announced their intention of holding a street meeting near the Lazare railroad terminal tonight to protest against the continued arrest and deportation of Communists. Communists of foreign birth are being arrested here at the rate of two or three every day, at the instance of the Herriot government.

The government has declared its intention of attempting to prevent or break up the meeting. Large forces of police are to be concentrated at the railroad station tonight in an effort to surpress the meeting.

The Communists plan several demonstrations of similar nature protesting against the Herriot violence.

PAN-AMERICAN WORKERS UNITE IN ATTACK ON PLOTS OF YANKEE CAPITALISTS IN LATIN-AMERICA

The following manifesto, exposing and opposing the nefarious plots to set the peaceful peoples of South America to mass murder of each other over some trivial question of "national honor" or disputes concerning boundary lines, was published in Mexico City during the sessions of the Pan-American Federation of Labor, creating a sensation among the delegates and among the workers of all Latin-America.

A Call to the Workers of Chile and Peru

Yankee Capitalists Foment War Between the Latin Nations in Order to Weaken and Conquer Them

Comrades!

In the name of all the workers of Latin-America, who suffer so keenly from the crimes of Yankee imperialism, we address this call.

The principal obstacle to the definite and complete triumph of Yankee imperialism the power not yet weakened, of Argentina, Chile, Brazil and the other countries of the extreme south. In order to nullify these forces, and to extend its tentacles over the rest of Latin-America, to do what it has done in Mexico, Central America and in the northern part of South America, the octopus of Yankee imperialism is preparing fratracidal war between Chile and Peru and between Argentine and Brazil.

The newspapers of November 26 inform us that there have been firing between Peruvian and Chilean soldiers near Tesla. This act indicates to what degree the sinister forces of imperialism have advanced the realization of their plans.

Pretending to be an "impartial" arbitrator in the dispute over the provinces of Tasna and Arica, the North American government, at the same time, has ordered Admiral Woodward of the Yankee navy to Peru, together with many other officers, "to reorganize the army and navy of the country."

The same action has been carried out in Brazil, ordering Admiral Vogelsang, and fifty officers in addition, to prepare Brazil for war against Argentina. Not that Yankee imperialism is more favorable to Brazil than to Argentina, neither preferring Peru to Chile, but that it wishes to break the "A. B. C. Alliance" (Argentina, Brazil and Chile), and to provoke at all costs these wars, in order to wipe out the last obstacle which obstructs its victorious march toward continental imperialism.

The only hope of saving Latin-America, of rescuing Peru, Chile, Brazil and Argentina from arriving at the same condition as Santo Domingo, Haiti, Nicaragua, Mexico, etc., is action, resolute, immediate and overwhelming, of the workers of these countries in order to stop the imminent war and unify the forces of all the continent against our real enemy.

The false patriotism that foments militarism, the agents of Yankee imperialism in Chile and Peru, will betray these countries into serfdom to the House of Morgan.

Now is no time to be feeding old rancors over battles won or lost by the bourgeois armies in long gone years. The danger is not in the past, but in the future, and in the present.

If the Chilean and Peruvian governments lend themselves to these maneuvers of the United States, the workers of both nations must make immediate demonstrations against imperialism and against those governments, overthrowing them if necessary.

The future of all the workers and peasants of Latin-America trembles in the balance. Tomorrow will be too late. Begin the demonstrations today! All Latin-America, calls—

WAR AGAINST FRATRICIDAL WAR!
WAR AGAINST YANKEE IMPERIALISM!
FORWARD TO THE FEDERATION OF WORKERS' AND FARMERS' GOVERNMENTS OF BOTH CONTINENTS!
LONG LIVE PAN-AMERICAN SOLIDARITY!

Gompers Dies While Returning to the U. S. from Mexico

stated by three physicians who attended him to be "bronchitis and possibly twenty-four hour pneumonia."

Had a Lucid Interval.

After a night of delirium in Mexico City, he told his attendants in a lucid interval that he thought he would live if he were moved to a lower altitude and insisted on boarding a train for the United States.

He was removed from the train at San Luis Potosi early Wednesday night, and was examined by physicians who reported that his condition was not dangerous. He spent the night in the hospital at San Luis Potosi, and resumed the journey Thursday morning, hoping to reach Laredo, Texas, on the border, on Friday morning.

But the mountain range in the vicinity of San Nicolas is the highest along the route of the International and Great Northern railroad to the United States, and despite the efforts of the physicians to keep Gompers alive by artificial means, his heart would not function.

Gompers was born in London, England, 1850, of Jewish parents. He became a cigarmaker and, tho he has continually opposed the entrance of workers from other countries, came to America himself as an immigrant alien worker. More than that, he was a "radical" alien immigrant. He skimmed thru some of the pamphlets of the immigrant revolutionary movement of the time, and announced himself to be an anarchist.

Like all anarchists, however, he grew ever more close in the position of the petty bourgeoisie in social outlook, and after attaining the presidency of the American Federation of Labor in 1880, he waged unrelenting war upon all revolutionary ideas in the labor movement. Fortified in his position by building a machine which controlled the American Federation of Labor from top to bottom, he increased his attacks on revolutionary tendencies within the labor unions, and became the most open advocate of class collaboration, political and industrial.

He mobilized the American Federation of Labor for support of the imperialist war before the United States entered it at the Buffalo convention in February 1917. And in common with all the reformist labor leaders of the allied nations he never forgave the Russian workers for turning the imperialist war into a revolutionary civil war against capitalists and landlords.

ing the paper on every newsstand in the Quaker City.

Comrade Fred Merrick of Pittsburg, was tentatively selected to handle and develop that district for the DAILY WORKER. He plans to run special campaigns among the miners and the steel workers and the possibilities for success in that region are bright.

Campaign in Ohio.

Comrade J. A. Hamilton of Cleveland, is preparing to launch a campaign in conjunction with the Ohio subscription drive under the leadership of Max Lerner, district organizer. This campaign will add 3,000 new subscribers to our lists according to the indications at the present time. Comrade Lerner informed the DAILY WORKER business manager. A special Ohio edition will be published when that figure is reached.

Increase in Detroit.

Comrade Loeb found things humming for the daily in the city of Detroit. The paper is for sale on the principal newsstands and the paid subscription list has been increased by over 200 in the past two months. A full time agent will be put to work in Detroit at the earliest possible moment.

"The party members everywhere have accepted the fact that the DAILY WORKER is the instrument with which the Workers Party can be developed into a mass Communist Party," declared Comrade Loeb in summing up the results of his tour. "It will be emphasized everywhere that the members of the Workers Party must at all times carry on direct subscription solicitation activity as the best means the party now has of reaching the masses of the working class," declared Comrade Loeb.

C. P. P. A. LEADERS MEET TO DISCUSS FUTURE POLICY

Johnston Says Time Is Ripe for New Party

WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.— Leaders of the progressive movement which supported the independent presidential candidacy of Senator Robert M. LaFollette were gathering in Washington today for the opening tomorrow of the executive committee of the conference for progressive political action.

Under instructions from its convention last June, the committee is charged particularly with making recommendations on the establishment of a permanent new third party in the United States.

Four Problems.

Four major things are to be considered by the committee, William M. Johnston, chairman, and the president of the International Association of Machinists, announced today. These are:

1. Issuance of a call for another national convention of the conference.
2. Review of the LaFollette campaign.
3. Recommendations for the establishment of a third party.
4. Recommendations for participation in national and state elections.

Thinks Time is Ripe.

Johnston himself expressed belief that the LaFollette campaign demonstrated not only the need of a new political alignment, but that the "time now is ripe for the launching of a new party movement, a movement composed chiefly of the American workers and other progressive minded citizens of the country."

LaFollette who, because of a cold may not attend the sessions, but will be in constant consultation with committeemen, holds practically the identical view and will bend every effort looking toward the permanent establishment of the new movement. He will oppose, however, any move by the committee other than drafting recommendations to be laid before the next convention for approval. He believes that the convention itself, not the committee, should be the body charged with definitely bringing out and giving life to the new party.

Sam Is Now Safely Dead.

Action of the American Federation of Labor at its El Paso convention in flatly turning down appeals to unite with a third party, will not in any way halt efforts to lay the ground work for the new movement, Johnston said.

"We did not want the endorsement of the federation," said Johnston, "altho we realize that the backbone of our movement will be supplied by the working classes. This is to be a movement of individual men and women, not of organizations. This is not to be strictly a labor party."

The committee does not plan, Johnston explained, to recommend putting complete new tickets in the political field everywhere.

"We will put up candidates of our own only when the old parties offer us nothing but reactionaries," he explained. "That might even apply to the presidency if one of the existing parties nominated a real progressive."

Under present plans, the committee probably will issue a call for next convention to be held either late next month or early in February. Chicago is the likely choice for the meeting place, Johnston said.

Cappellini, Once Popular Idol, Is Now a Traitor

Martina of No. 14 colliery, located in Cappellini's home town, Hillsdale, when he asked the ex-radical, if it wasn't a fact, that when they travelled around together, fighting side by side in 1920 against ex-President Dempsey, that he (Cappellini) had advocated fight, strike and various kinds of sabotage.

Dodged Questions.

He also refused an immediate answer to a question by Delegate Lucarelli of Old Forge, who wanted to know if Cappellini accepted as official the action of the executive board during his absence, in revoking the charters of the striking locals.

Later, however, he used evasive language, but positively affirmed the action. All his efforts today tho, were not, as he claimed, to defend himself, but as an italian from among its members and he would appoint him as an organizer.

A Sign of Wavering.

A sign of wavering was seen at today's meeting, for when a motion was made to continue the strike for a "settlement with victory" it was carried by a vote of 66 to 13, one of the latter or "defeatist" votes came, when a delegate, who had tried to avoid voting, was forced to say where he stood.

This vote represents the first defection in the ranks since the inception of the strike, for all previous votes were unanimous. International Board Member Campbell, formerly the chairman of this fighting grievance committee, took cognisance of this and requested a motion to meet again tomorrow to reconsider the same question, which was made and accepted. A strong belief is current now that at tomorrow's session, the men will be swayed into accepting another "dose" of promises, which, in substance, will represent a "third string in the same place" for the men, and "victory" for the operators, for which they will be ever thankful to Lewis, Cappellini and Co.

To Drop Committees.

Cappellini is quoted by the capitalist press hereabouts, as saying that he will not deal with the general grievance committees in the future, but that all grievances must be handled by the local committees. That an effort to "outlaw" the general bodies was on foot, was predicted in these columns several weeks ago. Seems like another case of a father trying to disown his illegitimate child. Cappellini founded the general grievance committees and rose to power and position thru their medium, but now that he recognizes that his "pedestal" is being made shaky via the same route, he welcomes the demise of these bodies, probably expecting thereby, to escape punishment for his guilt of repeated delay in the settlement of grievances.

Cause Will Remain.

Whatever the settlement of the strike brings, when it does come, it will only effect a temporary lull, for the "cause" will remain, until these "instinctively rebellious" miners learn that there is something more to do, than to deal with the "effects." Cappellini told the committee that his trip to Mexico was ordered by his superior officer, Lewis, and that the expense was borne by the government; his while trying to square himself against the charge that he had been in hiding within close proximity to his home.

Socialism in Germany Reveals Itself As Twin Brother of Fascism

By J. LOUIS ENGDAHL.

TODAY, an echo of Herriot's attacks on the Communists in France, linked with similar moves thruout Europe to pave the way for the Dawes' Plan, is heard in the announced intentions of the German "socialists" to join what is called "the great coalition government."

The recent reichstag elections didn't result in much change in the reichstag make-up. But results will be secured thru the changing attitudes of the various parties, notably the "socialists."

The "socialists," Scheidemann, Breitscheid and Lobe, now declare that the "socialists" must enter the government of the capitalist republic, even tho it contain Stresemann's people's party, with its monarchistic inclinations.

Hitherto the "socialists" have timidly refrained from joining in a bloc with the party of the late anti-labor industrialist, Hugo Stinnes. But it is now ready to take the plunge. The anti-Communist coalition, to chain the whole German working class, to Morgan's chariot, must be built at all costs. What an aggregation: "socialists," so-called democrats, center (catholic), and the people's party (industrial-monarchist), with its Ludendorff wing of extreme fascism.

* * * *

The only difficulty is, not that "socialists" will fall into line with Morgan's wishes, but that Stresemann's crowd may refuse to mingle with the "socialists." While the "socialists" are ready to surrender the German workers to the Wall Street banking interests without a fight; Stresemann's crowd holds out for a high price for German capitalism. Stresemann wants to be chancellor at the head of a coalition that would include the nationalist (fascist) party. Stresemann as chancellor would put up a struggle in the interests of Germany's industrial overlords against the new demands that will arise under the carrying out of the Dawes plan.

* * * *

This situation reveals all parties, from the "socialists" on the left, to the extreme fascists on the right, ready to protect the interests of the bourgeoisie. Only the Communists stand forth as the champions of working class interests; as the leaders of the laboring masses in their bitter struggles.

The "socialists" are clearly revealed as a wing of fascism. In fact, the German social-democracy and fascism stand forth as twin brothers. Fascism does not object to an alliance with the social-democracy. But it insists that "socialists" come into the alliance on the fascist terms laid down for it. And that the "socialists" will do. The tenacity with which the Scheidemann-Ebert social-democracy clings to the German bourgeoisie is reproduced in miniature in the death-grip with which the Hillquit-Berger "socialists" in this country hang on to the LaFollette movement.

* * * *

In England there is a growing opposition to the Dawes plan among the workers, even among its most reformist sections. This opposition is not so pronounced in Germany, altho it is growing. The results of the recent German elections shows that large numbers of German workers still harbor the hope that they may get something out of the Dawes plan. This can be the only explanation of the slight recovery in "socialist" strength in the reichstag, altho the "socialists" met with a big reverse in the elections to the Prussian diet, while the Communist gained.

* * * *

But the workers will be stung into action under the lash of Morgan-Dawes oppression. They will break the class truce thru withdrawing their support from the social-democracy. They will give their strength to Communist leadership; to the Communist struggle for power and a Soviet Germany.

Discussion of Our Party's Immediate Tasks

WAR AGAINST OPPORTUNIST CONFUSION

By EARL R. BROWDER.

"Organized confusion" is the outstanding characteristic of the thesis of the minority. It is a perfect illustration of what the thesis of the C. E. C. (majority) warned against as the right deviation of farmer-laborism within our party. Under cover of "leftist" phrases, the minority is advancing a revision of Communist conceptions of political action, of the role of the Communist Party, of the nature of "class action," and of the process of revolutionizing the masses. On each of these points the minority stands for a definite right-wing revision. Let us briefly prove this in their own words.

Minority Identifies Political Action With Parliamentarism.

The majority thesis states the Communist position that the whole class struggle is a political struggle, and that the purpose of the united front is to engage in all struggles of the workers to sharpen and develop the political aspect of them, to bring the workers closer to Communism.

The minority, on the other hand, contends that the only possible kind of political action, on the united front basis, is in the form of a farmer-labor party. Such an idea has no sense or logic at all, unless we start from the social-democratic conception that participation in elections is the only form of political action. But it seems that the minority is leaning very, very strongly in that direction. What else can it mean when the minority thesis says:

"If we abandon the united front politically by abandoning the slogan for a class farmer-labor party . . ."

Comrade Ruthenberg, in The Workers' Monthly for December, goes so far as to say that the slogan "for a farmer-labor party" is based upon "the rock foundation" that the intensifying of the class struggle must mean, politically, a farmer-labor party movement. We were under the impression that the "rock foundation" of the class struggle was the basis for Communist political action, but never will we admit that farmer-labor party is the rock foundation as our own movement. Such a conception is organised confusion, behind which the most fundamental right-wing deviations are smuggled into our movement.

Minority Revises the Role of the Party.

The majority thesis says that the task of the Workers (Communist) Party is to build another, non-Communist party. They take the position that the Workers Party can only grow if it is an auxiliary to a farmer-labor party. They say that the slogan of farmer-labor party and campaigns for the building up of farmer-labor parties" will win any sort of position for the Workers Party in this country.

This is another right-wing deviation, part and parcel of the general right-wing tendency of the minority. Under certain conditions such slogans and campaigns may have temporary value as they had in the past, but when the minority makes this a principle, declaring that only such means will build the Workers Party without regard to political conditions, then the minority has thereby rejected the Leninist conception of our party as the leader, and reduced it to the role of parasite upon another organization which is to be the real organ of political struggle. The Leninist conception of the role of the party is fundamentally in conflict with the minority. It is based upon the conception of the Communist Party as the only class party of the workers.

Minority Wants Two "Class Parties."

Here we touch the heart of the mistake of our minority. All of their errors reach down to their conception of a "class" farmer-labor party. "Even the dominated by conservative labor leaders," said C. E. Ruthenberg in The Workers' Monthly for November, "a party created by the C. P. P. A., based upon the labor organizations it represented, would have been a labor party." . . . which would lead in the economic interests" of the workers and poor farmers. They think that such a party would be an expression of "working class political action" as "class action."

There is only one sense in which a farmer-labor party is class action, and that is, it is part of the working class acting. But that means nothing in a political sense. "Class action" of the workers becomes something more than a phrase only when it is action directed against the capitalist class, that is, revolutionary action. Farmer-labor party action is a reflection of the illusions of the masses, of the idea that by electing a few "labor" leaders to office they can make the world suitable for the workers to live in.

Is the organization of such an illusion, "class political action"? The C. E. C. says no, it is not; but the minority thinks it is. They even go so far as to say that if we give up the slogan embodying the illusion, we thereby give up class political action. Comrade Ruthenberg even asks: "Is the movement for class political action dead?" in dealing with the question of a farmer-labor party. He thinks that if the farmer-labor party is dead, then the class struggle is over. But Communists are not so easily discouraged. We knew all the time that the Workers (Communist) Party is the only class party of the workers, so we cannot waste any time grieving at the demise of the "class" farmer-labor party. How Will Masses be Revolutionized?

The minority has the right-wing conception that the masses will be revolutionized by parliamentary and reformist politics. It is quite well established, of course, that Communists must participate in parliamentary action. But when Comrades Ruthenberg and Ruthenberg tell us in their thesis that the slogan of a farmer-labor party will "revolutionize the broad masses of workers," we call a halt. This is the worst kind of opportunism, and the worst kind of opportunist tendencies.

The masses will not be revolutionized by a slogan which had nothing of a class nature in it, but the word "class." They will be revolutionized in the process of the struggle against the forces of capitalism on the basis of definite and concrete demands. The united front must be based upon such concrete and everyday struggles, from below, not upon the abstract organizational slogan of a farmer-labor party, which is a form of united front from above.

For the first time in the American movement we are faced with a systematic opportunism, well organized and with some standing in the movement, that bids for leadership boldly and frankly on the basis of its opportunistic deviations. But it will not get very far. The Workers (Communist) Party in its overwhelming majority follows, and desires to continue to follow, the line of the Communist International. It will rally as one great army to repudiate this opportunist confusion that is presented in the minority thesis.

ON DEVIATIONS—SYNDICALIST, SECTARIAN, AND SOCIAL-DEMOCRATIC

By HARRISON GEORGE.

NO one more than myself realizes the fact that in the long and difficult process of building the Communist Party which will be a real Leninist-Bolshevist party of action, that it is necessary to work with the human material inherited from the preparty period. The simplest surveyal will show that we have not yet become a Bolshevist party, "monolithic, hewn of one piece," altho we have hopes of becoming such a party.

The digestion of the various elements has now extended over a period of five years. It is time we showed some effect of the guidance of the Comintern. The party should be attuned to the necessity of testing the responses of the material ingested to the line of Communist principles especially clarified and determined by the Second Congress of the Comintern.

No party clearance has ever been attempted or suggested, even of the central organs. The party (I speak of the Workers (Communist) Party and not the farmer-labor party) has drifted along with criminal lack of self-examination. The fact that our party program, which is filled with the most ridiculous deviations and is clearly written in a hasty, shoddy way in both content and construction, has stood for two years, is a testimony to our ideological laziness.

We have had, until this one, not even the pretense of a real party discussion in which the ideological leaders of our party might be required to expose their basic understanding. Until now they have passed muster with general agitational expressions against the capitalist system, or confined their possible errors to executive committee sessions out of sight of the party as a whole and issued them as party instructions which all good Communists obey.

Naturally it was not to go on forever. Some situation had to arise to shake the party into wakefulness, self-criticism and scrutiny of its ideological leadership. Such a situation is the present party discussion over the farmer-labor party slogan issue. It is unavoidable, nay, it is even necessary, that in such a discussion the ideological deviations (if any exist) from the line of Leninist-Communism in the mental furniture of any of our leading comrades, should be sharply pointed out and the deviation corrected by the party so that the comrades who have erred, may learn from their error and, united with their critics, give their best ability to carry on the struggle for the overthrowal of capitalism.

Some comrades are considerate of human feelings. They say with anxious mind and troubled heart, "Don't be personal," when the the political line of a leading party comrade is designated and compared with known deviations—be it left or right. Communists are not thin-skinned about political criticism. If we are not to do this, our party may as well cease trying to be a party which clears itself by critical self-surveyal, and may as well call in the Comintern to perform a service to Communism for which we would be inherently unfitted. It would be excellent if there were no deviations. But if such exist, it is a crime against our party to remain silent.

Comrade Ruthenberg has been the first to wince at the personal trend of the discussion. This in spite of the fact that he opens a personal attack on "Comrade Foster in the December Workers' Monthly"—the same issue in which Comrade Foster also has an article, but an article which proceeds from beginning to end without reference to persons but strictly to policy. In addition, we have been charged with "polemical detectivism" by those who, even before discussion had opened and continually since, have hotly stigmatized the majority with the epithet of "syndicalist."

Now it may be a crime in a Communist Party to enter it from and to remain in a proletarian organization, if so I must apologise, the the Profintern may share the blame for my ignorance in the first error. But I am disposed to take up this accusation of "syndicalism" against the majority, as it places our accusers also on trial. If we of the majority are accused of not being Communists, but syndicalists, we may be permitted the privilege to inquire into how far to the right our comrades of the minority have moved that they feel we are so far to the left as to be "syndicalists."

Syndicalist! Mea culpa! Mea culpa! But then, on the other hand I never was an anarchist, whose mind the Russian revolution could change only a very little, nor was I a parliamentary socialist whose mind neither the revolution nor anything else has been able to change. The Communist veneer which has been laid over the comrades of these two seemingly opposite tendencies, is now showing cracks wide enough, that looking thru the rents of the party discussion, their remarkable similarity is distinctly noted.

Fight Both Deviations!

There is an essential and fundamental connection between the anarchist and the social democrat in their conception of what "independent working class political action" is. Comrade Lenin has said that "Anarchism is a punishment laid upon the labor movement for its reformist sins." And I was about to add another article to the many I have written in combat against the I. W. W. conception of "political action," when—lo and behold! I find it more needful to write one against the reformist parliamentarism which is showing itself in our party and at the head of our party.

"Political action means voting and participation in elections and capitalist parliaments and nothing else," say the anarchist leaders of the I. W. W. We are organised for a political function, which means participation in electoral struggles for the seizure of political power. We are not syndicalists!" shouted Comrade Minor on the evening of November 20, 1924. He was clearly supported by Comrade Ruthenberg, who at that meeting apparently understood that the "Twenty-one points" of the Comintern were points of parliamentary procedure.

What Lies Behind Farmer-Laborism.

Whether or not we shall have a farmer-labor party ("mass" or "class"—you may take your choice), or even whether or not there shall be a slogan for these apples of Sodom, is becoming an issue which, tho of grave importance, is overtopping the graver issue of whether or not we shall have a Bolshevist party, or whether we shall be delivered over to a social democratic morass of "vulgar parliamentarism"—which is where the comrades of the minority are leading us, consciously or unconsciously.

See, for example, the generous scorn for a "pure Communist program" and for the slogan "Forward to the Soviets," as expressed by Comrade Pollack. Then there is Comrade Lovestone, who has the same success with Mahoney that Mahoney had with the C. P. P. A. Comrade Lovestone testifies (under Marxian oath as all reformists do who must find Communist ground for non-Communist action) that when we catch him trying to shove our party into the maw of a petty bourgeois farmer-labor party, that he is only pulling us out!

Yet Comrade Lovestone is so completely a "vulgar parliamentarian" that he cannot see any political movement outside of a party, and a farmer-labor party at that! He deigns to mention the Workers Party twice in his article of December 3, in which he says:

"These comrades (the majority) would have us believe that the hundreds of thousands of farmer-laborites of yesterday don't want and are not interested now in another political movement."

The Nebular Hypothesis of Farmer-Labor Parties.

"Another political movement" is, of course, a real, genuine "class" farmer-labor party. And he proceeds in a veritable cloud of "election alliances," "political situations," "campaigns," "new parties," "candidates," "farmer-labor revivals," etc. A somnambulist walking in a world of dreams. It is clear that without the farmer-labor party the basis for our "political action" simply doesn't exist for Comrade Lovestone.

. . . ney Ask For Bread—And Get—A Slogan.

Then comes Comrade Bedacht, who ought to know better, and after leading us right up to the lunch counter, where he promises us something substantial, gives us—a slogan! He cites that the workers are struggling in New England, in California and in West Virginia. He correctly says that they should be united. He correctly adds that they should be united "by a political party of the workers" (which, according to Bedacht, however, is not the Workers Party). But wonderful to relate, even if the Workers Party gets only workers together it must "supply the slogan of the farmer-labor party" to them, or else there would be no "political action of all the workers everywhere." What a marvelous conclusion for a Marxist!

Yet these are the isolated political examples, class war prisoners in the same New England, California and West Virginia cited by Comrade Bedacht as an arena of struggle, as well as many elsewhere. The French and the German Communist Parties have found that amnesty of class war prisoners can be made a political issue on which to unite all workers everywhere. Mass demonstrations and even such "syndicalist" weapons as the political strike could and should be used in this country for this end.

Can the textile workers of New England, the dock workers of Frisco, and the West Virginia miners be rallied into a nation-wide movement more successfully around a slogan "for a class farmer-labor party" or for the slogan "release the class war prisoners!"

To Comrade Bedacht, these workers are ready now, any day, to down tools for the minority thesis, while the millions of farmers, angry, impatient and armed with shotguns and pitchforks are surrounding the LaFollette henchmen in the county seats, demanding, "Give us a class farmer-labor party or give us death!" Nothing else is "political action" to Comrade Bedacht. As for the rest," he says after Cato, "the syndicalists must be destroyed."

The next exhibit is Comrade Powell, who is filled with as much rebellion against centralization and discipline as an anarcho-syndicalist I. W. W. Naturally, he sees that we of the majority have "abandoned the united front on the political field" by laying aside the slogan for a defunct "farmer-labor party."

Particularly attacked is the T. U. E. L., which our comrades of the minority discover only when they have to sleuth about for "issues." The T. U. E. L. is "syndicalist" because, tho it advocates a united front of unemployed councils directed against the state and federal governments, in the campaign for a united front for class war prisoners, for a united front against criminal syndicalist laws (we are not yet "criminal" syndicalists to the minority, let us hope), tho the T. U. E. L. advocates mass violation of injunctions, a campaign against race discrimination, tho it urges a united front against imperialism and the Dawes' plan, still, to Comrade Powell's mind, "it abandons the political field."

12,000,000 Converts! Quick, The Farmer-Labor Gun!

Could absurdity go further? If it cannot, Comrade Powell can! He says that "our election campaign depoyed the LaFollette illusion in the minds of many of voters and (listen to this) "they stayed away from the polls." He then proceeds to prove that because "only 20 million out of 60 million voters took part in the elections while in 1916 more than 70 per cent voted"—therefore, the difference between 50 and 70 per cent of the electorate, or 12,000,000 voters, were so disgusted with LaFollette because he didn't give them a "class farmer-labor party" that they "Perhaps they voted for Foster," you will suggest. By no means! They were disillusioned with Foster, too, according to Comrade Powell, and did not vote at all!

The Lost Tribes of Farmer-Laborism.

These are the lost tribes with whom Comrade Ruthenberg makes common cause against Comrade Foster, and Comrade Powell wants these 12,000,000 dream children to say they didn't vote for Foster because the Workers Party won't give them "class political action," while the I. W. W. says that the same 12,000,000 didn't vote for Foster because he does give them "political action." These 12,000,000 who are so advanced according to both Comrade Powell and the I. W. W. that they wouldn't vote for the Workers Party, are, queerly enough, in neither the I. W. W. nor in a "class farmer-labor party" of their own. They are simply lost in space! A political phenomenon of Comrade Pepper's "LaFollette revolution," and the endomorphic theory of the creation of farmer-labor parties.

But Comrade Powell, and other exponents of parliamentary cretinism, such as Comrades Reeve and Kaplan, who think the part is a sort of a football ground to romp around in and not an organ of revolutionary struggle demanding a serious and receptive apprehension as a preliminary to leadership, are all accountable in the loose way the party has permitted its members to regard their class duties.

Torturing the Capitalist Decline.

But it is an astonishing revelation of ideological bankruptcy to hear Comrade Ruthenberg, whom the Comintern has associated with Comrade Foster as the best element in our party, aver that without a "class farmer-labor party" there is no "class political action." There is little explanation for his so wresting and torturing the political consequences of the decline of capitalism as to make it squeak—"I want a farmer-labor party!"—in view of his previous distinction between the isolated political conflict of the class and the immediate and every day struggles as given in the February Liberator, where he says:

"The guiding principle of Communist policy . . . is to use the class struggles agowing out of these conflicting economic interests to mobilize the forces which will wrest from the capitalists the state power."

"Syndicalist" Leanings—Once on a Time.

"This does not mean only a campaign on the basic economic issue, which sharply divides the interests of the capitalists and the workers—privately owned industry, operated for exploitive purposes versus socialized industry operated for service. The conflict between economic groups in capitalist society manifests itself in continuous struggles over immediate questions of living conditions. These daily struggles are the starting point of the Communist struggle for the overthrow of capitalism By entering into all of these struggles, which grow out of the every day life of the exploited, becoming their spokesmen, winning their confidence, the Communists establish their leadership of all those who suffer under the whip of capitalism."

This is a fine picture of the scope of "political action," and while not given with any marvelous clarity, it is sufficient to show that Comrade Ruthenberg has, or once had, a pigeon-hole in his mind labeled "Communist principles." But, alas and alack! In continuing the article, on the very next page, out popped the opportunist devil with "a mass farmer-labor party, which will fight the political battles of the industrial workers and exploited farmers."

Naturally, anybody who says that has little use for the Workers Party and can't see any "political battles" being fought without a "mass farmer-labor party" (now revised to a "class farmer-labor party") does the fighting—which Communists have always declared it wouldn't do.

The final retort of the comrades of the minority is that we of the majority, who wish to deal in no more fantastic and opportunist farmer-labor parties until we see more masses than they can show, and better reasons than they advance, is that the majority are "sectarians." I am not very frightened at the term. And I am sure the party, our Workers (Communist Party, will correct our erring comrades of the minority by saying, as the Comintern is sure to say, "It is not necessary to be a social-democrat in order to avoid being a sectarian—or a syndicalist."

WHO ARE THE MENSHEVIKS?

By ALFRED GOETZ.

IN an article on the party controversy published by the DAILY WORKER Dec. 3, Comrade Lovestone accuses the majority of the party of menshevist skepticism. In a rather lengthy statement in which he attempts to prove that the farmer-labor movement has not been swallowed by LaFollette and that it can be revived, we find the following:

Skepticism—A Menshevist Disease.

"Thus Lenin in his introduction to Karl Marx, Letters to Kugelmann," said, "the Marxists have long welded the theory and practice of the class struggle into an INDIVISIBLE WHOLE (caps his). He is no Marxist who, to justify existing conditions, distorts the theory which alone firmly confirms the objective situation, who goes so far as to adapt himself with the greatest possible speed to any temporary lull in the revolution (!), to throw quickly overboard his 'revolutionary illusions' and to set about collecting the 'realistic' shreds."

On which Comrade Lovestone comments as follows: "It is a truth long known to Bolsheviks, that only the empiric does not look at developing class conflicts and movements any further than the horizon of the then given situation. Amongst menshevika," Comrade Lovestone continues, "skepticism and doubt rise in direct proportion to the drawn out and labirious character of the development of class movements tend to assume."

To all of which we agree and altho we fail to see how this applies to the majority position, it can readily be seen how much more accurately it describes the position of the minority. Comrade Lovestone, that the comrades of the majority have doubts and are skeptical of the possibility of re-establishing whatever sentiment of the farmer-labor movement have existed and with good cause. Since when has it become the function of a Communist Party to organize farmer-labor parties? It is true that it would be our duty to participate in a mass movement of this kind or even in a widespread demand for one, should one exist, but for us to try to organize a non-Communist party which we would ultimately have to combat, and at that when we would have no party won't give them "class political action," while the I. W. W. says that the same 12,000,000 didn't vote for Foster because he does give them "political action." These 12,000,000 who are so advanced according to both Comrade Powell and the I. W. W. that they wouldn't vote for the Workers Party, are, queerly enough, in neither the I. W. W. nor in a "class farmer-labor party" of their own. They are simply lost in space! LIQUIDATION—OF WHAT, AND BY WHOM?

By MAX BEDACHT.

The Workers (Communist) Party of America is faced with momentous decisions, far more important than the apparent issue would signify. For or against a labor party; that seems to be the question. But in reality the labor party is only incidentally the object of the discussion. The real issue is the industrial activities of our party. Political significance, when motions were made to bring out into clear relief the purpose of our industrial activities in the promotion of political action, then the cry was raised that the minority belittles industrial action. The present minority has consistently supported Comrade Foster in all his plans for the industrial activities of our party. Comrade Pepper was indefatigable in spurring the party on to more and still more of industrial activities. But in addition to these industrial activities there were proposed at all times slogans and actions to link up the industrial activities with the paramount task of our party. And this paramount task is not, as the majority seems to believe, the industrialization of our party, but it is the politicalization of the working class.

"But," says Comrade O'Flaherty, "every struggle of the working class against the capitalists, whether it be in an election campaign or in a strike, is a political struggle." Well, Comrade O'Flaherty, this is true, but—. In reality the political potentialities of a strike are not worth even a passing mention by a columnist if they are not brought out into the open by systematic action of a revolutionary party of the workers, by Communists. As long as the application of political power in the strikes is confined to the capitalists, the strike is not a political struggle. It must be made one by conscious action. And the political characteristics of strikes lie not in the naked fact of the strike itself, but only in the potentialities of the strike in that the experiences of the strikes drive home to the workers the necessity of a political struggle and class action. Therefore (not every strike, but strikes in general) into political struggles against the bourgeois state. These struggles will then take on many forms and not merely that of political strikes.

The task of our party is not to be merely active in the industrial struggles of the working class, but it is to develop in all instances the political potentialities of such struggles. Not merely participation in these struggles is our aim, but participation with a purpose. And it is on this point that we invariably collided with the majority. Political slogans in strikes were declared to be out of order, as in the instance of the Garment Workers' strike in Chicago. Instructions against political slogans and occasions about our demands and slogans should bring out the political scope of these slogans and demands, were considered as sabotage of industrial work, as in the case of Foster's speech on amalgamation in the Detroit convention. In the preparation of convention resolution for trades union conventions everything was consciously eliminated that could raise fundamental and political issues. In one case for instance such an elimination was made on the ground that if left in, the bureaucrats of the convention may switch the issue to that of Moscow agents.

At the bottom of this controversy there is a fundamental difference of conception. This difference makes itself felt in the consideration of all questions. The majority is even conscious of this difference. But it is careful to conceal it. After the majority has fought in each concrete issue for a proposal, placed it in the foreground every political potentiality in economic struggles of the workers, the same majority proposes to the Profintern a program containing such demands in almost the identical words of the original minority proposals. But, after the program is adopted, everything remains as it is. The program is an alibi, helping the majority, but it does not help the party to increased political activities.

The Issue of Liquidation.

The majority, having in its midst an expert on slogans, decided that what its case lacks in quality may be made up in viciousness of its sermons and slogans against the minority. Thus, the well-known slogan of liquidation was resurrected, polished up and pardes as perfectly new and reliable.

Let us look at this a little closer. Who is to liquidate and what?

The Workers (Communist) Party was engaged in a campaign for a le-

bor party. The minority was at no time blind to the fact that this campaign might result in the formation of such a party, and that this new party would then be a competitor with the Workers' Party for leadership over the working masses. Yet the campaign was carried on in spite of that danger.

First: Because our activity and leadership in this campaign might result in our ideological and even actual leadership of such a party and thus turn the new party from a competitor to an instrument of our leadership.

Second: Because if the process of the formation of such a labor party would be completed quicker that we succeeded in widening our influence and strengthening our leadership for the task of leading the new party to that actually a tremendous mass party of workers and exploited farmers would spring up beyond our control, the Communists would still be the gainers. The actual political split of the forces of the exploited urban and rural masses from the leadership of imperialist capital would facilitate our political work to a degree that would far outweigh all disadvantages accruing to us from the existence of the competing leadership of the new party. In other words the newly formed political party of the exploited would present for us a much more favorable basis of operation than the political alliance of the working masses with the old capitalist parties. It is immensely more difficult to make the first break in the political alliance of workers and capitalists than it is to widen an existing breach.

Third: The the campaign for a labor party may or may not result in the formation of such a party, yet, the process of the campaign itself, the maneuvers of the campaign would bring us in contact with the masses, would strengthen our party numerically, would teach our party maneuvers and activities, and was bound to extend the influence of the party to greater numbers of workers and exploited farmers.

The minority therefore, in all the phases of the campaign, always kept the interests of our party in the foreground. And we "farmer-labor Communists" were ready at any time to sacrifice our party to the interests of our own, the Workers (Communist) Party. And when this very point became an issue, in August, 1923, Comrade Röthenberg introduced the following declaration of principle:

"The formation of a labor party in the United States is not in itself—irrespective of the relation of the Workers Party to such a labor party—an aim of the Workers Party. The labor party campaign of our party in its application of the united front policy of the Communist International and must be governed by the same underlying principles as other united front maneuvers. We will carry on the struggle for the labor party so long as we can increase its influence and strengthen the Workers Party organizationally thru this campaign. When situations arise in which the interests of the Workers Party conflict with the goal of the formation of the labor party we must unhesitatingly sacrifice the labor party."

The stalwart defenders of the Workers (Communist) Party, against the ogre of a labor party, Comrades Foster, Cannon and Bittelman voted against this statement of policy.

The E. C. had established the policy that in all our labor party activities, the Workers (Communist) Party, was to be kept to the foreground. But when real tests came the majority went back on this policy of the C. E. C. In May, 1924, the fight of the LaFollettelsts in California against our party grew hot, and when these LaFollettelsts made efforts to get rid of the Workers Party so they could paralyze without interference from the Workers Party, the growing movement for political independence of the workers and poor farmers with the poison of LaFollettelsm, the political committee of our party voted down a motion of Lovestone to make a fight for the admission of Workers Party delegates to the California conference. The first two paragraphs of the motion read: "1.—To make a fight for the seating of W. P. delegates. 2.—If defeated all party members representing labor organizations remain in the conference to fight for W. P. policies and to seek to win as many places of authority as possible." Such staunch opponents of "liquidation" as Bittelman, Browder and Cannon voted against while the naughty liquidators Engdahl, Lovestone and Bedacht voted for. Liquidation, indeed; but by whom?

But such activities of the "anti-liquidators" are by no means inconsistent with their general policy and conception. These sole defenders of the Workers (Communist) Party never considered the advantages accruing for the party out of the campaign for a labor party. They entered the campaign for a labor party for the sole and exclusive purpose to create a labor party. No, not a, but the labor party, the petty bourgeois labor party, patterned after the English labor party, this all-inclusive labor party, if need be exclusive of the Workers (Communist) Party, but at least with the Workers (Communist) Party in its rightful place of a hopeless minority. That last part of the sentence is our interpretation, but the exact words of Comrade Foster.

Liquidation, indeed; but by whom?

The position of the majority as proven not only by words, but by all its actions, is that the formation of a labor party, an all-inclusive labor party, must be the goal of any labor party movement. If such a movement exists among the workers, it is the duty of the Communists to assist it, but always with a view of helping to accomplish the task of the formation of the labor party. If there is no movement for the formation of such a party, the Communists have no business to bother about it.

The minority, on the other hand, maintains, that the American working class, still completely under the domination of bourgeois ideology and leadership, must develop the idea of separate political interests of their class. Until the workers have developed this idea there can be no question of Communist leadership over these workers. The slogan: "For a farmer-labor party" best expresses this need of political independence of the workers from the capitalists. It is not the desire of the minority to establish a labor party irrespective of situations and possibilities. It is, however, the endeavor of the minority to gain leadership over the working masses during the very process of their breaking away from capitalist ideology and leadership by guiding and hastening this process.

Liquidation, indeed; but by whom?

Opportunist tendencies, indeed; but by whom?

Lack of Communist understanding, indeed; but by whom?

Resolutions and programs settle all the problems of the "Communist" and "anti-liquidationist" majority of the C. E. C. Judging by past performance they will even settle the revolution itself by a resolution or a program of action—without action.

The other day, the majority decided in the D. E. C. of Chicago, that the party shall not enter the coming municipal campaign because it is a non-partisan election. When the majority found what a "Communist" decision this was, it called a special meeting of the D. E. C. and changed the decision, but it did not change its "Communism." Just think of it. The recent struggles of striking workers of Chicago, against the activities of the police department; the activities, or lack of activities of the board of aldermen in the struggle of the workers against the police department and in the struggle of the schools and teachers against the autocratic rule of big business in the chair of superintendent of schools of Chicago; offer great possibilities for united front actions during the campaign, the possibility for a labor party campaign on a large, the local scale and under the direct initiative and guidance of the Workers (Communist) Party. But the majority said: The only advantage we can get out of a campaign is the printing of the name of our party on the ballot. Since that is impossible, because of the non-partisan character of the campaign, what is the use?

The change was made by a special meeting of the D. E. C. not because of a change of heart, and not because the majority wanted a campaign of its own, but because it became aware of the dangers of its position for its campaign within the party.

Lack of Communist understanding, indeed; but by whom?

Liquidation, indeed; but by whom?

NEW YORK DISTRICT ENDORSES THE C. E. C. DECISION ON CONVENTION

NEW YORK CITY, Dec. 11.—At its last meeting held Dec. 8, the District Executive Committee of District No. 2, adopted the following resolution:

"The changed political situation arising out of the recent election necessitates the Workers Party adjusting its policy and program of action in accordance with these changes.

"This demands a full and complete discussion by our entire membership to culminate in a national convention where the membership will decide upon any and all changes to be made, therefore,

"We, the District Executive Committee of District No. 2, Workers Party of America, concur in the request of the Central Executive Committee to the Comintern for permission to hold a national convention. Same to be in accord with the party constitution."

Motion—That we concur in the above resolution and send a copy to the DAILY WORKER for publication.

dicted at the convention in refusing to take a factional stand where no difference in principle prevailed. If, then, this tactic, which the administration seeks to junk, is to be laid at its own door, what fundamental reasons do they cite for abandoning our two-year old tactic of a "united front from below" for independent class politics?

An examination of majority and minority theses reveals perfect agreement as to the sharpening of the economic crisis. Varga's analysis, accepted by the Communist International, also bears this out. The economic foundation existed in 1923 for a labor party, and it exists just as strongly today. Communist political tactic proceeds from a correct evaluation of objective economic conditions. The majority thesis tries to fit in some meaningless reservations about great public building programs, unsupported by any evidence, but it dare not take exception to the minority analysis, like that of the Communist International, of a continuation and intensification of the economic crisis.

Why Are Labor Parties Formed?

A study of the history of previous American labor parties reveals that working class political expression in this country has always sprung out of so-called "hard times." The reasons for this are rudimentary. In times of depression the evils of capitalism stand out in sharp relief, the suffering of the workers is more acute and more widespread; the forces of the state are used more openly in crushing the workers' unrest. The demand for political expression is especially strong in the trade unions because the purely economic organizations cannot hope to stem the tide nor keep up the price of labor power in the face of decreased employment. Change of method or of leadership or both is the demand of the militant unionists. Canny officials, seeing in this demand a danger to themselves, consent to political activity, take leadership, and betray the movement at the earliest opportunity.

This has been the case in the labor party agitation of 1922-24 just as in previous periods. Whereas in times gone by the promising tendency toward class politics was led into Tammany Hall or again into the republican party, this time the "liberal" LaFollette party served the same purpose. If there were no Communist Party in America we might very well expect that the treachery of these labor bureaucrats would once more go unexposed, and that the urge for class conquest of political power would dissipate itself in the internal wrangles and careerism of the old parties. But there is such a party in the Workers Party. It has already done a tremendous service in clarifying a large portion of the labor movement to an understanding that what they really want is a class labor party. Its ideological hold upon these militants is not strong enough to draw them into its own ranks, nor was it strong enough to hold them against the ingrained American psychology of "getting something now." The masses still wanted the labor party but they thought that the road toward it lay thru the LaFollette camp.

Our Presidential Campaign.

Practically our whole central executive committee was ready to follow on that road and would have done so had it not been checked, fortunately, by the International. We found ourselves in a very difficult situation but maintained the slogan of the labor party versus the LaFollette liberal party while we practiced class politics under our own banner and built our own candidacy. There was a sense in making of necessity a virtue —there was practically no choice before the central executive committee when the retreat from the liberal coalition became mandatory. We exposed the anti-working class character of the LaFollette movement and its program, we pointed out especially that the treachery of the labor bureaucrats had prevented the crystallization of the deep-seated economic protest of worker and farmer from finding expression in a class party. We pounded away at the issue of "Labor Party versus Liberal Party." On that basis we held to us the most militant non-Communist elements that had been partly won over by our various united front campaigns, we won the support of the die-hard left socialists (mostly unorganized), and we kept the respect of those laborites who followed the LaFollette rainbow in the hope that the labor party gold lay at its end.

We do not minimize the success of our party in waging this, its first campaign. That after two bewildering changes of policy we could nevertheless rally at the eleventh hour to put our candidates on the ballot in 12 states out of 48, despite the tremendous legal difficulties in the way, is something to be proud of. That after months of flirting with the more liberal labor bureaucrats our party could swing unanimously into action to expose and fight them for the leadership of the masses is a tribute to our discipline and a record of which many an older Communist Party could well be proud. An administration spokesman seeks to prove our alleged desire to "liquidate" the Workers Party because we do not go in panegyrics over the alleged 100,000 votes he claims will be counted for us. He attacks Comrade Minor for reading from the DAILY WORKER that our party will even cast more votes than the S. L. P. Since when is this the acid test of "success" in Communist campaigns? Since when does a desire for realism, as shown in the minority estimate of 20,000 counted votes, prove a desire to liquidate our party? An argument of that kind is an insult to the intelligence of our membership. Those who collected the signatures, who took the straw votes, who sold the street men's lists, who took the shop collections, who distributed the literature know better on what basis to measure the achievements of the party in the last campaign.

Why Make It Unanimous?

If the economic basis of the movement for class politics has not been changed, but its superficial election campaign expression undergone such profound alterations as to justify a change in tactic on our part? If there were any such changes they would have to be very important indeed to justify any deviation from a tactic otherwise formulated on the basis of the objective economic situation. What changes are there in the political alignments; how do they affect the workers that want the labor party; how do they affect the Communists?

The administration is very emphatic on this point. One of its members writes: "As far as building a new party is concerned, the masses are now at rest." At the El Paso convention, "Grand Duke" Woll, according to our reporter, declared, "The last election was a national referendum and showed that labor did not want a labor party." Brothers Johnston and Gompers and Senator LaFollette agree. The Chicago Tribune had an editorial to the same effect. We can understand LaFollette's position when we consider his class affiliation. We can comprehend Gompers and Woll being glad to get out of this excursion into irregularity. We can evaluate Johnston's motives for entering this campaign—and leaving it flat at the first opportunity. But why Bittelman and Cannon and Foster? Why our party? Why make it unanimous?

If It's Dead, Bury It.

At this very point, when the enemy is trying with all its might to seek to bury the labor party movement in the liberal party funeral, our tactic should be to take full advantage of the depression created by their relative failure in the election to regain our ideological leadership over the movement toward class politics. This is a very different proposal from the "Communism versus Laborism" with which shallow adherents of the administration try to explain the factional differences. Even if it were true that the grave of LaFollette's effort to organize a definite liberal party also contained, for the time being, the remains of a movement for a labor party, these last two months before the funeral would be a very poor time to slaughter our own slogan, "For a class labor party." Even from the point of naked expediency, from which the majority judges this question, it is utterly stupid political tactic to surrender our own slogan as the only political force in America which has kept unsullied the banner of working class politics. Even if we wanted to confine ourselves hereafter to the purely trade union program of the party it would be criminal to abandon those militants whose original response to our own slogans started them on the pilgrimage that ended in the liberal party swamp. The labor party slogan is not dead, but even if it were, the most elementary political sense would demand that we give it decent burial, after a determined offensive upon the LaFollette gathering in January and a campaign of clarification in the unions to dispel the confusion that now exists among the militants themselves as to our true position.

We cannot jump from one slogan to another, abandoning our fundamental campaigns like a tired infant its playthings. It is necessary at times to change tactics, even to abandon a course of action, but we must always assign solid reasons acceptable to the working class, acceptable at least to those militants that more or less consistently follow our banner. We must not only give these reasons, we must terminate a campaign in such a manner that our position is clear and unmistakable before the workers. To do otherwise puts us in the light of political tricksters in the eyes of those workers who are left high and dry as the result of response to our agitation: no more harmful result could be forged against the growth of our movement.

Assorted United Fronts.

The administration has not fought for its new position on the ground of its economic basis nor of its political consequences. It has virtually said "We are tired of this campaign, let's try something else, here is a whole assortment of united fronts, take your pick, don't play with the same united front all the time." The peremptory abandonment of policies into which we have drawn our unorganized supporters is a very poor foundation upon which to start new united front agitations.

In meeting the opposition of the minority, the administration has not taken any basic position, it has created straw men and proceeded to demolish them. A favorite argument is that the minority conceive of the labor party movement as the only kind of united front in existence. They mention a few others: for amalgamation, protection of foreign born, unemployment—the last one especially the most consistent opposition against any activity by the party in the functioning of the labor party united front. The administration still looks upon it as merely "in the agitational stage." The united front for amalgamation was a fine basis from which the united front for a labor party was made more sure of success. The united front for protection of the foreign born was made easier of realization because of the united front for a labor party which preceded it. The united front for a child labor campaign will be greatly helped provided we acquit ourselves creditably in the present critical stage of the labor party action. It, and all other campaigns, will be seriously hurt if we allow our position to be confused with the hasty desertion of the liberals or the labor bureaucrats. They could drop this campaign for working class politics like a hot potato just as soon as they succeeded in their game of sterilizing it for this election. The election campaign is over, they are thru. Next time they will try it again.

But is that also our position? On election night our chairman announces, "We are thru with the farmer-labor party slogan." The inference to be drawn by our friends in the labor movement is a painful one.

More "Straw-men."

We do not say that the labor party is the only form that the united front can take. That is a straw-man. We do say that with our own intense trade union campaign for this policy still fresh in the minds of our supporters, with the fizzle of liberalism itself destroying the illusion of quick and certain immediate success over that road, with the self-exposure of the treachery of the labor bureaucrats still smarting the eyes of the rank and file trade unionists who thought they were getting a class party—we say that now is the time for our party to profit from this particular situation in the continuation of this slogan of deep mass appeal, a slogan that is solidly in line with both economic conditions and political developments.

Against this the administration, toadying to an institutional pride that might abound in the republican party or in some kindergarten but is luckily absent in a Communist Party, puts forth the slogan: "The labor party idea is no good, for class politics join the Workers Party." Such a slogan would be entirely appropriate in a situation where a reformist-ruled labor party is actively actively defending and administering the interests of the capitalist class—it is utterly out of place two weeks after we ourselves were still supporting it, six months after we ourselves were in danger of straying as far over the line as have the masses whom we could help start but could not stop. It is unheard of at a time when the labor bureaucrats sufficiently strong to try to steer their membership back into the parties of big capital, instead of neutralizing them in a reformist bloc under their control.

In the present backward state of political consciousness on the part of the American working class, "For a labor party" is a revolutionary mass slogan that promises the Workers Party the greatest possible increase of contact and militant influence. The cry of "The Workers Party Against the Field" is sectarianism pure and simple in this stage of development. Members can be recruited far faster thru individual solicitation and organization, among those who are drawn into co-operative action with us in these united fronts than by an abstract general invitation.

The issue is not the straw-man, "Communist Party versus Farmer-Labor Party." The issue is: What shall be the Communist attitude toward the labor party movement in view of its betrayal by all elements except ourselves?

We Have Faith in Party.

The issue is not that the minority have no "faith" in the Workers Party. They have more faith in it and in the revolutionary integrity of its members than have the majority, and they prove it by their willingness to throw the party into open struggle with the liberals and the labor bureaucrats for the ideological leadership of that part of the working class that has shown the urge to class conquest of political power. Whatever fears of "contamination" or "infection" there may have been to hold anyone back two years ago, the conduct of our party membership during the long and difficult 1924 campaign has been such that we can feel sure of ourselves now. The rank and file has shown fully as much firm understanding as has its leadership, and it has shown self-discipline enough to follow loyally even when believing the leadership was mistaken. More cannot be demanded from any party. Greater "faith" cannot be expressed in any organization.

We do not oppose change because it is change. The administration wants to alter a major tactic, it wants to drop the united front campaign for a labor party. We do not say that this is the only united front. We do not say that we must campaign for a labro party forever and ever, Amen.

We do say that this slogan is not dead as long as economic conditions remain as they are and militant supporters of working class political action remain enmeshed in the toils of liberalism or the labor bureaucracy. We challenge the administration to justify the change either on the basis of economic change of political development. These two form the basis that determine changes in Communist tactics and until a case is made out on these grounds the old tactic supported in national convention and by the Communist International must stand unchanged.

WHY MAKE IT UNANIMOUS?

By WM. F. KRUSE.

THE present party discussion is a novel one in at least one respect. An administration proposes to throw overboard, immediately and forthwith, a major political policy sanctioned by the Communist International, which that administration itself formulated and for which, as the party leadership, it must carry full responsibility. On the other hand the minority, which on this policy seems to have stood with the administration, right or wrong, fights to continue this political united front tactic of the labor party. While it is far more common for minorities to demand changes and majorities to defend their policies, our present situation can only be explained on one of two bases: either some fundamental change in conditions makes a change of tactic necessary, or the administration never really favored the tactic in the first place and embraced it on grounds of expediency.

This last ground should hardly be maintained. It is true that the present administration inherited the labor party united front tactic from the present minority when it won control of the last party convention. But it did so by making this program its own, and in its application to current conditions it has not contributed any changes, precisely as the writer pre-

DETROIT MONSTER PRESS RALLY ON SUNDAY, DEC. 14

DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 11.—Party and league united for the Communist press! That is the slogan of the Detroit reds now.

The entire membership of the Workers Party and of the Young Workers League has united solidly all of its forces to the end of putting across a monster press rally for the benefit of the DAILY WORKER and the drive of the Young Workers League to make their official organ, The Younk Worker, a weekly.

The rally is planned for Sunday, December 14, and from the pre-meeting purchasing of tickets for the entertainment it is expected that hundreds of workers, with the proper amount of "flaming youths" included, will fill up the famous House of the Masses, at 2646 St. Aubin St., on the coming Sunday, at 8 o'clock.

Tickets for this affair are priced at the ridiculously low sum of four bits otherwise known as fifty cents each. Not only will you be doing yourself a favor by coming and bringing your friends, but you will be helping the working class press which is fighting for your interests. A forward-looking workers' stiffs are expected to come and bring their girls, since without them a red dance is a pretty sorry affair. The dance will be the event of the social elite in working class circles of Detroit and there will be darn few to miss it.
